1154 Miller v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 726 F.3d 717 (5th Cir. 2013) (allowing state debt collection law claim that mortgagee encouraged application for mortgage modification while fast tracking foreclosure); White v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 4431416 (W.D. Tenn. Sept. 14, 2018) (borrower stated § 1692f(6) claim against foreclosure trustee who conducted sale while borrower's application for loss mitigation was pending); Johnson v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 4403838 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 17, 2018) (representation that it would not continue with foreclosure during its independent review process for loan modification was deceptive where servicer had no intention of complying as evidenced by motion to reschedule foreclosure sale filed eight days later); Farber v. Brock & Scott, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5867042 (D. Md. Oct. 6, 2016) (scheduling foreclosure sale while loan modification review pending).

1155 Finley v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1705802 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 9, 2018); Belcher v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7243100 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 15, 2016). See also Eisberner v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2014 WL 4064026 (E.D. Wis. Aug. 14, 2014) (consumer was successfully participating in state court-supervised repayment plan, but accused of not paying debt).

1156 Lucas v. New Penn Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 404033, at *6 (D. Mass. Jan. 31, 2019).

the loan and the borrower is in compliance with the modified terms;[1157]

- A debt validation notice is included with the foreclosure complaint and the consumer is presented with conflicting deadlines—to answer the foreclosure complaint within a certain number of days and also thirty days to dispute the debt with the collector (courts are divided as to whether this is deceptive in the absence of a clarification of the two deadlines);[1158]
- There are misrepresentations or failure to disclose about the mortgage loan's grace period,[1159] how imminent foreclosure is,[1160] whether the obligation has been or will be accelerated,[1161] the consumer's right to obtain information about the mortgage loan,[1162] the servicer's ability to postpone a foreclosure sale,[1163] the time periods set out by state law concerning foreclosure rights, [164] the consumer's cure rights,[1165] the consumer's redemption rights,[1166] and the time period when a homeowner must vacate after foreclosure;[1167] or
- The collector seeks to recover a deficiency balance where there is no right to seek a deficiency after a foreclosure,[1168] or misrepresents the value of the home that was foreclosed in connection with seeking a deficiency[169] or reports false information to a credit reporting agency about a debt's foreclosure status.[1170]

7.4.11.3 Misrepresentation As to the Parties Involved in the Mortgage Loan

Mortgages may involve multiple entities, including an originating creditor, an entity owning the loan (often a trust), one or more entities servicing the loan, and a foreclosure attorney. This complexity may lead to confusion and to representations and practices violating FDCPA § 1692e. The FDCPA also requires that, if the mortgage servicer qualifies as a debt collector and makes a communication covered by the FDCPA, then it must identify to the consumer the creditor to whom the debt is owed.[1171]

Thus, it can violate FDCPA § 1692e where the mortgage servicer falsely identifies itself as the mortgage loan owner.[1172] Other misidentification of the current owner is also actionable, 1157 Werner v. Selene Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1316465 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2019) (foreclosure despite complying with trial modification); Finley v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1705802 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 9, 2018) (threat to foreclose despite modified loan terms); Belcher v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1701964 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 2, 2018) (court certified class of homeowners who successfully completed HAMP trial period and, during that period, received written notice threatening foreclosure even though homeowners were complying with modified loan terms). See also Gersten v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 3671201 (S.D. Ohio July 23, 2014); Memmott v. OneWest Reg'l Bank, 2014 WL 715441 (D. Or. Feb. 21, 2014) (servicer refused to accept payment under loan modification plan and then threatened foreclosure).

1158 See also Battle v. Gladstone Law Group, P.A., 951 F. Supp. 2d 1310 (S.D. Fla. 2013). But see Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. Lamar, 503 F.3d 504, 511 (6th Cir. 2007) (not deceptive); Coburn v. Gonzalez, 141 F. Supp. 3d 1339 (S.D. Fla. 2015).

1159 See Koepplinger v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 4055268 (M.D.N.C Aug. 24, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 4401738 (M.D.N.C. Sept. 14, 2018) (mortgage servicer falsely informed consumers that they had to pay entire default amount by expiration date, when, in reality, servicer would not then accelerate or foreclose because it had undisclosed 45-day grace period policy), related case, 2020 WL 2063416 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 29, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 5705915 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 26, 2020); Rehman v. Pierce & Assoc., 2017 WL 131560 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 13, 2017).

1160 Hall v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 255 F. Supp. 3d 625 (E.D. Pa. 2015) (notice as to "approximate" time frame of possible foreclosure sale could have several meanings, at least one of which was factually inaccurate (too short by about a month) based on actual practice of sheriff's sales).

1161 Williams v. Seterus, Inc., 2020 WL 362874, at *2 (N.D. Ala. Jan. 22, 2020) (allegations that servicer did not accelerate loan in manner threatened by letter and that letter was nothing more than "empty threat" withstood motion to dismiss); Fisher v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 5865605 (D. Minn. Oct. 21, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 5865449 (D. Minn. Nov. 8, 2019) (threatened that loan will be accelerated if payment not made by date specified, when servicer's policy was not to accelerate if payment delayed); Clark v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 69 F. Supp. 3d 1203 (D. Colo. 2014).

1162 Schneider v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 2118327 (E.D. Cal. May 21, 2014).

1163 Schneider v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 2118327 (E.D. Cal. May 21, 2014).

1164 Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Assn., 450 F. Supp. 3d 606 (D. Md. 2020) (foreclosure notice misrepresented time frame to foreclose under state statutes).

1165 Bonfiglio v. Citifinancial Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5612194 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 23, 2015); Jacobson v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 371 P.3d 397 (Mont. 2016).

1166 Myles v. Kaman & Cusimano, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4377854 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 4, 2014).

1167 Reese v. Ellis, Painter, Ratterree & Adams, L.L.P., 678 F.3d 1211 (11th Cir. 2012).

1168 Adams v. Albertelli, 2016 WL 931103 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 11, 2016) (no right to deficiency existed after foreclosure of reverse mortgage). But cf. DeFrancesco v. Veripro Solutions Inc., 2014 WL 4387570 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 5, 2014) (where have right to collect deficiency, can demand its payment prior to court judgment on deficiency); Hall v. HSBC Mortg. Services, Inc., 2014 WL 949997 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 11, 2014), aff'd, 581 Fed. Appx. 800 (11th Cir. 2014) (same).

1169 Miceli v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2016 WL 7666167 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 2016) (debt buyer's knowing submission of inappropriately low appraisal to court to support deficiency claim).

1170 Memmott v. OneWest Bank, 2011 WL 1560985 (D. Or. Feb. 9, 2011) (reported false information to credit reporting agencies), adopted, 2011 WL 1559298 (D. Or. Apr. 25, 2011).

1171 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a); Ch. 9, infra. See also § 4.7.5, supra (validation notices and mortgages).

1172 Bourff v. Rubin Lublin, L.L.C., 674 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2012); Shoup v. McCurdy & Candler, L.L.C., 465 Fed. Appx. 882 (11th Cir. 2012); Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n., 450 F. Supp. 3d 606 (D. Md. 2020) (in validation response, servicer incorrectly identified itself, rather than Fannie Mae, as loan owner); Burdick v. Bank of Am., 140 F. Supp. 3d 1325 (S.D. Fla. 2015); Goodrow v. Friedman & MacFadyen, P.A., 2013 WL 3894842 (E.D. Va. July 26, 2013) (foreclosures done in name of servicer where ownership not properly transferred to servicer); Sciortino v. Barrett Daffin Frappie Levin & Brock, L.L.P., 9 F. Supp. 3d 1322 (N.D. Ga. 2013). But see Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75 (2d Cir. 2018) (attorneys' misrepresentation of servicer as creditor in judicial foreclosure pleading not sufficiently material to state § 1692e violation where under applicable state law servicer exercised rights of loan's owner); Aldom v. Phelan Hallinan & Diamond, P.C., 2015 WL 5722584 (D.N.J. Sept. 29, 2015) (no actionable § 1692e violation where Wells Fargo identified as "lender" where it was original lender, and current servicer, but not current creditor).

either in communications to the consumer or in a foreclosure action.[1173]

Because of the complexity of loan transfers in the mortgage market, the entity in whose name a foreclosure action is threatened or even brought may not be the owner at that time; transfer of the mortgage loan to that entity prior to the completion of the foreclosure may be intended. This practice may violate state law[1174] and such a false threat to foreclose or file a foreclosure action without current authority to do so should violate FDCPA § 1692e.[1175]

This scenario should be distinguished from a situation where, at the time of the filing of a foreclosure action, the foreclosing attorney does not have in its possession proof that the entity in whose name the foreclosure is initiated actually owns the mortgage, as long as the attorney can obtain that information when so challenged.[1176] But an allegation of ownership when there is no evidence that an entity in fact does own the loan or has falsely stated that it owns the loan can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation.[1177]

7.4.11.4 Misrepresentation of the Amount Owed

Mortgage servicers and collectors may be sloppy in their paperwork and accounting regarding mortgage debt. It can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation to demand amounts not owed,[1178] such as including an inaccurate amount to cure a default[1179] or seeking unauthorized fees,[1180] illegal 1173 Hageman v. Barton, 817 F.3d 611 (8th Cir. 2016) (foreclosure filed in name of prior owner); Stewart v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2020 WL 433888 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 28, 2020) (servicer identified owner of loan in one letter as Chase and in another as Freddie Mac); Machles v. McCabe, Weisberg & Conway, P.C., 2017 WL 5172516 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 7, 2017) (proceeding with foreclosure complaint without authority to foreclose as assignee of note and mortgage); Luna v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 11120875 (N.D. Tex. Nov. 9, 2015) (foreclosing entity proceeding without appropriate transfer of note and deed of trust); Rivera v. JPMorgan Chase & Co., 2015 WL 12851710 (S.D. Fla. July 9, 2015) (foreclosure complaint falsely represented plaintiff as owner of note and mortgage); Ohuche v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 12544772 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 8, 2014) (refusing to dismiss claim asserting that Fannie Mae, rather than bank, should have been designated as assignee with authority to foreclose); Hoffman v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2014 WL 6822359 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 4, 2014) (allegations of invalid assignment of loan ownership to party foreclosing); Wilson v. McCalla Raymer, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1147439 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 19, 2013) (deceptively implied that original lender had full authority to modify note, although collector had knowledge that Fannie Mae was note owner); Owens v. Ronald R. Wolf & Assoc., P.L., 2013 WL 6085121 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 19, 2013) (misrepresented in foreclosure complaint identity of party entitled to enforce note); Johnstone v. Aldridge Connors, L.L.P., 2013 WL 6086049 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 20, 2013); Jacobson v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 371 P.3d 397 (Mont. 2016) (servicer's misrepresentations about identity of beneficiary of deed of trust interfered with borrower's ability to cure default). See also Visceglie v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 4862230 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 27, 2017) (law firm allegedly made false representations about identity of noteholder). Cf. Scheinman v. Glass & Brauss, L.L.C., 2020 WL 6875139 (D. Conn. Nov. 23, 2020) (§ 1692e claim regarding filing of partially filled out Registration Form was allowed to proceed where least sophisticated consumer could have believed that property had been conveyed to a named entity through foreclosure when it was not). But see Galati v. Manley Deas Kochalski, L.L.C., 622 Fed. Appx. 473, 475 (6th Cir. 2015) (state law allowed entity holding note to enforce loan, even if not properly assigned note); Markette v. HSBC Bank, 2018 WL 1695368 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 6, 2018) (inaccurate identification of trust on note not material misrepresentation); Lucero v. Cenlar, 2014 WL 12026660 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 3, 2014) (misrepresentations of authority to foreclose, including status as note holder and legitimacy of loan transfer documents, do not violate § 1692e(2)(A), because do not go to amount or character of debt); Montgomery v. PNC Bank, 2014 WL 11531624 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 22, 2014) (under Georgia law not misrepresentation to hold self out as beneficiary of mortgage loan when only assignee of mortgage, but not holder of note).

1174 See U.S. Bank v. Ibanez, 941 N.E.2d 40 (Mass. 2011).

1175 Wallace v. Wash. Mut. Bank, 683 F.3d 323 (6th Cir. 2012); Rivers v. U.S. Bank, 2013 WL 12098963 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 13, 2013), adopted, 2013 WL 12099410 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 5, 2013) (language in notice of foreclosure falsely suggested that bank, which had not yet been assigned mortgage, had present authority to foreclose); Akar v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 843 F. Supp. 2d 154 (D. Mass. 2011). See also Minnifield v. Johnson & Freedman, L.L.C., 448 Fed. Appx. 914 (11th Cir. 2011) (reversing lower court's dismissal where evidence showed that mortgagee's assignment to defendant foreclosure attorney authorizing it to proceed occurred two weeks after foreclosure and thus complaint stated a claim for violating § 1692f(6)'s prohibition against acting without "present right to possession of the property claimed as collateral through an enforceable security interest"). But see Kline v. Mortg. Elec. Sec. Sys., 2009 WL 6093372 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 24, 2009) ("[t]he filing of a foreclosure action by a plaintiff in the process of obtaining an assignment not yet fully documented is not [] deceptive"), adopted, 2010 WL 1133452 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 22, 2010).

1176 See Whittiker v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 605 F. Supp. 2d 914 (N.D. Ohio 2009) (filing foreclosure without immediate means of proving ownership of debt not deceptive).

1177 Bridge v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 681 F.3d 355 (6th Cir. 2012) (can be violation where allege no evidence of ownership of loan); Williams v. Partners for Payment Relief Inc., 2020 WL 973753 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 28, 2020); Munger v. Deutsche Bank, 2011 WL 2930907 (N.D. Ohio July 18, 2011) (while inability to prove present debt ownership at time action is filed is not per se FDCPA violation, can be deceptive where knowingly misrepresented).

1178 McLaughlin v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 756 F.3d 240 (3d Cir. 2014); Muir v. AM Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3530521 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2019); Block v. Seneca Mortg. Servicing, 221 F. Supp. 3d 559 (D.N.J. 2016); Hall v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2016 WL 3971428 (N.D. Ala. July 25, 2016); Webb v. Law Office of Ira T. Nevel, L.L.C., 2016 WL 946962 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 14, 2016) (misstatement of debt amount stated in § 1692g notice attached to foreclosure complaint); Schuh v. Druckman & Sinel, L.L.P., 602 F. Supp. 2d 454 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (statement that payoff amount had to be verified before payment did not make incorrect payoff amount any less false); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002) (servicer demanded amounts borrower did not owe); In re Hart, 246 B.R. 709 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2000) (servicer misrepresented that consumer was obligated to repay amounts in "negative suspense account"). But see Ho v. ReconTrust Co., 858 F.3d. 568 (9th Cir. 2017) (trustee not acting as debt collector in sending notices claiming inflated amounts due when these notices were required procedural step under state's non-judicial foreclosure statute).

1179 Estate of Russel Morgan v. BWW Law Group, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2880984 (D. Md. July 3, 2019) (false statement of amount needed to cure).

1180 Pagan v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services L.L.C., 2020 WL 7398788 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 17, 2020) (servicer did not have clear right to roll late fees into reinstatement amount and Notice of Debt did not specify that late charges would be applied only if homeowners opted to reinstate loan and not otherwise); Dawoudi v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 448 F. Supp. 3d 918 (N.D. Ill. 2020) (demands for late fees after loan interest,[1181] or inaccurate amounts due related to taxes and insurance.[1182] The same can apply to a servicer's proof of claim in the homeowner's bankruptcy.[1183]

In Kaymark v. Bank of America,[1184] the Third Circuit reversed the lower court's dismissal of a FDCPA § 1692e claims where the foreclosure attorneys included in the state foreclosure complaint a current balance with attorney fees and property inspection fees[1185] for work that had not yet been performed. The court found that, notwithstanding the fact that the amounts recited were later actually incurred and were admittedly reasonable, the foreclosure attorneys misrepresented the amount of the debt due and attempted to collect unauthorized sums by including those fees without indicating that they were mere "estimates or imprecise amounts."

Also deceptive is failing to credit payments so as to give the appearance that the consumer is in default.[1186] It can also be deceptive to hide fees using confusing terminology[1187] or to report unreasonably fluctuating or confusing amounts owed.[1188] Where mortgage payments have been modified, FDCPA § 1692e is violated by computing the mortgage obligation based on the old payment obligation instead of based on the modified payments.[1189]

Additional discussion concerning misrepresentations as to the amount due is found at § 7.2.2, supra, in the discussion of FDCPA § 1692e(2)(a). Misrepresentations as to the amount due in collection lawsuits are examined at § 7.4.10.3.4, supra.

7.4.12 Deception Regarding Rental Debt

7.4.12.1 Residential Eviction Actions

The eviction process can lead to FDCPA § 1692e violations. Many of the violations are parallel to those involving collection lawsuits discussed at § 7.4.10, supra, and those involving foreclosures examined at § 7.4.11, supra.

acceleration not authorized by loan documents); Roche v. Rushmore Loan Mgt. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1452346 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 25, 2020) (unauthorized fees); Rhodeman v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5955368 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 12, 2019), reconsideration denied, 2020 WL 1698709 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 3, 2020) (unauthorized loan modification charge). Muhammad v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1259353 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 19, 2019) (servicer's periodic account statements included demand for late fees incurred after acceleration); Mansoorian v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2018 WL 6413484 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 6, 2018) (failed to follow procedures to obtain attorney fees); Speights-Carnegie v. Blackstone Condo. Assoc., 2018 WL 1519158 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2018) (attorney fees, repair costs, and late charges); Kirk v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 1684415 (W.D. Tenn. Jan. 3, 2018) (attorney fees to which not entitled); Spiegel v. Kim, 2017 WL 413616 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2017) (unauthorized attorney fees); Bowen v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 4183081 (D. Me. Sept. 20, 2017); Jackson v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4347382 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 29, 2017) (improper demands for late fees incurred after loan accelerated); Belcher v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7243100 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 15, 2016) (demand for service of process fee when there had been no service); Kaymark v. Udren Law Offices, P.C., 2016 WL 7187840, at *10 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 12, 2016) (estimated/anticipated, but not-yet-incurred, fee demands" in foreclosure complaint); Harris v. LNV Corp., 2014 WL 12530946 (M.D. Tenn. Jan. 8, 2014) (unauthorized claims for attorney fees and late fees); Kevelighan v. Trott & Trott, P.C., 771 F. Supp. 2d 763 (E.D. Mich. 2010) (attorney fees in excess of amount allowed under state law); Pettway v. Harmon Law Offices, P.C., 2005 WL 2365331 (D. Mass. Sept. 27, 2005) (fees of foreclosing attorneys were overstated by including unaccrued fees that would later be rebated); Scott v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 284 F. Supp. 2d 880 (S.D. Ohio 2003) ("padded" fees not permitted by contract); Porter v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 2003 WL 21210115 (N.D. Ill. May 21, 2003) (property preservation services and broker's price opinions were not permitted under mortgage clause covering costs to protect value of property). See also Barrows v. Chase Manhattan Mortg. Corp., 465 F. Supp. 2d 347 (D.N.J. 2006) (allegation that legal fees and costs exceeded amount allowed under state law and court rules sufficiently stated § 1692f(1) claim).

1181 Gary v. Hladik Onorato & Federman, L.L.P., 2020 WL 871330 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 21, 2020) (interest rate that lender charged was unlawful because not licensed under state law); Kirk v. Seterus, Inc., 2018 WL 1684415 (W.D. Tenn. Jan. 3, 2018) (loan points to which creditor not entitled); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002) (servicer attempted to collect interest on mortgage even though it did not have possession of note and could not determine whether it was entitled to demand interest). See also Owens v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2020 WL 1888857, at *7 (W.D. Pa. Apr. 16, 2020) (genuine dispute as to whether statute governing usurious interest applied to mortgage).

1182 See Santo v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 4680090 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 28, 2018); Block v. Seneca Mortg. Servicing, 221 F. Supp. 3d 559 (D.N.J. 2016); In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2020).

1183 In re Bernadin, 610 B.R. 787 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2019). See § 13.7.3.2, infra.

1184 783 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015).

1185 See also Rodriguez v. Seterus, Inc., 2015 WL 5677182, at *4 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 28, 2015) (allegations that defendant "knew . . . that an inspection of Plaintiffs' property was unnecessary and unreasonable, and that the purpose of the inspection was not for the benefit of the owner of the mortgage, but solely for the servicer's financial gain" survived motion to dismiss).

1186 Harris v. LNV Corp., 2014 WL 3015293 (M.D. Tenn. July 2, 2014).

1187 Flournoy v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1285504 (D. Md. Mar. 17, 2020) (servicer's vague demand for "corporate advances" disguised claims for improper attorney fees and other costs); Cortellessa v. Udren Law Offices P.C., 2016 WL 4554539 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 1, 2016) (misleading statement aggregating fees); Burdick v. Bank of Am., 140 F. Supp. 3d 1325 (S.D. Fla. 2015) (legal fees described as insurance advance disbursement); Dougherty v. Wells Fargo Home Loans, Inc., 425 F. Supp. 2d 599 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (collection attorney fees labeled as recoverable corporate advances).

1188 Tepper v Amos Fin., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3446886, at *8 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2017) (statements as to amounts owed on mortgage were so incomplete and misleading as to be false); Grubb v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3191521 (D.N.J. July 27, 2017) (validation letter and servicer transfer letter with conflicting payment information for same time period); Ruvalcaba v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7178855 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 9, 2016) (wildly fluctuating stated amounts impeded borrower's ability to respond appropriately to payoff dispute); McKinney v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3659898 (E.D.N.C. July 1, 2016) (inconsistent balance statements); Gersten v. Bank of Am., 2014 WL 3671201 (S.D. Ohio July 23, 2014) (claiming as amount overdue based on both original and on modified loans); Castrillo v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 2010 WL 1424398 (E.D. La. Apr. 5, 2010); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002).

1189 Rivera v. Bayview Loan Servicing, 2020 WL 1508328 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 30, 2020) (mortgagee claimed amounts due that had been capitalized through loan modification and therefore were not due); Finley v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1705802 (N.D. Ohio Apr. 9, 2018).

It also can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation if a collector agrees to dismiss its eviction action if the consumer vacates the premises, but then proceeds with a default judgment despite the tenant's vacating the premises.[1190] In addition, it is deceptive to file an eviction suit without alleging the required elements,[1191] or misrepresenting rental units as not subsidized, impeding the tenants' ability to discover potential defenses to eviction.[1192] Where a debt collector falsely represents the use and occupancy damages in an eviction action, the tenant may have viable FDCPA § 1692e claims.[1193]

Residential eviction actions often are brought by non-attorneys. It can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation for such a non-lawyer to seek legal fees in the eviction action.[1194] Also deceptive can be representations that a collection agency is the party to whom the rent is owed when it is owed instead to the landlord.[1195]

7.4.12.2 Regulation F Provisions Related to CDC COVID-19 Residential Eviction Halt

On April 22, 2021, the CFPB issued an interim final rule titled "Debt Collection Practices in Connection with the Global COVID-19 Pandemic (Regulation F)" that, effective May 3, 2021, required that debt collectors refrain from certain misrepresentations and provide certain disclosures to tenants facing eviction for non-payment of rent.[1196] The regulation was temporary and applied only during the effective period of the CDC order.[1197]

The CDC order is the order issued by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention titled Temporary Halt in Residential Evictions to Prevent the Further Spread of COVID-19,[1198] as extended by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.[1199] The CDC order generally limits the circumstances in which certain persons may be evicted from residential property.

The CFPB rule applies only during the effective period of the CDC rule, and there is lack of clarity as to when that effective period order ended— whether that date is July 31, 2021, or August 26, 2021. The original CDC order expired on July 31, 2021.[1200] The CDC, on August 6, 2021, published a separate order with a different title, "Temporary Halt in Residential Evictions in Communities with Substantial or High Levels of Community Transmission of COVID-19 to Prevent the Further Spread of COVID-19."[1201] An August 26, 2021, Supreme Court order[1202] vacated the stay of a lower court's decision that had set aside the August 6 CDC order,[1203] so that the subsequent CDC order ceased being effective on that date.

The interim final rule thus prohibits certain misrepresentations and requires certain debt collector disclosures only for the period from May 3, 2021, until July 31, 2021, or possibly until August 26, 2021. This subsection will have continued practical relevance only to debt collector interim rule violations that occurred during that period and where an FDCPA action is brought within the FDCPA statute of limitations.[1204]

The rule applies to debt collectors as defined by the FDCPA,[1205] and thus its application includes attorneys who regularly collect debts or regularly are involved in tenants' evictions.[1206] The Act does not apply to the landlord itself, unless the landlord is collecting in a name that is not its own.[1207] Nor does it apply to the landlord's employees when collecting in the landlord's name.[1208]

The rule applied only in those states that the CDC order was in effect. The CDC order did not apply in any state, local, territorial, or tribal area with a moratorium on residential evictions that provided the same or greater level of public-health protection than the requirements listed in the CDC order.[1209]

The interim final rule's requirements apply to debt collectors collecting a debt and in connection with the collection of that debt.[1210] "A consumer's unpaid residential rent would typically fall within the FDCPA's definition of debt because it is an obligation of a consumer to pay money arising out of a transaction for personal, family, or household purposes."[1211]

One interim rule requirement is that a debt collector cannot falsely represent or imply to a consumer that the consumer is ineligible for temporary protection from eviction under the CDC order.[1212]

1190 Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016).

1191 See Nelson v. Am. Power and Light, 2010 WL 3219498 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 12, 2010).

1192 Lipscomb v. The Raddatz Law Firm, P.L.L.C., 109 F. Supp. 3d 251 (D.D.C. 2015). But see Dimatteo v. Sweeney, Gallo, Reich & Bolz, L.L.P., 619 Fed. Appx. 7 (2d Cir. 2015) (no requirement in legal action to disclose tenancy involved rent control unit).

1193 See Cordeiro v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 3404742, at *5 (D.R.I. June 19, 2020).

1194 Sanz v. Fernandez, 633 F. Supp. 2d 1356 (S.D. Fla. 2009).

1195 Caparelli v. Alan H. Zimmerman P.C., 2018 WL 6250480 (D. Ariz. Nov. 29, 2018) (tenant stated §§ 1692e and 1692g claims alleging that collection agency stated that it was "creditor" when it had previously disclosed that her landlord was creditor).

1196 Reg. F § 1006.9, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1197 Reg. F § 1006.9(c), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1198 86 Fed. Reg. 16731 (Mar. 31, 2021).

1199 Reg. F § 1006.9(b)(2), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1200 86 Fed. Reg. 34,010 (June 28, 2021).

1201 86 Fed. Reg. 43,244 (Aug. 6, 2021).

1202 Alabama Ass'n of Realtors v. Dep't of Health and Human Services, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2485, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1203 Alabama Ass'n of Realtors v. Dep't of Health and Human Services, 2021 WL 1779282 (D.D.C. May 5, 2021).

1204 See § 12.3, infra.

1205 See § 4.7, supra.

1206 See §§ 4.7.3.3, 4.7.3.5, supra.

1207 See § 4.7.4, supra.

1208 See § 4.8.1, supra.

1209 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,170 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1210 Reg. F § 1006.9(c), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1211 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,169 (Apr. 22, 2021) (footnote omitted).

1212 Reg. F § 1006.9(c)(2), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

The other requirement is that a debt collector cannot file an eviction action for nonpayment of rent against a consumer to whom the CDC order reasonably might apply without disclosing to the consumer that the consumer may be eligible for temporary protection from eviction under the CDC order.[1213] The disclosure must be provided, "in writing, on the date that the debt collector provides the consumer with an eviction notice or, if no eviction notice is required by applicable law, on the date that the eviction action is filed."[1214]

An eviction notice is "the earliest of any written notice that the laws of any State, locality, territory, or tribal area require to be provided to a consumer before an eviction action against the consumer may be filed."[1215] Examples are notices to quit, notices to pay rent or quit, and notices to terminate tenancy.[1216] The interim rule's supplemental information provides:

> Not all jurisdictions require such a notice, and some jurisdictions may require more than one. The definition clarifies that, for purposes of this interim final rule, the term eviction notice refers to the earliest of any such notice that must be provided. Jurisdictions that do require such a notice may refer to the notice using different names. The definition of eviction notice is meant to encompass all such required notices, regardless of the names by which those notices are known.[1217]

A debt collector may satisfy the disclosure requirement by delivering the disclosure to the address that is the subject of eviction proceedings.[1218] The debt collector is not required to ensure that the consumer receive the disclosure.[1219]

The disclosure must be delivered on the same day as the debt collector provides the consumer with the eviction notice or, if no eviction notice is required by applicable law, on the date that the eviction action is filed.[1220] A debt collector may, but is not required to, provide the disclosure at the same time that the debt collector provides the consumer with the eviction notice or serves the consumer with an eviction action.[1221] A debt collector may, but is not required to, include the disclosure in an envelope either on or with the eviction notice or in the same mailing in which the debt collector serves the consumer with an eviction action.[1222]

The disclosure does not have to be made more than once.[1223] The collector can do so if it chooses; sending multiple notices does not violate FDCPA §§ 1692e or 1692f.[1224] For example, it can do so with each subsequent communication.[1225]

The Official Interpretations explain that:

> A consumer to whom the CDC Order reasonably might apply is a consumer who reasonably might be eligible to be a covered person as defined in the CDC Order. A consumer is not reasonably eligible to be a covered person if the debt collector has knowledge that a consumer is not eligible for protection under the CDC Order. However, nothing in [Reg. F] § 1006.9(c)(1) prohibits a debt collector from providing the disclosure to a consumer even if the consumer might not reasonably be eligible to be a covered person. A debt collector therefore may comply with the requirement to provide the disclosure to any consumer to whom the CDC Order reasonably might apply by, for example, providing the disclosure to each consumer against whom the debt collector files an eviction action for nonpayment of rent. A debt collector does not violate FDCPA sections 807 [FDCPA § 1692e] or 808 [FDCPA § 1692f] merely because the debt collector provides the disclosure to consumers as described in this comment 9(c)(1)-2 even if the consumer is not reasonably eligible to be a covered person.[1226]

The disclosure requirement does not apply to all eviction actions, but only to those for nonpayment of rent. It does not apply if the debt collector files the eviction action based solely on the consumer engaging in one or more of the following actions:

- Criminal activity while on the premises;
- Threatening the health or safety of other residents;
- Damaging or posing an immediate and significant risk of damage to property;
- Violating any applicable building code, health ordinance, or similar regulation relating to health and safety; or
- Violating any other contractual obligation, other than the timely payment of rent or similar housing-related payment (including non-payment or late payment of fees, penalties, or interest).[1227]

1213 Reg. F § 1006.9(c)(1), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1214 Reg. F § 1006.9(c)(1), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1215 Reg. F § 1006.9(b)(3), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1216 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(b)(3)-1, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1217 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,170 (Apr. 22, 2021) (footnote omitted).

1218 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-3, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180, 21,181 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1219 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-3, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180, 21,181 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1220 Reg. F § 1006.9(c)(1), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1221 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-3, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180, 21,181 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1222 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-3, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180, 21,181 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1223 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-4, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1224 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-4, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1225 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-4, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1226 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-2, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1227 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-1, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

However, the requirement does apply if the eviction action is based in part on one of the above listed reasons, but also is based in part on non-payment of rent.[1228]

The disclosure must be made to the consumer clearly and conspicuously in writing.[1229] Clear and conspicuous means readily understandable.[1230] The disclosure cannot be via email or other electronic means, but must be in writing.[1231] The location and type size also must be readily noticeable and legible to consumers, although no minimum type size is mandated.[1232]

In making the disclosure, the debt collection has the option of using the language in either of the following two sample disclosures:

1. "Because of the global COVID-19 pandemic, you may be eligible for temporary protection from eviction under Federal law. Learn the steps you should take now: visit www.cfpb.gov/eviction or call a housing counselor at 800-569-4287."[1233]
2. "Because of the global COVID-19 pandemic, you may be eligible for temporary protection from eviction under the laws of your State, territory, locality, or tribal area, or under Federal law. Learn the steps you should take now: visit www.cfpb.gov/eviction or call a housing counselor at 800-569-4287."[1234]

A debt collector does not violate FDCPA §§ 1692e or 1692f merely because the debt collector provides this sample language to a consumer in a jurisdiction in which the CDC order does not apply (or in the case of the second disclosure if only the CDC order applies).[1235] The CFPB has also published Spanish translations of the sample disclosure language.[1236] But nothing in the rule requires debt collectors to provide the Spanish translation.

7.4.13 Unlicensed Debt Collection

Thirty-two states require at least some debt collectors to be licensed, registered, or bonded.[1237] Because section 1692e(5) of the FDCPA prohibits threats "to take any action that cannot legally be taken or that is not intended to be taken," a threat of a collection lawsuit by a debt collector that is not licensed according to state law may violate that provision. The FDCPA § 1692e(5) violation is not that the collector is unlicensed, but rather that the lack of a proper license according to state law makes the threatened action unlawful. This issue is discussed at § 7.2.5.4.2, supra.

Being unlicensed is not a per se violation under FDCPA § 1692e(5),[1238] but it can still be a violation to misrepresent oneself as licensed when one is not under FDCPA § 1692e(10), which prohibits "[t]he use of any false representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt or to obtain information concerning a consumer."

Courts are divided as to whether and when the lack of a state license or similar requirement, absent allegation of an explicit threat to bring suit, may still result in a violation of the FDCPA. Some cases find that simply attempting to collect a debt while unlicensed does not violate FDCPA § 1692e(10) because the violation is merely technical or immaterial.[1239] However, other courts find that by failing to register with the state as a debt collector and then taking action to collect a debt, the collector misrepresents its legal authority and engages in deceptive conduct that violates both state law and the FDCPA. Some cases finding a violation focus not on the sole fact that the collector was unlicensed while it attempted to collect a debt, but that it made affirmative misrepresentations as to its status.[1240] But a

1228 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,171 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1229 Reg. F § 1006.9(c)(1), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1230 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-6, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1231 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,173 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1232 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-6, as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1233 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-5(i), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1234 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-5(ii), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1235 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 9(c)(1)-5(i), (ii), as issued at 86 Fed. Reg. 21,163, 21,180 (Apr. 22, 2021).

1236 See https://files.consumerfinance.gov/f/documents/cfpb_debt-collection_sample_covid-19_tenant_eviction_protection_disclosure_language.pdf.

1237 See Appx. D, infra.

1238 See LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1192 (11th Cir. 2010) (state law violation does not constitute per se FDCPA violation, but defendant may have violated § 1692e(5) when it threatened to bring suit); Wade v. Reg'l Credit Ass'n, 87 F.3d 1098, 1100 (9th Cir. 1996) (defendant's attempts to collect, "although apparently in violation of state law, were innocuous and not in violation of the FDCPA" because defendant did not threaten to sue and thus did not violate § 1692e, e(5), or e(10)).

1239 See, e.g., Richardson v. Allianceone Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2004 WL 867732, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 23, 2004) (violation of technical city ordinance not specific to debt collection activities resulting in no identifiable harm was insufficient to state claim); Ferguson v. Credit Mgmt. Control, Inc., 140 F. Supp. 2d 1293 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2001) (no violation of § 1692e(10) where unregistered collection agency did not state in collection notice that it had power to collect debts in Florida, nor did it indicate that it was licensed to act as collection agency in state). Cf. Stewart v. Bureaus Inv. Group, L.L.C., 2015 WL 7572312, at *20 (M.D. Ala. Nov. 24, 2015) (no violation of § 1692e(10) where lack of license in state had no bearing on defendant's right to file collection action, and thus representation that defendant was licensed to do business in state, though false, was not material). But see DeWan v. Seideman, 2017 WL 6048816 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 5, 2017) (collection lawyer misrepresented in state court collection action that collection company was authorized to do business in New York); Collins v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 991 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Scott v. J. Anthony Cambece Law Office, P.C., 600 F. Supp. 2d 479 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (FDCPA claim stated against law firm for collecting debts without debt collection license as required by applicable New York City municipal code provision, since code does not contain per se exemption for attorneys).

1240 Derosia v. Credit Corp Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 1513043 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 27, 2018) (§ 1692e claim made out where debt buyer stated in its dun that it was "licensed by the Division of Banking," because although debt buyer was licensed with Wisconsin Department of Financial Institutions as a "sales finance company," it was not licensed as collection agency; misrepresentation was material number of cases find that the very act of attempting to collect while unlicensed or unregistered amounts to implicit misrepresentation sufficiently constituting a violation and do not require any affirmative act of misrepresentation by the debt collector.[1241] As one decision puts it: "[I]t would strain logic to conclude that if a debt collector is prohibited from engaging in debt collection activity in a state, he avoids the risk of liability under the FDCPA so long as he conceals this fact and does not make any representation that he actually has debt collection authority."[1242]

Allegations that an unlicensed or unregistered debt collector violated a state licensing statute simply by sending a collection letter may not be sufficient to establish a violation, but where the letter makes certain representations it may run afoul of FDCPA § 1692e(10) if those representations imply that the collector is authorized to collect the debt. A federal court in Florida found that where a letter stated that "[t]his communication is from a debt collection agency," that the collector had "been retained to collect this claim," and that "[t]his is an attempt to collect a debt and any information obtained will be used for that purpose," such statements "could reasonably be viewed as false, misleading, and deceptive because the Letter implies that Defendant is legally able to collect the debt, when it is not."[1243]

Likewise, where a collection agency enters into a settlement agreement with a consumer and collects the debt while unlicensed, a violation of FDCPA § 1692e(10) may be found, since the conduct goes beyond merely presenting information regarding the status of the debt and, instead, implies the authority to collect the debt. A Maryland federal court found that even though the collector did not affirmatively represent it was licensed by the state, its conduct with respect to the settlement "implicitly declared" that the collector was licensed to collect, and this conduct, notably, was "unlike sending a collection notice." In executing a settlement agreement to collect the debt, the collector "necessarily conveyed that it was legally able to do so."[1244]

Similar logic may compel a finding of a violation where the debt collector files suit to collect a debt, since filing suit is not the same as merely sending a notice to notify or remind the consumer about the debt's default status. A federal court in Pennsylvania found an FDCPA violation under these circumstances, concluding that such conduct "reaches far beyond a notice presenting information," since the collector "sued to because it suggested that debt buyer had been approved by state, thereby enhancing its "legitimacy and power to collect the debt" in mind of unsophisticated consumer); Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163, 171 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (filing state collection litigation in which it was falsely represented that debt collector was properly licensed pursuant to state law; "The false representation that Resurgent LLC held a debt-collection license could easily have led an unsophisticated consumer to forgo a valid defense."); Radaj v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2006 WL 2620394, at *4 (E.D. Wis. Sept 12, 2006) (debt collection letters stated that defendant "is licensed by Office of Administrator of Division of Banking" of state of Wisconsin; "The statement about licensing is akin to a 'vouched for' statement. It suggests that ARS has been approved by the state, thereby enhancing in the mind of the unsophisticated consumer ARS's legitimacy and power to collect the debt. Thus, the court cannot say that an unsophisticated consumer would not have been misled or harmed by the inclusion of the statement."). But see Berg v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore L.L.C., 2009 WL 901011 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009) (summary judgment for defendants as consumer failed to show false statemen that it was "authorized to do business in Illinois" was material).

1241 See, e.g., Valle v. Westhill Exch., L.L.C., 2021 WL 1117282, at *10–11 (D. Md. Mar. 24, 2021) (allowing that "[c]ourts in this district have sided with those finding that, while a violation of MCALA's licensing requirement may support a cause of action under the FDCPA, it will not amount to a per se FDCPA violation," but finding here a violation of § 1692e and e(10) because even though no affirmative representation was made, the collector, in executing a settlement agreement to collect the debt "necessarily conveyed that it was legally able to do so"); Gartrell v. J.J. Marshall & Assoc., Inc., 2020 WL 3250219, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2020) (statements in letter from unlicensed collector that "[t]his communication is from a debt collection agency" and that collector "has been retained to collect this claim"' could reasonably be viewed as false, misleading, and deceptive under § 1692e(10) "because the Letter implies that Defendant is legally able to collect the debt, when it is not"), adopted, 2020 WL 3250037 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 28, 2020); Veras v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 1050512, at *6 (D.N.J. Mar. 17, 2014) ("Plaintiff's allegation that Defendants attempted to collect Plaintiff's debt in contravention of the NJCFLA is sufficient to at least support his claim under section 1692e(10), that Defendants used a false representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect Plaintiff's debt."). See also Valentine v. Unifund CCR, Inc., 2021 WL 912854, at *5 (D.N.J. Mar. 10, 2021) (letter from unlicensed collector "deprived Plaintiff of truthful, non-misleading information about [the debt buyer's] ability to legally purchase and then collect the debt"); Wyche v. Tsarouhis, 385 F. Supp. 3d 392 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (plaintiff specifically and plausibly pleaded unlicensed collectors' state court complaint attempting to collect debt for which they had no legal right to do so constituted false, deceptive, or misleading representation in connection with collection of debt); Altenburg v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 2733803 (D. Md. June 26, 2017) (denying dismissal of FDCPA claim where collection agency initiated foreclosure proceedings without first being licensed as debt collector, as required by state law); Fiorenzano v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2562415, at *4–5 (D.R.I. June 29, 2012) (allegation that defendant violated § 1692e(10) by failing to register as debt collector under Rhode Island Debt Collector Registration statute was sufficient to state claim under FDCPA where statute prohibited any person from acting as debt collector in state without first registering); Russey v. Rankin, 911 F. Supp. 1449, 1459 (D.N.M. 1995); Gaetano v. Payco of Wis., Inc., 774 F. Supp. 1404, 1414–1415 (D. Conn. 1990) (plaintiff entitled to summary judgment on § 1692e(10) claim because "the Court finds deceptive the defendant's attempt to collect a debt when prohibited from doing so by Connecticut law") But see Ross v. Vakulskas Law Firm, P.C., 2012 WL 4092419, at *8–9 (N.D. Iowa Sept. 17 2012) (finding no violation, distinguishing cases that have found violation from this one where statute had "within thirty days after commencing business" clause and where other state statutes required licensing or registration prior to operating as debt collector within state).

1242 Veras v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 1050512, at *5 (D.N.J. Mar. 17, 2014).

1243 Gartrell v. J.J. Marshall & Assoc., Inc., 2020 WL 3250219, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 3250037 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 28, 2020).

1244 Valle v. Westhill Exch., L.L.C., 2021 WL 1117282, at *10–11 (D. Md. Mar. 24, 2021) (conduct described "affirmatively and materially misrepresented the defendant's status as a licensed collector").

collect the debt which it did not have the right to collect without a license."[1245]

Courts have also found that a consumer stated a FDCPA § 1692e(10) claim where a collection attorney attempted to collect a debt on behalf of the judgment creditor that was not licensed as a consumer lender, as required by New Jersey law.[1246]

1245 Wyche v. Tsarouhis, 385 F. Supp. 3d 392 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (plaintiff specifically and plausibly pleaded unlicensed collectors' state court complaint attempting to collect debt for which they had no legal right to do so constituted false, deceptive, or misleading representation in connection with collection of debt).

1246 See Tompkins v. Selip & Stylianou, L.L.P., 2019 WL 522143 (D.N.J. Feb. 11, 2019) (denying debt buyer's motion to dismiss § 1692e(10) claim that debt buyer was prohibited by New Jersey law from collecting on its judgment against consumer, as debt buyer failed to obtain required New Jersey consumer lender license); Latteri v. Mayer, 2018 WL 2317531 (D.N.J. May 22, 2018).

Chapter 8 FDCPA § 1692f: Unfair or Unconscionable Collections

8.1 General Prohibition; Construing "Unfair" and "Unconscionable," 15 U.S.C. § 1692f

8.1.1 Relation of General Standard to More Specific Enumerated Prohibitions

A debt collector may not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:" [followed by eight enumerated provisions].[1]

FDCPA § 1692f provides a general prohibition of unfair or unconscionable collection means, as well as enumerating eight specific unfair or unconscionable collection means. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) reiterates the general prohibition and the eight specific unfair or unconscionable collection means.[2] It also adds two additional prohibitions and a safe harbor relating to emails, texts, and social media.[3] In addition, Regulation F, at sections 1006.30(a) and 1006.30(b), prohibits two specific practices that the CFPB finds to be unfair or unconscionable collection means.[4]

FDCPA § 1692f's general prohibition of unfair or unconscionable collection means applies even to conduct not specifically prohibited by one of the section's eight enumerated provisions. The section specifically provides "without limiting the general application of the forgoing." Thus, conduct can be unfair even if it does not fall within conduct prohibited by one of the eight enumerated provisions.[5] Congress recognized that it could not foresee and proscribe every possible type of unfair collection behavior, and so provided this general prohibition to apply to new forms of unfair conduct designed to evade the other eight prohibitions.[6] Regulation F is consistent with this approach. It states that "[a] debt collector must not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt, including, but not limited to, the conduct described in paragraphs (b) through (f) of this section."[7]

FDCPA § 1692f and Reg. F § 1006.22(a) apply broadly to any unfair or unconscionable collection means. The general principle of the FDCPA's liberal interpretation is discussed in § 3.2, supra.[8]

8.1.2 Sources for the Unfairness Standard

The FDCPA § 1692f prohibition of unfair collection methods was patterned after the Federal Trade Commission Act prohibition of unfair acts and practices.[9] At the time of the FDCPA's enactment, the FTC's unfairness standard was based on the Supreme Court's decision in Federal Trade Commission v. Sperry & Hutchinson Co.,[10] known as the S&H standard. The Court noted with approval the FTC's use of the following criteria for determining whether a practice is unfair:

- Whether the practice offends public policy. Is it within at least the penumbra of some common law, statutory, or other established concept of unfairness?
- Whether the practice is immoral, unethical, oppressive, or unscrupulous.
- Whether the practice causes substantial injury to consumers.

At the time that Congress was contemplating the FDCPA, Congress' deliberations were informed by a number of precedents regarding "unfair" debt collection practices under the Federal Trade Commission Act and state consumer protection statutes:

---

1 15 U.S.C. § 1692f. See also Regulation F, 12 C.F.R. § 1006.22(a) (effective November 30, 2021) (cited hereinafter as "Reg. F").

The initial House bill generally prohibited "unfair" collection conduct. H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805 (1975). Subsequent bills did not, but specifically prohibited certain practices, a number of which were similar to those prohibited in the present subsections of § 1692f. E.g., H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 807 (1976); S. 656, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807 (1977). S. 918 reintroduced a general prohibition of unfair and unconscionable conduct with language slightly different from the FDCPA's. S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808 (1977).

2 Reg. F § 1006.22.

3 See §§ 8.8 to 8.11, infra.

4 See §§ 8.12, 8.13, infra.

5 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1199 (11th Cir. 2010); McMillan v. Collection Prof'ls Inc., 455 F.3d 754, 764 (7th Cir. 2006).

6 According to the Senate report, "this bill prohibits in general terms any harassing, unfair, or deceptive collection practice. This will enable the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed." S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 533 (6th Cir. 2014).

7 Reg. F § 1006.22(a).

8 See also § 7.3.9, supra (materiality element of deception claims); Cheslek v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2017 WL 7370983 (W.D. Mich. Dec. 22, 2017) (consumer failed to allege any conduct that would be materially unfair or unconscionable to the least sophisticated consumer). Cf. Cottle v. Associated Credit Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 2728206, at *2 (E.D. Wash. June 23, 2017) ("[Consumers] have failed to demonstrate how [debt collector] Defendant's actions that allegedly caused Plaintiffs to [falsely] believe their SSNs had been filed in court were 'unfair or unconscionable.'").

9 15 U.S.C. § 45. See Jeter v. Credit Bur., Inc., 760 F.2d 1168 (11th Cir. 1985).

10 405 U.S. 233, 244, 92 S. Ct. 898, 31 L. Ed. 2d 170 (1972). See Appx. E.2.5.1, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices §§ 4.3, 4.4 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Douglass v. Convergent Outsourcing, 765 F.3d 299, 306 (3d Cir. 2014) (should be broadly construed to effect its remedial purposes); Caprio v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 709 F.3d 142, 148 (3d Cir. 2013) ("As remedial legislation, the FDCPA must be broadly construed in order to give full effect to these purposes.").

- Proposed FTC rules that would prohibit or restrict a dozen creditor remedies as "unfair," such as contractual confessions of judgment and wage assignments;[11]
- Suing the consumer in a distant forum to collect a debt;[12]
- Suing a consumer, but not serving them with the state-required notice of the suit;[13]
- Filing affidavits in state debt collection suits that failed to reveal that the underlying products were not delivered;[14]
- Taking a default judgment after accepting a payment from a consumer defendant in a state debt collection suit and advising the consumer to ignore the summons;[15]
- Calling a consumer at work after the consumer had asked the debt collector not to;[16] and
- Sending dunning letters to the consumer's employer.[17]

In 1994, Congress set out a new FTC Act definition of unfairness, but did not add a definition for purposes of the FDCPA:

> [T]he act or practice causes or is likely to cause substantial injury to consumers which is not reasonably avoidable by consumers themselves and not outweighed by countervailing benefits to consumers or to competition. In determining whether an act or practice is unfair, the Commission may consider established public policies as evidence to be considered with all other evidence. Such public policy considerations may not serve as a primary basis for such determination.[18]

Not unsurprisingly, the FTC, in its Staff Commentary on the FDCPA, adopts the unfairness standard then applicable to the FTC—the 1994 standard.[19]

The Seventh Circuit has rejected both FTC unfairness definitions as applicable to FDCPA § 1692f. For the S&H standard, "Because the Sperry Court is interpreting a different statute, and because it does not set forth such a test, Sperry is of marginal, if of any, assistance in our present inquiry."[20] And for the 1994 Congressional definition, the Seventh Circuit found that substantial injury is not required for a section 1692f violation, so that standard does not apply either.[21]

Courts are likely to give their own interpretation of the term "unfair." The Second Circuit has found that a practice is unfair if it gives the debt collector an unfair advantage over the debtor or is inherently abusive.[22] The Eighth Circuit finds that a practice can be unfair even when it is not deceptive.[23]

8.1.3 Sources for the Unconscionability Standard

"Unconscionable" in FDCPA § 1692f is a term of art borrowed from equity and the common law. It is codified in Uniform Commercial Code (UCC) sections 2-302, 2A-108, and 2-719(3), in Uniform Consumer Credit Code (UCCC) section 6.111(c), and in a number of state consumer protection statutes.[24] Case law interpreting all these unconscionability standards may be helpful in interpreting unconscionability under FDCPA § 1692f, although most cases deal with unconscionable contract terms, such as provisions in consumer arbitration agreements,[25] not with unconscionable conduct that will be the main focus of section 1692f claims. The FDCPA's legislative history offers little guidance.

8.1.4 Relation of FDCPA § 1692f to Other FDCPA Provisions

"Unfair" and "unconscionable" are different standards than "deceptive" and also not identical to other FDCPA requirements or prohibitions. A practice can be deceptive without being unfair, unfair without being deceptive,[26] or the same practice could, at least in principle, violate both FDCPA §§ 1692e and 1692f, since they are not mutually exclusive provisions.[27] Sections 1692e and 1692f are "broad, potentially overlapping, and are not mutually exclusive."[28]

11 Proposed Trade Regulation Rule on Creditor Remedies, 40 Fed. Reg. 16,347 (Apr. 11, 1976). The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) adopted its Credit Practices Rule March 1, 1984, effective March 1, 1985. See 16 C.F.R. § 444; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 2.3 (4th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Am. Fin. Services Ass'n v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 767 F.2d 957 (D.C. Cir. 1985).

12 Spiegel v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 540 F.2d 287 (7th Cir. 1976).

13 In re New Rapids Carpet Ctr., Inc., 90 F.T.C. 64 (F.T.C. July 26, 1977).

14 Olive v. Graceland Sales Corp., 293 A.2d 658 (N.J. 1972).

15 Pay'N Save Corp., 86 F.T.C. 688 (F.T.C. 1975) (consent order).

16 In re Nosoma Sys. Inc., 88 F.T.C. 458 (F.T.C. 1976) (consent order); In re Intercontinental Services Corp., 86 F.T.C. 1098 (F.T.C. 1975) (consent order); In re Family Publication Serv., Inc., 63 F.T.C. 971 (F.T.C. 1963) (consent order); Bennett v. Tri-State Collection Serv., 1976 WL 38806 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pl. Aug. 24, 1976).

17 Bennett v. Tri-State Collection Serv., 1976 WL 38806 (Ohio Ct. Com. Pl. Aug. 24, 1976).

18 5 U.S.C. § 45(n). See also National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

19 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 808-2, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

20 McMillan v. Collection Prof'ls Inc., 455 F.3d 754, 764 n.13 (7th Cir. 2006).

21 Todd v. Collecto, Inc., 731 F.3d 734, 739 (7th Cir. 2013).

22 Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128, 136 (2d Cir. 2017).

23 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017).

24 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 4.4 (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

25 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements ch. 8 (8th ed. 2020) updated at www.nclc.org/library.

26 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017).

27 Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128, 136 (2d Cir. 2017); Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp.,762 F.3d 529, 536 (6th Cir. 2014); LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1199 (11th Cir. 2010); McMillan v. Collection Prof'ls Inc., 455 F.3d 754, 760 (7th Cir. 2006); Duffy v. Landberg, 215 F.3d 871, 874–875 (8th Cir. 2000); Murray v. Hunter Warfield, Inc., 2021 WL 268382 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 27, 2021); Stevens v. Monterey Collections, L.L.C., 2021 WL 840354 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 8, 2021); Houser v. LTD Fin. Services L.P., 2021 WL 68178, at *5 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 7, 2021); Howard v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 978653, at *7 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 28, 2020).

28 Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 536 (6th Cir. 2014).

Although a good argument can be made that a violation of another FDCPA provision is a per se unfair practice,[29] courts typically hold that it is not enough to allege that a practice violates section 1692f simply because it violates section 1692e or some other FDCPA provision. Instead, the consumer should explain why the collector's conduct meets the definition of unfair or unconscionable conduct.[30]

A number of federal district courts go a step further and view the general prohibition of unfairness as a "backstop" not actionable where the identical conduct violates another FDCPA provision.[31] These courts limit section 1692f's general prohibition to where no other FDCPA provision applies. But even these courts reach a different result when the consumer pleads one of the eight enumerated prohibitions found in section 1692f—that the same conduct can violate that provision and other FDCPA provisions.[32]

From a conceptual viewpoint, these trial courts are wrong. As a number of circuit courts have ruled, the same conduct can be both unfair and also violative of another FDCPA provision. Perhaps these lower courts are only making an efficiency claim that where a specific FDCPA provision is violated, there is no reason for the court to also engage a more difficult inquiry if the more general unfairness or unconscionability standards apply to the exact same conduct.

For example, finding a specific conduct violates both FDCPA §§ 1692e and 1692f will not increase the consumer's recovery, but just increases the case's complexity. On the other hand, if the consumer pleads both provisions, and the court finds that FDCPA § 1692e is not violated, then the consumer can still present reasons why FDCPA § 1692f, as a backstop, is violated. Pleading both provisions is particularly sensible where the violation of the other FDCPA provision is not clear. On the other hand, adding a FDCPA § 1692f claim may needlessly clutter a case if the other FDCPA violation is clear.

8.1.5 Strict Liability; Least Sophisticated Consumer; Conduct Addressed to Consumer's Attorney; Materiality; Constitutional Standing

The FDCPA principle of strict liability, as discussed in § 3.2.4, supra, applies to section 1692f. Thus, the Third and Seventh Circuits rule that FDCPA § 1692f does not require the element of knowledge or intent.[33] What matters is how the practice affects the consumer.

The Second Circuit, however, noted that "[w]e did not hold that a debt collector's intent is irrelevant in determining whether its conduct is unfair or unconscionable under section 1692f. Here the restraint [of a bank account] is adequately alleged to have been wrongfully imposed for an abusive purpose."[34]

The least sophisticated or unsophisticated consumer analytical standard is widely applied in cases under FDCPA § 1692f.[35] The standard is examined in more detail at § 3.2.1, supra.

29 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices (10th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

30 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291, 1308 (11th Cir. 2015) ("A catch-all is not a free-for-all. In order to proceed under § 1692f, . . . [the consumer] is still required to allege facts showing that the least sophisticated consumer would or could view Appellee's sworn reply as partial and unjust or as unscrupulous and unethical"); Soyinka v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 472 F. Supp. 3d 463, 470 (N.D. Ill. 2020) (consumer must "provide some factual and substantive content to the unfair-means claim so that there is a clear legal distinction between it and the false-representation claim under § 1692e. Yes, the same factual allegations might serve as the basis for both claims, but the claims must be legally distinct."); Jennings v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions L.L.C., 441 F. Supp. 3d 106, 115 (D. Md. 2020) ("Plaintiff makes no argument as to how this conduct is 'separate and distinct' from the conduct covered by her [§ 1692e] claims"); Palmer v. Simon's Agency, Inc., 2020 WL 1332829, at *5 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 23, 2020) (consumer specifically alleged which conduct was unfair and unconscionable); Schaefer v. IC Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 1083633 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 6, 2020); Price-Richardson v. DCN Holdings, Inc., 2018 WL 902167 (D. Md. Feb. 15, 2018); Mills v. Turner, 2017 WL 3670967 (D. Mass. Aug. 25, 2017); Biber v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 118037 (E.D. Va. Jan. 11, 2017); Davis v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 7117185 (D. Kan. Dec. 7, 2016); Cohen v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, 2016 WL 4035433 (D.N.J. July 26, 2016); Gonzalez v. Law Office of Allen Robert King, 195 F. Supp. 3d 1118 (C.D. Cal. 2016); McNamee v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2015 WL 5174776 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 4, 2015).

31 Alvarado Martinez v. Eltman Law, P.C., 444 F. Supp. 3d 748, 755 (N.D. Tex. 2020); Manuel v. Merchants & Prof'l Credit Bur., Inc., 402 F. Supp. 3d 361 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 5, 2019), aff'd, 956 F.3d 822 (5th Cir. 2020); Al v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 2019 WL 189248 (E.D. Wis. Jan. 14, 2019); Marshall v. CBE Grp., Inc., 2018 WL 1567852 (D. Nev. Mar. 30, 2018); Maxwell v. St. Francis Health Ctr., 2017 WL 4037732 (D. Kan. Sept. 13, 2017); Chisholm v. AFNI, Inc., 2016 WL 6901358 (D.N.J. Nov. 22, 2016); Jones v. Seas & Assoc., 2016 WL 4146192 (W.D. Tenn. Aug. 3, 2016); Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 4059645 (D.N.J. July 27, 2016); Duran v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 3661538 (S.D.N.Y. June 30, 2016); Scott v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 139 F. Supp. 3d 956 (S.D. Iowa 2015); Schumacher v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, 2015 WL 5786139 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 30, 2015); Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 2015 WL 5232812 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 8, 2015).

32 See, e.g., Manuel v. Merchants & Prof'l Credit Bur., Inc., 402 F. Supp. 3d 361 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 5, 2019), aff'd, 956 F.3d 822 (5th Cir. 2020); Maxwell v. St. Francis Health Ctr., 2017 WL 4037732 (D. Kan. Sept. 13, 2017); Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017); Cohen v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, 2016 WL 4035433 (D.N.J. July 26, 2016).

33 Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2011); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991 (7th Cir. 2003); Agostino v. Quest Diagnostics, Inc., 2011 WL 5410667 (D.N.J. Nov. 3, 2011) (collector can be liable under § 1692f(1) even where collector relied on creditor's statement of amount due); Beler v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker, Moore, L.L.C., 2006 WL 1423118 (C.D. Ill. May 18, 2006). See also Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171, 1188 (D. Utah 2019) (even if collector were not charged with knowledge that the accounts were subject to workers' compensation and thus not the responsibility of the consumer, it still violated § 1692f(1) "because the FDCPA is a strict liability statute").

34 Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128, 139 (2d Cir. 2017).

35 See Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 533 (6th Cir. 2014); McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010, 1019–1020 (7th Cir. 2014); LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1193–1194 (11th Cir. 2010); McMillan v. Collection Prof'ls Inc., 455

Some courts have held that FDCPA § 1692f applies to the debt collector's conduct addressed to the consumer's attorney.[36] Where there are no cases directly on point, the substantial body of decisions considering it under FDCPA § 1692e should be persuasive. As described in § 7.3.5, supra, the majority view is that FDCPA § 1692e applies to communications to a consumer's attorney. At least one court analyzing claims under FDCPA § 1692f applied a "competent attorney" standard, employed by some courts to analyze claims under FDCPA § 1692e,[37] rather than a least sophisticated consumer standard.[38]

Despite the absence of textual support in the language of the FDCPA, some courts have applied the concept of materiality to FDCPA § 1692f claims,[39] following precedent applying a materiality requirement to FDCPA § 1692e.[40]

In any FDCPA case—including those based on the FDCPA's restrictions on unfair or unconscionable collection methods—the consumer must be prepared to show that the matter presents a case or controversy as defined by Article III of the Constitution. This issue is discussed in detail in § 11.15, infra. The particular application of these standards to the restrictions in FDCPA § 1692f(1) on the collection of unauthorized amounts is discussed in § 11.15.5.2, infra; to the restrictions in FDCPA § 1692f(7) and (8) on sending mail to the debtor in a way that reveals the existence of the debt, in § 11.15.8, infra; and to the other provisions of FDCPA § 1692f in § 11.15.11, infra.

8.2 Conduct Prohibited Under FDCPA § 1692f General Standard

8.2.1 Unfair Collection Contacts

8.2.1.1 Unauthorized Taking of the Consumer's Money or Property

It is unfair to take money out of the consumer's bank account without authorization, such as through an unauthorized electronic funds transfer, a remotely created check (check produced by the collector without the consumer's signature), or a remotely created payment order.[41] For a discussion of various unauthorized transfers from a consumer's bank account and what suffices to be authorization, see § 14.7.2, infra.

On the other hand, if the consumer's payment bounces, the collector may be entitled, with certain limits, to re-present the check, either electronically or as a paper check.[42]

Mailing a homeowner a notice of sale when the foreclosure had been dismissed, causing them to give away their furnishings and move, could violate FDCPA § 1692f, because the home was taken without any right to take it.[43]

8.2.1.2 Aggressive or Overreaching Collection Conduct

In addition to potentially violating FDCPA § 1692d's prohibitions on conduct that can harass, oppress, or abuse a person, aggressive collection tactics can also be unfair or unconscionable under FDCPA § 1692f. This includes intimidating threats,[44] repeated calls after the consumer had asked that the debt collector stop,[45] or repeated

F.3d 754 (7th Cir. 2006); Randolph v. IMBS, Inc., 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004); Wade v. Reg'l Credit Ass'n, 87 F.3d 1098, 1100 (9th Cir. 1996); Manuel v. Merchants & Prof'l Credit Bur., Inc., 402 F. Supp. 3d 361 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 5, 2019), aff'd, 956 F.3d 822 (5th Cir. 2020); Cordova v. Jenkins, 2018 WL 5112907 (D.N.M. Oct. 19, 2018) (applying standard, but finding amount of fees buyer's attorney falsely requested, namely $62.50, was de minimis and, therefore, not material); Kimber v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 668 F. Supp. 1480 (M.D. Ala. 1987).

36 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685, 697 (8th Cir. 2017); Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 776 F.3d 567, 574 (8th Cir. 2015); Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291, 1302 (11th Cir. 2015); Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2011); Evory v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 505 F.3d 769, 773 (7th Cir. 2007).

37 See § 7.3.5, supra.

38 Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 776 F.3d 567, 574 (8th Cir. 2015).

39 Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 776 F.3d 567 (8th Cir. 2015); Lembach v. Bierman, 528 Fed. Appx. 297 (4th Cir. 2013); Tavernaro v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 2020 WL 5747920 (D. Kan. Sept. 25, 2020); Poole v. MED-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1317450, at *6 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 20, 2020) (finding that use of "Attorney at Law" on envelope's return address naming debt collector's in-house counsel did not influence consumer's decision to pay the debt and was not material); Cordova v. Jenkins, 2018 WL 5112907 (D.N.M. Oct. 19, 2018) (finding amount of fees buyer's attorney falsely requested, $62.50, was de minimis and, therefore, not material); Cheslek v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2017 WL 7370983 (W.D. Mich. Dec. 22, 2017) (consumer failed to allege any conduct that would be materially unfair or unconscionable to the least sophisticated consumer).

40 See § 7.3.9, supra.

41 Villanueva v. Account Discovery Sys., L.L.C., 77 F. Supp. 3d 1058 (D. Colo. 2015); Muzuco v. ReSubmitIt, L.L.C., 297 F.R.D. 504 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Lovelace v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 3333019 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 9, 2007).

42 See § 14.7.5, infra.

43 See Friello v. Bank of N.Y., 2012 WL 4892856 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 15, 2012). See also Richardson v. Check Sys. Recovery, L.L.C., 2012 WL 6049703 (N.D. Ind. Dec. 5, 2012) (falsely informing plaintiff that defendant had sent process server to her house, even though no lawsuit had been filed).

44 See also Egbarin v. Lewis, Lewis & Ferraro, L.L.C., 2006 WL 236846 (D. Conn. Jan. 31, 2006) (threat to initiate bar grievance); Hosseinzadeh v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 387 F. Supp. 2d 1104 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 3, 2005) (content of six telephone messages from debt collector). But cf. Caulfield v. Am. Account & Advisors, Inc., 2013 WL 1953314 (D. Minn. May 10, 2013) (screaming at consumer was not unfair); Wilson v. Merchants & Med. Credit Corp., Inc., 2010 WL 3488617 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 2, 2010) (statement that "we know where you work, we know where you live" did not violate § 1692f); Catherman v. Credit Bur., 634 F. Supp. 693 (E.D. Pa. 1986) (threatening consumer's ability to obtain credit); Harris v. BWS Credit Services, Inc., 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17840 (D. Neb. Dec. 4, 1980) (threat to "get" consumer).

45 See Toth v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2014 WL 5687418 (D. Nev. Nov. 4, 2014). See also Williams v. Nat'l Credit Adjusters, L.L.C., 2015 WL 7180499 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 16, 2015) (claim of reprehensible phone calls would proceed to jury under §§ 1692d, 1692e, and 1692f); Hamburger v. Northland Grp., Inc., 2015 WL 631066 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 12, 2015) (denying summary judgment for collection agency on calls after the debt had been paid[46] or discharged in bankruptcy.[47]

Accusing consumers of dishonesty in a dunning form letter just because a check was dishonored states a claim for unfair debt collection.[48] Similarly, demeaning the consumer by falsely stating that the consumer had taken out a credit card intending not to pay for their charges can also be unfair.[49]

False threats to sue can violate FDCPA § 1692e, but can also violate FDCPA § 1692f.[50] So can a letter referencing an arrest warrant.[51] Field visits to a consumer's home can be seen as unfair threats of foreclosure and intended to obtain payment on a mortgage.[52] A "payroll deduction request" impliedly threatened that the employer would become involved and a garnishment would occur, when the debt collector had no legal right to do either, was held to violate FDCPA § 1692f.[53]

On the other hand, while other FDCPA provisions may be implicated, not every hard-nosed collection tactic is unfair. Courts have found no FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation where the collector's frequent call attempts were unanswered by the consumer,[54] where the collector talked over the consumer and was condescending,[55] or where the collector refused to accept partial payments.[56] Bringing an account stated claim instead of a breach of contract claim in a collection lawsuit is not so aggressive as to be unfair.[57] Courts have also not found it unfair for a collector to fail to disclose the possible tax consequences to the consumer of the collector providing a certain amount of debt forgiveness.[58] Confusing or misleading information may be deceptive under FDCPA § 1692e, but may not always be unfair under FDCPA § 1692f.[59] The Seventh Circuit found it not unfair to report to a consumer reporting agency separately each of multiple medical debts owed to the same provider, instead of aggregating the different debts, when furnishing information to the consumer reporting agency.[60]

8.2.1.3 Hiding Key Information from the Consumer

"It is unfair to consumers under the FDCPA to hide the true character of the debt, thereby impairing their ability to knowledgeably assess the validity of the debt."[61]

Before Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) required itemization of the debt,[62] some courts held that it was unfair to fail to itemize fees or costs as part of the total amount being sought because consumers might not realize the collector was seeking such additional charges and in what amount.[63]

While hiding the collector's identity or that of the account owner can be a FDCPA § 1692e violation, including the requirement that the collector identify itself as a collector, it can also be a FDCPA § 1692f violation.[64] This can include using the name of a fake caller on the caller ID[65] or showing § 1692f claim for failing to update its records to stop collection calls to plaintiffs, parents of debtor, once it had been advised that debtor did not reside with them and had been requested to stop calling). But see Johnson v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 10156241 (C.D. Cal. June 24, 2013) (not § 1692f violation to make frequent calls).

46 See Schore v. Renton Collections, Inc., 2018 WL 2018417 (W.D. Wash. May 1, 2018).

47 See Bruner v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 770993 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 28, 2017). See also Parente v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1182714, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 12, 2020); Olivares v. Rausch, Sturm, Israel Emerson, & Hornik, L.L.C., 2013 WL 12109036 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 11, 2013). But see Buckley v. Afni, Inc., 133 F. Supp. 3d 1140 (S.D. Ind. 2016) (no § 1692f claim, but § 1692e claim allowed for collection on discharged debt).

48 McMillan v. Collection Prof'ls Inc., 455 F.3d 754 (7th Cir. 2006).

49 See Washington v. Roosen, Varchetti & Oliver, P.P.L.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (W.D. Mich. 2012). Neill v. Bullseye Collection Agency, Inc., 2009 WL 1386155, at *2 (D. Minn. May 14, 2009) (allegations that printing at top of duns the acronym "WWJD," for phrase "what would Jesus do?," "has the effect of invoking shame").

50 LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1199–1201 (11th Cir. 2010). See also Soyinka v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 472 F. Supp. 3d 463 (N.D. Ill. 2020).

51 Powers v. Wilhite, 2012 WL 5413820 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 6, 2012).

52 See Fielding v. FCC Fin., L.L.C., 2015 WL 12532741 (M.D. Tenn. Jan. 22, 2015).

53 See Brown v. Collection Services of Athens, Inc., 2014 WL 7359560 (M.D. Ga. Dec. 23, 2014).

54 Carman v. CBE Grp., Inc., 782 F. Supp. 2d 1223 (D. Kan. 2011) (finding no evidence of unfair or unconscionable conduct as there was no evidence that collector had made intentional hang-up calls; instead, record revealed that plaintiff had intentionally refused to answer any calls where debt collector made repeated calls and chose not to leave messages).

55 Taufen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2014 WL 668019 (D. Minn. Feb. 19, 2014).

56 Medrano v. Great Mercantile Agency, Inc., 2018 WL 3105026 (E.D. Cal. June 20, 2018); Beeks v. ALS Lien Services, 2014 WL 7785745 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 18, 2014).

57 Drennan v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 2010 WL 11619554 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 1, 2010), aff'd, 389 Fed. Appx. 352 (Aug. 4, 2010).

58 Moses v. LTD Fin. Services I, Inc., 275 F. Supp. 3d 893 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Daugherty v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2015 WL 3823654 (S.D. Tex. June 18, 2015).

59 Polak v. Kirschenbaum & Phillips, P.C., 2018 WL 1189337 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 16, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 1187400 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 6, 2018) (where consumer stated §§ 1692e and g claims, where collection letter stated that interest was $ 0.00 and "may vary from day to day due to interest or other charges," there was § 1692e violation but not § 1692f violation). See also Winehouse v. GC Services L.P., 2017 WL 2455075 (E.D.N.Y. June 6, 2017). But see Fiddick v. Bay Area Credit Serv., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1858824 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 25, 2019) (declining to dismiss § 1692f claim where collection letters contained misleading and confusing information about nature and status of debts).

60 Zablocki v. Merchants Credit Guide Co., 968 F.3d 620 (7th Cir. 2020).

61 Fields v. Wilber Law Firm, P.C., 383 F.3d 562, 566 (7th Cir. 2004).

62 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii), discussed at § 9.4, infra.

63 Fields v. Wilber Law Firm, P.C., 383 F.3d 562, 566 (7th Cir. 2004); Park v. McCabe Trotter & Beverly, P.C., 2018 WL 3912356 (D.S.C. Aug. 14, 2018). See also Bender v. Elmore & Throop, P.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 1215057 (D. Md. Mar. 30, 2021) (no violation where, unlike in Fields, account ledger provided to consumers clearly and explicitly itemized costs, attorney fees, interest, and late fees).

64 See also § 14.3.3, infra (discussing caller ID and spoofing).

65 Knoll v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 502 F. Supp. 2d 943 (D. Minn. 2007); Knoll v. Intellirisk Mgmt., 2006 WL 2974190 (D. Minn Oct. 16, 2006). But see Horowitz v. GC Services L.P., 2015 WL 1959377 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2015) (using spoofing technology to make long distance calls appear local did not violate FDCPA); Scheffler v. Integrity Fin. Partners, Inc., 2013 WL 9768539 (D. Minn. Oct. 28, 2013) (same).

a local area code when the call is out-of-state.[66] But a court found that blocking the caller ID so that the caller was not identified was not unfair.[67]

Letters hiding the collector's identity can also be actionable under FDCPA § 1692f, such as letters signed by an outside attorney or other collector who had no knowledge of the debt.[68] Collectors also have to identify the creditor on whose behalf they are collecting, and failure to do so can be unfair.[69]

But a court found it not unfair to identify that the contact is from a debt collector without disclosing that the collector was employed at a law firm.[70] Courts may also find that a collector that properly identifies the collection agency may not be engaging in an unfair practice by not using the individual employee's real name.[71]

8.2.1.4 Evasion or Obfuscation of Other FDCPA Provisions

It can be unfair to engage in conduct obfuscating or evading other FDCPA provisions. For example, since a collector cannot communicate with a consumer represented by an attorney,[72] when the consumer informs the collector that the consumer is represented by an attorney, it can be unfair to try to convince the consumer not to hire the attorney, but instead pay the debt.[73]

It can also be unfair to send a debt verification notice in an envelope that looks like junk mail that would be discarded without being read.[74] The FDCPA provides rights concerning a consumer's ability to dispute a debt, so that a collector's informing the consumer that the debt could not be disputed can be unfair.[75] Similarly, failure to provide FDCPA-required disclosures can be unfair.[76]

8.2.1.5 State Law Violations

A collector violating state law is often viewed not as a per se FDCPA § 1692f violation,[77] but instead the violation may be a factor in determining whether, looking at the conduct as a whole, the collector's actions are unfair.[78] These issues are most frequently raised where the collector is not properly licensed, registered, or bonded—that is, whether the failure to be licensed, registered, or bonded is a FDCPA § 1692f violation.[79]

Courts find this to be a factor in considering whether the collector's conduct is unfair, such as where the collector threatens to engage or actually engages in conduct that is impermissible for an unlicensed collector.[80] On the other hand, merely alleging that the collector is unlicensed may not be enough to show a FDCPA § 1692f violation without showing how that failure makes the collection conduct unfair.[81]

66 See Charles v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2015 WL 13373812 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 26, 2015) (issue for the jury). But see Mendoza v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2019 WL 2524117 (E.D. Pa. June 18, 2019); Bermudez v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2019 WL 415569 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 1, 2019).

67 See Glover v. Client Services, Inc., 2007 WL 2902209 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 2, 2007).

68 See Masuda v. Thomas Richards & Co., 759 F. Supp. 1456 (C.D. Cal. 1991). See also Vela v. John B. Sage, P.A., 2007 WL 9701044 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 26, 2007) (denying dismissal where consumer alleged that collection agency did not engage in credit reporting for debts due to creditor medical center, at time it sent collection letter which mentioned possible credit reporting; unfair collection practice stated § 1692f claim based on general prohibition of "unfair means").

69 See Schnorrbusch v. Commercial Trade, Inc., 2018 WL 6436418 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 7, 2018).

70 See Fondacaro v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 2018 WL 4054075 (N.D.N.Y. Aug. 24, 2018).

71 Velazquez v. Fair Collections & Outsourcing, Inc., 2013 WL 4659564 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 2013). See also Reg. F § 1006.18(f) (permitting the use of assumed names by individual employees in certain circumstances), discussed at § 7.2.14, supra.

72 15 U.S.C. § 1692c(a)(2). See also § 5.5, supra.

73 See Istre v. Miramed Revenue Grp., L.L.C., 2014 WL 4988201 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 7, 2014).

74 See Voris v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1156 (S.D. Cal. 2007).

75 See Grant-Fletcher v. Brachfeld Law Grp., P.C., 2012 WL 2523094 (D. Md. June 28, 2012).

76 Mallory v. McCarthy & Holthus, L.L.P., 2015 WL 2185413 (D. Nev. May 11, 2015) (consumers' allegation that law firm, in foreclosure, engaged in unfair or unconscionable means when it sent letters to collect and did not include required notices under § 1692g or § 1692e stated plausible claim for relief).

77 Gallego v. Northland Grp. Inc., 814 F.3d 123 (2d Cir. 2016); Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 536 (6th Cir. 2014); LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1192 (11th Cir. 2010); Beler v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 480 F.3d 470, 474 (7th Cir. 2007); Carlson v. First Revenue Assurance, 359 F.3d 1015, 1018 (8th Cir. 2004); Wade v. Reg'l Credit Ass'n, 87 F.3d 1098, 1099–1101 (9th Cir. 1996); Eul v. Transworld Sys., 2017 WL 1178537 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2017) (dismissing § 1692f claim asserted by student loan cosigners who were sued without first being provided state's cosigner notice); Johnson v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 2006 WL 2355340 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 15, 2006).

78 Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 536 (6th Cir. 2014); LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185, 1192 (11th Cir. 2010); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358, 366 (D. Md. 2010) (debt collector's failure to register under state debt collection law "is an appropriate consideration in deciding whether its means of collection were unfair or unconscionable").

79 Section 1692e claims related to unlicensed debt collection are discussed at § 7.4.13, supra.

80 See Ademiluyi v. PennyMac Mortg. Inv. Tr. Holdings I, L.L.C., 929 F. Supp. 2d 502 (D. Md. 2013); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358, 366 (D. Md. 2010) (debt collector's failure to register under state debt collection law "is an appropriate consideration in deciding whether its means of collection were unfair or unconscionable"); St. Denis v. New Horizon Credit, Inc., 2006 WL 1965779 (D. Conn. July 12, 2006) (unfair to engage in unlicensed debt collection).

81 Velez v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1476144 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 24, 2017) (one letter, verifying debt, and requesting payment by entity that had not registered was not false representation of right to sue); Kuhn v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2015 WL 1505648 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2015) (FDCPA does not incorporate state licensing requirements); Cox v. Sherman Capital L.L.C., 2014 WL 1328147 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2014); Skinner v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 876 F. Supp. 2d 473 (D.N.J. 2012) (attempt to collect debt without filing state required bond was not shown to be unfair); McDowell

8.2.2 Collecting Time-Barred Debts

FDCPA § 1692f case law on collection of time-barred debts is combined with the FDCPA § 1692e (deception) discussion on the same topic. They are treated together because case law relating to time-barred debts frequently finds violation of both sections without distinguishing the analysis as to the two. Section 7.4.9, supra, contains a general discussion of time-barred debts and a brief summary of some of the complexities in analyzing whether there is a violation. The section also considers FDCPA §§ 1692e and 1692f violations for:

- Time-barred collection lawsuits;[82]
- Threats to sue on time-barred debt;[83]
- Time-barred proofs of claim submitted in a bankruptcy;[84] and
- Collection contacts involving time-barred debt.[85]

8.2.3 Unfair Practices in Debt Collection Suits Against the Consumer

8.2.3.1 Service of Process

Sewer service is the practice of not properly serving a summons on the consumer and then falsifying an affidavit that attests to the method of service. Sewer service and other false affidavits as to the service or process can be an unfair or unconscionable practice in violation of FDCPA § 1692f.[86]

Similarly where a collection law firm is on notice that its process server engaged in a widespread pattern of sewer service, it can be unfair for the law firm to continue to prosecute cases based on such service of process without investigating whether the consumer defendants were in fact properly served.[87] Even when properly served, a summons can be unfair where the collector should know that the person served is the wrong debtor.[88] It can also be unfair to include with the service of process a notice from the collection law firm that the lawsuit will go away if the consumer makes monthly payments, but then the law firm obtains a default judgment.[89]

8.2.3.2 Suing Where There Is No Right to Sue

It can violate FDCPA § 1692f to sue the consumer where there clearly is no right to do so. This includes where the collector sues the consumer on behalf of the creditor, but without the creditor's authorization,[90] or sues as the debt owner but does not own the debt.[91] It can also be unfair for a collector to sue where the state does not authorize it to use the state's

v. Vengroff, Williams, & Assoc., Inc., 2006 WL 1720435 (E.D.N.Y. June 21, 2006).

82 See § 7.4.9.3, supra.

83 See § 7.4.9.4, supra.

84 See § 7.4.9.5, supra.

85 See § 7.4.9.6, supra.

86 See Scott v. Greenberg, 2017 WL 1214441 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2017); Sykes v. Mel Harris & Assoc., 757 F. Supp. 2d 413 (S.D.N.Y. 2010), aff'd, 780 F.3d 70 (2d Cir. 2015); Holmes v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 966 F. Supp. 2d 925 (N.D. Cal. 2013). See also Mancilla v. Mid Valley Collection Bur., 2019 WL 8758894 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 13, 2019). But see Armstead v. Feldman, 2020 WL 4753837, at *8 (D. Md. Aug. 17, 2020) (dismissing § 1692f claims where alleged misrepresentations made in state court filings regarding service of process involved "no overt threat or act of harassment associated with the filing of the Returns of Service" and instead were subject of legitimate legal dispute before state court where consumers sought relief "to remedy the improper service"); Schroeder v. Meyer, 2017 WL 1238016 (N.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2017) (where consumer was aware of improper service, matter should be dealt with by state court); Briscoe v. Cohen, McNeile & Pappas, P.C., 2014 WL 4954600 (D. Kan. Oct. 1, 2014) (no § 1692f violation where sheriff being directed to make service at wrong address was innocent mistake and not part of fraudulent scheme); Keylard v. Mueller Anderson, P.C., 2013 WL 4501446 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 22, 2013) (following Seventh Circuit precedent concerning improper court filings, improper service of process is not § 1692f violation).

87 See Coble v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 824 F. Supp. 2d 568 (S.D.N.Y. 2011). But see Rodrigo v. Barclays Bank, 2017 WL 1155373 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 27, 2017) (law firm had no reason to suspect service of process was improper); Mirshafiei v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, Inc., 2016 WL 11464745 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 5, 2016) (where defendant only later learned of improper service of process and did not immediately set aside default judgment, such conduct did not rise to level of "unfair or unconscionable" conduct even though §§ 1692d and 1692e were violated); Mandelas v. Gordon, 785 F. Supp. 2d 951 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (collection attorney did not violate § 1692f by executing on default judgment entered in underlying state collection case, since attorney relied on process server's facially valid return of service and consumer did not attempt to set aside default even once he learned of its entry).

88 Johnson v. Bullhead Inv., L.L.C., 2010 WL 118274 (M.D.N.C. Jan. 11, 2010).

89 In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013).

90 See Eul v. Transworld Sys., 2017 WL 1178537 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2017). See also Mirshafiei v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, Inc., 2016 WL 11464745 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 5, 2016) (where collection lawyer lacked authority to continue collection action on behalf of client where client no longer in business); Young v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2014 WL 4698646 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 22, 2014) (collector failed to obtain proper assignment from its client allowing it under state law to pursue the collection action on behalf of its client).

91 Ferrell v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2450615 (N.D. Ala. May 22, 2015); McGinnis v. Dodeka, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1856450 (E.D. Tex. May 7, 2010) (claim stated where unclear who was current debt owner); Kuhn v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2015 WL 1505648 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2015). See also Williams v. Partners for Payment Relief Inc., 2020 WL 973753 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 28, 2020) (section 1692f claim survived where complaint alleged that law firm lacked standing to foreclose, because it could not show it was owner or holder of mortgage). Cf. Hoffman v. Transworld Sys. Inc., 2018 WL 5734641, at *8 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 2, 2018) (denying motion to dismiss where defendants filed affidavits purporting to establish that they were entitled to collect on the debts, although the affidavits lacked the necessary documentation and defendants knew that it was unavailable), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 806 Fed. Appx. 549, 552 (9th Cir. 2020). But cf. Smith v. Stewart, Zlimen & Jungers, Ltd., 990 F.3d 640 (8th Cir. 2021) (affirming dismissal of § 1692f(1) claim where consumers did not allege that defendant sought to collect debts not owed but, rather, alleged that it lacked evidence demonstrating that its client had standing to sue on debts, since even though defendant failed to establish standing in collection suit, it was still entitled to bring good faith claim to collect alleged debts).

courts, such as where the collector is not licensed or registered in the state.[92]

It is also unfair for a collector to sue a consumer knowing the consumer does not owe the debt,[93] to bring a second collection lawsuit after the first was dismissed with prejudice,[94] or to sue an individual who has no connection to the debt being sued upon.[95] Where there are preconditions to a suit on a debt, such as a right to cure or notice, it can be unfair to proceed without such preconditions.[96] There can also be a FDCPA § 1692f violation for a collector to bring and keep a lawsuit in a venue prohibited by section 1692*i*.[97]

8.2.3.3 The Conduct of the Litigation

As a general rule, it is prudent to allege that a collector's litigation conduct is unfair or unconscionable when directed to the consumer, and not just directed to the court. A Seventh Circuit decision suggests that FDCPA § 1692e does not apply where deception is directed at the court.[98] While this ruling might be limited just to the Seventh Circuit, it should not be difficult to allege that unfair litigation conduct injures the consumer and not just the court—even the Seventh Circuit finds litigation conduct directed to the consumer to be actionable.[99]

A collection attorney may not be liable under FDCPA § 1692f if that attorney attests to a complaint where the attestation is on information and belief, instead of on personal knowledge.[100] But it can be an unfair practice to file a complaint alleging personal knowledge of the facts stated in the complaint where there is no such knowledge.[101]

The same is the case with affidavits attached to the complaint or later court filings. It can be unfair for an attorney to file affidavits where the affiant claims personal knowledge where the attorney knew or should have known the affiant had no such knowledge.[102] Also unfair is a collector engaging in a pattern of attaching to its complaints affidavits with false information.[103] Attachments to a complaint or other court documents can be unfair where they appear to be original business records, but were in fact created for purposes of the litigation.[104]

A collector's discovery practices can be unfair. The Ninth Circuit found that it was unfair or unconscionable to send a pro se consumer defendant a request for admissions that asked him to admit facts and liability that the consumer had explicitly denied in his state court answer, and where the request failed to inform the consumer that the requests would be deemed admitted if not objected to within thirty days.[105]

Not every improper step in state court litigation is a FDCPA § 1692f violation. Courts have found that, at least where the consumer did not allege additional facts, it was not unfair merely to fail to attach required documents to the complaint,[106] to sue on "an account" claim which might not apply to the facts,[107] or to engage in conduct inconsistent with state ethical requirements of attorneys.[108]

A number of courts have considered FDCPA § 1692f challenges where complaints in collection lawsuits include the consumer's Social Security number or other sensitive personal information. Where such inclusion is inadvertent, it is

92 Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4010257 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 5, 2013) (issue of fact whether collector violated § 1692f by failing to obtain a state license prior to bringing suit); Fiorenzano v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2562415 (D.R.I. June 29, 2012) (section 1692 claim stated by filing collection lawsuit while unregistered). But see Fick v. Am. Acceptance Co., L.L.C., 2012 WL 1074288 (N.D. Ind. Mar. 28, 2012) (filing of state court collection case without being licensed under state law not § 1692f violation). See also § 8.2.1.5, supra.

93 Ferrell v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2450615 (N.D. Ala. May 22, 2015).

94 See Curto v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5196708 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 31, 2011). But cf. Wisniewski v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2009 WL 212155 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 29, 2009) (no claim stated for filing second debt collection suit as first suit was dismissed without prejudice).

95 Heathman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 755674 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 27, 2013) (sued wrong person).

96 See Johnson v. LVNV Funding, 2016 WL 676401 (E.D. Wis. Feb. 18, 2016) (reasonable jury could rule for either party on facts).

97 See Boldon v. Riverwalk Holdings, Ltd., 2016 WL 900639 (D. Minn. Mar. 9, 2016). But see Chowdhury v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2014 WL 12539348 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 15, 2014) (innocent mistake to bring in wrong county).

98 O'Rourke v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 635 F.3d 938 (7th Cir. 2011). See § 7.4.10.2, supra.

99 Id.

100 Fisher v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2005 WL 1799275 (N.D. Ill. July 26, 2005).

101 Ison v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, 2007 WL 2769674 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 18, 2007) (falsely claimed affiant had "personal knowledge" of facts); Williams v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 480 F. Supp. 2d 1016 (S.D. Ohio 2007) (allegation that collection attorneys knew that accounts specialist affiant who attested to facts in complaint on personal knowledge did not have personal knowledge). But see Janson v. Katharyn B. Davis, L.L.C., 806 F.3d 435 (8th Cir. 2015) (no § 1692f claim where no allegation that swearing on personal knowledge was material to case).

102 CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1342 (N.D. Ga. 2015). See also Toohey v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 4473016 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 22, 2016) (affidavit contained false representation to obtain default judgment); Williams v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 480 F. Supp. 2d 1016, 1022 (S.D. Ohio 2007). Compare Myers v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 750 F. Supp. 2d 864 (S.D. Ohio 2010) (no violation where affiant swore information was accurate and that he was competent to express opinion on its correctness, but did not state based on any personal knowledge), aff'd, 472 Fed. Appx. 395 (6th Cir. 2012).

103 Robinson v. Sherman Fin. Grp., L.L.C., 2013 WL 1249567 (E.D. Tenn. Mar. 27, 2013).

104 Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp 569 F.3d 606 (6th Cir. 2009) (faked billing statements). See also Rice v. Javitch Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 2011 WL 3861701 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 31, 2011).

105 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011).

106 Delisi v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4393901 (E.D. Mo. July 16, 2015); Glick v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4393911 (E.D. Mo. July 16, 2015).

107 Drennan v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 389 Fed. Appx. 352 (5th Cir. 2010) (suit on account that may not apply to credit card collections).

108 Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 733 F. Supp. 2d 635 (D. Md. 2010) (ethical misconduct not unfair); Young v. Meyer & Njus, P.A., 1997 WL 452685 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 6, 1997) (attorney who may be witness in case to continue representation, even though prohibited by state bar ethical rules).

generally found not to be a violation,[109] but some courts do find the practice can be unfair.[110]

8.2.3.4 Litigation Mills As an Unfair Practice

Consumer collection lawsuits today are filed en masse, often with little intent to litigate the case on the merits, but instead to obtain a default judgment, which happens approximately ninety percent of the time or more. This leads to lawsuits filed with little evidence of the debt, its terms, amount, or ownership. Whether this may involve a FDCPA § 1692e deception violation is examined at § 7.4.10, supra.

In the context of FDCPA § 1692f unfairness, courts generally find it is not a violation where the collector does not have that evidence when filing the complaint, if the collector is capable of obtaining the evidence when the consumer contests the case.[111] Similarly, a court has found it not unfair if the attorney has not made an independent determination that the amount is owed,[112] or voluntarily dismisses a state debt collection suit when the attorney determines there is a lack of evidence.[113] Nor is it unfair where a motivation for filing a lawsuit is to obtain a default judgment.[114] A court has also found it not unfair, without more, that a collection suit is dismissed for lack of evidence.[115]

On the other hand, it can be unfair if the consumer can show that the collector never intended to investigate or verify the debt was owed when the consumer challenged the complaint.[116] A court has found it could be unfair that collection attorneys operated a litigation mill that used, in their collection cases, affidavits executed by their debt-buyer clients who the attorneys knew or should have known had no personal knowledge of the attested material facts. The collection attorneys did not determine whether any underlying documentation for the debt was available, and they also failed to review the contracts governing the sale of accounts to determine whether those contracts disclaimed any warranties regarding the accuracy or validity of the debts.[117]

8.2.4 Unfair Postjudgment Practices

Where a judgment has been vacated[118] or the collector knows the judgment is invalid,[119] enforcement of postjudgment remedies is premature and an unfair practice in violation of FDCPA § 1692f. Where the parties reach an agreement for installment payments in lieu of the creditor exercising postjudgment remedies, it can be unfair for the collector to engage in those remedies while the consumer is making the installment payments.[120]

It can also violate FDCPA § 1692f to continue postjudgment enforcement where the judgment has been paid.[121]

Where a collector has been informed it is seeking to enforce a postjudgment remedy on the wrong person, it can be unfair to continue to pursue that remedy without new information as to the correctness of the consumer's identity.[122] It also can be 109 See Elyazidi v. SunTrust Bank, 780 F.3d 227 (4th Cir. 2015); Tschudin v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2014 WL 7272668 (D. Neb. Dec. 18, 2014); Pittenger v. John Soliday Fin. Grp., L.L.C., 2010 WL 1856224 (N.D. Ohio May 10, 2010); Feltman v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 2008 WL 5211024 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 11, 2008).

110 Qureshi v. OPS 9, L.L.C., 2015 WL 6407883 (D.N.J. Oct. 21, 2015) (account information "plainly visible" on reverse side of check stated § 1692f claim).

111 See Bandy v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 210730 (S.D. Ala. Jan. 18, 2013); Deere v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone L.L.P., 413 F. Supp. 2d 886, 890 (S.D. Ohio 2006. See also Harvey v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 453 F.3d 324 (6th Cir. 2006) (denying a similar claim based on violation of § 1692e).

112 Taylor v. Heath W. Williams, L.L.C., 510 F. Supp. 2d 1206 (N.D. Ga. 2007).

113 Juarez v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 4764226 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 12, 2015) (debt buyer's silence in three weeks prior to dismissal of collection action on trial date was not unfair); Lena v. Cach, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4692443 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 6, 2015).

114 Anderson v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5853804 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 6, 2015).

115 See Chenault v. Credit Corp. Solutions, Inc., 2017 WL 5971727 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 1, 2017).

116 Kuria v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 752 F. Supp. 2d 1293, 1303 (N.D. Ga. 2010).

117 CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1342 (N.D. Ga. 2015).

118 Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp.762 F.3d 529 (6th Cir. 2014) (lien on home where judgment had been set aside and was not final); Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961 (D. Minn. Feb. 1, 2019) (judgment that had been vacated). See also Polanco v. NCO Portfolio Mgmt., Inc., 132 F. Supp. 3d 567 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (retaining garnished funds after judgment vacated).

119 See Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201, 207 (E.D.N.Y. 2019) (collection law firm pursued garnishment "knowing full well the invalidity of the [sewer service related] judgment"). Cf. Rivera v. Dove Inv. Corp., 2020 WL 6266054 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 23, 2020) (default judgment against consumer had been dismissed ten years prior due to want of prosecution); Leib v. Thompson, Dunlap & Heydinger, Ltd., 2019 WL 358904 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 29, 2019) (judgment was dormant under state law). But see Mandelas v. Gordon, 785 F. Supp. 2d 951 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (collection attorney did not violate § 1692f by executing on default judgment, relying on process server's facially valid return of service and consumer did not attempt to set aside default even once he learned of its entry).

120 See Weinstein v. Mandarich Law Group, L.L.P., 798 Fed. Appx. 88, 91 (9th Cir. 2019); Fox v. Citicorp Credit Services, Inc., 15 F.3d 1507 (9th Cir. 1994).

121 See Gonzalez v. Allied Collection Services, Inc., 2018 WL 715359 (D. Nev. Feb. 5, 2018), aff'd, 852 Fed. Appx. 264 (9th Cir. 2021); Gomez v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 129 F. Supp. 3d 147 (S.D.N.Y. 2015). See also Laporte v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 2814184 (W.D. Va. May 29, 2020) (§ 1692f claim alleging that debt collector twice collected on debt that no longer existed was sufficiently separate from § 1692e misrepresentation claims to be actionable). But see Moss v. Barton, 2016 WL 1441146 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 8, 2016) (garnishing consumer's wages after she sent personal check in payment when their consent judgment required cashier's check).

122 See Estes v. Love, Beal & Nixon, P.C., 2015 WL 4508601 (N.D. Okla. July 24, 2015); Basich v. Patenaude & Felix, A.P.C., 2013 WL 1755484 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2013); Billsie v. Brooksbank, 525 F. Supp. 2d 1290 (D.N.M. 2007). See also Frias v. Patenaude & Felix, A.P.C., 2021 WL 1192421, at *3 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 30, 2021) (sustaining § 1692f claim in mistaken identity case, because "attempting to garnish a consumer's wages or bank account when the consumer does not owe the debt is an 'unfair or unconscionable means to . . . attempt to collect [a] debt'" under § 1692f). But cf. Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 973 F.3d unfair to garnish one family member for a judgment against another family member,[123] to garnish the judgment debtor's partnership bank account where the judgment did not make liable that partnership,[124] or to seize all of a joint account without proof of net contributions by each of the account holders, as required by state law.[125]

It can violate FDCPA § 1692f to seek through a garnishment more than is owed pursuant to the judgment,[126] to seek costs for an unsuccessful garnishment,[127] or to violate a state's law by initiating a garnishment on a bank branch in that state while the consumer maintained an account in a branch of the same bank in another state.[128] Where state law requires notice to the consumer of a wage garnishment, it can be unfair to send the notice to an address the collector knows or should know is not the correct address.[129] Where state law allows a garnishment order to require a bank to hold the consumer's funds for a set period of time, it can be unfair to send a garnishment notice specifying a longer time period.[130]

Sending unenforceable letters entitled "Subpoena For Oral Deposition As Aid To Enforcement Of Execution" that command consumers to appear for in-person depositions and include threats of fines and imprisonment, and then sending follow-up letters indicating that the consumers could avoid the depositions by completing and returning financial disclosure forms, can violate FDCPA § 1692f where the collectors have no intention of conducting the depositions.[131] A demand for a debtor's examination in an inconvenient venue can be unfair.[132]

But another court found a notice of a postjudgment deposition in a distant location did not violate FDCPA § 1692f, since that was consistent with state law and the collector offered the option of a mutually convenient location.[133] Courts may find it not unfair to aggressively seek postjudgment remedies that are fully legal in the circumstances.[134]

It can be unfair to garnish a larger percentage of a consumer's wages than allowed by federal and state exemption law.[135] Courts generally find it not unfair to garnish a bank account, unless the collector has knowledge that all funds in a bank account are exempt.[136] But where the consumer has sent the collector persuasive evidence that 100% of funds in a bank account are exempt, it can be unfair for a collector to still garnish the bank account without first seeking other evidence to counter the consumer's evidence.[137]

Similarly, once the collector is given persuasive evidence of the exempt status of at least certain funds in an account, it can be unfair to object to the release of those exempt funds without a good faith basis for so objecting.[138]

On the other hand, it is not unfair for a collector to continue to contest the consumer's exemption claim where there is a reasonable basis for doing so.[139]

154 (2d Cir. 2020) (affirming summary judgment on § 1692f claim, finding no bad faith or abuse of New York debt collection practices since wrong judgment debtor plaintiff was not forced to attend debtor's exam or respond to informational subpoena, and debt collector agreed to hold subpoena in abeyance).

123 Shaw v. Hayt, Hayt & Landau, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3965204 (D.N.J. July. 21, 2016) (repeatedly and knowingly garnishing father's bank accounts for son's judgment could be unfair).

124 See Vanhuss v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 127 F. Supp. 3d 980 (W.D. Wis. 2015).

125 Kieffer v. New Century Fin. Services, Inc., 2011 WL 1899272 (D.N.J. May 19, 2011).

126 Gonzalez v. Allied Collection Services, Inc., 2019 WL 489093 (D. Nev. Feb. 6, 2019) aff'd, 852 Fed. Appx. 264, 266 (9th Cir. 2021) ("service of a writ of execution or writ of garnishment that seeks to collect an inaccurate debt amount can constitute a violation" of § 1692f). See also Thomas v. Altschul, 2015 WL 5165334 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 21, 2015) (months-long disregard of repeated requests to correct erroneous income execution amount).

127 Watkins v. Peterson Enters., Inc., 57 F. Supp. 2d 1102 (E.D. Wash. 1999).

128 See Baltazar v. Houslanger & Assoc., 2018 WL 3941943 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 4781143 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2018).

129 Lewis v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1801987 (D. Or. Apr. 6, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 1801982 (D. Or. May 17, 2012).

130 See Smeby v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2015 WL 1897853 (D. Minn. Apr. 23, 2015).

131 Kranz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 4905806 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 20, 2020).

132 Flores v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2007 WL 433239 (D. Or. Jan. 31, 2007).

133 See Barney v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2012 WL 2995471 (N.D. Ohio July 23, 2012).

134 See Davis v. Nebraska Furniture Mart, Inc., 567 Fed. Appx. 640 (10th Cir. 2014) (having consumer lawfully arrested pursuant to bench warrant for failing to appear at hearing in aid of execution shortly after court had dismissed similar hearing because judgment debtor was now receiving new income).

135 Waitkus v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2012 WL 686025 (D.N.J. Mar. 2, 2012). See also Backlund v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2012 WL 3582963 (D. Minn. Aug. 17, 2012) (no § 1692f violation to retain exempt property).

136 Gates v. MCT Grp., Inc., 678 Fed. Appx. 539 (9th Cir. 2017); Lee v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone L.L.P., 601 F.3d 654 (6th Cir. 2010) (attorneys had, in fact, conducted reasonable investigation that no other reasonable steps could have been taken that would have revealed that funds were exempt, and that suggested alternative of subpoenaing consumer's bank records prior to garnishment was an extraordinary measure that was not required under applicable reasonableness standard); Beler v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 480 F.3d 470 (7th Cir. 2007); Hargreaves v. Associated Credit Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 4767146 (E.D. Wash. Oct. 20, 2017) (creditor filed affidavit stating it had "reason to believe" that the account contained amounts exceeding those exempted from garnishment); Carney v. Unifund CCR, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7115974 (D. Minn. Dec. 6, 2016) (consumer failed to verify that funds in bank were exempt); Gates v. MCT Grp., Inc., 93 F. Supp. 3d 1182, 1190 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 13, 2015) ("It is unreasonable to conclude that a judgment creditor's failure to conduct a pre-levy consumer's exam, when there is no legal obligation or requirement to do so, constitutes unfair or unconscionable action.").

137 See Bray v. Cadle Co, 2010 WL 4053794 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 14, 2010), Hogue v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1043 (S.D. Iowa 2007). See also Jordan v. Thomas & Thomas, 2007 WL 2838474 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 2007).

138 Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128 (2d Cir. 2017).

139 Miljkovic v. Shafritz & Dinkin, P.A., 791 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2015).

8.3 FDCPA § 1692f(1): Collecting an Amount Not Permitted by Law or Contract

8.3.1 Overview

A debt collector may not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

* * *

(1) The collection of any amount (including any interest, fee, charge, or expense incidental to the principal obligation) unless such amount is expressly authorized by the agreement creating the debt or permitted by law.[140]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at section 1006.22(b) with only "minor wording and organizational changes for clarity."[141]

Even though FDCPA § 1692f(1) only prohibits the "collection" of an amount not authorized by contract or permitted by law, courts interpret the word "collection" as applying not just to receiving an amount not authorized or permitted, but also seeking to collect such an amount.[142] Seeking to collect can include communications that do not demand payment, but specify an amount due.[143] Continuing to report a debt to consumer reporting agencies when the debt has been satisfied is a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation, because it is collection of an amount not authorized by contract nor permitted by law.[144]

But there may be no FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation where a credit agreement allows for collection of an illegal amount, but the collector never sought to collect that illegal amount.[145] Some courts also provide that a collector's attempt to comply with FDCPA § 1692g's requirement of a statement of the amount due cannot be an unfair practice even if the amount is not accurate.[146]

FDCPA § 1692f(1) prohibits the collection of any amount unless authorized by contract or permitted by law.[147] Thus, the collector has the burden of proving that an amount it is seeking is either authorized by contract or permitted by law.[148] "The burden of proving a statutory exception falls on the party seeking to reap the benefit of the exception."[149] But, of course, the consumer should allege in the complaint that the amount sought is not authorized by contract or permitted by law—a conclusory allegation that there is no basis for a collection action may not be enough.[150]

The FDCPA is a strict liability statute.[151] Where the amount sought is not authorized by contract or permitted by law, there is no defense that the collector thought the amount was authorized or permitted.[152] Instead, the collector can raise the bona 140 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(1). See also Reg. F § 1006.22(b). Provisions similar to § 1692f(1) were included in each of the major bills leading to the Act. The language of the bills varied considerably before the adoption of the present language. See H.R. 11696, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 807(1) (1976) ("unless expressly authorized by the agreement creating the debt or by a court of competent jurisdiction"); S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(1) (1977) ("unless such amount is expressly authorized by law"); Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(1) (1977).

141 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,833 (Nov. 30, 2020).

142 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685, 697 (8th Cir. 2017) ("not necessary for the consumer to plead that the impermissible charge was paid"); Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168, 175 (3d Cir. 2015); Dimatteo v. Sweeney, Gallo, Reich & Bolz, L.L.P., 619 Fed. Appx. 7 (2d Cir. 2015) (demand for attorney fees in the housing court complaint constituted an attempt to collect a fee); Salvati v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 575 Fed. Appx. 49 (3d Cir. 2014); Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443, 451 (6th Cir. 2014), as amended on denial of reh'g en banc (Dec. 11, 2014) (§ 1692f(1) applies to state court suit since it is attempt to collect amount); Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364, 367 n.4 (3d Cir. 2011) ("collection" in § 1692f(1) includes attempted collection as well as actual collection); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 950 (9th Cir. 2011); Duffy v. Landberg, 215 F.3d 871, 875 (8th Cir. 2000) (letters seeking charges were an attempt to collect interest not permitted by law, and therefore a violation of the plain language of section 1692f(1)).

143 Allen ex rel. Martin v. LaSalle Bank, 629 F.3d 364 (3d Cir. 2011).

144 See Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751486, at *7 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019), related case at 2020 WL 5411574, at *9) (D. Conn. Sept. 9, 2020); Miceli v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2016 WL 7666167 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 2016). But see Darden v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 2013 WL 12125739 (E.D. Tex. Oct. 28, 2013) (use of legal collection method does not violate § 1692f).

145 Snyder v. Weiner, 539 F.3d 327 (6th Cir. 2008). See also Datiz v. Int'l Recovery Assoc., Inc., 2016 WL 4148330 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2016) (consumer must allege collector attempted to collect prohibited fee, not just that processing fee was listed on collector's website).

146 Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991 (7th Cir. 2003); Goshon v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 742873 (D. Kan. Feb. 24, 2016) (no reasonable juror could find that sending single letter, which included § 1692g notice, amounted to unfair means to collect debt); Fong v. Franklin Collection Services, Inc., 2012 WL 3581171, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 16, 2012) ("When a collection letter provides the precise information required by the Act, the letter is not 'an unfair or unconscionable means of debt collection under § 1692f,' even if the debt collector may have falsely stated the amount of debt owed.").

147 See Danganan v. Guardian Prot. Services, 813 Fed. Appx. 769 (3d Cir. 2020) (affirming dismissal of state law claim based on its incorporation of the FDCPA because the collection of the challenged amounts complied with the Act; issue of whether or not state law permitted the payment was "irrelevant," as § 1692f(1) "states that a payment may be either expressly authorized by an agreement or permitted by law" and amount owed by consumer was expressly authorized by underlying agreement).

148 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 950 (9th Cir. 2011). See also Evankavitch v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 793 F.3d 355 (3d Cir. 2015) (FDCPA opinion discussing Supreme Court cases establishing that party claiming benefit of statutory exception bears burden of proof for establishing exception's applicability); § 11.6, infra.

149 Flores v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2015 WL 4254032 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2015).

150 See Zachary v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3474691, at *3 (E.D. Pa. July 18, 2018). See also Gordon v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3545119 (E.D. Mich. July 24, 2018).

151 See § 3.2.4, supra.

152 See Hylton v. Amerifinancial Solutions, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6044734 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 19, 2018).

fide error defense, but then must prove its procedures were designed to avoid such an error.[153]

For an amount to be "expressly authorized by the agreement creating the debt" there must be a binding agreement. Thus, the collector must produce an agreement and show that the consumer has consented to it.[154]

A unilateral contract set out by the creditor and not ratified by the consumer does not qualify. For example, a sign at a check cashing counter in a store announcing a charge for dishonored checks may not create a contract under state law. Moreover, the consumer must be a party to the contract. A debt collector's contract with its client creditor does not provide authorization for charges assessed to a consumer.[155]

For an amount to be permitted by law, the amount must be affirmatively permitted.[156] It is not enough that the relevant law does not prohibit the amount, or relevant law allows for the amount if authorized by contract, but it is not authorized by contract.[157]

Related to FDCPA § 1692f(1) is FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A) prohibiting false statements of the amount of the debt[158] and FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1)'s requiring disclosure of the amount of the debt.[159] Collecting a charge in violation of FDCPA § 1692f(1) may also violate the general prohibitions of deception and unfairness found respectively in FDCPA §§ 1692e[160] and 1692f.[161]

8.3.2 Where Debt Discharged, Extinguished, or Not Owed

Collection of a debt is a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation as not authorized by contract or permitted by law where the debt is discharged, extinguished, or otherwise not owed.[162] This applies where:

- The debt is extinguished by a state court's dismissal with prejudice of the collector's lawsuit;[163]
- The debt has been paid or settled in full;[164]
- The collector seeks to ignore a settlement agreement and seeks amounts pursuant to the original debt;[165]
- Prior garnishments have satisfied in full a judgment debt;[166]
- The collector seeks payment from one family member where another family member is the only one responsible for the debt;[167]
- A consumer is mistakenly contacted about someone else's debt;[168]
- The debt is not owned by the debt buyer seeking payment;[169]
- Under state law, the debt must be paid by the worker's employer or insurer;[170] or
- The collector initiated a foreclosure during a time period where such action is prohibited by state law.[171]

The circuits are divided as to the availability of an FDCPA claim where a collector seeks to collect on a debt that has been discharged in bankruptcy. These issues are examined in § 13.7, infra. Assuming the court does not find an FDCPA

153 See Guzman v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 2018 WL 1665252 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2018); § 12.2, infra.

154 Reed v. EOS CCA, 2016 WL 1639121 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 26, 2016); Reynolds v. EOS CCA, U.S. Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 1639120 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 26, 2016); Shepherd v. Liberty Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2708518 (D. Colo. July 9, 2012) (debt collector could not rely on a contractual authorization it could not produce).

155 See Day v. Check Brokerage Corp., 511 F. Supp. 2d 950 (N.D. Ill. 2007).

156 See Fusco v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2519978, at *3 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 2, 2020) ("legal permission must be affirmatively given"; Speedpay fees not affirmatively permitted by Florida law or Electronic Fund Transfers Act).

157 Lockett v. Freedman, 2004 WL 856516 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 21, 2004); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995); West v. Costen, 558 F. Supp. 564, 570 (W.D. Va. 1983); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 808(1)-2, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra).

158 See § 7.2.2, supra.

159 See § 9.11.3, infra.

160 See § 7.3, supra.

161 See § 8.1, supra.

162 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017). See also Sanchez v. Law Office of Lance E. Armo, 2021 WL 1214559 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 31, 2021) (allegations that collection attorneys attempted to collect amount not permitted by law, as Notice to Pay Rent or Quit indicated that tenant owed $396 in rent when, in fact, nothing was owed given change to Housing Assistance Payment Contract, stated claim under § 1692f), adopted, 2021 WL 2292779 (E.D. Cal. June 4, 2021). But cf. Patterson v. Ad Astra Recovery Serv., 2018 WL 6181175 (N.D. Ala. Nov. 27, 2018) (dismissing § 1692f claim (apparently not brought as § 1692f(1) claim) where consumer never alleged they informed collector they were wrong person).

163 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017).

164 Vangorden v. Second Round, L.P., 897 F.3d 433, 438 (2d Cir. 2018); Brake v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 504 F. Supp. 3d 103 (E.D.N.Y. 2020); Finch v. Slochowsky & Slochowsky, L.L.P., 2020 WL 5848616, at *4 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2020); Bell v. Northland Grp., 2018 WL 1792368 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 16, 2018); Rushing v. Chase Auto Fin. Corp., 2012 WL 1752393 (E.D. Ky. May 15, 2012).

165 Mapother & Mapother, P.S.C., 2014 WL 1418224 (W.D. Ky. Apr. 14, 2014) (rejecting debt collector's argument that consumer's claims should be dismissed as improper attempt to convert violation of settlement agreement, governed by state law, into FDCPA claim; demand for more than agreed amount of settlement stated § 1692f(1) claim).

166 Edwards v. Velocity Invs., L.L.C., 2011 WL 4007394 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 8, 2011).

167 See Walter v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1666869 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2011); Karony v. Dollar Loan Ctr., L.L.C., 2010 WL 5186065 (D. Nev. Dec. 15, 2010) (pursuing plaintiff through litigation and credit reporting to pay separate debt that was incurred by his wife and for which he was not responsible stated claim); Kunda v. CBB Collections, Inc., 2008 WL 11349863 (D. Mont. Aug. 15, 2008) (one spouse not liable for other spouse's premarital debt).

168 Heathman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 755674 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 27, 2013). But see Harter v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2012 WL 162281 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 19, 2012) (one straightforward letter with verification notice not unfair, even where collector knew recipient might be wrong person).

169 Blackburn v. Cox v. Sherman Capital L.L.C., 2014 WL 1328147 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2014).

170 See Edwards v. BC Services, Inc., 2019 WL 6726232, at *9 (D. Colo. Dec. 10, 2019) (Utah workers' compensation statute, which provided that covered medical expenses are not owed by injured employee); Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171 (D. Utah 2019).

171 Rehman v. Pierce & Assoc., 2017 WL 131560 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 13, 2017) (seeking to foreclose during state grace period).

claim displaced by the Bankruptcy Code's alternative method of relief, then there can be a FDCPA § 1692f(1) claim.[172]

Although a bankruptcy discharge may not prevent a collector from foreclosing on secured property, it does prevent the collector from seeking a deficiency.[173] Less clear is a collector's actions discussing the amount due on a secured loan. There may be no violation where the collector discloses it will not seek a deficiency and is only discussing payment options to avoid foreclosure.[174]

A few older cases take the stilted view that there is no FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation where the collector seeks to collect the facially correct amount of the debt, but where the agreement creating the debt is void, such as where someone else forged the consumer's signature or stole the consumer's identity.[175] These courts argue that the collector was seeking the correct amount as authorized by the agreement, even if the agreement is void. But an agreement cannot "authorize the debt" if it is void.

8.3.3 Interest Charges Not Authorized or Permitted

For a collector to seek interest pursuant to a contract, it must produce the contract and provide evidence that the consumer has consented to the contract, something that debt buyers in particular may have difficulty proving. Otherwise, seeking contractual interest without such evidence can be a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation.[176]

A collector can violate FDCPA § 1692f(1) by seeking interest where the consumer is current in making payments,[177] seeking interest for payments not yet due,[178] computing interest at a higher rate than provided for in the credit agreement,[179] or seeking interest at a rate exceeding the state's usury cap.[180] But where it is unresolved under state law whether an interest charge is permissible, a court may not be willing to find for the consumer on a FDCPA § 1692f(1) claim.[181]

It is also a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation to compound interest where not permitted by state law,[182] although it is not a violation to seek compound interest as allowed by the contract and as permitted by state law.[183] Unless prohibited by state law, a collector may be able to add prejudgment interest to a debt without first obtaining a court judgment, particularly where the amount owed was certain and the interest charge was not subject to the court's discretion.[184] Where a contract authorizes contractual prejudgment interest only on the principal amount of the debt, it is a violation to seek contractual interest on 172 Dunlap v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 3433915 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 10, 2017); Hennings v. Alltran Fin., L.P., 2017 WL 2312909 (E.D. Wis. May 26, 2017); Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., 2014 WL 7184340 (S.D. Ala. Dec. 16, 2014).

173 See Gagnon v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 563 B.R. 835 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Green v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3963255 (W.D. Wis. July 21, 2016); Coulter v. Manley Deas Kochalski L.L.C., 2014 WL 1891206 (S.D. Ind. May 9, 2014).

174 See Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018) (dismissing § 1692f(1) claim that was based on mortgage servicer's inclusion of allegedly improper late charges in its monthly statements and certain other communications, since post-discharge consumer could not reasonably interpret these communications as being in connection with collection of debt, in light of bankruptcy discharge disclaimers in statements).

175 Transamerica Fin. Services, Inc. v. Sykes, 171 F.3d 553 (7th Cir. 1999); Valdez v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2010 WL 4643272 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 16, 2010). But see Heathman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 755674 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 27, 2013).

176 See Reed v. EOS CCA, 2016 WL 1639121 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 26, 2016); Reynolds v. EOS CCA, U.S. Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 1639120 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 26, 2016); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002). See also Jammeh v. HNN Assoc., L.L.C., 2020 WL 3266221 (W.D. Wash. June 17, 2020) (denying summary judgment for collector where prejudgment interest was not authorized by contract or law).

177 Asch v. Teller, Levit & Silvertrust, P.C., 2003 WL 22232801 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2003) (failed to credit payments on date received and added interest).

178 Melillo v. Shendell & Assoc., P.A., 2012 WL 253205 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2012) (seeking to collect five months of interest when only three months of interest would have been due); Acik v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 640 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2009).

179 Brooks v. Cama Self Directed IRA, L.L.C., 2019 WL 418412 (D. Md. Jan. 31, 2019) (charging fixed rate of interest where note provided for variable rate); Snyder v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1910989 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 27, 2015) (servicer calculated interest on mortgage improperly).

180 See Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000) (interest and late charges exceeded state limitation of 10%); Dunn v. Global Tr. Mgmt., L.L.C., 506 F. Supp. 3d 1214 (M.D. Fla. 2020) (denying motion to dismiss § 1692f claim where consumer alleged that debt buyer knowingly misrepresented validity of debts it knew were usurious and unenforceable); Grace v. LVNV Funding, Inc., 2014 WL 2167487 (W.D. Ky. May 23, 2014) (8% medical "service charge" was disguised interest and exceeded state's statutory rate); Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 15, 2007) (illegal interest on payday loan); Conner v. Howe, 344 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (S.D. Ind. 2004) (usurious payday loan).

181 Hill v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 888 F.3d 343 (8th Cir. 2018); Klein v. Credico, Inc., 2018 WL 3404156 (D. Minn. July 12, 2018). But see Gregory v. Barton, 510 F. Supp. 3d 829 (E.D. Mo. 2020) (predicting that state's supreme court would not hold husband responsible for prejudgment interest on wife's medical debt under doctrine of necessaries absent demand made on husband, court sustained § 1692f(1) claim).

182 See Coyne v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 895 F.3d 1035 (8th Cir. 2018) (contract did not provide for compound interest and debt collector's charging compound interest violated Minnesota law); Haney v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 837 F.3d 918, 926 (8th Cir. 2016) (debt buyer illegally compounded prejudgment interest on contractual interest under Missouri law); Owen v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 629 F.3d 1263, 1277 (11th Cir. 2011) (collector compounded interest monthly instead of annually as allowed in the contract); Martinez v. Albuquerque Collection Services, 867 F. Supp. 1495 (D.N.M. 1994) (compounding interest not permitted by state law).

183 See O'Byrne v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 596 Fed. Appx. 565 (9th Cir. 2015); Beler v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 480 F.3d 470 (7th Cir. 2007).

184 Diaz v. Kubler Corp., 785 F.3d 1326 (9th Cir. 2015). But see Lannan v. White, 186 F. Supp. 3d 77 (D. Mass. 2016) (granting summary judgment on § 1692e (2) claim that prejudgment interest on quasi-contract was unauthorized by state law).

additional fees and charges.[185] It is also a violation to seek postjudgment interest in excess of that allowed by state statute and where contractual postjudgment interest is not authorized.[186]

Even if the originating creditor can charge interest, it may be that a debt buyer cannot do so. This is clearly the case where the agreement between the originating creditor and debt buyer explicitly excludes the debt buyer charging additional interest.[187] The debt buyer's communications with the consumer may also indicate that it has waived further interest charges, and then it may be a violation to seek the waived charges.[188]

In addition, where the originating creditor, after writing off a debt, has waived additional contractual interest charges, a debt buyer of that account may not be able to charge additional contractual interest and certainly should not seek contractual interest for the period between when the creditor stopped charging contractual interest and the date the debt buyer purchased the debt.[189] But courts may require that the originating creditor's waiver of contractual interest be proven to be unequivocal.[190] In addition, even where contractual prejudgment interest has been waived, a collector, depending on the contract language and state law, may be able to charge interest under the state's prejudgment interest statute.[191]

A separate issue, apart from waiver considerations, is whether a debt buyer can charge interest at the same rate and in the same manner as the originating creditor for the period of time when an account is owned by the debt buyer. For example, a national bank credit card issuer has rate exportation rights to charge higher interest rates than allowed by the consumer's home state usury cap. A FDCPA § 1692f(1) claim is not likely to prevail where a debt buyer merely seeks to collect lawful interest charges already assessed by the card issuer.[192]

At present, though, the law is unclear whether a debt buyer (not being a federal depository), when it seeks to assess new interest charges, can also take advantage of the assignor's rate exportation rights, or whether it must comply with the consumer's home state usury law.[193] Similarly, if the debt buyer is not properly licensed or registered in some states, it may not be able to seek interest at all.[194] To the extent that the debt buyer's rights to seek interest at a certain rate or at all are unclear, courts will likely take varying positions as to whether a FDCPA § 1692f(1) claim is warranted.

8.3.4 Collection Costs

State law occasionally allows for collection fees even absent a contractual authorization, particularly in legislation regulating homeowner associations.[195] More commonly, state law restricts the size of collection costs or prohibits them outright, 185 See Lott v. Vial Fortheringham, L.L.P., 2017 WL 4558050 (D. Or. Oct. 12, 2017) (imposition of contractual interest rate on prevailing-party attorney fees violated § 1692f(1)).

186 See Hageman v. Barton, 817 F.3d 611 (8th Cir. 2016); Austin v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., P.C., 2014 WL 4724885 (N.D. Ga. July 10, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 7335467 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 23, 2014) (unauthorized postjudgment interest); Jarvis v. First Resolution Mgmt. Corp., 983 N.E.2d 380 (Ohio. Ct. App. 2012) (excessive postjudgment interest). See also Stone v. J&M Sec., L.L.C., 2020 WL 5909788, at *5 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 6, 2020) ("Even a minor overstatement of interest due . . . can constitute an attempt to collect interest or other amounts not permitted by law in violation of § 1692f(1).").

187 Tabiti v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 168176 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 17, 2017).

188 Grochowski v. Daniel N. Gordon, P.C., 2014 WL 1516586 (W.D. Wash. Apr. 17, 2014) (debt buyer may have waived interest at state statutory rate when it sent notices indicating that accrued interest was $0 and interest rate was 0%).

189 See Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2014) (claim stated where debt buyer charged for interest waived by the creditor); Unifund CCR Partners v. Harrell, 509 S.W.3d 25, 29 (Ky. 2017); Kuhn v. Asset Acceptance Capital Corp., 2015 WL 1505648 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2015) (denying motion to dismiss); Alexander v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 309 F. Supp. 3d 709 (W.D. Mo. 2015); Edwards v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5145559 (W.D. Ky. Sept. 1, 2015); McDonald v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 296 F.R.D. 513 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 7, 2013) (debt buyer could not collect interest knowingly waived by the original creditor). See also Madorskaya v. Frontline Asset Strategies, L.L.C., 2020 WL 423408 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 27, 2020) (dismissal not appropriate where it was not clear whether original creditor waived its right to charge interest on the debt in the future); Simkus v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2014 WL 1775666 (N.D. Ill. May 5, 2014) (jury to decide whether creditor assignor had waived the interest that the assignee imposed); McDonald v. Richard J. Boudreau & Assoc., 2013 WL 3479273 (D.R.I. July 10, 2013).

190 Haney v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 837 F.3d 918, 926 (8th Cir. 2016); Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 171 F. Supp. 3d 585, 603 (E.D. Ky. 2016) (waiver not proved), aff'd, 706 Fed. Appx. 840 (6th Cir. 2017); Frost v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 2016 WL 3479087 (N.D. Cal. June 27, 2016) (factual allegations were insufficient to support complaint's legal conclusion of waiver). See also Madorskaya v. Frontline Asset Strategies, L.L.C., 2020 WL 423408 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 27, 2020) (inappropriate to dismiss § 1692f claim where it was unclear whether original creditor waived interest or late fees); Sivongxay v. MEDCAH, Inc., 2017 WL 5162799, at *6 (D. Haw. Nov. 7, 2017) (consumer did not offer support to assertion that creditors waived any claim to interest); LVNV Funding, L.L.C. v. Mavaega, 527 S.W.3d 128 (Mo. Ct. App. 2017).

191 Haney v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 837 F.3d 918, 926 (8th Cir. 2016); Walkabout v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2016 WL 1169540 (W.D. Okla. Mar. 22, 2016); Brown v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4986524 (E.D. Ky. 2014) (adding prejudgment statutory interest back to date of charge-off was authorized by Kentucky law). But see Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 770 F.3d 443 (6th Cir. 2014) (originating creditor's selection of contractual interest rate in excess of Kentucky prejudgment interest rate waived right to Kentucky's prejudgment statutory interest).

192 See Gissendaner v. Credit Corp Solutions, Inc., 358 F. Supp. 3d 213 (W.D.N.Y. 2019).

193 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Regulation § 3.5.3.2 (3d ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

194 See Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (collector lacked legal capacity to seek interest. But see Niemiec v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2006 WL 1763643 (N.D. Ind. June 27, 2006) (purchaser of small loan without being licensed to make such loans collecting at regulated interest rate did not violate FDCPA).

195 See Tapia v. Nevada Ass'n Services, Inc., 2013 WL 1104429 (D. Nev. Mar. 15, 2013) (collection costs related to homeowners' association payments). See also Almada v. Kriger Law Firm, A.P.C., 2021 WL 1134388 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 8, 2021).

even where authorized by the contract.[196] If state law restricts collection fees, it should be a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation to seek fees inconsistent with this state requirement.[197]

To obtain fees based on authorization from the contract, the collector must produce the actual contract and prove that the consumer has consented to that particular contract. Seeking collection fees without that proof violates FDCPA § 1692f(1).[198] Where a debt buyer or its collector seeks collection costs, there must be proof of an assignment of the contract to the debt buyer. FDCPA § 1692f(1) requires that the contract must "expressly" authorize collection fees. Where a contract provides the consumer is "responsible for all costs and fees, including attorney fees, and interest," this is not an express authorization.[199]

The fees also must be consistent with the contractual language and state law. Where state law or the contract requires the costs to be reasonable, it is a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation to seek unreasonable collection costs.[200] Where the contract or state law allows only for collection costs incurred or the actual costs of collection, it is a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation to seek percentage-based collection costs.[201] Where a lease authorized collection fees to a prevailing party, the collector was not permitted to seek them until it prevails in litigation.[202] The fact that the collection agency's commission is a percentage of the amount collected does not make these the actual costs of collection.[203]

The term "actual costs" generally applies to costs as of the date of the demand for payment, not prospective costs.[204] On the other hand, where a court interprets contract language as allowing for a recovery to cover collection-related costs past and future, it may not be a violation to seek actual costs to date and also a reasonable estimate of total collection costs.[205]

8.3.5 Attorney Fees

It is a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation to seek attorney fees unless authorized by contract or permitted by law.[206] A 196 For an analysis of state restrictions on collection costs, see NCLC's Collection Actions § 6.6 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

197 Fields v. W. Mass. Credit Corp., 479 F. Supp. 2d 287 (D. Conn. 2007) (state law limited collection fees to $10 per debt, not 15% of balance claimed). See also Breckenridge v. Vargo, 225 F. Supp. 3d 1216 (D. Colo. 2016) (impermissible collection costs not authorized under Perkins regulations that cap collection fee at 30%); Torres v. Toback, Bernstein & Reiss L.L.P., 2014 WL 988480 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 14, 2014), as modified by 2014 WL 1330957 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2014) (student loan collector collected 40% collection fees in excess of applicable federal regulations and terms of Perkins Loan agreement); Padilla v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 264 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (student loan collector assessed collection fees in excess of that permitted by federal regulations). But cf. Bjornsdotter v. Suttell & Hammer, P.S., 2020 WL 1049906, at *3 (D. Or. Mar. 4, 2020) (granting summary judgment for collection attorneys on claim alleging violation of § 1692f and 1692f(1) (inter alia) where they charged plaintiff $65 for service of process when state court awarded only "$45, the statutory amount the court routinely allows," because attorneys "had a good-faith basis for seeking $65").

198 Reed v. EOS CCA, 2016 WL 1639121 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 26, 2016); Reynolds v. EOS CCA, U.S. Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 1639120 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 26, 2016). See also Lindsey v. EquityExperts.Org, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5548773 (N.D. Ga. July 31, 2020) (finding genuine issue of material fact where jury could decide that particular collection agreement governed and that it included provisions authorizing contested charges), adopted, 2020 WL 5548770 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 24, 2020).

199 Acik v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 640 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2009).

200 Madison v. Equityexperts.org, L.L.C., 2020 WL 555249 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 4, 2020) (plaintiff did not demonstrate that costs were unreasonable where debt balance rose from $695 to $1240 over three-month period); Francis v. Gen. Revenue Corp, 2020 WL 405886 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 24, 2020) (45% of principal not reasonable); Fonseca v. Focus Fin. Services, 2016 WL 4146663 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 1, 2016) (35% collection cost could be unreasonable); Gomez v. Niemann & Heyer, L.L.P., 2016 WL 3562148 (W.D. Tex. June 24, 2016) (question of fact whether $200 payment plan administration fee reasonable where other homeowner associations charge $25); Beeks v. ALS Lien Services, 2014 WL 7785745 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 18, 2014) (question of fact whether debt collection fee of $395 for sending demand letter or charge of $125 for investigating consumer's dispute were "reasonable" under state law). But cf. Durham v. Cont'l Cent. Credit, 2009 WL 3416114 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 20, 2009) (no evidence that 40% collection fee not reasonable).

201 Bradley v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc.,739 F.3d 606 (11th Cir. 2014) (agreement); Seeger v. AFNI, Inc., 548 F.3d 1107 (7th Cir. 2008) (state law); Kojetin v. C.U. Recovery, Inc., 212 F.3d 1318, 1318 (8th Cir. 2000) (agreement provided only for actual costs). See also Carney v. Russel P. Goldman, P.C., 2018 WL 2441766 (D.N.J. May 30, 2018); Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (sought anticipated compensation if it successfully collected on the debt but contract required the consumer pay fees that were "incurred"); Annunziato v. Collecto, Inc., 207 F. Supp. 3d 249 (E.D.N.Y. 2016) (collection agency had added 42.85% to student loan balance); Richard v. Oak Tree Grp., Inc., 614 F. Supp. 2d 814 (W.D. Mich. 2008) (agreement to pay "collection costs and expenses incurred" not agreement to pay collection agency's maximum potential commission). But see Bernal v. NRA Grp., L.L.C., 930 F.3d 891, 894 (7th Cir. 2019) (percentage-based collection fee was based on cost incurred within meaning of the credit contract).

202 Gostony v. Diem Corp., 320 F. Supp. 2d 932 (D. Ariz. 2003) (granting partial summary judgment to plaintiff).

203 Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (sought anticipated compensation if it successfully collected on the debt but contract required the consumer pay fees that were "incurred"); Annunziato v. Collecto, Inc., 207 F. Supp. 3d 249 (E.D.N.Y. 2016) (collection agency added 42.85% to student loan balance); Richard v. Oak Tree Grp., Inc., 614 F. Supp. 2d 814 (W.D. Mich. 2008) (agreement to pay "collection costs and expenses incurred" not agreement to pay collection agency's maximum potential commission).

204 Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (contract authorizing costs incurred did not authorize prospective costs); Annunziato v. Collecto, Inc., 207 F. Supp. 3d 249 (E.D.N.Y. 2016) (42.85% collection costs did not represent actual costs, and where additional fees and costs had not accrued and were merely estimates of what might potentially be owed). See also Francis Gen. Revenue Corp., 2020 WL 4586392 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 10, 2020) (granting summary judgment for § 1692f(1) claim for contingent collection fee that had not accrued and might never accrue).

205 See Robertson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5951584 (D.N.J. Nov. 30, 2017). See also Bass v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 316 F. Supp. 3d 1047 (N.D. Ill. 2018).

206 Samms v. Abrams, Fensterman, Fensterman, Eisman, Formato, Ferrara & Wolf, L.L.P., 163 F. Supp. 3d 109 (S.D.N.Y. 2016); Kline v. Mortg. Elec. Sec. Sys., 2013 WL 753839 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 27, 2013). Compare Cummings v. Jaburg & Wilk P.C., 711 Fed. Appx. 418 (9th Cir. 2018) (request for attorney fees in state collection court was authorized by consumer's contract, and law firm's request for such fees was

collector cannot rely on a credit agreement that supposedly authorizes its attorney fee demand, unless the collector can prove the existence of an agreement containing such a provision.[207] While a motor vehicle credit agreement may provide for attorney fees to be deducted from the repossession sale price, this provision does not provide authorization for a collector to later seek attorney fees for pursuing a deficiency claim.[208] A contract authorizing fees is not adequate where the consumer to whom fees are assessed is not a party to that contract.[209]

NCLC's Collection Actions Ch. 6 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library, examines state law restrictions on recovery of attorney fees in a collection lawsuit. Seeking fees not in accordance with those state law restrictions violates FDCPA § 1692f(1).[210] Where a statute does not prohibit attorney fees for the collector, but allows them when authorized by the contract, the statute does not "permit" the amount sought pursuant to FDCPA § 1692f(1) where the contract does not so authorize.[211] The statute must affirmatively provide for the fees, and the conditions for a fee award under the statute must be met.[212] Where a statute provides for fees under a certain claim, there is still a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation to seek fees under that claim when it is clearly inapplicable to the collector's case.[213]

Where the contract allows fees for the prevailing party to be awarded by the court, it violates FDCPA § 1692f(1) to seek those fees from the consumer prior to prevailing in a lawsuit.[214] Similarly, a collector violates FDCPA § 1692f(1) if it seeks fees from the consumer alleging prevailing party status in a litigation where it has not prevailed.[215] There is a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation where the current balance in a collection lawsuit's complaint includes attorney fees for work that has not yet been performed, and the fee demand is not labeled as an estimate, even if the fee demand is in a reasonable amount once the work is performed.[216] But it is not a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation merely to seek in a complaint attorney fees as awarded by the court, where fees are authorized by the contract or permitted by law.[217]

It also violates FDCPA § 1692f(1) to seek fees greater than those awarded by the court.[218] But a contract in some states can allow for recovery of fees incurred prior to filing a lawsuit, and then there is no violation if allowed by agreement and where the fees are actually incurred.[219]

Where a contract authorizes fees based on actual time expended, it violates FDCPA § 1692f(1) to seek them as a percentage of the recovery.[220] Where the contract authorizes a reasonable fee, it is a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation to seek an unreasonable fee or for work not performed.[221]

A court has found that it is a FDCPA § 1692f and 1692e violation to demand a total amount that includes attorney fees without specifying what portion of the amount is attorney fees. The consumer has no way of determining whether reasonable in relation to litigation and authorized under state law); Cummings v. Jaburg & Wilk P.C., 711 Fed. Appx. 418 (9th Cir. 2018).

207 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (collector could not produce contract).

208 Lockett v. Freedman, 2004 WL 856516 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 21, 2004).

209 Erickson v. Johnson, 2006 WL 453201 (D. Minn. Feb. 22, 2006).

210 Maronyan v. Fin. Credit Network Inc., 2017 WL 57835, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 3, 2017) (seeking attorney fees in excess of $800 amount authorized by California statute); Ketchem v. Am. Acceptance, Co., L.L.C., 641 F. Supp. 2d 782 (N.D. Ind. 2008) (state rule barred fee recovery where substantial identity of interest between client and attorney).

211 Lockett v. Freedman, 2004 WL 856516 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 21, 2004).

212 See, e.g., Malik v. Kim, 2016 WL 4709076 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 8, 2016) (while fees could be collected where condo owner owed back assessments, fees where not authorized where the prior owner owed the back assessments).

213 Martinez v. Albuquerque Collection Services, 867 F. Supp. 1495 (D.N.M. 1994) (false representation that debt was open account allowing award of attorney fees).

214 Amaya v. Crowson & Crowson, L.L.P., 2013 WL 12126245 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 16, 2013) (contract allowed only associated with collection lawsuit); Sunga v. Broome, 2010 WL 3198925 (E.D. Va. Aug. 12, 2010) (homeowner association debt); Reichert v. Nat'l Credit Sys., 2005 WL 5549677 (D. Ariz. Mar. 31, 2005) (attempt to collect $225 in attorney fees before judgment); Beuter v. Canyon State Prof'l Services, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12281 (D. Ariz. June 13, 2005); Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bur., 306 F. Supp. 2d 883 (D. Neb. 2003) (collecting attorney fees before obtaining judgment); Axtell v. Collections U.S.A. Inc., 2002 WL 32595276 (D. Ariz. Oct. 22, 2002).

215 Menashe v. Baum, 2011 WL 4553097 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2011). See also Speights-Carnegie v. Blackstone Condo. Ass'n, 2018 WL 1519158 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2018).

216 Kaymark v. Bank of Am., 783 F.3d 168 (3d Cir. 2015); Munoz v. Pipestone Fin., L.L.C., 513 F. Supp. 2d 1076 (D. Minn. 2007); Stolicker v. Muller, Muller, Richmond, Harms, Myers, & Sgroi, P.C., 2005 WL 2180481 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 9, 2005) (where credit card agreement allowed for "reasonable attorney's fees," defendant's statement in state court that it was entitled to 25% percent fee violated § 1692f(1); reasonable attorney fee required court determination). See also Reichenbach v. Hayes, Johnson & Conley, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 4511698 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 19, 2019) (violation of § 1692f(1) to request unincurred attorney fees).

217 Robey v. Shapiro, Marianos & Cejda, L.L.C., 434 F.3d 1208 (10th Cir. 2006) (no violation where collection law firm's demand for "reasonable attorney fees" in its foreclosure actions as permitted by state law, without disclosing that it was operating under flat fee arrangement with its client).

218 Boatley v. Diem Corp., 2004 WL 5315892 (D. Ariz. Mar. 24, 2004).

219 Fields v. Wilber Law Firm, P.C., 383 F.3d 562, 565 (7th Cir. 2004). See also Allison v. McCabe Trotter & Beverly, P.C., 2018 WL 5122207 (D.S.C. Oct. 22, 2018) (granting summary judgment for homeowners' association attorneys who preemptively added attorney fees to their claim, because fees collected were ultimately paid to the attorneys and were, in fact, authorized and owing pursuant to contract); Lott v. Vial Fortheringham, L.L.P., 2017 WL 4558050 (D. Or. Oct. 12, 2017) (state law allowed the homeowners' association to charge pre-litigation attorney fees); Jaffri v. Thrasher Buschmann & Voelkel, P.C., 2015 WL 1119726 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 10, 2015) (homeowners' covenants allowed recovery of attorney fees, even if no lawsuit had been filed); Spangler v. Conrad, 2010 WL 2389481 (E.D. Tenn. June 9, 2010).

220 Kojetin v. CU Recovery, Inc., 212 F.3d 1318 (8th Cir. 2000).

221 Francis v. Gen. Revenue Corp, 2020 WL 405886 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 24, 2020) (45% fee not reasonable); White v. Fein, Such & Crane, L.L.P., 2015 WL 6455142 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 26, 2015) (cannot recover unreasonable fee or for work not performed); Gonzalez v. Codilis & Assoc., P.C., 2004 WL 719264 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2004); Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 262 F. Supp. 2d 520 (E.D. Pa. 2003) ($150 in attorney fees unreasonable to prepare and mail form letter).

the amount sought is authorized by the contract and permitted by law.[222]

8.3.6 Court Costs

Generally it is a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation to demand court costs prior to a court awarding such costs,[223] although it may be permitted to seek costs of a specific amount in the complaint filed in a collection lawsuit[224] or where the contract authorizes them.[225] It is also a violation to seek costs not included in the court's award.[226] It is certainly unfair to seek court costs where the collector is not authorized to use the state's courts.[227] Although in some states, a judgment creditor can recover its costs to enforce its judgment after filing a bill of costs, it violates FDCPA § 1692f(1) to seek costs without first filing that bill of costs.[228] It is also a violation to seek costs for expenses never incurred[229] or not permitted by law.[230]

222 Aubrey v. McCabe Trotter & Beverly, P.C., 2018 WL 3912353 at *6 (D.S.C. Aug. 14, 2018).

223 Shula v. Lawent, 359 F.3d 489, 493 (7th Cir. 2004); Anderson v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 2017 WL 3836126 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 27, 2017); Anda v. Roosen Varchetti & Olivier, P.L.L.C., 2016 WL 7157414 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 31, 2016) (garnishment amount that included garnishment filing fees that had not been adjudicated as costs); Cohn v. New Century Fin. Services, Inc., 2016 WL 4016993 (E.D.N.Y. June 7, 2016) (filing and service costs that state court had not yet awarded); Gorman v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2016 WL 755618 (D. Minn. Feb. 25, 2016) (process server fees demanded prior to judgment); Oberg v. Blatt, 2015 WL 9478213 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 29, 2015).

224 Clark v. Main St. Acquisition Corp., 553 Fed. Appx. 510 (6th Cir. 2014) (debt buyer's request for costs in unspecified amount in its affidavit attached to its debt collection complaint where such costs were permitted by state law to the prevailing party and were provided by a credit card contract); Downey v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1230584 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 20, 2018) (seeking $105 court costs in collection complaint); Scioli v. Goldman & Warshaw P.C., 651 F. Supp. 2d 273 (D.N.J. 2009) (collector listed specific sum of statutory fees in space provided in court-approved form summons).

225 Jeffries v. Credit Bur. of Carbon Cty., 2015 WL 7075401 (D. Colo. Nov. 13, 2015).

226 Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 2002 WL 32993859 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 8, 2002). See also Russo v. Puckett & Redford, P.L.L.C., 2009 WL 3837529 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 17, 2009) (while order for costs included costs for a registered process server, unfair to seek those costs where process server not registered).

227 Foster v. D.B.S. Collection Agency, 463 F. Supp. 2d 783 (S.D. Ohio 2006) (lacking legal capacity to bring suit).

228 Hawksley v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2017 WL 63033 (W.D. Ky. Jan. 5, 2017).

229 Belcher v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7243100 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 15, 2016) (attempted to collect fee for service of process where process never served).

230 Russo v. Puckett & Redford, P.L.L.C., 2009 WL 3837529 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 17, 2009) (service fee for unregistered process server); Watkins v. Peterson Enters., Inc., 57 F. Supp. 2d 1102 (E.D. Wash. 1999) (Wash. law does not provide for judgment creditor to recover costs for unsuccessful garnishments); Dutton v. Wolhar, 809 F. Supp. 1130 (D. Del. 1992) (costs filed in inconvenient forum prohibited by Del. statute), aff'd on other grounds, 5 F.3d 649 (3d Cir. 1993).

8.3.7 Other Fees, Charges, or Any Other Amount

When a check is dishonored, collectors, in recovering the face value of the check, may seek to tack on extra fees, especially to make collection of a small amount profitable for them. FDCPA § 1692f(1) prohibits such fees unless authorized by contract or permitted by state law. If state law is silent or permits such charges only in other contexts, the collector can assess a bad check charge only if it is permitted by contract.[231] But a fee may not be authorized by agreement just because the fee is posted at the merchant's location.[232] A check diversion program fee can be actionable under FDCPA § 1692f(1) where it is not permitted by the applicable statute, even where approved by the district attorney.[233]

There is certainly a FDCPA § 1692f(1) violation where fees assessed to collect on an insufficient funds check exceed those allowed by state law,[234] where the collector seeks fees for a dishonored check in addition to those allowed by law,[235] or where the consumer stopped payment on a check so that the bad check law allowing for fees does not apply.[236] Nevertheless, some courts find that a fee is permitted by state law paralleling Uniform Commercial Code Article 2, recoverable as incidental damages.[237] Even then, the fee must 231 See West v. Costen, 558 F. Supp. 564 (W.D. Va. 1983).

232 Irwin v. Mascott, 186 F.R.D. 567 (N.D. Cal. 1999) (posted notice of dishonored-check service charge was not enough to show express agreement); Ballard v. Equifax Check Services, 27 F. Supp. 2d 1201 (E.D. Cal. 1998) (no evidence that merchant's sign was in fact posted or that consumer read it). See also Still v. JBC Assoc., 2005 WL 1334715 (D.N.J. June 3, 2005); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 808(1)-4 (collector must show that consumer knew of the charge), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. But see Tuttle v. Equifax Check, 190 F.3d 9 (2d Cir. 1999) (consumer consented to imposition of returned check fee if consumer knew of sign stating fee would be imposed).

233 Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 718 F. Supp. 2d 1116 (N.D. Cal. 2010). See also 15 U.S.C. § 1692p, discussed at § 4.8.11, supra.

234 Johnson v. Riddle, 305 F.3d 1107 (10th Cir. 2002) (state law allowed $15 and collector sought $250); Duffy v. Landberg, 215 F.3d 871 (8th Cir. 2000) (demanding $100 civil penalty where state law allowed penalty up to $100); Day v. Check Brokerage Corp., 511 F. Supp. 2d 950 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (without certified mail, not entitled to higher dishonored-check charge).

235 Johnson v. Riddle, 305 F.3d 1107 (10th Cir. 2002) (shoplifting penalties were unavailable for collection of dishonored checks); Scott v. Riddle, 2000 WL 33980013 (D. Utah Dec. 4, 2000) (shoplifting statute's penalties inapplicable to bad checks); Larsen v. JBC Legal Grp., P.C., 533 F. Supp. 2d 290 (E.D.N.Y. 2008) (service charge in addition to penalty under bad check law).

236 Ozkaya v. Telecheck Services, Inc., 982 F. Supp. 578 (N.D. Ill. 1997).

237 Freyermuth v. Credit Bur. Services, Inc., 248 F.3d 767 (8th Cir. 2001) (service charge on checks was permitted by UCC Article 2 as incidental damages); Tuttle v. Equifax Check, 190 F.3d 9 (2d Cir. 1999) (U.C.C. Art. 2 allowed check guarantee agency its actual costs of collection as incidental damages); Martsolf v. JBC Legal Grp., P.C., 2008 WL 275719 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 30, 2008) ($30 as returned check fee authorized as U.C.C. incidental damages); Maneval v. Jon R. Hawks, Ltd., 1999 WL 33911242 (D. Minn. Oct. 12, 1999) (state law allowed demand of

be a reasonable approximation of the collector's incidental damages.[238]

FDCPA § 1692f(1) is violated where late fees exceed state law limits,[239] are assessed when a payment is not late,[240] or are assessed where there is no authorization for the fee.[241] After a loan is accelerated, contractual and state law authorizations for late charges may no longer apply, and then charging a late fee would violate FDCPA § 1692f(1).[242]

Credit, check, debit card, or online payment fees not agreed to or disclosed prior to payment are neither authorized by contract nor permitted by law, even where the collector passed on the fee to a third party.[243] This should be distinguished from a situation where the collector will accept certain forms of payment with no fee and discloses that other forms of payment will include a fee, at the consumer's option, and where that fee is not prohibited by state law.[244]

FDCPA § 1692f(1)'s prohibition on the collection of "any amount" unless expressly authorized by contract or permitted by law is very broad and applies to attempts to collect:

- Taxes;[245]
- Force-placed insurance on a home that was already properly insured;[246]
- Inflated escrow account payments;[247]
- Property inspection fees that are marked up or that are assessed too frequently;[248]
- Charges upon termination of an apartment lease;[249] and
- Condominium repairs that were never performed.[250]

8.4 FDCPA § 1692f(2) to f(4): Restrictions on Postdated Payment Instruments

A debt collector may not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

* * *

> (2) The acceptance by a debt collector from any person of a check or other payment instrument postdated by more than five days unless such person is notified in writing of the debt collector's intent to deposit such check or instrument not more than ten nor less than three business days prior to such deposit.

$100 over amount of bounced check); Charles v. Check Rite, Ltd., 1999 WL 1576167 (D. Ariz. Dec. 14, 1998) ($25 check fee was authorized under U.C.C. § 2-709 as "incidental damages").

238 Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995).

239 See Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000) (interest and late charges exceeded state limitation of 10%); Ballard v. Equifax Check Services, 158 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. 2001) ($20 service charge does not meet California standards for liquidated damages); Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320 (D. Utah 1997) (exceeding state limit of $15). See also Hansen v. Ticket Track, Inc., 280 F. Supp. 2d 1196 (W.D. Wash. 2003) (charges for not paying parking fees prohibited by state law).

240 Randall v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 2355927 (Cal. Ct. App. May 24, 2018) (default fees and costs for loan that was not in default).

241 Speights-Carnegie v. Blackstone Condo. Ass'n, 2018 WL 1519158 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2018); Agostino v. Quest Diagnostics, Inc., 2011 WL 5410667 (D.N.J. Nov. 3, 2011). See also Reichenbach v. Hayes, Johnson & Conley, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 4511698, at *5 (M.D. Pa. Sept. 19, 2019). But cf. Brancato v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2770137 (D.N.J. June 8, 2018) (late fee authorized by parties' written agreement).

242 France v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1695405 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 6, 2018). See also Muhammad v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1259353 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 19, 2019) (denying motion to dismiss where court was unable to determine whether consumer still had a right to reinstate after the alleged acceleration at the time she received servicer's letters); Jackson v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5513704 (S.D. Fla. Nov. 17, 2017). But see Rizzo v. Pierce & Assoc., 351 F.3d 791 (7th Cir. 2003) (post-acceleration late fee on mortgage authorized); Patel v. Seterus, Inc., 2015 WL 13547010 (M.D. Fla. June 19, 2015) (mortgage servicer had a contractual and legal right to require payment of post-acceleration late fees if the homeowners reinstated the loan).

243 See Torliatt v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 1904596 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 17, 2020), reconsideration denied, 2020 WL 4495480 (N.D. Cal. June 22, 2020); Sanders v. LoanCare L.L.C., 2019 WL 441964 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 1, 2019); Roe v. Totleca Enters., Inc., 2018 WL 1900532 (E.D. Tex. Apr. 20, 2018); Schwartz v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 1582224 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 30, 2018); McLain v. Head Mercantile Co., 2017 WL 3710073 (M.D. La. Aug. 28, 2017); McWhorter v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3315375 (N.D. Ala. Aug. 3, 2017); Fuentes v. AR Res., Inc., 2017 WL 1197814 (D.N.J. Mar. 31, 2017); Thomas v. Youderian, 232 F. Supp. 3d 656 (D.N.J. 2017); Simmet v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2016 WL 11002359 (C.D. Cal. July 7, 2016). See also Manlangit ex rel. Manlangit v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 2020 WL 5570092 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 2020). But see Ketterman v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2019 WL 3777635 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 12, 2019) (third-party credit card processor collects and retains entirety of contested processing fee and that party is not a debt collector).

244 Lee v. Main Accounts, Inc., 1997 WL 618803 (6th Cir. Oct. 6, 1997); Michael v. HOVG, L.L.C., 232 F. Supp. 3d 1229 (S.D. Fla. 2017); Campbell v. MBI Assoc., Inc., 98 F. Supp. 3d 568 (E.D.N.Y. 2015). See also Alexander v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 7319252 (D. Md. Dec. 11, 2020). Cf. Lembeck v. Arvest Cent. Mortg. Co., 498 F. Supp. 3d 1134 (declining to dismiss claim where fact that no-fee payment methods were available and fact that borrower selected method with fee did nothing to take fee outside plain language of statute).

245 Martinez v. Albuquerque Collection Services, 867 F. Supp. 1495 (D.N.M. 1994). See also In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2020) (improper attempt to collect ad valorem taxes).

246 See In re Breitner, 2018 WL 1162879 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. Mar. 1, 2018).

247 See Bowen v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 4183081, at *25 (D. Me. Sept. 20, 2017).

248 See Daniel v. Select Portfolio Servicing, L.L.C., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1333 (S.D. Fla. 2016); Millien v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 12817174 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 14, 2015) (contract did not authorize property inspections to occur monthly in absence of any indication that property had been allowed to deteriorate or fall to waste).

249 Dawson v. Genesis Credit Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5668073 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 27, 2017); Jarzyna v. Home Props., L.P., 114 F. Supp. 3d 243 (E.D. Pa. 2015) ("30-day notice" fee); Hayden v. Rapid Collection Sys., Inc., 2006 WL 1127180 (D. Ariz. Apr. 27, 2006).

250 See Speights-Carnegie v. Blackstone Condo. Ass'n, 2018 WL 1519158 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2018).

(3) The solicitation by a debt collector of any postdated check or other postdated payment instrument for the purpose of threatening or instituting criminal prosecution.

(4) Depositing or threatening to deposit any postdated check or other postdated payment instrument prior to the date on such check or instrument.[251]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at section 1006.22(c)(1) to (3).[252] Reg. F § 1006.22(c)(1) also adds a clarification of the term "business days" in FDCPA § 1692f(2).

These three FDCPA § 1692f subsections restrict when a collector may solicit, accept, or deposit a consumer's postdated check or other payment instrument. By the very language of these provisions, they apply not only to checks written by the consumer, but to any other payment instrument, such as a "preauthorized" check[253] or an electronic funds transfer.[254]

Some early versions of the FDCPA flatly prohibited collectors' acceptance or solicitation of a postdated check.[255] Collectors' trade associations argued that postdated checks were a convenient method of payment for many consumers.[256]

The present language focuses on the misuse of postdated payment instruments. FDCPA § 1692f(4) is a flat prohibition of a collector depositing a payment instrument prior to its payment date. A collector cannot surprise a consumer who hopes to have sufficient funds in an account by the payment date by withdrawing funds from the consumer's account early.

Moreover, a consumer, having written the check well before the payment date, may not remember that the payment date is approaching, and changed circumstances may alter the consumer's ability to make payment on that date. FDCPA § 1692f(2) requires the collector to warn the consumer of the impending payment date—the warning must be in a window between three and ten business days before the payment date.[257] This gives the consumer an opportunity to determine the consumer's present financial situation and to stop payment if that is advisable.

FDCPA § 1692f(3) prohibits collector solicitation of postdated payment instruments where the collector is hoping there will be insufficient funds for payment so that it can use that fact to threaten or actually institute criminal prosecution under a state criminal statute.[258] Collectors may make these threats, or even seek to institute proceedings, even though there are many reasons why a state's criminal bad check statute may not even apply. State criminal check writing laws frequently do not apply to postdated checks or checks covering an existing debt.[259] They may not apply where the consumer had no intent to bounce the payment. They may not apply where an action is brought by an assignee of the original payee.

It may be difficult to prove that the postdated instrument was solicited with the intent of later threatening to institute criminal prosecution;[260] the collector may assert that the check was solicited only to pay the debt. This can be countered where the collector demanded a postdated check, even though it knew the consumer did not have sufficient funds to cover the check.[261]

Other evidence of an unlawful intent would be a pattern of the collector threatening or instituting bad check prosecutions on postdated checks. Checking dockets of local criminal prosecutions or local prosecutors may supply useful leads. Where allowed by state law and state attorney ethics standards, the consumer may be able to record conversations whereby the collector procures the postdated instrument and later threatens criminal prosecution.[262]

8.5 FDCPA § 1692f(5): Causing Charges to a Person by Concealing Communications' Collection Purpose

A debt collector may not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt. Without 251 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692f(2), 1692f(3), 1692f(4). See also Reg. F § 1006.22(c).

The legislative history of these provisions was complicated by the variety of methods proposed to combat the misuse by debt collectors of postdated checks. Several bills completely prohibited the solicitation or acceptance of postdated checks. Others primarily used the present approach, with variations in time periods and wording. Some bills leading to the FDCPA flatly prohibited the acceptance or solicitation of a postdated check by collectors. H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(5) (1975); H.R. 29, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(2) (1977). E.g., H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 807(2) (1976); H.R. 13720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. §§ 807(2), 807(3), 807(4) (1976).

252 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,833–76,834 (Nov. 30, 2020).

253 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 3.13 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

254 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 5.9 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

255 H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 805(5) (1975); H.R. 29, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 807(2) (1977).

256 Senate Hearings, The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs of the Comm. on Banking, Hous. and Urban Affairs, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 171 (1977) (statement of John W. Johnson, American Collectors Ass'n, Inc.) ("[t]his section prohibits the debt collector from accepting postdated checks from debtors, even though the debtors might want to give them to the collector. The purpose is apparently to prevent the possibility that a collector might accept a postdated check from a debtor, and then, if the check bounces, threaten the debtor with prosecution under state bad check laws. That goal is laudable and could easily be reached by a rewording of this section, without precluding the convenience of postdated checks for both debtor and collector.") (out of print, but may be available for copying at U.S. government document depositories).

257 Regulation F defines business days for purposes of this provision as excluding public holidays identified in 5 U.S.C. § 6103(a), Saturdays, and Sundays. See Reg. F. § 1006.22(c)(1).

258 See United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Tex. 1986), aff'd per curiam, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987).

259 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions Ch. 8 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

260 See, e.g., Grassley v. Debt Collectors, Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22782 (D. Or. Dec. 4, 1992).

261 See McGrady v. Nissan Motor Acceptance Corp., 40 F. Supp. 2d 1323 (M.D. Ala. 1998).

262 See § 11.5.2, infra (recording of phone conversations).

limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

* * *

(5) Causing charges to be made to any person for communications by concealment of the true purpose of the communication. Such charges include, but are not limited to, collect telephone calls and telegram fees.[263]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at section 1006.22(d).[264]

FDCPA § 1692f(5) protects individuals from incurring charges for any type of collection communications when the debt collector has concealed the true purpose of the communication.[265] While early versions of this provision applied its protection only to "consumers,"[266] Congress made the decision in the final bill to apply the protections to "any person." The provision applies to a collector's communications not only with the consumer, but to any third party.

There is no FDCPA § 1692f(5) violation if an individual does not incur charges, either because the call, text, or email does not contribute to exceeding the amount included in a plan, or because someone else incurs the charges.[267]

In its discussion of Regulation F, the CFPB has stated the following about text messages to consumers that cause consumers to incur charges:

> [T]he Bureau does not believe . . . that a debt collector necessarily violates FDCPA section 808(5) [§ 1692c] by sending a text message to a consumer with a limited text messaging plan. Rather, the Bureau believes that . . . a violation of FDCPA section 808(5) [§ 1692c] would require the debt collector to engage in concealment of the true purpose of the text message. The Bureau believes that a debt collector who communicates by text message pursuant to the procedures in [Reg. F] § 1006.6(d)(5) would be unlikely to engage in such concealment . . ."[268]

This statement highlights that incurring charges is not sufficient on its own without also satisfying the element of "concealment of the true purpose of the communication." Whether the debt collector's caller ID reveals the "true purpose" of a call or text would be a factual issue in many cases.[269]

263 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(5). See also Reg. F § 1006.22(d).

264 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,833 (Nov. 30, 2020).

265 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

266 E.g., S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 807(6) (1976); S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(5) (1977).

267 See Horowitz v. GC Services L.P., 2016 WL 7188238 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2016).

268 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,793 n.341 (Nov. 30, 2020).

269 See Horowitz v. GC Services L.P., 2015 WL 1959377 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 28, 2015) (consumer sufficiently alleged that collection agency caused charges to consumer's cell phone bill in the form of lost minutes when it used a false caller ID and left a voice mail for his cell phone, violating § 1692f(6)). See also § 14.3.3, infra (discuss.ng caller ID and spoofing).

8.6 FDCPA § 1692f(6): Threats and Actions to Dispossess Property Non-Judicially

8.6.1 Overview

A debt collector may not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

* * *

(6) Taking or threatening to take any nonjudicial action to effect dispossession or disablement of property if—
(A) there is no present right to possession of the property claimed as collateral through an enforceable security interest;
(B) there is no present intention to take possession of the property; or
(C) the property is exempt by law from such dispossession or disablement.[270]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at section 1006.22(e).[271]

Section 1692f(6) is a unique FDCPA provision because it adds to the general definition of a debt collector, which states at FDCPA § 1692a(6) that, "[f]or the purpose of section 1692f(6) of this title such term also includes any person . . . in any business the principal purpose of which is the enforcement of security interests."[272] As a result, FDCPA § 1692f(6) clearly applies to repossession agents, foreclosure law firms, and others whose business is seizing collateral. The 2019 Supreme Court decision in Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus L.L.P.,[273] muddies the waters as to the application of other FDCPA provisions to such entities, but there is no question that FDCPA § 1692f(6) applies to those firms.

At the same time, FDCPA § 1692f(6) is not limited to firms whose principal purpose is enforcement of security interests. The provision also applies to any entity within the general FDCPA definition of debt collector. See § 4.7.5, supra, for a discussion of the FDCPA's general coverage as to those involved with repossession, foreclosures, and evictions.

FDCPA § 1692f(6) prohibits both threats[274] and the actual taking of the prohibited forms of nonjudicial actions. The threats or actual taking can be a dispossession or a disablement.

270 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(6). These provisions first appeared with only minor variations from the present language in S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(7) (1977). See also Reg. F § 1006.22(e).

271 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,833 (Nov. 30, 2020).

272 11 U.S.C. § 1692a(6) (third sentence).

273 ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019).

274 See Williams v. Republic Recovery Services, Inc., 2010 WL 2195519 (N.D. Ill. May 27, 2010) (threats are actionable; no need to take action); Robertson v. Horton Bros. Recovery, Inc., 2007 WL 2009703 (D. Del. July 3, 2007) (repo engaged in threatening and vulgar phone calls and visits violated § 1692f(6)(a)).

Prime examples of dispossession include foreclosing a home nonjudicially, locking out a consumer from a rental apartment, padlocking a manufactured home, repossessing a vehicle, or retaining, over the consumer's objection, a vehicle pursuant to a statutory lien.

A common example of disablement is the use of a starter interrupter device inserted into a motor vehicle whereby a collector can refuse to give a consumer a code to override the device that would allow the consumer to operate the vehicle. Disablement also applies to a repair shop disabling an item to be repaired until payment is received.

Nothing in FDCPA § 1692f(6) requires that the property involved in the violation be collateral. FDCPA § 1692f(6)(A) applies to property "claimed" as collateral. There is thus a violation if a creditor claims, but has not taken, a proper security interest in property, and seizes or threatens to seize the property.[275] It is unclear whether FDCPA § 1692f(6)(A) applies to repossession of a leased vehicle, since the vehicle is not collateral on a loan but owned by the lessor. On the other hand, FDCPA § 1692f(6)(B) and (C) are not limited to collateral or property that is claimed as collateral, and so apply to dispossessions and disablements even where the property is unsecured or leased.

By its terms, FDCPA § 1692f(6) applies to nonjudicial actions. The provision does not apply to judicial foreclosures or replevin of personal property.[276] It also does not apply to court-ordered garnishment of wages or a bank account.[277]

8.6.2 When Collector Has No Present Right to Property—FDCPA § 1692f(6)(A)

FDCPA § 1692f (6)(A) prohibits the threat or taking of an action to dispossess or disable property when "there is no present right to possession of the property claimed as collateral through an enforceable security interest." Whether there is such a present right is to be determined by state law.[278] This provision can apply to threatening to or enforcing a security interest where:

- The claimed security interest is not valid, such as where the security agreement is defective;[279]
- The entity in whose name the enforcement is conducted does not have that right, such as where the assignment to that entity is defective or the assignment is not effective until after that entity conducted the foreclosure[280] (the consumer, though, should produce some showing as to why the collector's claimed right is not valid);[281]

275 See S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 8, reprinted at 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.2, infra (Act prohibits "repossessing property if there is not valid security interest or it is exempt by law from repossession").

276 See Mitchell v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2019 WL 2409658 (D. Utah June 7, 2017) (challenged foreclosure sale was a judicial, not nonjudicial, foreclosure sale); Lienfactors, L.L.C. v. Belamour, 2011 WL 726169 (Conn. Super. Ct. Jan. 31, 2011) (does not apply to judicial foreclosure).

277 See § 8.6.4, infra.

278 Richards v. PAR, Inc., 954 F.3d 965 (6th Cir. 2020). See also Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Obradovich, 2020 WL 2767578 (N.D. Ill. May. 28, 2020) (under relevant state law, jury could find that servicer, by telling its agent to go inside property without permission, breached peace and therefore violated § 1692f(6)).

279 For grounds why a claimed security interest in motor vehicles or other personal property is invalid, see National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions Ch. 3 (10th ed. 2022), updated at www.nclc.org/library. For grounds why a claimed security interest in real property is invalid, see National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 7.15.5 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Oliver v. ARS Ohio L.L.C., 2019 WL 343249 (N.D. Ohio Jan. 28, 2019) (vehicle no longer titled in name of debtor); Meredith v. Pathfinders, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20367 (D.S.C. Nov. 9, 1983) (repossession agency liable for $7500 FDCPA damages and FDCPA attorney fees when agency repossessed property for creditor when creditor had no present right to possession).

280 See Dowers v. Nationstar Morg., L.L.C., 852 F.3d 964, 971 (9th Cir. 2017) (servicer attempted to conduct non judicial foreclosure when lacked legal authority to enforce obligation); Minnifield v. Johnson & Freedman, L.L.C., 448 Fed. Appx. 914 (11th Cir. 2011) (assignment of mortgage to foreclosure attorney occurred two weeks after foreclosure); Titus v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2016 WL 807806 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 2, 2016); Kobialko v. Pierce & Assoc., P.C., 2014 WL 1339662 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 3, 2014); Hoffman v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2014 WL 6822359 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 4, 2014) (two recorded assignments based were invalidated by undisclosed, unrecorded assignments); McDonald v. OneWest Bank, 929 F. Supp. 2d 1079 (W.D. Wash. 2013); Diaz v. Bank of Am., 2013 WL 12248082, at *8 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 17, 2013), adopted, 2013 WL 12247808 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 5, 2013) (sent notice of foreclosure sale before receiving transfer of home loan); Garrett v. BNC Mortg. Inc., 929 F. Supp. 2d 1120 (D. Colo. 2013); Deutsche Bank Tr. Co. Americas v. Garst, 2013 WL 4851493 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 11, 2013); Bohannon v. PHH Mortg. Corp., 2012 WL 12844753 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 26, 2012), adopted, 2013 WL 12062836 (N.D. Ga. June 28, 2013); Moore v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2012 WL 424583, at *5 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 9, 2012); Akar v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2011 WL 6288055 (D. Mass. Dec. 1, 2011) (communicated intent to foreclose occurred prior to assignment); Lettenmaier v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 2011 WL 1938166 (D. Or. May 20, 2011), later op. at 2011 WL 3476661 (D. Or. Aug. 8, 2011); Pizan v. HSBC Bank, 2011 WL 2531104 (W.D. Wash. June 23, 2011); Matthews v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 2560329 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 5, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 2563180 (E.D. Mich. June 28, 2011); Jackman v. Hasty, 2011 WL 854878 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 8, 2011); Armacost v. HSBC Bank, 2011 WL 825151 (D. Idaho Feb. 9, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 809166 (D. Idaho Mar. 2, 2011). See also Ruffner v. Quality Loan Serv. Corp. of Wash., 2021 WL 1414205 (D. Or. Apr. 12, 2021) (disputed fact issues regarding possession of note preclude summary judgment for mortgage servicer on borrower's § 1692f(6) claim); Ponthieux v. Nationstar Mortg., 2021 WL 211252 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2021), adopted, 2021 WL 1089849 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 22, 2021); Weidman v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 2357997, at *5 (W.D. Wash. June 4, 2019) (borrower can bring § 1692f(6) claim over authority to foreclose, but pleading at issue is too vague to support claim); Bushlow v. MTC Fin., 2018 WL 1745803 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 11, 2018) (borrower would have standing to challenge trustee's actions under FDCPA based on lack of authority to foreclose, but here failed to allege facts sufficient to support such a claim), later op. at 2018 WL 3744022 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 7, 2018) (dismissing lack of authority to foreclose claim with prejudice, not discussing FDCPA), aff'd, 771 Fed. Appx. 375 (9th Cir. 2019); McDonald v. OneWest Bank, 929 F. Supp. 2d 1079 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 7, 2013) (trustee began the foreclosure process when it had not yet been appointed successor trustee); Mickelson v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2012 WL 3240241 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 7, 2012).

281 See Mbaku v. Carrington Mortg. Services L.L.C., 735 Fed. Appx. 533 (10th Cir. 2018) (conclusory allegation, without more, that foreclosing party lacked documentation to establish its right to enforce note and deed of trust was inadequate where foreclosing party filed documents

- The foreclosure trustee conducting a non-judicial foreclosure sale is not properly appointed in accordance with state law requirements;[282]
- There is no default that can justify enforcement of the security interest,[283] the delinquency is not of sufficient size to allow for foreclosure under state law,[284] or the credit obligation has been satisfied;[285]
- After allowing a practice of accepting late or partial payments, the security interest is enforced without notice of the changed practice;[286]
- After agreeing to forbear payments, the security interest is enforced without notice of the change;[287]
- It is prior to termination of a right to cure;[288]
- It is not in compliance with federal or state law preconditions to such enforcement, such as failing to provide a required notice or comply with a servicing requirement;[289]
- A servicer is proceeding to a non-judicial foreclosure while RESPA regulations[290] requires that foreclosure be delayed while the servicer completes a loss mitigation review;[291]
- It is not in compliance with contractual conditions on the right to enforce the security interest, such as failing to provide a notice prior to enforcement;[292]
- There is padlocking of property or turning off of utilities prior to a required court possession order;[293] or supporting its nonjudicial foreclosure); Arias v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2018 WL 1518676 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 28, 2018) (dismissing § 1692f(6) claim where consumer failed to provide any factual allegations indicating that mortgage servicer or trustee lacked right to possess property).

282 See, e.g., Walker v. Quality Loan Serv. Corp., 308 P.3d 716, 726 (Wash. Ct. App. 2013).

283 See Amodio v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2162944 (M.D. Tenn. May 17, 2019) (denying foreclosure firm's motion for summary judgment on § 1692f(6) claim where firm proceeded with non-judicial foreclosure after borrower complied with standard paragraph 22 mortgage provision and cured default); Thomas v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2018 WL 3608398 (W.D. Wash. July 26, 2018) (debtors were not in default and had been tendering payments); Yadav-Ranjan v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3328499, at *7 (N.D. Cal. July 6, 2018) (loan not in default); James v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 92 F. Supp. 3d 1190 (S.D. Ala. 2015) (home loan not in default when foreclosure threatened); Dunavant v. Sirote & Permutt, P.C., 2013 WL 5634425 (S.D. Ala. Oct. 15, 2013). See also Goodwin v. His Choice Towing & Recovery, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1212119 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 14, 2019) (where consumer paid all outstanding charges on the loan and obtained an extension of the maturity date, she was no longer in default), adopted, 2019 WL 7944075 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 3, 2019).

284 Hanson v. JQD, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3404945 (N.D. Cal. July 11, 2014) (state law regarding homeowner association foreclosures).

285 See Bynon v. Mansfield, 2016 WL 4089169 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 1, 2016); Carter v. Am. Note Servicing, 2014 WL 2002829 (W.D. Va. May 15, 2014).

286 Hendrickson v. Fifth Third Bank, 2019 WL 652417 (D. Minn. Feb. 15, 2019); Buzzell v. Citizens Auto. Fin., Inc., 802 F. Supp. 2d 1014 (D. Minn. 2011) (practice of accepting late payments); Akerlund v. TCF Nat'l Bank, 2001 WL 1631440 (D. Minn. June 11, 2001) (repossession without having sent notice that late payments will no longer be accepted might be FDCPA violation, but not shown here). See also National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 4.3.1.1 (9th ed. 2017).

287 Wright v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2018 WL 2095171, at *4–5 (M.D. Fla. May 1, 2018) repossessing car after creditor told car owner that it would not repossess if payment was made in next month); Harris v. Americredit Fin. Services, Inc., 2005 WL 2180477 (W.D. Va. Sept. 9, 2005) (taking vehicle after agreeing to forbearance).

288 See Dallman v. Felt & Lukes, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6628996 (W.D. Wis. Dec. 17, 2013) (creditor violates FDCPA by repossessing without having sent right to cure notice required by state law, but not shown here); Meredith v. Pathfinders Detective & Recovery, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11860 (D.S.C. Nov. 9, 1983); Foster v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 395 S.E.2d 440 (S.C. 1990).

289 See Cordeiro v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 3404742 (D.R.I. June 19, 2020) (failure to fulfill certain HUD prerequisites incorporated into mortgage), judgment withdrawn in part by 2021 WL 673482 (D.R.I. Feb. 22, 2021). See also Cooke v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2019 WL 3241128 (D. Md. July 17, 2019) (claims stated under § 1692e where servicer proceeded with foreclosure without complying with HUD regulation requiring face-to-face loss mitigation meeting, but dismissing claim under § 1692f(6) based on same conduct as duplicative). But see Freeman v. Ally Fin. Inc., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 1099840 (D. Minn. Mar. 23, 2021) (dismissing § 1692f(6) claim because state common law requirement of pre-repossession notice that consumer contended was not provided did not apply). See generally 41 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 403 (requirement for pre-acceleration notice of right to cure), § 404 (post-acceleration right to cure, up to one hour before commencement of foreclosure sale); Mass Gen. Laws ch. 244, § 35A (requirement for notice of 90-day right to cure before foreclosure); Taylor v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 74 So. 3d 1115 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2011); Pinti v. Emigrant Mortg. Co., 33 N.E.3d 1213 (Mass. 2015) (non-judicial foreclosure sale void due to non-compliance with contract-based pre-foreclosure notice requirement); Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co. v. Haller, 954 N.Y.S. 2d 551 (N.Y. App. Div. 2012); Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Brunner, 986 N.E.2d 565 (Ohio Ct. App. 2013); National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 5.2 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

290 12 C.F.R. § 1021.41(f), (g).

291 White v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 4431416 (W.D. Tenn. Sept. 14, 2018) (borrower stated § 1692f(6) claim against foreclosure trustee who conducted sale while borrower's application for loss mitigation was pending); Weisheit v. Rosenberg & Assoc., 2017 WL 5478355 (D. Md. Nov. 15, 2017) (allowing § 1692f(6) claim where law firm proceeded with a foreclosure sale while RESPA dual tracking protections in effect). See also Best v. Newrez L.L.C., 2020 WL 5513433 (D. Md. Sept. 11, 2020) (allowing FDCPA claim under § 1692e based on RESPA dual tracking violation while dismissing claim under § 1692f(6) based on same conduct as duplicative).

292 See Gosha v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp., 2019 WL 5295466, at *7 (D. Or. Oct. 18, 2019) foreclosing entity did not meet conditions to exercise of right to foreclose, including compliance with notice requirements of paragraph 22 of standard GSE mortgage); Stevens v. Harveston Cmty. Assoc., 2019 WL 1670824, at *3 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 19, 2019) (foreclosure trustee added unlawful fees that led to non-judicial foreclosure sale); Puryer v. HSBC Bank, 419 P.3d 105 (Mont. 2018) (threatening to foreclose when there was no right to do so because of failure to give pre-foreclosure notices required under deed of trust); In re Pullen, 451 B.R. 206 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2011) (failure to comply with notice requirements in deed constituted a wrongful foreclosure under state law). See National Consumer Law Center, Home Foreclosures § 5.2 (2019) updated at www. nclc.org/library (discussing state law pre-foreclosure notice requirements).

293 Flippin v. Aurora Bank, 2012 WL 3260449 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 8, 2012); Matthews v. Homecoming Fin. Network, 2005 WL 2387688 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2005). See also Griffin v. Safeguard Props. Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 6118572, at *11 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 16, 2020) (genuine issue of

- A repossession breaches the peace, since the right to self-help repossession is limited to when the seizure can be conducted without breaching the peace.[294]

FDCPA § 1692f(6)(A) applies only to property claimed as collateral, so it does not apply to a collector's unreasonable requirements as to the return of personal property taken in conjunction with a vehicle repossession if the collector does not claim a security interest in that personal property.[295] FDCPA § 1692f(6)(A) also is violated if a collector refuses to return the personal property because it claims that the personal property is part of its collateral, even if, in fact, the personal property is not part of the collateral.

A motor vehicle "yo-yo" transaction involves a completed sale where the dealer claims financing has fallen through and the consumer must return the vehicle. If the dealer sends a repossession agent to threaten or to retrieve the vehicle, the agent may claim FDCPA § 1692f(6)(A) does not apply, because it is not seizing pursuant to a claimed security interest, as the sale was not final and the dealer still owns the vehicle.[296] The dealer may claim it is not dispossessing the vehicle pursuant to a security interest, because it is, in fact, the vehicle's owner.

But whether the dealer is still the owner is a factual issue—it turns on whether ownership has remained in the dealer until financing is approved (a condition precedent) or whether ownership has transferred to the consumer where the dealer has the right to unwind the sale if financing falls through (a condition subsequent). In a condition subsequent transaction, since ownership has passed to the consumer, the right to recover the vehicle must be based on enforcement of the security interest.[297] For a discussion of the indicia as to whether a yo-yo transaction is a condition precedent or condition subsequent, see NCLC's Automobile Fraud Ch. 4 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

8.6.3 When No Present Intent to Take Property—FDCPA § 1692f(6)(B)

FDCPA § 1692f(6)(A) prohibits threats if there is no present right to possession of the property claimed to be collateral. FDCPA § 1692f(6)(B) prohibits threats where there is no present intent to take property. FDCPA § 1692f(6)(B) thus differs in two ways from section 1692f(6)(A)—it applies even to property not claimed as collateral and it applies even where the collector has a present right to possession but does not intend to exercise that right.

In this latter regard, the provision is similar to FDCPA § 1692e(4) and (5). FDCPA § 1692e(4), among other things, prohibits threats that nonpayment will result in the seizure of any property where the collector does not intend to take such action. But FDCPA § 1692e(4) is also broader, and applies where the threat relates to arrest or imprisonment of any person or the seizure, garnishment, attachment, or sale of any property or wages of any person.[298] FDCPA § 1692e(5) is even broader and prohibits the "threat to take any action that cannot legally be taken or that is not intended to be taken."[299]

The repossessor's lack of intent to seize the collateral can be shown indirectly if only a minor amount is delinquent or outstanding, if the creditor has not repossessed similar collateral under similar circumstances in the past, if the debt collector has no authority to repossess the property, or if the repossessor fails to seize the collateral. Even if the collateral is eventually fact as to whether property preservation company was directed to enter the property, change the locks, and winterize it; if true, those actions would violate § 1692f(6)(A)).

---

294 See Richards v. PAR, Inc., 954 F.3d 965 (7th Cir. 2020) (reasonable jury could conclude that breach of peace occurred during repossession attempt); Rivin v. Patrick K. Willis Co., 2020 WL 8365251 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 4, 2020) (repossession company breached peace when, without permission, it entered property that was secured by locked gate and fence); Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Obradovich, 2020 WL 2767578 (N.D. Ill. May. 28, 2020) (reasonable jury could find that servicer, by telling its agent to go inside property without permission, breached peace); Gerbasi v. NU Era Towing & Serv., Inc., 443 F. Supp. 3d 411 (W.D.N.Y. 2020); Thomas v. General Motors Fin. Co., 2020 WL 8771387 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 18, 2020) (repossession agent towed vehicle with consumer inside it, thereby committing breach of peace), reconsideration denied, 2020 WL 8771383 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 30, 2020); Russell v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2019 WL 4572882 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 20, 2019), related case at 2020 WL 3077944 (E.D. Wis. June 9, 2020); O'Connell v. Pursuit, L.L.C., 2019 WL 456223 (E.D. Ky. Feb. 5, 2019); Gable v. Universal Acceptance Corp., 338 F. Supp. 3d 943 (E.D. Wis. 2018); Wright v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2018 WL 2095171, at *4–5 (M.D. Fla. May 1, 2018) (repo man displayed pistol and damaged two other cars in car owner's driveway before repossessing car); Bednarz v. Lovald, 2016 WL 6304705, at *6 (E.D. Wis. Oct. 27, 2016) (parties' "vastly different versions of events" prevented summary judgment determination as to breach of peace); Vantu v. Echo Recovery, L.L.C., 85 F. Supp. 3d 939 (N.D. Ohio 2015); Clark v. PAR, Inc., 2015 WL 13781846 (C.D. Cal. July 22, 2015) (repossessed car that was fenced in and gate was locked); Aviles v. Wayside Auto Body, Inc., 49 F. Supp. 3d 216 (D. Conn. 2014); Smith v. AFS Acceptance, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1969415 (N.D. Ill. June 1, 2012); Marcum v. Eastman Credit Union, 2012 WL 1795058 (E.D. Tenn. May 7, 2012); Yeldell v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2011 WL 13287064, at 17 (N.D. Ala. Mar. 2, 2011) (denying cross motions for summary judgment because factual dispute remained as to whether breach of peace occurred depriving creditor of its right to repossess vehicle; unreported jury verdict later entered for consumer); Williams v. Republic Recovery Services, Inc., 2010 WL 2195519 (N.D. Ill. May 27, 2010); Alexander v. Blackhawk Recovery & Investigation, L.L.C., 731 F. Supp. 2d 674 (E.D. Mich. 2010); Fleming-Dudley v. Legal Investigations, Inc., 2007 WL 952026 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 2007) (impersonating police officer); Purkett v. Key Bank, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6126 (N.D. Ill. May 9, 2001) (broke into locked garage). But see Steube v. Santander Consumer USA Inc. & Phantom Recovery L.L.C., 2020 WL 7390494, at *5 (W.D. Wis. Dec. 16, 2020) (consumer's oral protest "never any disagreement that might have escalated into a disturbance of the peace"); Akerlund v. TCF Nat'l Bank, 2001 WL 1631440 (D. Minn. June 11, 2001) (creditor had present right of possession, even though repo had breached peace by criminal trespass).

295 See Nadalin v. Auto. Recovery Bur., 169 F.3d 1084 (7th Cir. 1999); Larranaga v. Mile High Collection & Recovery Bur., Inc., 807 F. Supp. 111 (D.N.M. 1992), rev'g in part 780 F. Supp. 780 (D.N.M. 1992).

296 Leguillou v. Lynch Ford, Inc., 2000 WL 198796 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 10, 2000) (yo-yo transaction where collector was not claiming to act under security agreement).

297 See National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 4.4.4.3 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

298 See § 7.2.4, supra.

299 See § 7.2.4, supra.

repossessed, it may be a violation to imply that collateral will be seized sooner than the repossessor intends.[300]

8.6.4 Taking or Threatening to Take Exempt Property—FDCPA § 1692f(6)(C)

FDCPA § 1692f(6)(C) prohibits taking or threats to take non-judicial actions to dispossess property that is exempt by law from dispossession. FDCPA § 1692f(6)(C) differs from section 1692f(6)(A) in that it applies to any property, and not just property claimed as collateral.

This provision may apply when state law prohibits self-help repossession in certain circumstances or of certain property, such as manufactured homes. Most laws that exempt property from dispossession, however, apply to protect unsecured property from court-ordered postjudgment remedies. Such remedies, if they are in fact pursuant to a court judgment, are not non-judicial actions, and thus are outside the scope of FDCPA § 1692f(6).[301] Other FDCPA provisions do protect unlawful actions relating to postjudgment seizure or threats to seize exempt funds, wages, and property.[302] In addition, the general prohibition of unfair or unconscionable practices found in FDCPA § 1692f still applies to garnishment or other judicial actions to seize the consumer's property.[303]

8.7 FDCPA § 1692f(7): Sending Consumers a Postcard

A debt collector may not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

* * *

(7) Communicating with a consumer regarding a debt by post card.[304]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at section 1006.22(f)(1).[305]

FDCPA § 1692f(7) protects a consumer's privacy by prohibiting a collector communicating information about a debt by post card.[306]

The FTC Staff Commentary stated that "[a] debt collector does not violate this section if he sends a post card to a consumer that does not communicate the existence of the debt. However, if he had not previously disclosed that he is attempting to collect a debt, he would violate § 807(11), which requires this disclosure."[307] After that Commentary provision was drafted, the Act was amended to require identification that the communication is from a debt collector, not just in the initial communication, but in all subsequent communications.[308] Thus, any communication must disclose the existence of the debt, so that all post card communications are prohibited.

8.8 FDCPA § 1692f(8): Language and Symbols on Envelopes

8.8.1 Overview

A debt collector may not use unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt. Without limiting the general application of the foregoing, the following conduct is a violation of this section:

* * *

(8) Using any language or symbol, other than the debt collector's address, on any envelope when communicating with a consumer by use of the mails or by telegram, except that a debt collector may use his business name if such name does not indicate that he is in the debt collection business.[309]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) restates this language at section 1006.22(f)(2),[310] and provides an official interpretation of "language or symbol" that is discussed at § 8.8.2, infra.

The legislative history indicates FDCPA § 1692f(8) is intended to prohibit symbols or language on an envelope that 300 See Fed. Trade Comm'n, Informal Staff Letter from Alan D. Reffken, Att'y, Div. of Credit Practices, to W. Allan Jones, Jr., Credit Bur. of Cleveland, Inc. (Nov. 20, 1979) (available online as companion material to this treatise).

301 Thompson v. CACH, L.L.C., 2014 WL 5420137 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 24, 2014) (inapplicable to garnishment proceeding); Pate v. Law Office of Joe Pezzuto, L.L.C., 2014 WL 12586733 (C.D. Cal. June 16, 2014) (inapplicable to garnishment summons); Davis v. Nebraska Furniture Mart, Inc., 2013 WL 3854462 (D. Kan. July 24, 2013) (not applicable to judicial garnishment), aff'd on other grounds, 567 Fed. Appx. 640 (10th Cir. 2014); Gallagher v. Gurstel, Staloch & Chargo, P.A., 645 F. Supp. 2d 795 (D. Minn. 2009) (§ 1692f(6) does not apply to garnishment summons); Parker v. Wetsch & Abbott, P.L.C., 2006 WL 4846042 (S.D. Iowa July 11, 2006) (garnishment was judicial act).

302 See §§ 1692c(4), 1692e(5).

303 See, e.g., Vanhuss v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 127 F. Supp. 3d 980 (W.D. Wis. 2015); § 8.1, supra.

304 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(7). This section first appeared late in the legislative process. Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(7) (1977). See also Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(1).

305 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,834 (Nov. 30, 2020).

306 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also Gasser v. Allen Cty. Claims & Adjustment, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20361 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 2, 1983).

307 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 808(7), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

308 See § 3.4.2.3, supra.

309 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(8). This subsection first appeared late in the legislative process, although a parallel provision had existed in location information sections of earlier drafts during most of the process. Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(8) (1977). See also Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(2).

310 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,834 (Nov. 30, 2020).

indicate a debt collection purpose.[311] The statutory language can be broken down into three sections:

1. No "language or symbol" other than a return address can be indicated on the envelope.[312]
2. The prohibition is to language or symbols "on" the envelope.[313]
3. The collector's business name can be on the envelope if the name does not indicate the collector is in the debt collection business.[314]

FDCPA § 1692f(8) applies to a debt collector's "communicating with a consumer." Thus, the provision does not apply to envelopes sent to third parties, such as those containing letters seeking the consumer's location information. A court has held the provision also does not apply to a letter sent to a relative who was the representative of a decedent's estate, since that person was not a "consumer."[315] The first sentence of FDCPA § 1692f prohibits "unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect any debt," and the legislative history suggests section 1692f(8) applies only to envelopes used in the collection or the attempt of collection of a debt.[316]

Courts generally find a FDCPA § 1692f(8) violation gives a consumer federal court case or controversy standing because the consumer has suffered concrete injury[317] A more detailed discussion standing relating to FDCPA § 1692f is found at § 11.15.8, infra.

8.8.2 Language or Symbols

FDCPA § 1692f(8) prohibits the use of language or symbols on the envelope other than the collector's address. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) explains in its Official Interpretations that this prohibition does not include language or symbols that "facilitate communications by mail, such as the debtor's name and address, postage, language such as 'forwarding and address correction requested' and United States Postal Service's Intelligent Mail barcode."[318] This interpretation does not authorize the use of other barcodes, but only USPS barcodes.

Information on the envelope other than the above should be prohibited. The Fifth Circuit has found a violation where a federal student loan collector put on the envelope the Department of Education's name and address and language that the envelope was not to be used for private conversation.[319] Nevertheless, the Fifth[320] and Eighth[321] Circuits, and a number of other courts,[322] interpret FDCPA § 1692f(8) to permit "benign" language or innocuous markings on envelopes, as long as the language is not threatening or embarrassing and does not have the potential to cause an invasion of privacy. The Seventh Circuit, though, has rejected this approach, finding the language "Time Sensitive Document" on an envelope to be a violation.[323] Similarly, the Sixth Circuit has declined to read into FDCPA § 1692f(8) a "benign language" exception, finding that a letter containing a glassine window, through which were visible two unmarked checkboxes followed by "Payment in full is enclosed" and "I need to discuss this further," violated that provision.[324]

The Third Circuit has found that the disclosure of a consumer's account number on an envelope is a violation.[325] This was not "benign" or harmless language, even if such an exception were to exist, because the account number discloses information about the debt.[326] The court rejected the argument

311 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

312 See § 8.8.2, infra.

313 See § 8.8.3, infra.

314 See § 8.8.4, infra.

315 See Vullings v. Arcadia Recovery Bur., L.L.C., 2018 WL 3609085, at *3 (E.D. Pa. July 27, 2018).

316 See S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra (provision applies to collection of a debt); Fletcher, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 21, 1978) (same).

317 Donovan v. FirstCredit, Inc., 983 F.3d 246, 250–252 (6th Cir. 2020) (visible indications on letter that it was from debt collector causes harm closely related to that which forms basis of common law invasion of privacy claim; consumer has standing); DiNaples v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3773014, at *2 (3d Cir. Aug. 12, 2019) ("We explained that, because the harm involves the invasion of privacy, it "is closely related to harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English and American courts"); St. Pierre v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., 898 F.3d 351, 356 (3d Cir. 2018).

318 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 22(f)(2)-1.

319 See Peter v. GC Services L.P., 310 F.3d 344 (5th Cir. 2002).

320 See Goswami v. Am. Collections Enter., Inc., 377 F.3d 488 (5th Cir. 2004) (priority letter language on envelope).

321 Strand v. Diversified Collection Serv., Inc., 380 F.3d 316 (8th Cir. Aug. 12, 2004) (envelope indicated collection agency's initials, corporate logo, and the statements "PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL" and "IMMEDIATE REPLY REQUESTED.").

322 DeCraene v. Weber & Olcese, P.L.C., 300 F. Supp. 3d 978, 982 (W.D. Mich. 2018) (violation was benign where portion of enclosed subpoena visible through glassine window showed a "v" beside consumer's name and the words "Defendant(s)/Respondent(s)" above his name; markings and language were "benign, because they do not signal debt collection"); Belichenko v. Gem Recovery Sys., 2017 WL 6558499 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 22, 2017) (debt account number benign); Estate of Domenic Caruso v. Fin. Recoveries, 2017 WL 2704088 (D.N.J. June 22, 2017) (same); Perez v. Budget Control Services, Inc., 2017 WL 1230472 (D. Colo. Mar. 3, 2017) (same); Rodriguez v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 5415680 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2016) (same); Whyte v. Commonwealth Fin. Sys., 2016 WL 3556770 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 3545701 (E.D.N.Y. June 24, 2016) (same); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 808(8)-3 ("Personal" or "Confidential" on envelope is permitted), reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Mezines, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 15, 1983) (Western Union symbol and name); Gilbert, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 28, 1978) (minute man symbol on envelope is permissible).

323 Preston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 948 F.3d 772 (7th Cir. 2020) (statutory language is clear so there was no need to not consult legislative history or agency interpretation).

324 Donovan v. FirstCredit, Inc., 983 F.3d 246 (6th Cir. 2020).

325 Douglass v. Convergent Outsourcing, 765 F.3d 299, 303 (3d Cir. 2014).

326 See also McRobie v. Credit Prot. Ass'n, 2020 WL 1181974, at *11–12 (E.D Pa. Mar. 11, 2020) (although "client number" appeared "relatively benign," as it revealed only the identity of a creditor, court concluded that the client number pertained to plaintiff's status as a debtor and defendant's debt collection effort, and was "an unauthorized display of information that is not disconnected from McRobie's status as a debtor that the consumer's account number was a meaningless string of numbers and letters and that its disclosure had not harmed and could not possibly harm the consumer. But a number of federal district courts find a visible number on the envelope or visible through the envelope's window to be benign,[327] particularly where there is no evidence the number is linked to the consumer.[328]

The Third Circuit has found a FDCPA § 1692f(8) violation where an envelope contained a barcode ("QR" code) that, when scanned by a smart phone or other device, revealed the consumer's account number.[329] But where a bar code contains no information about the consumer,[330] or where it will be impossible for a consumer to read the bar code without the collector's proprietary software,[331] courts may find the inclusion of a bar code to be benign.

8.8.3 "On" an Envelope

The Third and Sixth Circuits have held that FDCPA § 1692f(8)'s prohibition against language and symbols on envelopes applied to markings that are visible through the transparent window of an envelope,[332] since section 1692f(8) applies to language "on any envelope." The FTC Staff Commentary has also stated: "A debt collector may not use a transparent envelope, which reveals language or symbols indicating his debt collection business, because it is the equivalent of putting information on an envelope."[333]

8.8.4 Names Indicating Sender Is a Debt Collector

FDCPA § 1692f(8) only allows use of the collector's return address on the envelope, not the debt collector's name. But the provision also states "a debt collector may use his business name if such name does not indicate that he is in the debt collection business." A collector cannot put its name on the envelope if the name contains a variant of the word "debt" or "collect" or other terms indicating the sender is in the debt collection business.[334] Thus, a debt collector's name, Judgment Enforcement Law Firm, indicates it is in the debt collection business.[335]

The factual issue of whether a company's name indicates its business is debt collection may be for the jury.[336]

Today, a quick internet search can determine that an innocuous name on an envelope is actually a debt collection firm. But courts have refused to extend the FDCPA § 1692e(8) prohibition to use of a company name where the company's website, but not its name, indicates it is a debt collector.[337]

8.9 Reg. F § 1006.22(a), (g): Language and Symbols in Emails and Texts

(g) Safe harbor for certain emails and text messages relating to the collection of a debt. A debt collector who communicates with a consumer by sending an email or text or from CPA's efforts to collect a debt"); In re ACB Receivables Mgmt., 2015 WL 5248567 (D.N.J. Sept. 9, 2015).

327 Belichenko v. Gem Recovery Sys., 2017 WL 6558499 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 22, 2017); Estate of Domenic Caruso v. Fin. Recoveries, 2017 WL 2704088 (D.N.J. June 22, 2017); Perez v. Budget Control Services, Inc., 2017 WL 1230472 (D. Colo. Mar. 3, 2017); Rodriguez v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 5415680 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2016); Whyte v. Commonwealth Fin. Sys., 2016 WL 3556770 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 3545701 (E.D.N.Y. June 24, 2016); Gardner v. Credit Mgmt. L.P., 140 F. Supp. 3d 317 (S.D.N.Y. 2015); Brooks v. Niagara Credit Solutions, Inc., 2015 WL 6828142 (D. Kan. Nov. 6, 2015); Gelinas v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 2015 WL 4639949 (W.D.N.Y. July 22, 2015); Perez v. Global Credit & Collection, Corp., 2015 WL 4557064 (S.D.N.Y. July 27, 2015); Davis v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 2015 WL 4326900 (N.D. Ill. July 15, 2015); Gonzalez v. FMS, Inc., 2015 WL 4100292 (N.D. Ill. July 6, 2015).

328 Chavez v. MCS Claim Services, Inc., 2016 WL 1171586, at *2 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 23, 2016) (refusing § 1692f(8) claim: "Plaintiff has failed to allege that the account number viewable from the glassine window contained any specific identifying information").

329 DiNaples v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 934 F.3d 275, 280 (3d Cir. Aug. 12, 2019). See also Michael v. HOVG, L.L.C., 232 F. Supp. 3d 1229 (S.D. Fla. 2017); Whyte v. Commonwealth Fin. Sys., 2016 WL 3556770 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 3545701 (E.D.N.Y. June 24, 2016); Datta v. Asset Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1070666 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 18, 2016); Styer v. Prof'l Med. Mgmt., Inc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 234 (M.D. Pa. 2015).

330 Estate of Domenic Caruso v. Fin. Recoveries, 2017 WL 2704088, at *4 (D.N.J. June 22, 2017) ("barcode . . . reveale[d] no private information regarding the deceased debtor"); Anenkova v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 201 F. Supp. 3d 631 (E.D. Pa. 2016). See also Sampson v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 117 F. Supp. 3d 1032 (N.D. Ill. 2015).

331 Kokans v. ACB Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 4638279 (D.N.J. Aug. 4, 2015).

332 Cagayat v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 952 F.3d 749 (6th Cir. 2020) ("collection bureau" was on inside of letter but bled through the paper and was visible through the glassine window); Douglass v. Convergent Outsourcing,765 F.3d 299 (3d Cir. 2014). Accord Brown v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2019 WL 7582832, at *6 (W.D. Mich. Oct. 31, 2019) (language reading "Defendant's name and address (judgment debtor)" that was visible through glassine window violated § 1692f(8): "The term 'debtor' clearly suggests the purpose of the communication, to wit: a collection action."); Adkins v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2015 WL 5731842 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2015).

333 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 808(8)-4, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

334 See Garcia v. Creditors Specialty Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 6778681 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2016); Datta v. Asset Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1070666 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 18, 2016); Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980 (N.D. Ill. 1979); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 808(8)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. But see Mathis v. Omnium Worldwide, 2006 WL 1582301 (D. Or. June 4, 2006) (use on envelope of name "Estate Recoveries, Inc.," with "Over 15 Years of Service to the Financial Industry" did not violate § 1692f(8)).

335 See Keasey v. Judgment Enforcement Law Firm, P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 1744268 (W.D. Mich. Apr. 30, 2014).

336 See Davis v. Baron's Creditors Serv. Corp., 2001 WL 1491503 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 19, 2001) (envelope's return address of "Baron's Creditor's Service Corporation" raised question of fact for jury).

337 See DeCraene v. Weber & Olcese, P.L.C., 300 F. Supp. 3d 978, 981–982 (W.D. Mich. 2018); Johnson v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 304545 (E.D. Mo. Jan. 25, 2016); Lake v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2015 WL 8770719 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 14, 2015). See also Valentine v. Unifund CCR, Inc., 2021 WL 912854 (D.N.J. Mar. 10, 2021).

message in accordance with the procedures described in § 1006.6(d)(3) does not violate paragraph (a) of this section by revealing in the email or text message the debt collector's name or other information indicating that the communication relates to the collection of a debt.[338]

Unlike the FDCPA's treatment of languages and symbols on envelopes,[339] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that it is not an unfair or unconscionable means in violation of Reg. F § 1006.22(a) to collect or attempt to collect any debt using an email or text message that reveals the debt collector's name or other information indicating that the email or text message relates to collection of a debt. This safe harbor applies only to emails and texts if in compliance with Reg. F § 1006(d)(3).[340]

The safe harbor protects the collector only from claims related to revealing of the debt collection purpose, and only protects the collector from claims brought as a violation of the general standard for unfairness and unconscionability found in Reg. F § 1006.22(a).

The safe harbor does not apply to other Reg. F. § 1006.22 violations or violations of other FDCPA provisions. For example, an email or text can still be a violation of provisions dealing with deceptive communications,[341] communications where the consumer is represented by an attorney,[342] or where the consumer has asked that email or text messages stop.[343] Nor does the safe harbor protect the collector from violating Reg. F. § 1006.22(f)(3), which limits emails sent to an address provided to the consumer by the consumer's employer.[344]

For the safe harbor to apply to an email or text, the collector must take steps to reasonably confirm and document that the email or text is sent in accordance with the procedures set out in Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3). Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) in turn references three different procedures. First, an email must comply with procedures in § 1006.6(d)(4), depending on whether the collector obtained the email address,[345] the creditor obtained the email address,[346] or a prior collector obtained the email address.[347] A text must comply with procedures in § 1006.6(d)(5).[348] In addition, for both emails and text messages, the communication must not be sent to an address or phone number that the collector knows[349] has led to a disclosure prohibited by § 1006.6(d)(1) relating to disclosure to third parties.[350]

8.10 Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(3): Emails to Employer-Provided Email Addresses

(f) Restrictions on use of certain media. A debt collector must not:

* * *

(3) Communicate or attempt to communicate with a consumer by sending an email to an email address that the debt collector knows is provided to the consumer by the consumer's employer, unless the email address is one described in § 1006.6(d)(4)(i) or (iii).[351]

The Act does not address email communications. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) defines sending certain emails to an address provided by the consumer's employer to be unfair or unconscionable.[352] Reg. F § 1006.22(3) prohibits collection communications or attempts to communicate with a consumer by sending an email to an address that the collector knows is provided to the consumer by the consumer's employer. The provision does not require that the email be in connection with collection of a debt, so applies to any email for any purpose.

The CFPB supplemental information accompanying the rule indicates the reason for the prohibition of emails to employer-provided email addresses:

> As discussed in the proposal, employers often have the right to access, and may monitor, email accounts they provide to employees. And the risks of harm to consumers from debt collectors sending messages to an employer-provided email address are particularly high because of the risk of adverse employment consequences, which can cause economic harm and exacerbate a consumer's financial distress, including by making it more difficult to satisfy outstanding financial obligations. The legislative history of the FDCPA indicates an emphasis on preventing such risks to a consumer's employment from debt collection communications.[353]

Nevertheless, the provision applies only where the collector knows the email address is provided by the consumer's employer. The CFPB rejected a "knew or should have known standard,"[354] and has even stated:

> The standard is consumer-specific; that is, a debt collector does not necessarily know that a consumer's email address is employer provided merely because the domain name for 338 Reg. F § 1006.22(g).

339 See § 8.8, supra.
340 See § 5.7.9, supra.
341 See Ch. 7, supra.
342 Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(2).
343 Reg. F § 1006.14(h).
344 See § 8.10, infra.
345 See § 5.7.9.2, supra.
346 See § 5.7.9.3, supra.
347 See § 5.7.9.4, supra.
348 See § 5.7.9.5, supra.
349 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 6(d)(3)(ii)-1 ("For purposes of § 1006.6(d)(3)(ii), a debt collector knows that sending an email to an email address or a text message to a telephone number has led to a disclosure prohibited by § 1006.6(d)(1) if any person has informed the debt collector of that fact.").
350 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3)(ii). See § 5.7, supra.
351 Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(3).
352 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,834 (Nov. 30, 2020).
353 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,835 (Nov. 30, 2020).
354 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,835 (Nov. 30, 2020).

that email address is the same as the domain name for an email address that a different consumer has told the debt collector is employer provided.[355]

In addition, Reg. F. § 1006.22(3) allows emails sent to an employer-provided address if complying with either Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(i), where the collector obtains the email address itself,[356] or Reg. F. § 1006.6(d)(4)(iii), where a prior collector obtains the email address.[357] No exception is made for compliance with Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii), where the collector obtains the email address from the creditor, because Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(E) already specifies that a creditor must use an email address that "has a domain name that is available for use by the general public, unless the debt collector knows the address is provided by the consumer's employer" when sending a notice to consumers to allow them to opt out of having their email address transferred to debt collectors.[358]

8.11 Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(4): Use of Social Media

(f) Restrictions on use of certain media. A debt collector must not:

* * *

(4) communicate or attempt to communicate with a person in connection with the collection of a debt through a social media platform if the communication or attempt to communicate is viewable by the general public or the person's social media contacts.[359]

The Act does not address collector communications via social media. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) defines certain collector communications via social media to be unfair or unconscionable.[360] Regulation F § 1006.22(f)(4) is a blanket prohibition of a debt collector communicating or attempting to communicate on social media in connection with collection of a debt where third parties in the general public can see the message. It also prohibits a debt collector from posting a message for a person on a social media web page if the person's social media contacts can see the message.[361]

The prohibition applies to communications or attempts to communicate with a "person," and thus applies to any person, even a person not alleged to owe a debt.[362] Social media is not defined in the regulations, and thus should be given its ordinary meaning.

The provision does not prohibit a collector from sending a message on social media if neither the general public nor the person's social media contacts can view the message.[363] The CFPB's supplemental information for the rule indicates that the CFPB rejected suggestions to ban such private social media messages.[364] The supplemental information also indicates that the social medium platform provider is neither the public nor a social media contact, so that the collector can send a message by social media viewable by only the consumer and the platform provider.[365]

But even if only the consumer and platform provider can view the social media message so that there is no Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(4) violation, the social media posting can still violate other statutory or regulation provisions.[366] For example, a posting can still be a violation where it communicates with a consumer represented by an attorney,[367] where the consumer has requested the collector not use that medium of communication,[368] or the communication is sent to the wrong person.[369] Sending a deceptive private message on social media also can be a violation, such as requesting to be added to the consumer's contacts without disclosing the collector's identity as a collector.[370]

8.12 Reg. § 1006.30(a): Preconditions to Furnishing Information to Reporting Agencies

(a) Required actions prior to furnishing information.

(1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2) of this section, a debt collector must not furnish to a consumer reporting agency, as defined in section 603(f) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(f)), information about a debt before the debt collector:

(i) Speaks to the consumer about the debt in person or by telephone; or

(ii) Places a letter in the mail or sends an electronic message to the consumer about the

355 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,835 (Nov. 30, 2020).

356 See § 5.7.9.2, supra.

357 See § 5.7.9.4, supra.

358 See Reg. F Official Interpretation § 22(f)(3)-1.

359 Reg. F § 1006.22(f)(4). See also Colin Hector, Federal Trade Commission, Debt collectors: You may "like" social media and texts, but are you complying with the law? (Mar. 28, 2016), available at https://www.ftc.gov; Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council, Social Media: Consumer Compliance Risk Management Guidance (Dec. 11, 2013) ("Communicating via social media in a manner that discloses the existence of a debt or to harass or embarrass consumers about their debts (e.g., a debt collector writing about a debt on a Facebook wall) or making false or misleading representations may violate the FDCPA"); Appx. B.4.2, infra.

360 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,836 (Nov. 30, 2020).

361 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 22(f)(4)-1.

362 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,839 (Nov. 30, 2020).

363 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 22(f)(4)-1.

364 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,838 (Nov. 30, 2020).

365 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,837 (Nov. 30, 2020).

366 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 22(f)(4)-1.

367 Reg. F § 1006.6(b)(2). See § 5.5, supra.

368 Reg. F § 1006.14(h). See § 6.9, supra.

369 Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(1). In contrast to emails and text messages, § 1006.6(d), discussed at § 5.7.9, supra, does not outline procedures under Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(3) that are reasonably adapted to avoid a bona fide error in sending a social media message that would result in a third-party disclosure.

370 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 18(d)-1; § 7.4.2, supra.

debt and waits a reasonable period of time to receive a notice of undeliverability. During the reasonable period, the debt collector must permit receipt of, and monitor for, notifications of undeliverability from communications providers. If the debt collector receives such a notification during the reasonable period, the debt collector must not furnish information about the debt to a consumer reporting agency until the debt collector otherwise satisfies paragraph (a)(1) of this section.

(2) Special rule—information furnished to certain specialty consumer reporting agencies. Paragraph (a)(1) of this section does not apply to a debt collector's furnishing of information about a debt to a nationwide specialty consumer reporting agency that compiles and maintains information on a consumer's check writing history, as described in section 603(x)(3) of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681a(x)(3)).[371]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) prohibits so-called "passive collections" or "parking" a debt on a credit report. Both terms refer to the practice of a debt collector furnishing to a consumer reporting agency (CRA)[372] information regarding a debt before communicating with the consumer about the debt. The CFPB considers this practice both as an unfair or unconscionable means to collect a debt in violation of FDCPA § 1692f and as conduct the natural consequence of which is to harass, oppress, or abuse in violation of FDCPA § 1692d.[373]

The CFPB explained this in the rule's supplemental information:

> [C]onsumers who have not been informed about the debt are likely to be unaware that they have a debt in collection unless they obtain and review their consumer report. In turn, many consumers may not obtain their consumer reports until they apply for credit, housing, employment, or another product or service provided by an entity that reviews consumer reports during the application process. At that point, consumers may feel pressure to pay debts that they otherwise would dispute, including debts they do not owe, or may face the denial of an application, a higher interest rate, or other negative consequences.

Reg. F. § 1006.30(a) prohibits a debt collector from furnishing information about a debt to a CRA until the collector first contacts the consumer, in person, by telephone, by a mailed letter, or electronic message.[374] The contact to the consumer must contain information about the debt, such as the validation information found in a validation notice.[375] The information must be sent to the person who owes or allegedly owes the debt, and not to the consumer's spouse, parent (if the consumer is a minor), or legal guardian.[376]

If the communication is by letter or electronic message, the collector must wait a reasonable time to make sure the message is delivered, and then monitor for non-deliveries. A period of fourteen consecutive days after the date that the debt collector places a letter in the mail or sends an electronic message is a reasonable time period.[377]

If there is evidence that the message was not delivered during that reasonable period of time, the collector cannot furnish information to a CRA until it attempts to contact the consumer again.[378] After waiting a reasonable period of time after the subsequent attempted contact, monitoring for undeliverability, and receiving no such evidence, the collector does not violate the provision if it furnishes the information to a CRA,[379] even if it subsequently discovers the message was not delivered,[380] and even after that subsequent discovery continues to furnish information to a CRA.[381]

Reg. F § 1006.30(a) requirements do not apply where the collector reports information to a specialized CRA that compiles and maintains files on consumers on a nationwide basis relating to check-writing history.[382] Examples of such check verification CRAs are ChexSystems, Certegy SCAN, and TeleCheck.

8.13 Reg. F § 1006.30(b): Sale or Placement for Collection of Cancelled Debt

8.13.1 Overview

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) outlines certain prohibited practices, including:

> (b) Prohibition on the sale, transfer for consideration, or placement for collection of certain debts—
>
> (1) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(2) of this section, a debt collector must not sell, transfer for consideration, or place for collection a debt if the debt collector knows or should know that the debt has been paid or settled or discharged in bankruptcy.[383]

371 Reg. F § 1006.30(a).
372 A consumer reporting agency is defined at 15 U.S.C. 1681a(f).
373 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5783 (Jan. 19, 2021).
374 Reg. F § 1006.30(a)(1).
375 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(a)(1)-1.
376 86 Fed. Reg. 5766, 5784 (Jan. 19, 2021).
377 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(a)(1)-2.
378 Reg. F § 1006.30a(1)(ii). See also Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(a)(1)-3(i).
379 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(a)(1)-3(ii).
380 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(a)(1)-3.
381 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(a)(1)-3(iii).
382 Reg. F § 1006.30(a)(2) referencing the definition found at 15 U.S.C. 1681a(x)(3). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 2.6.2.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.
383 Reg. F § 1006.30b(1).

The CFPB has stated in the rule's supplemental information that it enacted Reg. F section 1006.30(b)(1) to prohibit unfair or unconscionable practices:

> The Bureau has determined that the sale, transfer for consideration, or placement for collection of a debt that a debt collector knows or should know has been paid or settled or discharged in bankruptcy constitutes an unfair or unconscionable means to collect or attempt to collect the debt under FDCPA section 808 because consumers do not owe or cannot legally be subject to collections on alleged debts that have been paid or settled or discharged in bankruptcy, and yet the debt collector receives or expects to receive compensation for the sale, transfer, or placement of such debt.[384]

The regulation provides that, with five exceptions discussed at § 8.13.2, infra, a debt collector must not sell, transfer for consideration, or place for collection a debt if the debt collector knows or should know that the debt:

- Has been paid;
- Has been settled; or
- Has been discharged in bankruptcy.

The rule's supplemental information indicates that the CFPB declined to extend the provision to other forms of debt, such as time-barred debt, disputed debt, debt lacking ownership documentation, debt subject to litigation, debt in which the consumer has an uncompleted settlement agreement, or other types of debt.[385] On the other hand, the supplemental information states: "[i]t clearly is an unfair or unconscionable practice under FDCPA section 808 [§ 1692f] for a debt collector to sell, transfer for consideration, or place for collection a debt that the debt collector knows or should know has been extinguished pursuant to State law or is counterfeit or fictitious."[386]

Reg. F § 1006.30(b) overlaps with, but in no way limits the Fair Credit Reporting Act provision[387] prohibiting any person from selling, transferring for consideration, or placing for collection a debt if a consumer reporting agency (CRA) has first notified the person who might sell, transfer, or place for collection the debt[388] that the debt resulted from identity theft.[389]

A debt collector transfers a debt for consideration when the debt collector receives or expects to receive compensation for the transfer of the debt.[390] The transfer refers to a transfer of ownership and not just for a transfer of information about the debt, such as transfer of data about the debt to another person for analytics, "scrubbing," or archiving.[391] A debt collector also does not transfer a debt for consideration when it furnishes information to a CRA that the debt has been paid or settled or discharged in bankruptcy.[392] "Placement for collection" should refer to a debt buyer placing the debt with a collection agency or collection attorney, or a collection agency placing the debt with another collection agency or a collection attorney.

The CFPB in the rule's supplemental information explained the adoption of the "knows or should know" standard as to the debt being paid, settled, or discharged in bankruptcy:

> As to concerns about the breadth of the "know or should know" language, the Bureau notes that the prohibition in § 1006.30(b)(1) is limited to specific account circumstances. These account circumstances will, in general, be within the debt collector's ability to know or obtain the necessary knowledge. For example, whether a debt has been paid or settled is a fact that a debt collector knows or should know because it should be within the debt collector's account management system. Although bankruptcy may not be within the debt collector's own system in the same manner as paid or settled debts, a debt collector should be able to utilize a commercial database or publicly available records to reasonably assess whether a debt has been discharged in bankruptcy. Because of the limited nature of the transfer ban as finalized, the Bureau believes the "know or should know" standard is appropriate but will monitor this issue for any potential consumer harm or compliance concerns and revisit at a later time if needed.[393]

8.13.2 Exceptions

(2) Exceptions—

(i) In general. A debt collector may transfer for consideration a debt described in paragraph (b)(1) of this section if the debt collector:

(A) Transfers the debt to the debt's owner;

(B) Transfers the debt to a previous owner of the debt, if the transfer is authorized under the terms of the original contract between the debt collector and the previous owner; or

(C) Transfers the debt as a result of a merger, acquisition, purchase and assumption transaction, or a transfer of substantially all of the debt collector's assets.

(ii) Secured claims in bankruptcy. A debt collector may sell, transfer for consideration, or place for collection a debt that has been discharged in bankruptcy if the debt is secured by an enforceable lien and the debt collector notifies the transferee that the consumer's personal liability for the debt was discharged in bankruptcy.

384 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,841 (Nov. 30, 2020).
385 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,841 (Nov. 30, 2020).
386 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,842 (Nov. 30, 2020).
387 15 U.S.C. 1681m(f)(1). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 9.2.4.2.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library. Note that due to a scrivener's error, there is no private right of action for violations of this provision. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 8.5.5 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.
388 15 U.S.C. § 1681c-2.
389 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(b)(1)-2.
390 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(b)(1)-1.
391 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(b)(1)-1.
392 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(b)(1)-1.
393 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,841 (Nov. 30, 2020) (footnotes omitted).

(iii) Securitizations and pledges of debt. Paragraph (b)(1) of this section does not prohibit the securitization of a debt or the pledging of a portfolio of debt as collateral in connection with a borrowing.[394]

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides five exceptions to the prohibition on the sale, transfer or placement of debts that are paid, settled, or discharged in bankruptcy at section 1006.30(b)(2). The debt collector can transfer the debt to the debt's owner,[395] but not to another entity on behalf of the debt owner.[396] The collector can transfer the debt to a previous owner if authorized by a contract between the previous owner and the collector.[397] The debt transfer can also be the result of a merger, acquisition, purchase and assumption transaction, or a transfer of substantially all of the debt collector's assets.[398] These three exceptions all relate to transfer for consideration, and do not authorize sales or placement for collection of debts in these three situations.[399]

When a secured debt is discharged in bankruptcy, the personal obligation is discharged, but the secured creditor retains the right to foreclose on the security if the debt is not paid, as modified by the bankruptcy proceeding. In this case, the collector can sell, transfer for consideration, or place for collection such a debt, but only if the collector notifies the transferee that the consumer's personal liability for the debt was discharged in bankruptcy.[400]

In addition, the debt can be sold, transferred for consideration, or placed for collection as part of a securitization of the debt or the pledging of a portfolio of debt as collateral in connection with a borrowing.[401]

394 Reg. F § 1006.30(b)(2).
395 Reg. F § 1006.30(b)(2)(i)(A).
396 Reg. F Official Interpretation § 30(b)(2)-1.
397 Reg. F § 1006.30(b)(2)(i)(B).
398 Reg. F § 1006.30(b)(2)(i)(C).
399 Reg. F § 1006.30(b)(2)(i), as discussed at 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,842 (Nov. 30, 2020).
400 Reg. F § 1006.30(b)(2)(ii). See § 13.7.2.7, infra.
401 Reg. F § 1006.30(b)(2)(iii).

Chapter 9 Validation Notices, Disputes, and Verification, FDCPA § 1692g

9.1 Introduction

This chapter discusses the specific requirements the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) imposes on debt collectors under 15 U.S.C. § 1692g, as well as related provisions under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021).[1] FDCPA § 1692g requires debt collectors to provide notice to consumers of their rights to dispute a debt and to obtain verification of the debt when the consumer requests it in writing.[2] This is intended to minimize instances of mistaken identity of a debtor, mistakes over the amount or existence of a debt, or similar errors.[3]

The rights and obligations established by FDCPA § 1692g were considered by the Senate to be a "significant feature" of the Act.[4] The rise of the debt buying industry,[5] with a model of not obtaining business records and documentation for the debts they purchase, makes this provision even more important to consumers and the integrity of our civil court system.[6] It is an informal method of dispute resolution that potentially conserves tax dollars and judicial resources.

FDCPA § 1692g is a strict liability provision; an unintentional violation of its requirements violates the Act,[7] unless the debt collector successfully establishes a bona fide error defense.[8] The provision applies to all covered "debt collectors."[9] It should be construed to protect unsophisticated consumers.[10] Courts have inferred that a deceptive statement must be "material" to violate another FDCPA provision, section 1692e. However, several courts have held that materiality is not a requirement of FDCPA § 1692g.

Another federal statute, the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (RESPA), may provide even greater rights to consumers to determine the charges and payments on their mortgages.[11] The Fair Credit Reporting Act may also provide strong remedies for disputes that involve an inaccurate credit report.[12]

In any FDCPA case—including those based on section 1692g—the consumer must be prepared to show that the matter presents a case or controversy as defined by Article III of the Constitution. To meet this standard, the FDCPA violation must have caused the consumer a harm—or a "risk of real harm"—that is both concrete and particularized. Constitutional standing is discussed in detail in § 11.15, infra. The particular application of these standards to claims under FDCPA § 1692g is discussed in § 11.15.6, infra.

9.2 When Validation Notice Must Be Given

9.2.1 Meaning of "Initial Communication"

> NOTICE OF DEBT; CONTENTS.—Within five days after the initial communication with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector shall, unless the following information is contained in the initial communication or the consumer has paid the debt, send the consumer a written notice . . .[13]

1 12 C.F.R. Part 1006.

2 15 U.S.C. § 1692g. See Appx. E.2.6, infra.

3 "This provision will eliminate the recurring problem of debt collectors dunning the wrong person or attempting to collect debts which the consumer has already paid." S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 797 F.3d 219, 221 (2d Cir. 2015) ("A particular goal of Congress was to address 'the recurring problem of debt collectors dunning the wrong person or attempting to collect debts which the consumer has already paid.'"); Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008). See also Udell, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 20, 1987).

4 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

5 See § 1.3.4, supra.

6 See LHR, Inc. v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., 930 N.Y.S.2d 731 (N.Y. App. Div. 2011) (holding creditor had no duty under FDCPA to preserve and retain its underlying documents necessary to verify debts in debt buyer's suit against original creditor for breach of contract and other claims).

7 See Russell v. Equifax A.R.S., 74 F.3d 30, 36 (2d Cir. 1996) ("Once it is shown that defendant sent the February and March notices and that they failed to fulfill the [§ 1692g] requirements of the Act, strict liability is imposed."). See also Anderson v. Credit Bur. Collection Services, Inc., 422 Fed. Appx. 534 (7th Cir. 2011) (FDCPA is strict-liability statute, and consumer is entitled to sue to enforce its provisions, even "highly technical" ones like notice requirement and prohibition against sharing personal information with third parties; requiring proof of injury would run afoul of statutory scheme); Ellis v. Solomon and Solomon, P.C., 591 F.3d 130, 135 (2d Cir. 2011); Booth v. Collection Experts, Inc., 969 F. Supp. 1161 (E.D. Wis. 1997); § 3.2.4, supra.

8 See § 12.2, infra.

9 Kelly, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Oct. 16, 1978). See also Stewart, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 5, 1993); Zager, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 10, 1992).

10 See § 3.2.1, supra. See also Riccio v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 954 F.3d 582, 594 (3d Cir. 2020) ("A hypothetical 'least sophisticated debtor' should be able to read the notice and reasonably discern her rights."); Garcia-Contreras v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 775 F. Supp. 2d 808 (M.D.N.C. 2011).

11 12 U.S.C. § 2605(e). See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Servicing and Loan Modifications Ch. 3 (2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

12 See § 14.6, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 6 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 7.9 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library (credit card billing error dispute rights).

13 15 U.S.C. 1692g(a). See also Reg. F § 1006.34(a).

Under FDCPA § 1692g(a) debt collectors do not need to provide a validation notice until there is an "initial communication"[14] from the debt collector to the consumer.[15] The validation notice must be provided in the initial communication or sent in writing within five days of the initial communication,[16] unless the consumer pays the debt before the expiration of the five-day period.[17]

The critical issue then becomes what qualifies as an initial communication in connection with the collection of any debt. Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) defines initial communication as "the first time that, in connection with the collection of a debt, a debt collector conveys information, directly or indirectly, regarding the debt to the consumer."[18]

Subsection 9.2.2, infra, describes certain communications that are not initial communications, but otherwise almost any communication to collect a debt can be an initial communication. For example, a letter making only an implicit demand for payment can be an initial communication.[19] An initial communication can be one the consumer initiates.[20]

The Seventh Circuit has found that a collector sending an email indicating that it is a secure message and that the consumer should click a link to view a secure package is not an initial communication where the consumer does not click the link that would eventually lead to a validation notice. Instead, the collector must provide the validation notice in a subsequent communication. The text of the email did not reference the debt, and the link itself provided only a "digital pathway to access the required information."[21]

9.2.2 Exclusions from "Initial Communication"

The FDCPA was amended in 2006[22] to add section 1692g(d), stating that "[a] communication in the form of a formal pleading in a civil action shall not be treated as an initial communication for purposes of subsection (a)."[23]

As a result, a formal legal pleading is not a communication triggering the obligation to provide the validation notice, postponing the requirement to provide the notice until a later communication.[24] The term "formal pleading" is not defined,[25] but it would ordinarily include complaints, answers, and counterclaims.[26]

Providing the validation notice in or with a summons and complaint may be confusing for consumers,[27] but this is not 14 See § 1692a(2) (defining "communication"); § 4.2, supra.

15 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a). See, e.g., Clark v. Shapiro & Pickett, L.L.P., 452 Fed. Appx. 890 (11th Cir. 2012) (HUD-required letter to occupants of dwelling in foreclosure informing them of how to apply to remain in dwelling was not "initial communication with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt"); O'Connell v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1069079 (E.D. Wis. 2016) (account transfer notification sent by servicer did not trigger notice obligations under § 1692g(a)); Jackson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 128 F. Supp. 3d 980 (E.D. Mich. 2015) (consumer's call to collection law firm to inquire about fax sent to her employer was not communication that triggered § 1692g obligation where firm confirmed identifying information, but refused to discuss debt); Zarichny v. Complete Payment Recovery Services, Inc., 80 F. Supp. 3d 610 (E.D. Pa. 2015) (initial communication was prerecorded message requesting call back); Thompson v. BAC Home Loans Serv., L.P., 2010 WL 1286747 (N.D. Ind. 2010) (notice informing consumer that his mortgage loan was transferred to new servicer was not made "in connection with the collection of any debt" and thus "it was not a communication that triggered the requirement to send a verification notice"); Robinson v. TSYS Total Debt Mgmt., Inc., 447 F. Supp. 2d 502 (D. Md. 2006) (collector's request for collection probability score from credit reporting agency not communication with consumer); Acosta v. Campbell, 2006 WL 146208 (M.D. Fla. 2006) (no obligation to disclose right to dispute debt prior to filing suit). But cf. Berberyan v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1136525 (C.D. Cal. 2013) (letter sent in response to plaintiff's inquiry about item on her credit report did not serve as "initial communication" with consumer in connection with collection of a debt for purposes of § 1692g; debt collector must do something more than allegedly place notice of disputed debt on plaintiff's credit report to trigger its disclosure duties).

16 Caceres v. McCalla Raymer, L.L.C., 755 F.3d 1299 (11th Cir. 2014); Allen v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 5412654 (N.D. Ill. 2012) (five-day period means calendar days, not business days). See Allen v. Checkredi of Kentucky, L.L.C., 2010 WL 4791947 (E.D. Ky. 2010) (defendant violated § 1692g(a); rejecting defendant's excuse that it sent first written notice late because plaintiff refused to provide their correct address). See also Phillips v. N. Am. Capital Corp., 1999 WL 299872 (N.D. Ill. 1999); Reg. F § 1006.34(a)(1).

17 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a) (first sentence). See also Reg. F 1006.34(a)(2); Gingiloski v. Commercial Recovery Services, 2017 WL 2334946 (E.D. Mich. May 30, 2017).

18 Reg. F §. 1006.34(b)(2). The full definition contains exclusions, which are discussed in § 9.2.2, infra.

19 Caceres v. McCalla Raymer, L.L.C., 755 F.3d 1299 (11th Cir. 2014). See also Geary v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1286347 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 20, 2015).

20 See Vu v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 293 F.R.D. 343 (E.D.N.Y. 2013).

21 Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 932 F.3d 1049, 1056 (7th Cir. 2019).

22 See § 3.4.2.4, supra.

23 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(d). See also Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(2).

24 Pub. L. No. 109-351, § 802(a), 120 Stat. 2006 (Oct. 13, 2006). See Carlin v. Davidson Fink L.L.P., 852 F.3d 207, 213 (2d Cir. 2017); Cruz v. Fin. Recoveries, 2016 WL 3545322 (D.N.J. 2016) (no § 1692g claim where communications involved legal pleadings); Lane v. Fein, Such & Crane, L.L.P., 767 F. Supp. 2d 382 (E.D.N.Y. 2011) (only communication from debt collector was a § 1692g(d) exempt "formal pleading").

25 See Townsend v. Quantum3 Group, L.L.C., 535 B.R. 415 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (proofs of claim filed in bankruptcy proceeding qualified as "formal pleadings" made in connection with legal action that did not trigger § 1692g notice).

26 See Wood v. Lerner Sampson & Rothfuss, 2014 WL 4249785 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 27, 2014) (foreclosure suit was formal pleading); Sebrow v. Fein, Such, Kahn, & Shephard, P.C., 2010 WL 4553559 (D.N.J. Nov. 1, 2010) (foreclosure complaint formal pleading); Hill v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 574 F. Supp. 2d 819 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 2008) (since summons/complaint need not contain statutory notices, court dismissed plaintiff's complaint based on failure to give notices); Black's Law Dictionary (8th ed. 2004) ("pleading").

27 See Veness v. Heywood, Cari & Anderson, S.C., 2017 WL 6759382 (W.D. Wis. 2017) (granting motion for preliminary approval of class action settlement agreement in case alleging that serving validation notice with summons and complaint is likely to confuse consumers about when and how they need to respond to complaint). But see Edstrom-Smith v. Kass Shuler, P.A., 680 Fed. Appx. 813 (11th Cir. 2017).

specifically prohibited by FDCPA § 1692g.[28] The best and simplest collection industry practice is to provide the validation notice well before initiating litigation.[29] In addition to diminishing confusion, this allows the collector to hear and evaluate the consumer's defenses to and disputes of the debt collector's claim before the debt collector invests in drafting a debt collection suit and pays court filing and service fees.[30]

The Second Circuit[31] held that a document attached to a state foreclosure complaint that stated the consumer's FDCPA § 1692g(a) verification rights was not an initial communication triggering the disclosure requirement, because the document was part of a formal pleading that was exempted by FDCPA § 1692g(d). The Second Circuit later held that required documents filed separately with a foreclosure complaint are also not initial communications.[32]

A lower court held that an unfiled "courtesy copy" of the lawsuit was not an initial communication, but was instead an exempt "formal pleading." However, because the cover letter that accompanied the exempt formal pleading could have been an initial communication, the court refused to dismiss the FDCPA § 1692g(a) claim.[33] The Eleventh Circuit held that a letter was an initial communication and not a pleading, despite the fact that it contained a case caption.[34]

The Official Interpretations to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provide that: "A proof of claim that a debt collector files in a bankruptcy proceeding in accordance with the requirements of the United States Bankruptcy Code (Title 11 of the U.S. Code) is a communication in the form of a formal pleading in a civil action and therefore is not an initial communication for purposes of [Reg. F] § 1006.34."[35] Regulation F though does not exclude other communications in the consumer's bankruptcy proceeding from the definition of an initial communication,[36] although a court prior to the Regulation's enactment held that a motion to lift the automatic stay is a formal pleading and not an "initial communication."[37]

Also added by the 2006 amendments was another exception to the initial communication rule, contained at FDCPA § 1692g(e), which states:

> (e) NOTICE PROVISIONS.—The sending or delivery of any form or notice which does not relate to the collection of a debt and is expressly required by the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, title V of Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, or any provision of Federal or State law relating to notice of data security breach or privacy, or any regulation prescribed under any such provision of law, shall not be treated as an initial communication in connection with debt collection for purposes of this section.[38]

This exception though states that it only applies if the notice does not otherwise relate to the collection of a debt and the notice is expressly required by the applicable law.

Where a Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act notice misrepresented the consumer's FDCPA § 1692c(b) privacy protections, it was deceptive, violating the FDCPA.[39] Under those circumstances the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act notice may not be "expressly required," and then would not be not exempt under FDCPA § 1692g(e) from being an initial communication.[40] A notice required by RESPA[41] does not qualify as one of the three types of legal notices described in FDCPA § 1692g(e) and may be an initial communication triggering section 1692g rights.[42] The Regulation F supplemental information explicitly declines to exclude mortgage servicing transfer notices from the definition of an initial communication.[43]

A collector leaving a voice mail that meets all the requirements of a limited-contact message found in Reg. F § 1006.2(j) is not a communication under Reg. F,[44] and thus is not an initial communication under Reg. F that triggers the validation notice requirement.[45]

9.2.3 Validation Notice Where Consumer Is Deceased

The Official Interpretations to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provide that if the debt collector knows or 28 See Edstrom-Smith v. Kass Shuler, P.A., 680 Fed. Appx. 813 (11th Cir. 2017) (nothing in § 1692g prohibits providing § 1692g notice in pleading).

29 Ellis v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 591 F.3d 130 (2d Cir. 2010). See also Hodges v. Sasil Corp., 915 A.2d 1 (N.J. 2007) (court convened bar committee to harmonize N.J. summary process procedure and FDCPA debt verification rights).

30 See §§ 9.7.7, 9.8.3, infra.

31 Carlin v. Davidson Fink L.L.P., 852 F.3d 207, 213 (2d Cir. 2017) ("[Congress] adopted a broad exclusion that, on its face, applies to any communication forming any part of a pleading. Such an exclusion naturally extends to exhibits attached to a complaint . . .").

32 Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75, 88 (2d Cir. 2018) (request for judicial intervention and certificate of merit documents are not initial communications).

33 See Nikkel v. Wakefield & Assoc., Inc, 2011 WL 4479109 (D. Colo. Sept. 26, 2011).

34 Caceres v. McCalla Raymer, L.L.C., 755 F.3d 1299 (11th Cir. 2014).

35 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 1006.34(b)(2)-1.

36 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5791 (Jan. 19, 2021).

37 Styrczula v. Pierce & Assoc., 2014 WL 5420272 (N.D. Ill. 2014).

38 Added by Pub. L. No. 109-351, § 802(b), 120 Stat. 2006 (Oct. 13, 2006). See § 3.4.2.4, supra. See also Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(2).

39 See Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009); Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007) (Gramm-Leach-Bliley notice's reservation of defendants' right to disclose debtor's information unless debtor opted out constituted false representation of debtor's rights, in violation of § 1692e(10)); Blair v. Sherman Acquisition, 2004 WL 2870080 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 13, 2004) (if Gramm-Leach-Bliley notice was communication in effort to collect debt, requiring consumers to affirmatively notify Sherman that they do not want their information shared is misstatement of consumers' Gramm-Leach-Bliley privacy rights that violated § 1692e(5), (10)).

40 Cf. Miller v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 528796 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (certifying class on raising issue).

41 12 U.S.C. § 2605 (Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act).

42 See Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 797 F.3d 2.9 (2d Cir. 2015).

43 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5791 (Jan. 19, 2021).

44 Reg F Official Interpretations § 2(d)-2.

45 See § 4.9, supra.

should know that the consumer is deceased, and if the debt collector has not previously provided the validation information to the deceased consumer, then a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate operates as the consumer for purposes of the validation information requirements.[46] In the initial communication or within five days, the validation information must be provided.

The debt collector must provide the validation information to an individual that the debt collector identifies by name who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate.[47] It cannot send the notice to the "estate of":

> The Bureau declines to adopt the suggestion to allow mortgage servicers to address a validation notice to the deceased consumer or to "the estate of" the deceased consumer. As discussed in the proposal, the Bureau shares the view of the FTC, which stated in its Policy Statement on Decedent Debt that individuals who lack the authority to resolve the estate but who wish to be helpful are likely to open communications addressed to the decedent's estate, or to an unnamed executor or administrator, which makes such communications insufficiently targeted to a consumer with whom the debt collector may generally discuss the debt. The Bureau, therefore, shares the view of the FTC that "communication[s] addressed to the decedent's estate, or an unnamed executor or administrator, [are] location communication[s] and must not refer to the decedent's debts." Accordingly, comment 34(a)(1)-1 specifies that a debt collector must provide the validation information to an individual that the debt collector identifies by name who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate.[48]

9.2.4 Each Debt Collector Must Send the Notice

The weight of authority requires each debt collector to send a validation notice.[49] In a comprehensive opinion in Hernandez v. Williams, Zinman & Parham P.C., the Ninth Circuit held that "the FDCPA unambiguously requires each debt collector—first or subsequent—to send a § 1692g(a) validation notice within five days of its first communication with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt."[50] Any other approach would allow easy avoidance of the dispute resolution approach in FDCPA § 1692g that Congress deemed a "significant feature" of the FDCPA.[51]

However, a series of lower court decisions have ignored this rule and declared that only the first debt collector involved in collecting a debt must comply with FDCPA § 1692g.[52]

The cases requiring each collector to send a validation notice fit the realities of debt collection practice. Many creditors employ a low-cost, flat-rate, letter-only collection agency as the initial debt collector. That collector would send the FDCPA § 1692g validation notice, but stop sending collection letters if the

46 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(a)(1)-1.

47 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(a)(1)-1.

48 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5774 (Jan. 19, 2021) (footnotes omitted).

49 See Hernandez v. Williams, Zinman & Parham P.C., 829 F.3d 1068 (9th Cir. 2016); Sanchez v. Jackson, 2016 WL 6833974 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (attorney debt collector acting as agent on behalf of another debt collector must provide his own § 1692g notice listing himself, not his client, as entity providing verification or name of original creditor); Tocco v. Real Time Resolutions, Inc., 48 F. Supp. 3d 535, 539 (S.D.N.Y. 2014); Lewis v. Nationstar Mortg., 5 F. Supp. 3d 890 (E.D. Mich. 2014); Robinson v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2012 WL 5596421 (S.D. Ohio 2012) ("It is implausible to think that Congress, concerned with 'dunning the wrong person,' would limit disclosure requirements to a narrow range of debt collectors—those that are the first to seek recovery on a given debt. Instead, an interpretation that requires all debt collectors to comply with the validation and disclosure requirements best promotes the goal of protecting consumers."); Stair v. Thomas & Cook, 254 F.R.D. 191, 197 (D.N.J. 2008); Goray v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 4260017, at *8 (D. Haw. 2007); Nichols v. Byrd, 435 F. Supp. 2d 1101, 1106–1107 (D. Nev. 2006); Turner v. Shenandoah Legal Group, P.C., 2006 WL 1685698 (E.D. Va. 2006) (collection attorney required to provide notice); Senftle v. Landau, 390 F. Supp. 2d 463, 475 (D. Md. 2005); Tipping-Lipshie v. Riddle, 2000 WL 339639167 (E.D.N.Y. 2000) (prior collection agency. See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 809(a)-7, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra (collection agency employee not required to provide another § 1692g notice if employer has already provided one; collection agency's lawyer is required to provide validation notice when debt collection begins); Durham v. Continental Cent. Credit, 2010 WL 2776088 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (second notice required because of great amount of time and possibility that debts were different); Weiss v. Zwicker & Assoc., 664 F. Supp. 2d 214 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (no duty to provide new disclosures regarding increased balance); Thomas v. Law Firm of Simpson & Cybak, 2001 WL 1516746 (N.D. Ill. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 392 F.3d 914 (7th Cir. 2004); § 9.4.1, infra.

50 829 F.3d 1068, 1080 (9th Cir. 2016). See also Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1176 (9th Cir. 2006). But see Laak v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2017 WL 6559909 (E.D. Wash. 2017) (distinguishing and misunderstanding Hernandez; granting summary judgment for collection attorney for failing to send § 1692g(a) notice within five days of serving consumer with garnishment papers, as agent for principal, Quick Collect, which had long before provided verification disclosure and obtained default judgment).

51 See § 9.2.1, supra.

52 See Eilert v. Turner, 2016 WL 1529914 (S.D. Tex. 2016); Moore v. Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., 2013 WL 1773647 (D.N.H. 2013); Martin v. Gordon & Weinberg, P.C., 2013 WL 11246900 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 28, 2013); Lee v. Cohen McNeile & Pappas, P.C., 2012 WL 2449857 (D. Kan. 2012) ("[Section] 1962g imposes an obligation on the initial debt collector to supply validation of the debt. It does not require separate validation by successive debt collectors."), aff'd, 520 Fed. Appx. 649 (10th Cir. 2013); Waters v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 1344452 (D. Mass. Mar. 4, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 1344544 (D. Mass. 2011) (acknowledging issue as "close call"); Marshall v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 2011 WL 345988, at *5 (E.D. Ark. 2011), aff'd, 445 Fed. Appx. 900 (8th Cir. 2011); Oppong v. First Union Mortg., 566 F. Supp. 2d 395, 403–404 (E.D. Pa. 2008), aff'd, 326 Fed. Appx. 663 (3d Cir. 2009); Goray v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 4260017 (D. Haw. Dec. 4, 2007); Worch v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 477 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (E.D. Mo. 2007); Nichols v. Byrd, 435 F. Supp. 2d 1101, 1106 (D. Nev. 2006); Thomas v. Law Firm of Simpson & Cybak, 2001 WL 1516746, at *3–4 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 28, 2001) (Coar, J.), rev'd on other grounds, 392 F.3d 914 (7th Cir. 2004); Senftle v. Landau, 390 F. Supp. 2d 463, 473 (D. Md. 2005); Ditty v. CheckRite, 973 F. Supp. 1320, 1329 (D. Utah 1997); Donohue v. Nielson, 255 P.3d 760 (Wash. Ct. App. 2011). See also Weinstein v. Fink, 2001 WL 185194, at *7 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (where collection agency had provided consumer verification, creditor's lawyer validation notice was not required in order to comply with § 1692g(a)).

consumer disputed the debt, since the flat-rate collector would generally not be retained to address disputes.[53] If the creditor then referred the account to a contingent-fee, full-service debt collector or collection lawyer or debt buyer, all common practices, the second debt collector would have no obligation under FDCPA § 1692g to address the consumer's dispute, and the consumer's dispute would most likely not be addressed.

In a slight twist on this theme, a lower court held that where a debt buyer did not directly engage in debt collection activities, but hired a debt collection agency to do the collection work, the agency's validation notice, which named the debt buyer as the creditor, satisfied the FDCPA § 1692g(a) obligations for both.[54] A different lower court found that where a collection law firm changed its name, and explained that change to the consumer, the new firm was not required to send a new FDCPA § 1692g(a) notice.[55]

A debt collector may only be required to send one notice regarding a debt, even if the collection is spread over time.[56] Moreover, a collector can send a single validation notice for multiple debts it seeks to collect from a consumer.[57]

A debt collector may be required to send a validation notice to each person alleged to be responsible for the debt.[58] A collector who fails to properly provide the validation notice violates the FDCPA.[59] Notice should be sent after judgment, if that is when a collector begins to collect a debt.[60] A consumer reporting agency must provide the notice if it acts as a debt collector.[61]

53 A debt collector has the option under FDCPA § 1692g(b) of verifying the debt or discontinuing its collection of the debt. See § 9.8.1, infra.

54 See May v. NCEP, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2009081 (E.D. Mo. 2014).

55 Heffington v. Gordon, Aylworth & Tami, P.C., 2017 WL 6626317 (D. Or. 2017).

56 See Townsend v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2013 WL 5595932 (W.D. Va. 2013); Tapia v. Nevada Ass'n Services, Inc., 2013 WL 1104429 (D. Nev. 2013).

57 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(viii)-4 (discussing itemization requirements for collectors that combine multiple debts on single validation notice); Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(ix)-2 (discussing representation of sum owed when collecting multiple debts with single validation notice); Wilkins v. Accounts Receivable Res., Inc., 2016 WL 6805303 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 17, 2016) (§ 1692g notice regarding several bills was not confusing). See also 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5806 (Jan. 19, 2021) ("Some debt collectors may have legitimate reasons to combine multiple debts on a single validation notice.").

58 See Fooks v. Heritage Payment Recovery, 2015 WL 4393903 (M.D. Pa. 2015). See also Peterson v. Meyer, 2016 WL 5249219 (N.D. Ind. 2016). But see Molesky v. State Collection & Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 5746835 (N.D. Ohio 2015) (where validation notices for three debts had been sent addressed to consumer/wife at address where she and her husband resided, finding no violation of § 1692g(a) in later adding husband to their dunning letters, without providing him his own validation notice, as he could be responsible for his wife's medical bills).

59 See cases summarized at Appx. E.2.6.5, infra. See also Betskoff v. Cosby, 2013 WL 4587634 (D. Md. 2013); Beal, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 22, 1987).

60 Frey v. Gangwish, 970 F.2d 1516 (6th Cir. 1992); Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988).

61 Sutton, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Oct. 23, 1986).

9.3 Delivery of Validation Information

9.3.1 Oral Notice

The purpose of the debt validation information is to ensure that the consumer can avoid mistaken claims, without having to go to court, simply by requiring the collector to verify the debt. This purpose is frustrated by oral notice of verification rights, since the content of the notice is too long and involved to be effectively conveyed orally as part of a dunning conversation.[62] In addition, oral notice allows a sharp operator to excuse its failure to provide any validation information by later falsely asserting that it had given notice orally. The result is a swearing contest with the possibility that a sharp operator may be the more skilled witness.

There is no question that a validation notice sent after the initial communication must be in writing or electronic and cannot be oral. The question is where the initial communication is oral, can the validation information be included in that oral communication. This, in turn, depends upon an interpretation of the following statutory language:

> Within five days after the initial communication with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector shall, unless the following information is contained in the initial communication or the consumer has paid the debt, send the consumer a written notice containing . . .[63]

Is the written notice requirement applicable to "the following information is contained in the initial communication," even where the information is provided in the initial communication itself? Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that the validation information can be provided orally in the initial communication itself.[64] But even the Regulation F supplemental information acknowledges that the amount of validation information that is required will make oral disclosures largely impractical.[65] In addition, the oral disclosure of the required validation information must be clear and conspicuous,[66] which means that it must be "readily understandable."[67] Regulation F states that, "[i]n the case of oral disclosures, the disclosures also must be given at a volume and speed sufficient for the consumer to hear and comprehend them."[68]

Before Regulation F's enactment, only one court had approved the provision of oral validation information.[69] Some 62 See Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988) (validation notice must be provided effectively).

63 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a) (emphasis added).

64 Reg. F § 1006.34(a)(1)(ii). See also § 9.3.2.3 (discussing CFPB's determination that the FDCPA does not require the validation notice information to be provided in writing in the initial communication).

65 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5788 (Jan. 19, 2021) ("The Bureau agrees that there may be significant challenges to conveying the required validation information orally.").

66 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(1).

67 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(1).

68 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(1).

69 See Kasalo v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 53 F. Supp. 3d 1072 (N.D. Ill. 2014). Cf. Silbert v. Asset Res., Inc., 2000 WL 680243 (D. Minn.

old FTC informal staff letters and the commentary have lent support to the argument that oral notices are permitted, while other FTC informal letters have disagreed.[70]

This construction of FDCPA § 1692g(a) should be rejected in favor of requiring written notices, despite the Regulation F provision. The legislative history of this provision only refers to the requirement of written notice of verification rights.[71] This provision was amended several times during the legislative process.[72] There is nothing to suggest that it was amended to permit oral validation information. Rather, the amendments served to reduce the burden on collectors of providing the written validation notice, in two ways: 1) by not requiring a notice to be sent when the consumer pays the debt immediately after the initial communication and 2) by allowing the validation notice to be sent in the initial communication (rather than within five days after the initial communication), reducing the collector's mail expense.

9.3.2 Electronic Notices

9.3.2.1 Generally

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) defines a validation notice as a written or electronic notice that provides the validation information required by Regulation F.[73] Regulation F allows for emailed or other electronic validation notices. But the notice must be sent in a way that complies with Reg. F § 1006.42 and other Regulation F provisions.

For example, Reg. F § 1006.6(e) requires disclosure in all electronic communications as to the right to opt out of such communications.[74] Such a disclosure must be included in all electronic validation notices, even though this is not defined in the regulation as information specifically required for validation notices.[75] The Reg. F supplemental information provides:

> A debt collector who sends a validation notice electronically may provide the [Reg. F] § 1006.6(e) disclosure in the electronic communication outside of the validation notice. A debt collector who provides the model validation notice electronically will not lose the safe harbor described in [Reg. F] § 1006.34(d)(2) by including the [Reg. F] § 1006.6(e) disclosure in the electronic communication outside the model notice.[76]

Regulation F provides the consumer can be sent a validation notice (including an electronic notice) "in the manner required by [Reg. F] § 1006.42" in either the initial communication itself or within five days of the initial communication.[77] Reg. F. § 1006.42 in turn provides that a validation notice found either in the initial communication or sent within five days must comply with Reg. F § 1006.42(a) and only a notice sent within five days must comply with Reg. F § 1006.42(b).

9.3.2.2 Expected to Provide Actual Notice and In Form Consumer Can Keep Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) requires that a notice sent in writing or electronically "must do so in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice, and in a form that the consumer may keep and access later."[78] The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide three relevant factors as to whether a communication is reasonably expected to provide actual notice. These are whether the debt collector:

1. "Identified the purpose of the communication by including, in the subject line of an electronic communication, the name of the creditor to whom the debt currently is owed and one additional piece of information identifying the debt, other than the amount;"[79]
2. "Permitted receipt of notifications of undeliverability from communications providers, monitored for any such notifications, and treated any such notifications as precluding a reasonable expectation of actual notice for that delivery attempt;"[80] and
3. "Identified itself as the sender of the communication by including a business name that the consumer would be likely to recognize."[81]

The Official Interpretations provide six examples of an additional piece of information identifying the debt, in compliance with the first factor listed above. These are: a truncated account number, the name of the original creditor, the name of any store brand associated with the debt, the date of sale of a

Feb. 14, 2000) (claim for failing to provide validation notice that was not provided within five days of phone call).

70 See FTC Official Staff Commentary § 809(a)-5, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Clement, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 12, 1985); Mezines, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 20, 1980). See also Cranmer, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 25, 1989). But see Freeman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 15, 1988).

71 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 5, 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

72 S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 809(a) (Mar. 4, 1977) ("Within five days after the initial communication with the consumer in connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector shall, unless such is contained in the initial communication or the consumer has paid the debt, send the consumer a written notice containing the following information.") (emphasis added); S. 656, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(a) (Feb. 7, 1977) ("Within five days after the initial communication with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector shall, unless such is contained in the initial communication, send the consumer a written notice containing the following information.") (emphasis added); H.R. 5294, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(a) (Mar. 22, 1977) ("Within five working days after the initial communication with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector shall send the consumer a written notice containing the following information.") (emphasis added); H.R. 29, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808(a) (Jan. 4, 1977) (does not contain word "working"); H.R. 13,720, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 808 (July 28, 1976) (does not contain word "working"). Prior House bills contained a wholly different approach to this problem.

73 Reg. F § 1006.34 (b)(4).

74 See § 5.9, supra.

75 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5814 (Jan. 19, 2021).

76 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5814 (Jan. 19, 2021).

77 Reg. F § 1006.34(a)(1)(i).

78 Reg. F § 1006.42(a)(1).

79 Reg. F Official Interpretations 42(a)(1)-1(i).

80 Reg. F Official Interpretations 42(a)(1)-1(ii).

81 Reg. F Official Interpretations 42(a)(1)-1(ii).

product or service giving rise to the debt, the physical address of service, and the billing or mailing address on the account.[82]

The Official Interpretations provide two examples of a business name that the consumer would recognize, in compliance with the third factor listed above. One is where, pursuant to Reg. F § 1006.6(d)(4)(ii)(C), the creditor has sent the consumer a notice indicating that the consumer's email address is being transferred to a named debt collector and that debt collector may contact the consumer using that email address. The other is where a debt collector has sent a voice mail message to the consumer that meets the definition of a limited-content message, and thus must include a business name for the debt collector that does not indicate that the debt collector is in the debt collection business.[83]

If the debt collector receives a notice that the validation notice was not delivered, then the collector has not sent the disclosure in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice.[84] In addition, a validation notice is not sent in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice if it is sent by email or text message and the consumer has opted out[85] of emails to that email address or texts to that phone number.[86]

Prior to Regulation F, the Seventh Circuit found that the debt collector failed to "send" the consumer a validation notice when it had emailed the consumer a link to a website where the consumer could have downloaded the validation notice, but only if the consumer was willing to risk opening a file from a stranger against the advice of computer experts.[87]

9.3.2.3 Compliance with the E-SIGN Act

When an electronic validation notice is sent after the initial communication (i.e., not found in the initial communication itself), then Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) requires that the notice be sent in accordance with 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c), Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act (E-SIGN Act) § 101(c).[88] That provision requires that, before the electronic validation notice is sent to the consumer, the consumer must have first affirmatively consented to electronic communication, which consent has not been withdrawn.

Before the consent is provided, certain disclosures must be made and the consumer must be informed as to the hardware and software required to access and retain the notice, and provisions are made if the hardware or software requirements later change. The consent must either be electronic or confirmed electronically in a manner that reasonably demonstrates that the consumer can access information in the electronic form that will be used to provide the validation notice. These E-SIGN requirements are examined in another NCLC treatise, Consumer Banking and Payments Law § 11.4 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

The CFPB is deliberately leaving unresolved whether the collector must obtain that consent from the consumer directly, or whether the consent could have been obtained by the originating creditor with the collector relying on that consent.[89]

Regulation F § 1006.42(b) does not apply to a validation notice sent in the initial communication. The supplemental information to Regulation F explains that "[t]he Bureau has determined that the FDCPA does not require the validation notice information to be provided in writing when it is contained in the initial communication."[90] Since E-SIGN consumer-consent requirements only apply where applicable law requires a that a disclosure be made in writing,[91] the CFPB concludes that collectors need not comply with the E-SIGN Act if the validation notice is in the initial communication.[92] As a result of this analysis, the CFPB states that, "a debt collector may electronically deliver the validation notice information within the debt collector's initial communication to a consumer without obtaining the consumer's E-SIGN consent."[93]

Providing an electronic validation notice to consumers as an initial communication without the consumer's consent may increase the likelihood that the consumer does not see the validation notice as the email address may be old or incorrect, emails may be sent to spam folders the consumer does not check, or consumers may simply delete an electronic message coming from an unfamiliar debt collector.

Validation information sent in an initial electronic communication still must be sent "in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice, and in a form that the consumer may keep and access later."[94] The CFPB has also noted that a validation notice sent in an initial communication must also be "contained" in that communication,[95] in contrast to Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C.,[96] where access to the validation notice depended on the consumer taking additional actions after receiving the email.

9.3.3 Written Notices and Burden of Proving Mail Delivery

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides standards for sending a written validation notice. As with electronic validation notices,[97] debt collector must send a written 82 Reg. F Official Interpretations 42(a)(1)-1(i).

83 Reg. F § 1006.2(j)(1)(i).
84 Reg. F Official Interpretations 42(a)(1)-2.
85 Reg. F § 1006.6(e); § 5.9, supra.
86 Reg. F Official Interpretations 42(a)(1)-4.
87 Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 932 F.3d 1049 (7th Cir. 2019).
88 Reg. F § 1006.42(b).
89 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,851 (Nov. 30, 2020).
90 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,854 (Nov. 30, 2020). The CFPB explains their reasoning for this determination as follows: "FDCPA section 809(a) permits the validation notice information to be contained in the initial communication. In turn, FDCPA section 807(11) indicates that the initial communication with the consumer may be oral. Accordingly, the Bureau interprets the FDCPA as not requiring that the validation notice information be provided in writing when it is contained in the initial communication." Id. at n.584.
91 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c)(1).
92 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,854 n.585 (Nov. 30, 2020).
93 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,854 (Nov. 30, 2020).
94 Reg. F § 1006.42(a)(1). See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,854 (Nov. 30, 2020).
95 See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,854 n.586 (Nov. 30, 2020).
96 Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 932 F.3d 1049 (7th Cir. 2019).
97 See § 9.3.2, supra.

validation notice in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice and in a form that the consumer can keep and access later.[98]

The "reasonably expected to provide actual notice" prong is not satisfied if the collector receives a notice that the written disclosure was not delivered.[99] Both requirements in Reg. F § 1006.42(a)(1) are satisfied where, in accordance with the safe harbor provision, a debt collector mails a written validation notice to the consumer's last known address, unless at the time of mailing the debt collector knows or should know that the consumer does not currently reside at, or receive mail at, that location.[100] Post office boxes are included in this safe harbor, unless the debt collector knows or should know that the consumer does not currently use this address, but does not include a commercial address.[101]

Prior to Regulation F, courts held that, upon a showing by the debt collector that the notice was sent to the consumer at the consumer's current address and not returned, the burden of proof that the FDCPA § 1692g notice was sent by the debt collector shifts to the consumer.[102] According to the Ninth Circuit, the debt collection agency must prove that the FDCPA § 1692g notice was sent to the consumer's home address, not that it was received by the consumer. Absent any evidence other than a consumer's bare denial of receipt or claim that the letter was sent to the wrong address and the debt collector's testimony describing its mailing system, the court held that the common-law mailbox rule controlled.[103] According to the Eleventh Circuit, "[w]hile the plain language of the statute might not require the debt collector to ensure actual receipt of the written notice, the plain language does require the debt collector to send the written notice to a valid and proper address where the consumer may actually receive it."[104]

To overcome the debt collector's evidence that the notice was sent to the proper address, the consumer would have to show that the letter was sent to the wrong address or find other consumers or locate a credible former employee of the defendant to establish a pattern or practice of not mailing the notice. Where the debt collector's records show that the validation notice was returned to the collector as undeliverable, the consumer rebutted the mailbox rule by testifying that he had not lived for five years at the address to which the validation notice was mailed and prevailed on the claim that the debt collector subsequently failed to send the notice to the current address.[105] Where the consumer's evidence was that he had never resided at or received mail at the address listed as the address to which the debt collector sent the notice, it created an issue of fact as to whether the letter was properly sent.[106]

If the collector has not presented business record evidence confirming mailing the notice to the right address and the consumer denies receiving it, some courts hold that the fact finder must decide whether the notice was mailed.[107] Where the timeliness of the sending notice was disputed, summary judgment

98 Reg. F § 1006.42(a)(1).

99 Reg. F Official Interpretations 42(a)(1)-2.

100 Reg. F Official Interpretations 42(a)(1)-3.

101 See 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,850 (Nov. 30, 2020).

102 See Reed v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 89047 (W.D. Pa. 2017); Nikkel v. Wakefield & Assoc., Inc., 2012 WL 5571058 (D. Colo. 2012); Coachella Valley Collection Serv. v. Raskov, 2012 WL 1427848 (Cal. Ct. App. 2012) (testimony as to standard procedure was sufficient to prove sending letter).

103 Mahon v. Credit Bur., 171 F.3d 1197 (9th Cir. 1999). See also Girdler v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2016 WL 7479541 (D. Mass. 2016); Ebanks v. Old Republic Equity Credit Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 7321291 (M.D. Fla. 2016); Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Services, Inc., 2015 WL 4092817 (N.D. Ga. 2015) (collector failed to provide any evidence that its alleged notice complied with § 1692g); May v. NCEP, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2009081 (E.D. Mo. 2014) (mailing to last known address suffices); Phillips v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2014 WL 1405217 (E.D. Mich. 2014); Woodward v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2014 WL 809003 (D.N.J. Feb. 28, 2014) (consumer must offer rebuttal); Karimian v. CMRE Fin. Services Inc., 2013 WL 12114825 (C.D. Cal. May 14, 2013); Peck v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2913263 (D. Utah 2012); Carpenter v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 787 F. Supp. 2d 971 (D. Minn. 2011); Belcher v. Cent. Credit Services, Inc., 2011 WL 13229640 (N.D. Ala. June 22, 2011); Webb v. Envision Payment Solutions, Inc., 2011 WL 2160789 (W.D. Pa. May 31, 2011); McLain v. Gordon, 2010 WL 3340528 (W.D. Wash. 2010); Nichols v. GC Services, L.P., 2009 WL 3488365 (D. Ariz. Oct. 27, 2009), aff'd, 423 Fed. Appx. 744 (9th Cir. 2011); Krawczyk v. Centurion Capital Corp., 2009 WL 395458 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 18, 2009); Zamos v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 423 F. Supp. 2d 777 (N.D. Ohio 2006); Moore v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 2006 WL 1806195 (C.D. Ill. June 29, 2006); McGinley v. Law Office of Shapiro & Kreisman, 2003 WL 21466936 (N.D. Ill. 2003); Van Westrienen v. Americontinental Collection Corp., 94 F. Supp. 2d 1087 (D. Or. 2000). See also Johnson v. Revenue Mgmt. Corp., 52 F. Supp. 2d 889 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (debt collector found evidence of letter well into case). Cf. Edwards v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5145559 (W.D. Ky. Sept. 1, 2015) (consumer should be given opportunity to offer evidence rebutting mail box presumption, making motion to dismiss premature); Silbert v. Asset Res., Inc., 2000 WL 680243 (D. Minn. Feb. 14, 2000) (declining to infer in defendant's favor that validation notice was sent solely because defendant alleged that validation notices were routinely mailed day that they are generated).

104 Ponce v. BCA Fin. Services, Inc., 467 Fed. Appx. 806, 807 (11th Cir. 2012). See also Estate of Domenic Caruso v. Fin. Recoveries, 2017 WL 2704088 (D.N.J. 2017); Duranseau v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 632144 (D. Minn. Feb. 13, 2015); Johnson v. CFS II, Inc., 2013 WL 1809081 (N.D. Cal. 2013).

105 Johnson v. Midland Credit Mgmt. Inc., 2006 WL 2473004 (N.D. Ohio 2006). See also Johnson v. Midland Credit Mgmt. Inc., 2012 WL 5996391 (N.D. Ohio 2012); Palisades Collection, L.L.C. v. O'Brien, 873 N.E.2d 923 (Ohio Ct. App. 2007) (remanding for determination whether dispute notice had been sent to valid address).

106 Ponce v. BCA Fin. Services, Inc., 467 Fed. Appx. 806 (11th Cir. 2012) (while plain language of statute might not require debt collector to ensure actual receipt of written notice, plain language does require debt collector to send written notice to a valid and proper address where consumer may actually receive it; cannot say district court erred in determining that September 2009 telephone call, and not prior letter sent to an address where consumer had not lived for eight years, was initial communication); Johnson v. Prof'l Collection Consultants, 2010 WL 2196571 (S.D. Cal. 2010).

107 See Schroeder v. Meyer, 2017 WL 1238016 (N.D. Ind. 2017); Reed v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 89047 (W.D. Pa. 2017); Gatter v. Richland Holdings, Inc., 2016 WL 1384787 (D. Nev. 2016); Greiner v. Spiwin & Co., 2014 WL 3864521 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 6, 2014); Beuter v. Canyon State Prof'l Services, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12281 (D. Ariz. June 13, 2005) (disputed issues precluded summary judgment).

would not be appropriate.[108] In a case where the debt collector outsourced the sending of the validation notice, its employee's affidavit was nothing but inadmissible hearsay, and misleading at best as to whether or not the statutory notice was mailed to the plaintiff.[109] Additionally, courts sometimes compel collectors to reveal other consumer complaints and suits.[110]

While the debt collector's burden is often considered minimal by the courts, a lower court decision found that the debt collector's evidence that it had mailed the FDCPA § 1692g notice failed on six points:[111]

- First, the debt collector did not unequivocally state that an initial letter was mailed to the consumer. Instead, he testified that its system generates a letter whenever a new account is loaded in the database and concluded that a letter "would have been sent" to the consumer in October 2012.
- Second, the collector failed to point to any evidence establishing that the letter was sent to the proper address.
- Third, the collector did not point to any evidence establishing that the letter was not returned as undeliverable.[112]
- Fourth, the collection notes did not reflect the mailing of the FDCPA § 1692g notice.
- Fifth, collector did not produce the testimony of the agent who sent the letter. He could only testify that the letter would have been sent by "somebody in admin."
- Sixth, and "most fatal" to its position, was the failure to produce a copy of the initial notice letter. Instead, it provided the court with a copy of a generic notice and a copy of a settlement letter dated much later.[113]

108 See Farmer v. Buffaloe & Assoc., 2012 WL 6045976 (E.D. Tenn. 2012) (did not send follow-up letter within five days of communication with proper disclosures); Wood v. GC Services, L.P., 2012 WL 987761 (M.D. Fla. 2012).

109 Anderson v. Credit Bur. Collection Services, Inc., 422 Fed. Appx. 534 (7th Cir. 2011). See also Searle v. Credit Adjustments, Inc., 2012 WL 1079328 (M.D. Pa. 2012); Lee v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 846 F. Supp. 2d 716 (S.D. Tex. 2011) (defendant's reliance on notations of codes contained in its documentation log, which indicated that letter should have been sent along with "form" letter showing what letters would have stated, fell short of establishing that letter was, in fact, sent and that it was sent within prescribed time). See also Kimmel v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3204841 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (affidavit of debt buyer's mailing service was insufficient to establish mailing of § 1692g notice where it stated that letter was mailed on appropriate date, but did not identify letter as containing notice).

110 See § 2.5.9, supra.

111 Currier v. PDL Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887, at *17 (E.D. Mich. 2017).

112 See also Nogali v. Transcon Fin., Inc., 2015 WL 12656934 (C.D. Cal. 2015).

113 Currier v. PDL Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 712887 (E.D. Mich. 2017). See also Heling v. Creditors Collection Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 4625683 (E.D. Wis. 2016) (court noted absurdity of arguing that agency had no liability as long as it sent a letter somewhere, or anywhere).

9.3.4 Delivery of Notice to Consumer's Attorney

If the consumer is represented by an attorney, the Fourth,[114] Seventh,[115] and Eleventh[116] Circuits hold that the validation notice should be sent to the attorney, while a split Ninth Circuit decision held the FDCPA inapplicable to communications to a consumer's attorney.[117] FTC staff once believed the notice need not be given to a consumer's attorney (who may be unaware of verification rights),[118] but the safer course in circuits that have not addressed the issue is to provide the notice to a consumer's attorney.[119] One court has held that a fax about the debt sent to the consumer's attorney was the initial debt collection communication, triggering validation notice obligations.[120]

9.3.5 Notice Must Effectively Convey Required Information

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) outlines required and optional validation information.[121] It provides instructions about the format of validation information and includes a model validation notice.[122]

Regulation F also requires that the validation notice be sent in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual 114 Chaudhry v. Gallerizzo, 174 F.3d 394 (4th Cir. 1999). See also Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226 (4th Cir. 2007) (letters to consumer's lawyer must comply with FDCPA).

115 See Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007); Huff v. Dobbins, Fraker, Tennant, Joy & Perlstein, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 12055 (7th Cir. 1999). See also Dikeman v. Nat'l Educators, Inc., 81 F.3d 949 (10th Cir. 1996); Wright v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 2014 WL 4471396 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (although collection letter was addressed to consumer via his attorney, it was clear that information letter contained was designed to be conveyed, albeit indirectly, to consumer, and constituted initial communication).

116 Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A., 817 F.3d 1268 (11th Cir. 2016) (refusing to adopt "competent lawyer" standard for communications to attorneys, based on facts in this case; omission of "in writing" requirement is not something less likely to mislead attorney than consumer).

117 See Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926 (9th Cir. 2007). See also Baiser v. Braje & Nelson, L.L.P., 2006 WL 1285143 (N.D. Ind. 2006).

118 Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988).

119 See Matthews v. HSS Systems, L.L.C., 2016 WL 356033 (E.D. Okla. 2016) (letter directed to consumer's attorney must include proper § 1692g notice); Spencer v. Hendersen-Webb, 81 F. Supp. 2d 52 (D. Md. 1999) (debt collector's fax of bill to father of consumer's boyfriend in response to his request for information on debt was deemed to be attempt to collect debt, since debt collector believed father was consumer's attorney and that information would reach consumer indirectly; determining that fax was debt collector's initial communication and thus failure to provide validation notice in connection with fax violated FDCPA); § 5.5, supra (regarding contacting attorney of represented consumer).

120 Spencer v. Hendersen-Webb, 81 F. Supp. 2d 582 (D. Md. 1999) (debt collector's fax of bill to father of consumer's boyfriend in response to his request for information on debt was deemed to be attempt to collect debt since debt collector believed father was consumer's attorney and that information would reach consumer indirectly).

121 Reg. F § 1006.34(c), (d)(3). See §§ 9.4, 9.6, infra.

122 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(1), (d)(2), (d)(4), (e). See § 9.5, infra.

notice and in a form that the consumer can keep and access later.[123] In addition, Regulation F states that, during the thirty-day validation period, a debt collector must not engage in any collection activities or communications that overshadow or are inconsistent with the disclosure of the consumer's rights to dispute the debt and to request the name and address of the original creditor.[124]

Use of the model validation notice found at Reg. F Appendix B-1 provides a safe harbor from liability for overshadowing.[125] The extent to which use or approximate use of the model form provides a safe harbor is examined at §§ 9.5.2 and 9.6, infra.

The remainder of this subsection examines case law about effective conveyance of required validation information that was issued prior to the Regulation F effective date.

The form of the validation notice must be sufficient to effectively convey the required information. A least sophisticated consumer test is used in determining whether the information is effectively conveyed. The least-sophisticated-consumer test adopted by the courts is an objective standard[126] and is not affected by the consumer plaintiff's perception of the debt collector's statements.[127] The courts generally add a reasonableness approach when applying the least-sophisticated-consumer test.[128]

In the leading case on the placement of a validation notice, Swanson v. Southern Oregon Credit Service,[129] the Ninth Circuit held that a validation notice violated FDCPA § 1692g because it would not "effectively" convey notice of FDCPA verification rights to the least sophisticated consumers.[130] The Ninth Circuit held:

> The statute is not satisfied merely by inclusion of the required debt validation notice; the notice Congress required must be conveyed effectively to the debtor. It must be large enough to be easily read and sufficiently prominent to be noticed—even by the least sophisticated debtor. Furthermore, to be effective, the notice must not be overshadowed or contradicted by other messages or notices appearing in the initial communication from the collection agency.[131]

The validation notice not only failed the least-sophisticated test,[132] but also failed the effectively-provided test, because it was dwarfed and contradicted by the dunning message.

In a 2006 amendment to the FDCPA,[133] Congress codified important aspects of the Swanson decision by adding the following language at the end of FDCPA § 1692g(b):

> Collection activities and communications that do not otherwise violate this title may continue during the 30-day period referred to in subsection (a) unless the consumer has notified the debt collector in writing that the debt, or any portion of the debt, is disputed or that the consumer requests the name and address of the original creditor. Any collection activities and communication during the 30-day period may not overshadow or be inconsistent with the disclosure of the consumer's right to dispute the debt or request the name and address of the original creditor.[134]

The Swanson decision was followed by the Fourth Circuit, a few years later in Miller v. Payco General American Credits, Inc.[135] The debt collector's single letter to the consumer was described as follows:

> The front of the Payco form demands "IMMEDIATE FULL PAYMENT" and commands the consumer to "PHONE US TODAY," emphasized by the word "NOW" emblazoned in white letters nearly two inches tall against a red background. The message conveyed by those statements on the face of the form, flatly contradicts the information contained on the back.[136]

Quoting from Ost v. Collection Bureau, Inc.,[137] the Fourth Circuit concluded that "[s]creaming headlines, bright colors and huge lettering 'all point to a deliberate policy on the part 123 Reg. F § 1006.42(a)(1). See §§ 9.3.2.2, 9.3.3, supra.

124 Reg. F § 1006.38(b)(1).
125 Reg. F § 1006.38(b)(2).
126 See, e.g., Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988). See also § 3.2.1, supra, Appx. E.2.6.1, infra.
127 See, e.g., Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 797 F.3d 219, 225 (2d Cir. 2015); Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008) (language unlawfully overshadowed or contradicted validation notice when it would make least sophisticated consumer uncertain as to their rights, regardless of whether plaintiff was actually confused); Durkin v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 406 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2005); Tilatitsky v. Medicredit, Inc., 2016 WL 5906819 (E.D. Mo. 2016); Garcia v. Solomon, Grindle, Silverman & Wintringer APC, 2012 WL 12846995 (S.D. Cal. 2012).
128 See § 3.2.1, supra, Appx. E.2.6.1, infra. See also Cicalo v. McCalla Raymer Leibert Pierce, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1514245, at *1 (D. Conn. 2018) (attorney's document served with foreclosure suit explaining requirement to respond to state foreclosure suit and consumer's § 1692g rights did not violate § 1692g); Cooper v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 4098824 (E.D. Mich. 2017).
129 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988).
130 See Appx. E.2.6.1, infra. See also § 3.2.1, supra.
131 869 F.2d 1222, 1225 (9th Cir. 1988) (citation omitted).
132 See also Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A., 817 F.3d 1268 (11th Cir. 2016); Ellis v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 591 F.3d 130 (2d Cir. 2010); Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85, 90–92 (2d Cir. 2008); Sims v. GC Services L.P., 445 F.3d 959 (7th Cir. 2006); Smith v. Computer Credit, Inc., 167 F.3d 1052 (6th Cir. 1999); Goldberg v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 1998 WL 650793 (2d Cir. 1998) (unpublished); Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997); Terran v. Kaplan, 109 F.3d 1428 (9th Cir. 1997); Russell v. Equifax A.R.S., 74 F.3d 30 (2d Cir. 1996); Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025 (6th Cir. 1992); Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988); Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982).
133 See § 3.4.2.4, supra.
134 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(b) (emphasis added). See § 9.8.1, infra.
135 943 F.2d 482 (4th Cir. 1991).
136 Miller v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 943 F.2d 482, 484 (4th Cir. 1991). See also Caprio v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C., 709 F.3d 142 (3d Cir. 2013) (asking consumer to "please call" (bolded, as was phone number) or write with any questions or if did not owe amount overshadowed disclosure of written verification right on reverse); Colmon v. Payco-G.A.C., Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22733 (D. Conn. 1992).
137 493 F. Supp. 701, 702–703 (D.N.D. 1980).

of the collector to evade the spirit of the notice statute, and mislead the debtor into disregarding the notice.'"[138]

The Ninth Circuit has held that the question of whether the validation notice was conveyed effectively to a least sophisticated consumer was a question of law where the decision did not require reference to extrinsic facts.[139] The Seventh Circuit considers the question to be one of law where the source of the confusion is apparent on the face of the letter, without extrinsic evidence.[140] Uniquely, the Seventh Circuit has sometimes required the use of extrinsic evidence, such expert testimony or surveys, to resolve cases where the violation is not clear.[141] In a Seventh Circuit case, the majority and the concurring opinions disagreed on the utility of using survey evidence to resolve issues of whether unsophisticated consumers would be confused. The majority recommended survey evidence while the concurring opinion pointed out that the very high cost of survey evidence may prevent the pursuit of FDCPA claims.[142] Moreover, expert testimony on this issue runs a risk of being excluded under Daubert.[143]

Placing the validation information on the back of a dunning letter may comply with FDCPA § 1692g(a) if there is a conspicuous reference on the front, and if other language on the letter does not further obscure the notice.[144] However, the Seventh Circuit rejected the argument that the placement of the validation information on page two of the letter violated FDCPA § 1692g, despite the fact that the first page referred to the back, which was blank.[145] Other methods of hiding or obscuring such information would clearly violate the Act.[146]

138 Miller v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 943 F.2d 482, 484 (4th Cir. 1991). See also Graziano v. Harrison, 950 F.2d 107, 111 (3d Cir. 1991), overruled on other grounds by, Riccio v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 954 F.3d 582, 594 (3d Cir. 2020) ("To comply with the terms of the Act, statutory notice must not only explicate a debtor's rights; it must do so effectively."); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995) (adequacy of validation notice in minuscule print following big, bold threat of suit would be determined by trial); Vaughn v. CSC Credit Services, Inc., 1995 WL 51402 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (whether warnings required by §§ 1692g and 1692e(11) were legible was question of fact for jury); Roudebush v. Collecto, Inc., 2004 WL 3316168 (S.D. Ind. 2004) (jury could reasonably find that debt collector's validation notice on reverse side of initial dun seeking payment on underlying telephone bill was physically overshadowed and thus not effectively conveyed where front side of dun referred debtor to "important rights" on reverse side, yet validation notice on reverse side appeared under unrelated heading "FOR MEDICAL USE ONLY" and not under heading "NOTICE OF IMPORTANT RIGHTS"). But see Latimer v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 842 F. Supp. 274 (E.D. Mich. 1993) (although validation notice and debt collection warning were in smaller print than other portions of letter, §§ 1692g and 1692e(11) not violated). Accord United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996) (notice on back of payment demand letter which stated conflicting deadlines and overshadowed notice by being in larger typeface).

139 Terran v. Kaplan, 109 F.3d 1428 (9th Cir. 1997). See also Perry v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2015 WL 417588 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 2, 2015); Oberther v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 45 F. Supp. 3d 125 (D. Mass. 2014); McCormick v. Wells Fargo Bank, 640 F. Supp. 2d 795 (S.D. W. Va. 2009) (Fourth Circuit would find contradiction/overshadowing issue question of law).

140 See Durkin v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 406 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2005); Marshall-Mosby v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 205 F.3d 323 (7th Cir. 2000).

141 E.g., Durkin v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 406 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2005); Johnson v. Revenue Mgmt. Corp., 169 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 1999). See § 7.3.8, supra. See also Marshall-Mosby v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 205 F.3d 323 (7th Cir. 2000); Walker v. Nat'l Recovery, Inc., 200 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 1999); Omaraie v. A. Alliance Collection Agency, Inc., 2007 WL 2409794 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 21, 2007); Nance v. Lawrence Friedman P.C., 2000 WL 1230462 (N.D. Ill. 2000); § 2.5.14, supra.

142 Johnson v. Revenue Mgmt. Corp., 169 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 1999).

143 See Durkin v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 406 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2005); Hernandez v. Attention, L.L.C., 429 F. Supp. 2d 912 (N.D. Ill. 2005). See also § 7.3.8, supra; § 11.5.4, infra.

144 See Sims v. GC Services L.P., 445 F.3d 959 (7th Cir. 2006); McStay v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 308 F.3d 188 (2d Cir. 2002); Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. 2018); Spann v. Midland Credit Mgmt. & Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5390671 (E.D. Pa. 2016); Molina v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3067883 (M.D. Fla. 2012). See also Hawk v. EOS CCA, 2014 WL 948059 (E.D. Pa. 2014); Panto v. Prof'l Bur. of Collections, 2011 WL 843899 (D.N.J. 2011) (notice below signature line not violation); Weber v. Computer Credit, Inc., 259 F.R.D. 33 (E.D.N.Y. 2009); Stark v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 2009 WL 605811 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 9, 2009); Sorey v. Computer Credit, Inc., 2006 WL 1896401 (S.D.N.Y. 2006); Hernandez v. Affiliated Group, Inc., 2006 WL 83474 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) (creditor's name was on reverse and front of letter referred reader to reverse); Youngblood v. GC Services L.P., 186 F. Supp. 2d 695 (W.D. Tex. 2002); Gaetano v. Payco, Inc., 774 F. Supp. 1404 (D. Conn. 1990); In re Belile, 209 B.R. 658 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997). But cf. United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996) (conflicting deadlines with § 1692g and overshadowed); United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 820 F. Supp. 228 (D. Md. 1993), aff'd, 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996) (smaller print referred to reverse side); Siler v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 1992 WL 32333 (W.D.N.Y. 1992) (information regarding credit card payment overshadowed § 1692g notice); Appx. E.2.6.1, infra.

145 O'Boyle v. Real Time Resolutions, Inc., 910 F.3d 338, 344 (7th Cir. 2018) ("It is reasonable and fair to expect an unsophisticated consumer to read the second page of a debt-collection letter and see this notice.").

146 See Jarzyna v. Home Prop., L.P., 763 F. Supp. 2d 742 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (section 1692g notice in small print on bottom of letter was overshadowed by prominent bold printed statement, "Pay in full online anytime"); Carbajal v. Capital One, 2003 WL 22595265 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (allegation that otherwise proper validation notice was "buried" among "flurry of papers" so as to obscure its message stated claim); Law Offices of David J. Stern, P.A. v. Martinez, 271 B.R. 696 (S.D. Fla. 2001), aff'd, 311 F.3d 1272 (11th Cir. 2002) (validation notice was confusing where it was inserted as page eight of sixteen-page foreclosure suit package); Macarz v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 26 F. Supp. 2d 368 (D. Conn. 1998) (notice was at bottom of page in passive voice and small print "where it appears to look purposefully insignificant"). See also Scott v. Enhanced Recovery Corp., 2006 WL 1517755 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) (light gray ink was illegible); Levin v. Kluever & Platt, L.L.C., 2003 WL 22757763 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (on eighth page of sixteen-page foreclosure document); Rahe, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 6, 1980); Mezines, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 4, 1980); Boyle, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 30, 1980); Shnaider, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 21, 1978); Miller, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 14, 1978); Crawford, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 24, 1978). But cf. Elliott v. Credit Control Services, Inc., 2010 WL 1495402 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (heading "Warning Notice-Warning Notice" did not overshadow); Osborne, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 1, 1979).

9.4 Required Validation Information Under Reg. F § 1006.34(c)

9.4.1 Overview

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) has detailed requirements as to the substance of verification information that must be provided to the consumer, whether the information is conveyed in a written or electronic notice or conveyed orally as part of an initial oral communication.[147]

The information the regulation requires is set out in § 9.4, infra. Information specifically required by the statute as interpreted by case law prior to Regulation F is set out in § 9.7, infra. Section 9.5, infra, details Regulation F format requirements. Section 9.6, infra, sets out optional information that Regulation F allows to be included with the required information and still retain the safe harbor provided a debt collector that uses the model validation notice found at Reg. F Appx. B-1.

An important concept in understanding three of the Reg. F § 1006.34(c) required disclosures is "itemization date," which the collector can choose from any one of five dates: the last statement date, the charge-off date, the last payment date, the transaction date, and the judgment date. The concept of an itemization date is examined at § 9.4.2, infra.

The following list enumerates all the Reg. F § 1006.34(c) validation information requirements, and many of these are examined in more detail in following subsections:

- The debt collector communication disclosure required by Reg. F § 1006.18(e);[148]
- The debt collector's name and the mailing address at which the debt collector accepts disputes and requests for original-creditor information;[149]
- The consumer's name and mailing address;[150]
- If the debt collector is collecting a debt related to a consumer financial product or service as defined in Reg. F § 1006.2(f),[151] the name of the creditor to whom the debt was owed on the itemization date;[152]
- The account number or a truncated number associated with the debt on the itemization date;[153]
- The name of the creditor to whom the debt currently is owed;[154]
- Except for certain residential mortgages,[155] the itemization date;[156]
- Except for certain residential mortgages,[157] the amount of the debt on the itemization date,[158] including any fees, interest, or other charges owed as of that date;[159]
- Except for certain residential mortgages,[160] an itemization of the current amount of the debt reflecting interest, fees, payments, and credits since the itemization date;[161]
- The current amount of the debt;[162]
- The end date of the validation period and consumer rights upon disputing the debt prior to that end date;
- The end date of the validation period and consumer rights upon requesting the name and address of the original creditor prior to that end date;[163]
- The end date of the validation period and the consequences of failing to dispute the debt by that end date;[164]
- If the debt collector is collecting a debt related to a consumer financial product or service as defined in Reg. F § 1006.2(f),[165] a statement that additional information regarding consumer protections in debt collection is available on the CFPB website at www.cfpb.gov/debt-collection;[166]
- For electronic validation notices, a statement explaining how a consumer can electronically dispute the debt or request original-creditor information;[167] and
- Prompts facilitating the consumer disputing the debt and requesting original creditor information, with addresses to send the consumer response to the debt collector.

In a FAQ, the CFPB summarized the five categories of required validation information as:

- Debt Collector Communication Disclosure (12 CFR § 1006.34(c)(1));
- Debt-Related Information (12 CFR § 1006.34(c)(2)(i)-(v); 34(c)(2)(ix));
- Itemization-Related Information (12 CFR § 1006.34(c)(2)(vi)-(viii));
- Information about Consumer Protections (12 CFR § 1006.34(c)(3)); and
- Consumer-Response Information (12 CFR § 1006.34(c)(4)).[168]

147 Reg. F § 1006.34(c).
148 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(1). See also § 9.4.3, infra.
149 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(i). See also § 9.4.4, infra.
150 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(ii). See also § 9.4.5, infra.
151 See the discussion at § 9.4.6, infra.
152 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(iii). See also § 9.4.6, infra.
153 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(iv). See also § 9.4.6, infra.
154 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(v). See also § 9.4.6, infra.
155 See Reg F § 1006.34(c)(5); § 9.4.7.5, infra.
156 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(vi). See § 9.4.2, infra.
157 See Reg F § 1006.34(c)(5); § 9.4.7.5, infra.
158 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(vii). See § 9.4.7, infra.
159 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(vii)-1.
160 See Reg F § 1006.34(c)(5); § 9.4.7.5, infra.
161 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii). See § 9.4.7, infra.
162 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix). See § 9.4.7, infra.
163 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(ii). See § 9.4.8, infra.
164 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(iii). See § 9.4.8, infra.
165 See the discussion at § 9.4.6, infra.
166 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(iv). See § 9.4.9, infra.
167 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(v). See § 9.4.10, infra.
168 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #1, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

9.4.2 The Itemization Date

9.4.2.1 Generally

In Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), several items required to be disclosed in the validation information refer to the "itemization date." The itemization date is any one five reference dates for which a debt collector can ascertain the amount of the debt:

- The last statement date;
- The charge-off date;
- The last payment date;
- The transaction date; and
- The judgment date.[169]

A debt collector may select any of these dates as the itemization date to comply with Reg. F § 1006.34.[170] "Once a debt collector uses a reference date in a communication with a consumer, the debt collector must use that reference date for that debt consistently when providing the [validation] information."[171] The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide an example. If a debt collector uses the last statement date to determine and disclose the account number associated with the debt (a required disclosure for the validation notice), the collector may not use the charge-off date to determine and disclose the amount of the debt, another required disclosure.[172] But a collector can use a different reference date than used by a prior collector.[173]

The validation information must include the itemization date (e.g., September 1, 2021).[174] However, Regulation F does not require the debt collector to indicate which reference date is being used, or explain the significance of that date. In its supplemental information, the CFPB explained:

> [T]he Bureau determines that the reference dates that a debt collector may use to determine the itemization date have a significant likelihood of being meaningful to consumers because they correspond to notable events in a debt's history that consumers may recall or be able to verify with records. Because each of the reference dates may be meaningful to consumers, the Bureau determines that no additional disclosure explaining their relevance is necessary.[175]

9.4.2.2 The Five Reference Dates

In Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the first reference date is "[t]he last statement date, which is the date of the last periodic statement or written account statement or invoice provided to the consumer by a creditor."[176] The last statement may be provided by a creditor or a third party acting on the creditor's behalf, including a creditor's service provider.[177] However, a statement or invoice provided by a debt collector is not a last statement, unless the debt collector is also a creditor.[178] A creditor-issued statement after the debt has gone into collection can still be a last statement date.[179] The Regulation F supplemental information indicates that a date on which the government provided a written invoice or tax bill may constitute a last statement date for tax debt.[180]

The second reference date is "the charge-off date, which is the date the debt was charged off."[181] Guidance issued by the CFPB explained that the charge-off date is not limited to a charge-off by a creditor but would include, for example, the date that a mortgage servicer charged off a residential mortgage loan.[182]

The third reference date is "the last payment date, which is the date the last payment was applied to the debt."[183] A third-party payment applied to the debt, such as a payment from an auto repossession agent or an insurance company, can be a last payment.[184] So can a payment the consumer sends to a prior debt collector.[185] Non-periodic, partial, and non-conforming payments can also be last payments.[186] The last payment date can be the date that someone other than the creditor, including a debt collector or payment processor, applied a payment to the account.[187]

The fourth possible reference date is "the transaction date, which is the date of the transaction that gave rise to the debt."[188] "The transaction date is the date that the good or service that gave rise to the debt was provided or made available to the consumer."[189] The Official Interpretations provide these examples: "the transaction date for a debt arising from a medical procedure may be the date the medical procedure was performed, and the transaction date for a consumer's gym membership may be the date the membership contract was executed."[190] The Regulation F supplemental information provides further examples: "[P]otential transaction dates may include the date a service or good was provided to a consumer or the date that a consumer signed a contract for a service or good. In the case of a consumer's tax debt, the date a government assessed the tax may be a transaction date for purposes of [Reg. F] § 1006.34(b)(3)(iv)."[191] "For a residential mortgage, the transaction date may

169 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(3).
170 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)-1.
171 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)-1.
172 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)-1.
173 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)-2.
174 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(vi).
175 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5803 (Jan. 19, 2021).
176 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(3)(i).
177 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)(i)-1.
178 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)(i)-1. See § 4.7.4, supra.
179 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5794 (Jan. 19, 2021).
180 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5793 (Jan. 19, 2021).
181 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(3)(ii).
182 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 7 (Oct. 29, 2021).
183 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(3)(iii).
184 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)(iii)-1.
185 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5795 (Jan. 19, 2021).
186 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 7 (Oct. 29, 2021).
187 Id.
188 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(3)(iv).
189 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)(iv)-1.
190 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)(iv)-1.
191 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5795 (Jan. 19, 2021) (footnote omitted).

be the date the mortgage was originated, but is not, for example, the date of a mortgage servicing transfer."[192]

In some cases, a debt may have more than one transaction date, such as when a contract for a service is executed on one date and the service is performed on another date.[193] The debt collector may use any applicable transaction date for the itemization date, but the collector must consistently use whichever transaction date is selected.[194]

In some cases, services are provided by the same creditor over multiple days, such as where a medical debt is incurred over multiple days. In such cases, the debt collector "may select any of the dates the procedures were performed as the transaction date," but must use whatever date is selected consistently in the validation notice.[195]

The fifth possible reference date is the judgment date. This is "the date of a final court judgment that determines the amount of the debt owed by the consumer."[196] "In the case of a final judgment renewal, depending on the facts and circumstances, the final judgment renewal may be the judgment date."[197]

9.4.3 Disclosure That Notice Is from a Debt Collector

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the validation information must include the FDCPA § 1692e(11) disclosures, which correspond to Reg. F § 1006.18(e).[198]

Where the validation information is in the initial communication, the debt collector complies with Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(1) by making the disclosure required by Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(1), which requires the validation notice disclose that the debt collector is attempting to collect a debt and that any information obtained will be used for that purpose.[199]

Where the validation information is provided in a written or electronic notice provided within five days of the initial communication, the debt collector complies with Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(1) by making either the disclosure required by Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(1) or the disclosure required by Reg. F § 1006.18(e)(2), which requires the debt collector to disclose that the communication is from a debt collector.[200]

9.4.4 Debt Collector's Name and Mailing Address

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the validation information must include "the debt collector's name and the mailing address at which the debt collector accepts disputes and requests for original-creditor information."[201] A debt collector may disclose its trade or doing-business-as (dba) name, instead of its legal name.[202] A debt collector also may disclose its vendor's mailing address, if that is an address at which the debt collector accepts disputes and requests for original-creditor information.[203] But the collector can only include one mailing address in the validation information. The Reg. F supplemental information states that "[t]he Bureau declines to affirmatively permit the use of more than one mailing address as validation information."[204]

9.4.5 Consumer's Name and Mailing Address

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the validation information must include the consumer's name and mailing address.[205] A debt collector must disclose the version of the consumer's name that the debt collector reasonably determines is "the most complete and accurate version of the name about which the debt collector has knowledge."[206] A debt collector does not do so if it "omits known name information in a manner that creates a false, misleading, or confusing impression about the consumer's identity."[207]

The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide the following example: "[A]ssume the creditor provides the consumer's first name, middle name, last name, and name suffix to the debt collector. In this scenario, the debt collector would reasonably determine that the most complete and accurate version of the consumer's name about which the debt collector has knowledge includes the first name, middle name, last name, and name suffix. If the debt collector omits any of this information, the debt collector has not satisfied the requirement to provide the consumer's name pursuant to [Reg. F] § 1006.34(c)(2)(ii)."[208]

9.4.6 Creditor's Name and the Account Number

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the validation information must include the name of the creditor to whom the debt currently is owed.[209] The Official Interpretations to Regulation F specify that the debt collector can use the creditor's legal name, trade name or doing-business-as (dba) name.[210]

If the debt collector is collecting a debt related to a consumer financial product or service, the validation notice must contain the name of the creditor to whom the debt was owed

192 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 7 (Oct. 29, 2021).
193 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)(iv)-1.
194 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(3)(iv)-1.
195 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 8 (Oct. 29, 2021).
196 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(3)(v).
197 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 8 (Oct. 29, 2021).
198 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(1). See § 7.2.11, supra.
199 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(1)-1.
200 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(1)-1.
201 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(i).
202 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(i)-1.
203 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(i)-2.
204 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5800 (Jan. 19, 2021).
205 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(ii).
206 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(ii)-1.
207 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(ii)-1.
208 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(ii)-1.
209 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(v).
210 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(v)-1.

on the itemization date.[211] Even if the debt is not related to a consumer financial product or service, a debt collector can disclose this information and not lose its safe harbor when it uses the CFPB's model form.[212]

The creditor to whom the debt was owed on the itemization date is not always the same as the originating creditor.[213] A debt collector may disclose trade or doing-business-as name of the creditor for the debt on the itemization date, instead of its legal name.[214]

A consumer financial product or service is defined as having the same meaning as given to it in 12 U.S.C. § 5481(5).[215] That U.S. Code provision in turn at § 5481(5)(A) defines a consumer financial product or service as any financial product or service listed at 12 U.S.C. § 5481(15)[216] that is offered or provided for use by consumers primarily for personal, family, or household purposes. Alternatively, 12 U.S.C. § 5481(5)(B) lists four items listed in 12 U.S.C. § 5481(15)[217] that are delivered, offered, or provided in connection with a consumer financial product or service. One of the items that falls under both section 5481(5)(A) and (B) is "extending credit and servicing loans, including acquiring, purchasing, selling, brokering, or other extensions of credit (other than solely extending commercial credit to a person who originates consumer credit transactions)."[218]

The validation information must also include the account number, if any, associated with the debt on the itemization date,[219] or a truncated version of that number.[220] This account number is thus typically the one assigned by the originating creditor, not by the debt collector. The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide: "If a debt collector uses a truncated account number, the account number must remain recognizable. For example, a debt collector may truncate a credit card account number so that only the last four digits are provided."[221]

9.4.7 The Debt Amount and Its Itemization

9.4.7.1 Generally

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the validation information must include three different disclosures related to the debt amount: the debt amount on the itemization date,[222] an itemization of the current debt amount,[223] and the total of the current amount of debt.[224]

The itemization date itself must also be disclosed as part of the validation information.[225] The definition of that term and the five possible reference dates are discussed at § 9.4.2, supra.

As described in § 9.4.7.5, infra, an exception is made for certain residential mortgage loans, which have different requirements. However, the itemization date, amount of the debt as of the itemization date, itemization of the current amount of the debt since the itemization date, and the current amount of the debt is otherwise required, and a debt collector violates Regulation F if they are not disclosed to the consumer.[226]

Debt collectors can provide the required information by following these four steps:

1. Select the itemization date;
2. Determine the amount of the debt as of the itemization date;
3. Determine the Itemized amounts since the itemization date; and
4. Determine the current amount of the debt.[227]

9.4.7.2 Debt Amount As of Itemization Date

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the required disclosure of the debt amount on the itemization date[228] includes any fees, interest, or other charges owed as of that date.[229] Guidance provided by the CFPB explains that "the amount of the debt as of the itemization date may be the amount of the debt that is required to bring the account current as of that date or the total outstanding debt as of that date."[230]

The itemization date, as described at § 9.4.2, supra, is one of the following reference dates the collector consistently uses:

- The last statement date;
- The charge-off date;
- The last payment date;
- The transaction date; and
- The judgment date.[231]

9.4.7.3 Itemization of Charges Since Itemization Date

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the second disclosure related to the amount of the debt that must be included as part of the validation information is an itemization of the current amount of the debt reflecting interest, fees, payments, and credits since the itemization date.[232]

Regulation F does not specify a particular method for calculating interest. The CFPB's guidance states that debt collectors

211 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(iii).
212 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(viii). See § 9.6.1, infra.
213 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5802 (Jan. 19, 2021).
214 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(iii)-1.
215 Reg. F § 1006.2(f).
216 Available at https://www.govinfo.gov.
217 12 U.S.C. § 5481(5)(B) ("clause (i), (iii), (ix), or (x) of paragraph (15)(A), and is delivered, offered, or provided in connection with a consumer financial product or service referred to in subparagraph (A)").
218 15 U.S.C. § 5481(15)(A)(i).
219 See § 9.4.2, supra.
220 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(iv).
221 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(iv)-1.
222 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(vii).
223 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii).
224 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix).
225 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(vi).
226 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 4 (Oct. 29, 2021).
227 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 4 (Oct. 29, 2021).
228 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(vii).
229 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(vii)-1.
230 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 8 (Oct. 29, 2021).
231 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(3).
232 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii).

"may use the interest accrual method (e.g., monthly, simple interest, average daily balance method) in any underlying debt agreement, or may use a method that is otherwise customarily used for the debt."[233]

The Reg. F supplemental information states:

> Depending on the facts and circumstances, a third-party payment or insurance adjustment may be disclosed as a "payment" or a "credit" in the itemization. Also depending on the facts and circumstances, a payment that is returned may be omitted from the itemization provided that the payment and the return offset each other, and provided that the amount of the debt owed on the itemization date pursuant to [Reg. F] § 1006.34(c)(2)(vii) and the current amount of the debt pursuant to [Reg. F] § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix) are accurately disclosed.[234]

CFPB guidance states that debt collectors can omit interest, fees, payments, or credits that were made after the itemization date but returned or reversed before the current date.[235]

In a validation notice, there must be fields for interest, fees, payments, and credits, even if none of the items have been assessed or applied to the debt since the itemization date, and the debt collector may not leave a required field blank.[236] If there has been no charge for an item, the debt collector may indicate "0," "none," or may state that no interest, fees, payments, or credits have been assessed or applied to the debt.[237] The Regulation F supplemental information specifically rejects the use of N/A because its meaning is not clear to consumers.[238] The use of "U" for unknown or unavailable is not allowed—the collector must determine the itemization amounts and disclose them.[239]

CFPB guidance states that the amount of the debt listed on the itemization date plus the itemized amounts need not add up to the current amount of the debt.[240] This may be because some amounts cannot be categorized as interest, fees, payments, or credits.[241] For example, a creditor may provide another service to the consumer after the itemization date that is part of the debt being collected.[242] This amount still needs to be reflected in the current amount due, although not included in the itemization.[243]

The Supplemental Information also provides that the itemization of the current amount of the debt should not be more detailed than the categories specified in the regulation (e.g., it should not include a detailed list of all payments).[244]

The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide:

> If a debt collector is required by other applicable law to provide an itemization of the current amount of the debt with the validation information, the debt collector may comply with [Reg. F] § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) by disclosing the itemization required by other applicable law in lieu of the itemization described in [Reg. F] § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii), if the itemization required by other applicable law is substantially similar to the itemization that appears on Model Form B-1 in appendix B to this part.[245]

The Regulation F supplemental information indicates that only New York[246] requires a substantially similar disclosure.[247]

A debt collector who combines multiple debts on a single validation notice can disclose either a single, cumulative itemization as the validation information or a separate itemization of each debt on a separate page or pages provided in the same communication as the validation notice.[248] If a debt collector discloses the itemization on a separate page provided in the same communication with a validation notice, the collector must include on the validation notice, where the itemization would have appeared, a statement referring to that separate page.[249] Such a reference on the validation notice could be: "See the enclosed separate page for an itemization of the debt," situated next to the information about the current amount of the debt.[250] For both methods, the debt collector must use a single itemization date for all accounts.[251]

A debt collector that provides itemizations on a separate page can still take advantage of the safe harbor, but it does not apply to any content on a separate page.[252]

9.4.7.4 Current Amount Due

Under Regulation F, the third disclosure related to the amount of the debt that must be included as part of the validation information is the current amount of the debt,[253] that is the amount as of when the validation information is provided.[254] The disclosure is proper as long as the collector provides the correct balance as of the date the validation information is submitted (e.g., not some earlier date).[255]

"For residential mortgage debt subject to Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41,[256] a debt collector may comply with the requirement to provide the current amount of the debt by

233 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 8 (Oct. 29, 2021).
234 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5807 (Jan. 19, 2021).
235 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 10 (Oct. 29, 2021).
236 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(viii)-1.
237 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(viii)-1.
238 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5807 (Jan. 19, 2021).
239 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5807 (Jan. 19, 2021).
240 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 10–11 (Oct. 29, 2021).
241 Id. at 10.
242 Id. at 11.
243 Id. at 10–11.
244 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5807 (Jan. 19, 2021).
245 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(viii)-2.
246 23 N.Y. Codes, Rules and Regulations § 1.2(b)(2).
247 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5807 (Jan. 19, 2021).
248 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(viii)-4.
249 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii).
250 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(viii)-3.
251 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 26–27 (Oct. 29, 2021).
252 CFPB, Debt Collection Rule: Disclosing the Model Validation Notice Itemization Table 2 (Oct. 29, 2021).
253 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix).
254 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(ix)-1.
255 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5808 (Jan. 19, 2021).
256 See § 9.4.7.5, infra.

providing the consumer the total balance of the outstanding mortgage, including principal, interest, fees, and other charges."[257]

While a dynamic balance disclosure is not required validation information, the Regulation F supplemental information indicates that "debt collectors may include a disclosure pursuant to a judicial decision or order that the current amount of the debt may increase or vary due to interest, fees, or other charges."[258] Such information would be a permissible optional disclosure if it is "specifically required by, or that provide safe harbors under, applicable law."[259]

Debt collectors who combine multiple debts in a single validation notice must disclose a single cumulative figure that is the sum of the current amount of all the debts.[260] Even if the debt collector provides separate itemizations for each debt, there must be only one total for the amount due, calculated as of the date the validation information is provided.

9.4.7.5 Exception for Certain Residential Mortgage Debt

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) has an exception as to information found on the validation notice for certain residential mortgage debt. The exception applies to the amount of the debt as of the itemization date, an itemization of the current amount of the debt, and the itemization date itself.[261]

The exception applies to residential mortgage debt, if a periodic statement is required under Truth in Lending Reg. Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41, as of the time a debt collector provides the validation notice.[262] The Regulation F exception is limited only to mortgages covered by this specific Regulation Z provision.[263]

The Regulation Z provision requires a periodic statement only for closed-end consumer credit transaction secured by a dwelling.[264] It does not apply to open-end credit, such as home equity lines of credit[265] or credit card debt secured by a dwelling. The Regulation Z provision also explicitly excludes certain other mortgages. It does not apply to reverse mortgages,[266] timeshare plans or any mortgage (even closed-end consumer credit transactions secured by a dwelling) if the consumer's payment obligation is set out in a coupon book meeting certain requirements set out in Regulation Z.[267] See generally NCLC's Truth in Lending § 5.15.12.1 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

If Reg. Z § 1026.41 applies, then it has its own disclosure requirements as to the amount owing, and Regulation F allows the validation notice not to include the debt amount as of the itemization date, an itemization of the current debt, and the itemization date itself.[268] If Reg. Z § 1026.41 applies, the collector then instead must provide the consumer, in the same communication with the validation notice, a copy of the most recent periodic statement provided to the consumer under Reg. Z § 1026.41(b).[269]

In a FAQ, the CFPB clarifies that, "the most recent periodic statement is the periodic statement required under Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41, that was most recently provided to the consumer," and that this, "may be one that is provided by a debt collector (who is not a creditor), as long as that periodic statement was required by Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41, at the time it was provided. 12 C.F.R. § 1006.34(c)(5)."[270] The FAQ provides the following example:

> [A]ssume the servicing of a mortgage account was transferred to a mortgage servicer who is also a debt collector (as defined in the Rule) and who plans to use the Special Rule when providing the validation information. A periodic statement (required by Regulation Z, 12 C.F.R. § 1026.41) provided to the consumer by that debt collector after the transfer of servicing can be the most recent periodic statement for purposes of the Special Rule, if it was the last periodic statement provided to the consumer.[271]

The collector must also include on the validation notice, where the itemization information would have appeared, a statement referring to that periodic statement.[272] An example of a statement referring to the periodic statement would be: "See the enclosed periodic statement for an itemization of the debt."[273]

In a FAQ, the CFPB cautions that:

> [E]ven though, under the Special Rule, no itemization date is required to be disclosed on the validation notice, a debt collector who uses the Special Rule must still determine the itemization date so that the other validation information tied to the itemization date may be disclosed. This includes the name of the creditor to whom the debt was owed on the itemization date and the account number, if any, associated with the debt on the itemization date. 12 C.F.R. § 1006.34(c)(2)(iii) and (iv).[274]

The CFPB further clarifies that this itemization date must be the "the date of the most recent periodic statement that is provided to the consumer under the Special Rule."[275]

The FAQ also clarifies that:

> [W]hile the Itemization Table on the model validation notice includes the validation information that may be

257 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(ix)-1.
258 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5808 (Jan. 19, 2021).
259 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv). See § 9.6.2, infra.
260 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(ix)-2.
261 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(5).
262 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(5).
263 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5818, 5819 (Jan. 19, 2021).
264 12 C.F.R. 1026.41(a).
265 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5818, 5819 (Jan. 19, 2021).
266 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5818 (Jan. 19, 2021).
267 12 C.F.R. 1026.41(e).
268 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(5).
269 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(5)(i).
270 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #4, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
271 Id.
272 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(5)(ii).
273 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(5)-1.
274 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #2, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
275 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #5, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

omitted, it also includes the current amount of the debt, which is validation information that may not be omitted from the validation notice under the Special Rule. 12 C.F.R. § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix) and 34(c)(5). A debt collector who uses the Special Rule must still disclose the current amount of the debt on the validation notice.[276]

A debt collector that uses the model validation notice but uses the exception in Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(5) can qualify for a safe harbor, but that safe harbor would not apply to the content or format of the periodic mortgage statement.[277]

9.4.8 Notice of Rights to Dispute or Request Original Creditor Information

9.4.8.1 Calculating the End of the Validation Period

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) sets out as required validation information disclosures about three sets of consumer rights, all of which include disclosure of the date that the debt collector will consider the end date of the validation period.[278]

The validation period is defined in Regulation F as starting on the date that a debt collector provides the validation information and ending thirty days after the consumer "receives or is assumed to receive" the validation information.[279] The debt collector may assume that a consumer receives the validation information on any date that is at least five days (excluding legal public holidays identified in 5 U.S.C. 6103(a), Saturdays, and Sundays) after the debt collector provides it.[280]

Regulation F Official Interpretations provide:

> If a debt collector provides the validation information in writing or electronically, then, at the time that the debt collector calculates the validation period end date, the debt collector will know only the date on which the consumer is assumed to receive the validation information. In such cases, the debt collector may use that date to calculate the validation period end date even if the debt collector later learns that the consumer received the validation information on a different date.[281]

Where the consumer did not receive the original validation notice and the debt collector sends a subsequent validation notice, the collector calculates the validation period's end date based on the date the consumer receives or is assumed to receive the subsequent validation notice.[282] The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide an example:

> For example, assume a debt collector sends a consumer a validation notice on January 1, and that notice is returned as undeliverable. After obtaining accurate location information, the debt collector sends the consumer a subsequent validation notice on January 15. Pursuant to [Reg. F] § 1006.34(b)(5), the end date of the validation period specified in the [Reg. F] § 1006.34(c)(3) disclosures is based on the date the consumer receives or is assumed to receive the validation notice sent on January 15.[283]

In Regulation F's supplemental information, the Bureau clarifies that the consumer just needs to send or submit the dispute or request for original creditor information "within the 30-day period established in [Reg. F] § 1006.34(b)(5), even if the debt collector does not receive the request until after the 30-day period."[284]

9.4.8.2 Three Disclosures of Consumer Rights

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), the debt collector in providing the validation information must make three disclosures of consumer rights, where each require disclosure of the date that the debt collector will consider the end date of the validation period.[285] The calculation of this date is discussed in § 9.4.8.1, supra. This subsection considers the rest of the content of the three disclosures. But each of the three must disclose the end date—it is not enough if one of the three disclose this date.[286]

The first disclosure of consumer rights involving the validation period end date is the disclosure that, if the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing, on or before the end of the validation period, that the debt or any portion of the debt is disputed, the debt collector must cease collection of the debt or the disputed portion of the debt until the debt collector sends the consumer either verification of the debt or a copy of a judgment.[287] The Regulation F supplemental information notes that "consumer testing indicates that knowing about the collections pause was important to consumers and would encourage them to exercise their dispute right if they questioned a debt's validity."[288]

The second disclosure is that, if the consumer requests in writing, on or before the end of the validation period, the name and address of the original creditor, the debt collector must cease collection of the debt until the debt collector sends the consumer the name and address of the original creditor, if different from the current creditor.[289]

The third disclosure is that, unless the consumer contacts the debt collector to dispute the validity of the debt or any portion of the debt on or before the end of the validation period,

276 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #2, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
277 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #3, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
278 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(i), (ii), (iii).
279 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(5).
280 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(5).
281 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(5)-1.
282 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(5)-2.
283 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(5)-2.
284 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5797 (Jan. 19, 2021).
285 Reg. F § 1006.34c)(3)(i), (ii), (iii).
286 Reg. F § 1006.34c)(3)(i), (ii), (iii). See, e.g., Reg. F Appx. B, B-1 Model Form for Validation Notice.
287 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(i).
288 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5810 (Jan. 19, 2021).
289 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(ii).

the debt collector will assume that the debt is valid.[290] This third disclosure, unlike the other two, does not require the dispute be provided in writing. The Regulation F supplemental information takes the position that the dispute can be in writing or oral,[291] and the model validation notice states for this disclosure "call or write to us."[292] It should thus be a violation if the disclosure requires this dispute be in writing.[293]

9.4.9 Disclosure of CFPB Website for More Information

If the debt collector is collecting debt related to a consumer financial product or service,[294] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) requires the validation information to include a statement that informs the consumer that additional information regarding consumer protections in debt collection is available on the Bureau's website at www.cfpb.gov/debt-collection.[295] Even if the debt is not related to a consumer financial product or service, a debt collector can disclose this information and not lose its safe harbor when it uses the CFPB's model validation form.[296] The Regulation F supplemental information states "[t]he Bureau's website will disclose more information about consumer protections in debt collection, including about the cease communication right."[297]

The debt collector cannot disclose the url for the CFPB's general landing page; it must disclose the specific link.[298]

The web address need not be a live hyperlink, but only include the text of the address, even if disclosed in an electronic validation notice.[299]

9.4.10 Method of Consumer Electronically Requesting Creditor's Address or Disputing the Debt

If the debt collector sends the validation notice electronically, then the collector must also make an additional disclosure on that notice. It must provide a statement explaining how a consumer can, as described in the consumer response disclosure discussed at § 9.4.10, supra, electronically dispute the debt or request original-creditor information.[300]

The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide that a debt collector may comply with this requirement by including two statements. The first is "We accept disputes electronically at," using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase, followed by an email address or website portal that a consumer can use to dispute the debt.[301] The second is "We accept original creditor information requests electronically," using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase, followed by an email address or website portal that a consumer can use to request the original creditor information.[302]

If a debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers through more than one medium, such as by email and through a website portal, the debt collector is required to provide information regarding only one of these mediums.[303] Nevertheless, the collector can provide information on additional mediums through which it accepts electronic communications.[304]

9.4.11 Consumer Response Information

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that the collector must specify how the consumer can dispute the debt or request information about the creditor. The consumer response information must be segregated from all other required or optional information contained in the validation notice.[305] If the consumer response information is provided on a validation notice, it must be located at the bottom of the notice under the headings, "How do you want to respond?" and "Check all that apply: . . ."[306]

The regulation provides for separate prompts for disputing the debt and requesting original creditor information that are situated alongside possible consumer responses. The Reg. F Official Interpretations provide that a prompt may be formatted as a checkbox as in Reg. F Appendix B-1, the Model Validation Notice.[307]

For disputing the debt, the collector must provide a series of statements in the following order, and using the following phrasing or substantially similar phrasing, each next to a prompt:

- "I want to dispute the debt because I think: . . .";
- "This is not my debt";
- "The amount is wrong"; and
- "Other (please describe on reverse or attach additional information)."[308]

For requesting original creditor information, the collector must provide the following phrase or a substantially similar phrase next to a prompt: "I want you to send me the name and address of the original creditor."[309]

This separate area with the consumer response information must contain the mailing addresses for the consumer and the debt collector.[310] The consumer's mailing address presumably is to assist the collector in identifying the consumer requesting 290 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(iii).

291 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5811 (Jan. 19, 2021).
292 Reg. F Appx. B-1 Model Form for Validation Notice.
293 See § 9.7.5, supra.
294 Consumer financial product or service is defined in Reg. F § 1006.2(f). See § 9.4.6, supra.
295 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(iv).
296 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(viii). See § 9.6.1, infra.
297 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5809 (Jan. 19, 2021).
298 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5812 (Jan. 19, 2021).
299 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5813 (Jan. 19, 2021).
300 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(v).
301 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(3)(v)-1.
302 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(3)(v)-1.
303 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(3)(v)-1.
304 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(3)(v)-1.
305 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4).
306 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4).
307 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(4)-1.
308 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4)(i).
309 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4)(i).
310 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4)(iii).

the information. The regulation[311] requires that the debt collector's and the consumer's names and mailing addresses be identical to those disclosed earlier in the validation notice.[312]

The model validation notice allows the consumer to tear off the consumer response information so that the consumer can indicate the consumer's reply directly on that part of the notice, tear it off, and send it to the debt collector.[313] If the collector's validation notice does not allow for a tear off, it loses the safe harbor of otherwise using the model notice.[314]

The Reg. F supplemental information provides that "the consumer-response information section should be formatted for use with a return envelope."[315] But the collector is not required to include return envelopes with validation notices, even if they use the model notice.[316]

9.5 Form of Required Validation Information Under Reg. F § 1006.34

9.5.1 Clear and Conspicuous

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) requires validation information, as specified in § 9.5, supra, to be "clear and conspicuous."[317] "Clear and conspicuous" is a defined term, meaning:

> [R]eadily understandable. In the case of written and electronic disclosures, the location and type size also must be readily noticeable and legible to consumers, although no minimum type size is mandated. In the case of oral disclosures, the disclosures also must be given at a volume and speed sufficient for the consumer to hear and comprehend them.[318]

The Regulation F supplemental information concludes that, "debt collectors satisfying State-law minimum-font-size requirements will also satisfy the standard in [Reg. F] § 1006.34(b)(1) for a type size that is readily noticeable and legible to consumers."[319]

9.5.2 The Model Form B-1 Safe Harbor

9.5.2.1 Extent of the Safe Harbor

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides a safe harbor for debt collectors providing validation information. A debt collector who uses the model validation notice found at Reg. F Appx. B-1 complies with the Regulation F information and form requirements of section 1006.34(c) and (d)(1).[320] A debt collector who uses the model validation note also complies with Reg. F § 1006.38(b)(1), as discussed in § 9.6.1, infra.

The safe harbor does not apply to the delivery of the validation notice,[321] manner in which a validation notice is provided (e.g., envelope notice is mailed in),[322] or other collector communications during the validation period.[323]

Nor does the safe harbor apply to inaccurate or deceptive information provided on a validation notice otherwise complying with the model form.[324] The Regulation F supplemental information clarifies:

> The Bureau declines to extend the [Reg. F] § 1006.34(d)(2) safe harbor to cover compliance with FDCPA section 807's [§ 1692e's] prohibition on false or misleading statements. A debt collector who uses the model validation notice is still capable of making false or misleading statements to consumers in the notice. For example, a debt collector using the model validation notice could include false or misleading information about the debt, such as an inflated current amount of the debt.[325]

Use of the model validation notice is optional.[326] As the CFPB's FAQ explains:

> [T]he Rule requires compliance with the validation information content and format requirements in Regulation F. 12 C.F.R. § 1006.34(d)(2); see also 12 C.F.R. § 1006.34(c) and 34(d)(1). The model validation notice provides one way to comply with those requirements . . . However, if a debt collector makes changes to the content or format of the model validation notice such that the notice is not substantially similar to the model validation notice, the debt collector generally will not obtain the Rule's safe harbor for the validation information content and format requirements. 12 C.F.R. § 1006.34(d)(2); see also 12 C.F.R. § 1006.34(c) and 34(d)(1).[327]

9.5.2.2 Optional Information and the Safe Harbor

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that any and all optional information found on the model validation notice

311 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4)(iii).
312 See §§ 9.4.4, 9.4.5, supra.
313 See Reg. F, Appx. B-1, Model Form of Validation Notice.
314 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5815 (Jan. 19, 2021).
315 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5815 (Jan. 19, 2021).
316 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5815 (Jan. 19, 2021).
317 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(1).
318 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(1).
319 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5789 (Jan. 19, 2021).
320 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2)(i).
321 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5820 (Jan. 19, 2021) ("The Bureau recognizes the risk that a debt collector could deliver the model validation notice in an ineffective manner and that, as a result, the notice would be delayed or never received by the consumer.").
322 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5835 (Jan. 19, 2021).
323 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5835 (Jan. 19, 2021).
324 See CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #2, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov ("Generally, the validation information content and format safe harbor does not apply to other provisions of the Rule or the FDCPA. For example, when a debt collector obtains the safe harbor for the content and format requirements, if the debt collector discloses an incorrect amount in the model validation notice, the debt collector violates the prohibition against providing false or misleading information").
325 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5821 (Jan. 19, 2021).
326 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #3, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
327 Id. See § 9.5.2.3, infra.

can be omitted and the validation notice still can benefit from the safe harbor.[328] Similarly, the collector still benefits from the safe harbor if it includes optional information not already found on the model validation notice, as described at § 9.6, infra, provided such optional disclosures are no more prominent than any of the required validation information.[329] The Regulation F supplemental information provides: "A debt collector who chooses to include one or more of the [Reg. F] § 1006.34(d)(3) optional disclosures that do not appear on the model validation notice, but who violates the no-more-prominent requirement, loses the safe harbor under [Reg. F] § 1006.34(d)(2) and may violate [Reg. F] § 1006.34 depending on the facts and circumstances."[330]

The Reg. F supplemental information provides:

> The Bureau clarifies that, if a debt collector includes disclosures other than (1) the required validation information, (2) any optional disclosures described in [Reg. F] § 1006.34(d)(3), or (3) any disclosures that, if included, still leave the form substantially similar in substance, clarity, and meaningful sequence to the model notice, then the safe harbor does not apply with respect to the entirety of the validation notice.[331]

9.5.2.3 Permitted Deviations from the Model Validation Notice

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) states that certain validation information can be on a separate page,[332] if properly referenced in the validation notice. The debt collector who uses the model validation notice and properly references the separate page in the validation notice receives a safe harbor as to the validation notice, but not as to the information on the separate page.[333] The information on the separate page can still violate the Regulation F form and information requirements.

The debt collector can also make changes to the form and retain a safe harbor, provided that the form remains substantially similar to the model validation notice.[334] On the other hand, a debt collector receives no safe harbor if the validation notice does not use the model validation notice or use a substantially similar form.[335] A validation notice that does not qualify for a safe harbor does not necessarily violate Regulation F.[336]

The Regulation F Official Interpretations require that the form remain "substantially similar in substance, clarity, and meaningful sequence to Model Form B-1" to retain the safe harbor.[337] The Official Interpretations then provide five examples of permissible changes:

1. Modifications to remove language that could suggest liability for the debt if such language is not applicable. For example, if a debt collector sends a validation notice to a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate (see comment 34(a)(1)-1), and that person is not liable for the debt, the debt collector may use the name of the deceased consumer instead of "you";
2. Relocating the consumer-response information required by [Reg. F] § 1006.34(c)(4) to facilitate mailing;
3. Adding barcodes or QR codes, as long as the inclusion of such items does not violate [Reg. F] § 1006.38(b) [the prohibition on overshadowing];
4. Adding the date the form is generated; and
5. Embedding hyperlinks, if delivering the form electronically.[338]

In a FAQ the CFPB clarifies that:

> [A] debt collector may choose to add content that is not required by the Rule and is not enumerated in the optional content provisions. The Rule would not necessarily prohibit that additional content, as long as the other requirements and prohibitions in the Rule and the FDCPA are met, such as the prohibition against overshadowing the consumer's rights to dispute or request original-creditor information. However, if that change results in a notice that is not substantially similar to the model validation notice, the debt collector would not receive the validation information content and format safe harbor.[339]

9.5.3 Form of Electronic Validation Notice

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) authorizes optional formatting for electronic validation notices.[340] Although a debt collector need not follow this format, use of a different format must otherwise comply with Regulation F.

Prompts as required for the consumer response information,[341] the optional payment option disclosures,[342] and the optional request for the form in Spanish,[343] may be displayed electronically as a fillable field.[344] Hyperlinks may be embedded that, when clicked:

- Connect a consumer to www.cfpb.gov/debt-collection to comply with one of the required validation disclosures;[345]
- Permit a consumer to respond to the dispute and original-creditor information prompts required as the consumer response information disclosures;[346] or
- Connect a consumer to the debt collector's website.[347]

328 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2)(i)(A).
329 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2)(i)(B).
330 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5821 (Jan. 19, 2021).
331 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5822 (Jan. 19, 2021).
332 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(viii) or (5). See §§ 9.4.7.3, 9.4.7.5, supra.
333 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2)(ii).
334 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2)(iii).
335 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(2)-1.
336 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #4, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
337 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(2)(iii)-1.
338 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(2)(iii)-1.
339 CFPB, FAQ, Validation Information: Residential Mortgage Debt #4, available at https://www.consumerfinance.gov.
340 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(4).
341 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4)(i), (ii). See § 9.4.10, supra.
342 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iii)(B). See § 9.6.1, infra.
343 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi)(B). See § 9.6.3, infra.
344 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(4)(i).
345 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(iv). See § 9.4.9, supra.
346 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4)(i), (ii). See § 9.4.11, supra.
347 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(4)(ii).

9.5.4 Translations into Other Languages

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) allows for the validation notice to be provided in any language when specific requirements are met. First, the validation notice must be completely and accurately translated.[348] Regulation F provides a safe harbor for the notice being completely and accurately translated if the collector obtains the language of a validation notice from the CFPB's website.[349] The Regulation F supplemental information states:

> Regarding the request by a group of consumer advocate commenters that the Bureau translate the validation notice into Spanish and seven other languages and deem the Bureau translations as complete and accurate, the Bureau plans to make available on its website, prior to the effective date of the final rule, a Spanish-language translation of the validation notice, and it will consider taking such action in the future with respect to one or more of the other languages cited by these commenters following implementation of the final rule.[350]

Since issuing the final rule, the Bureau has provided a Spanish-language model validation notice.[351] Debt collectors are permitted to use other validation notice translations if they are complete and accurate.[352]

An English-language version must be included in the same communication as the translated validation notice,[353] unless the collector has already sent the consumer an English language version.[354] For example, where the consumer requests a Spanish language version after receiving the English language version, the collector can send the Spanish language version without sending again the English language version.

The use of a validation notice in other languages is optional and it also optional to provide either or both of the disclosures about the ability to request a Spanish language translation.[355] But if the debt collector includes in the validation information either or both of the optional disclosures, and then the consumer requests a Spanish-language validation notice, the collector must provide the consumer a validation notice completely and accurately translated into Spanish.[356]

9.6 Optional Validation Information Under Reg. F § 1006.34

9.6.1 Overview

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), a debt collector adding any of the eight types of optional validation information does not lose a safe harbor where the debt collector otherwise complies or substantially complies with Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2), as described at § 9.6.2, supra.[357] A collector providing any additional disclosures, beyond those eight types of optional disclosures, loses the safe harbor. Then it will be a question as to whether the validation notice violates any Regulation F provisions, such as the prohibition on overshadowing.

The eight types of optional validation information are:

1. The debt collector's telephone contact information.[358] Contact information includes not only the number, but the times that the debt collector accepts consumer telephone calls.[359]
2. A number or code that the debt collector uses to identify the debt or the consumer.[360]
3. Either or both of the following phrases:
   - The statement, "Contact us about your payment options," using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase; and
   - Below the consumer-response information described at § 9.4.10, supra, the statement, "I enclosed this amount:"—using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase, payment instructions after that statement, and a prompt.[361]
4. Disclosures under applicable law, as described at § 9.6.2, infra.[362]
5. The debt collector's website and email address. If the validation information is not provided electronically, a statement explaining how a consumer can electronically dispute the debt or request original-creditor information, as described at § 9.4.9, supra.[363]
6. Disclosures regarding a consumer's ability to request a Spanish-language translation of a validation notice, as described at § 9.6.3, infra.[364]
7. The merchant brand, affinity brand, or facility name, if any, associated with the debt, as described at § 9.6.4, infra.[365]
8. Where a debt is not related to a consumer financial product or service,[366] the required disclosures where 348 Reg. F § 1006.34(e)(1).

349 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(e)-1.
350 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5833 (Jan. 19, 2021).
351 See CFPB, Debt Collection Model Forms: Model Validation Notice—Spanish translation (Oct. 2021), available at https://files.consumerfinance.gov.
352 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(e)-1.
353 Reg. F § 1006.34(e)(1)(i).
354 Reg. F § 1006.34(e)(1)(ii).
355 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi)(A), (B). See § 9.6.3, infra.
356 Reg. F § 1006.34(e)(2).
357 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3).
358 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(i).
359 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(i)-1.
360 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(ii).
361 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iii).
362 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv).
363 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(v).
364 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi).
365 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vii).
366 Consumer financial product or service is defined at Reg. F § 1006.2(f). See § 9.4.6, supra.

a debt relates to a consumer financial produce or service: the creditor's name on the itemization date[367] and a statement that informs the consumer that additional information regarding consumer protections in debt collection is available on the Bureau's website at www.cfpb.gov/debt-collection.[368]

9.6.2 Optional Disclosures Under Applicable Law

9.6.2.1 Generally

"Disclosures required under applicable law" is one of the eight optional types of validation information that can be added to the model validation notice.[369] Collectors can add one or more of these types of optional validation information and still retain the safe harbor for use of the model validation notice.[370]

The rules specify where disclosures required under applicable law can be placed on the validation notice. Time-barred debt disclosures that otherwise meet the requirements may be placed on the front of the validation notice.[371] Other disclosures under applicable law must be on the back of the validation notice to retain the safe harbor.[372]

9.6.2.2 Applicable Law Disclosures on Front of Validation Notice

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), debt collectors can place the optional validation information "disclosures under applicable law" on the front of the validation notice (under disclosure of the current amount of the debt)[373] in certain circumstances. Specifically, the debt collector must be collecting time-barred debt, the applicable law must require a time-barred debt disclosure or provides a safe harbor, and the applicable law must specify the content of the disclosure.[374] The definition of time-barred debt is found at Reg. F § 1006.26(a)(2) and discussed at § 7.4.9.3, supra.

The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide this example:

> [I]f applicable State law requires a debt collector who is collecting time-barred debt to disclose to the consumer that the law limits how long a consumer can be sued on a debt and that the debt collector cannot or will not sue the consumer to collect it, the debt collector may include that disclosure on the front of the validation notice.[375]

Disclosures about revival of debt collectors' right to bring a legal action to enforce the debt are another example of a time-barred debt disclosure that may be provided on the front of a validation notice if they otherwise comply with the requirements outlined above.[376]

Multiple jurisdictions have time-barred debt disclosure requirements.[377] However, not all provisions related to disclosures of time-barred debt specify required language or language that would provide a safe harbor.[378] In jurisdictions that do not specify the language, debt collectors would still be able to include the required disclosure on the back of the validation notice.[379]

The CFPB has found no example of a state law requiring disclosure on the front of the validation notice other than those relating to time-barred debt.[380] But if there were such an applicable law, the debt collector should comply with the applicable law, make the disclosure on the front of the validation notice, and lose the safe harbor in Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2) that would otherwise be available for using the model validation notice.[381] Losing the safe harbor does not mean that the validation notice necessarily violates Regulation F.[382]

9.6.2.3 Applicable Law Disclosures on Back of Validation Notice

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), other than the disclosures examined at § 9.6.2.2, supra, all other "disclosures under applicable law" must be on the back of the validation notice if the collector is to retain a safe harbor under Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2)[383] when using the model validation notice.

Disclosures placed on a second page do not qualify for the safe harbor.[384] Their placement on the back cannot be opposite the consumer response information[385] found on the front, so that the disclosure(s) are not returned with the consumer-response information.[386]

If disclosures required by law are included on the back of the validation notice, a statement on the front of the validation notice must refer to those disclosures.[387] A complying statement referencing disclosures on the back is "Notice: See reverse side for important information," or a substantially 367 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(iii). See § 9.4.6, supra. For more about the link to the Bureau's website required by Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(iv), see § 9.4.9, supra.

368 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(viii).
369 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv).
370 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2). See § 9.5.2, supra.
371 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(B). See § 9.6.2.2, infra.
372 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(A). See § 9.6.2.3, infra.
373 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix). See § 9.4.7.4, supra.
374 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(B).
375 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(iv)(B)-1.
376 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(iv)(B)-1.
377 Cal. Civ. Code § 1788.14(d); Conn. Gen. Stat. § 36a-805(a)(14); Mass. Regs. Code tit. 940, § 7.07(24); N.M. Admin. Code § 12.2.12.9; N.Y. Comp. Codes R. & Regs. tit. 23, § 1.3; N.Y.C. Admin. Code § 20-493.2(b); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-115(1); Tex. Fin. Code Ann. § 392-307(e); W. Va. Code § 46a-2-128(f); Code Vt. R. 6-31-4 § 104 05(a); City of Yonkers Code § 31-162.1(B). See also Nev. Rev. Stat. § 649.332(2)(a)(2) (requiring revival disclosure when collecting debts on behalf of hospital regardless of whether debt is currently time-barred).
378 See, e.g., N.C. Gen. Stat. § 58-70-115(1); Code Vt. R. 6-31-4 § 104.05(a).
379 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(iv)(A)-1.
380 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5827 (Jan. 19, 2021).
381 See § 9.5.2, supra.
382 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5827 (Jan. 19, 2021).
383 See § 9.5.2, supra.
384 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5829 (Jan. 19, 2021).
385 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(4). See § 9.4.11, supra.
386 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(A). See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5829 (Jan. 19, 2021).
387 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(A).

similar statement.[388] On the other hand, to retain the safe harbor, the reference to information on the back cannot be on the front if there is no such information on the back.[389]

If the validation notice is provided in an email, the debt collector may include the applicable law disclosures in the same communication below the content of the validation notice.[390] In that case, the collector may comply with the requirement to refer to the disclosures on the front of the validation notice by stating instead, "Notice: See below for important information," or a substantially similar statement.[391]

The disclosures under applicable law that may be placed on the back of the validation notice and retain the safe harbor are limited to disclosures "specifically required by, or that provide safe harbors under applicable law."[392] This includes specific "disclosures required by federal, state, or municipal statutes or regulations, and specific disclosures required by judicial or administrative decisions or orders, including administrative consent orders."[393] The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide this example: "Such disclosures could include, for example, time-barred debt disclosures and disclosures that the current amount of the debt may increase or vary due to interest, fees, or other charges, provided that such disclosures are specifically required by applicable law."[394]

Disclosures that allow the collector to retain the safe harbor are strictly limited to those required by law. The Reg. F supplemental information states: "On the other hand, the Bureau declines to allow debt collectors to include disclosures on the validation notice that are merely permitted by other applicable law and still retain the safe harbor."[395] The Reg. F supplemental information explains:

> As such, the Bureau emphasizes that this provision is not intended to capture circumstances in which a debt collector is not providing a disclosure that is required under a specific law, decision, or order, but rather the debt collector is providing a disclosure to try to comply with a more general legal requirement. For example, if the debt collector were to add language to the validation notice to try to avoid a finding of an unfair, deceptive, or abusive practice under Dodd-Frank Act section 1031 or the FDCPA, that is not an optional disclosure covered by [Reg. F] § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv). Debt collectors are not precluded from making such disclosures, but they will not receive the safe harbor under [Reg. F] § 1006.34(d)(2).[396]

9.6.3 Disclosure of Ability to Request Spanish Language Translation

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides two disclosures regarding a consumer's ability to request a Spanish-language translation of a validation notice.[397] The collector has the option to provide both, only one, or neither and retain the safe harbor under Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(2)[398] when using the model validation notice.

One optional statement is "Póngase en contacto con nosotros para solicitar una copia de este formulario en español" (which means "Contact us to request a copy of this form in Spanish"), using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase in Spanish.[399] A debt collector may also include supplemental information in Spanish that specifies how a consumer may request a Spanish-language validation notice.[400] For example, a debt collector may include a statement in Spanish that a consumer can request a Spanish-language validation notice by telephone or email, if the debt collector accepts consumer requests through those communication media.[401]

The other optional disclosure regarding a consumer's ability to request a Spanish-language translation of a validation notice must be placed with the consumer response information discussed at § 9.4.10, supra.[402] The disclosure states "Quiero este formulario en español" (which means "I want this form in Spanish"), using that phrase or a substantially similar phrase in Spanish, next to a prompt, such as a checkbox.[403]

It is optional to provide either or both disclosures.[404] But if the debt collector includes in the validation information either or both disclosures, and then the consumer requests a Spanish-language validation notice, the collector must provide the consumer a validation notice completely and accurately translated into Spanish.[405] For a discussion of the term "complete and accurate," see § 9.5.4, supra.

The Bureau declined to mandate that the Spanish-language validation notice would restart the validation period, but noted that debt collectors that do restart the validation period with the new notice do not violate Regulation F.[406] A debt collector sending the validation notice in Spanish is not obligated to use the Spanish language in subsequent communications.[407]

388 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(iv)(A)-2.
The model validation notice uses this format to disclose this reference to the back of the form: it is in bold, separated from the rest of the text, and "Notice" is bold and underlined. This was a considered decision by the CFPB. See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5828–5829 (Jan. 19, 2021).
389 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5829 (Jan. 19, 2021).
390 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(iv)(A)-1.
391 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(iv)(A)-2.
392 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(A).
393 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(iv)(A)-1.
394 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(iv)(A)-1.
395 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5828 (Jan. 19, 2021).
396 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5827 (Jan. 19, 2021).
397 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi).
398 See § 9.5.2, supra.
399 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi)(A).
400 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi)(A).
401 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(vi)(A)-1.
402 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi)(B).
403 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi)(B).
404 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vi).
405 Reg. F § 1006.34(e)(2).
406 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5830 (Jan. 19, 2021).
407 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5830 (Jan. 19, 2021).

9.6.4 Merchant Brand, Affinity Brand, or Facility Name

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) allows debt collectors to provide information about any merchant brand, affinity brand, or facility name associated with the debt.[408]

The Regulation F Official Interpretations give an example of a merchant brand. "For example, assume that a debt collector is attempting to collect a consumer's credit card debt. The credit card was issued by ABC Bank and was co-branded XYZ Store. "XYZ Store" is the merchant brand."[409]

The Regulation F supplemental information provides that an affinity brand "may reflect the labelling or branding of an entity that is not necessarily commercial but one with which the consumer has a relationship."[410] As an example: "[A]ssume that a debt collector is attempting to collect a consumer's credit card debt. The credit card was issued by ABC Bank, and the logo for the College of Columbia appears on the credit card. 'College of Columbia' is the affinity brand."[411]

The Regulation F Official Interpretations also give an example of a facility name. "For example, assume that a debt collector is attempting to collect a consumer's medical debt. The medical debt relates to a treatment that the consumer received at ABC Hospital. 'ABC Hospital' is the facility name."[412]

9.7 Substance of Validation Notice Prior to Regulation F

9.7.1 Overview

> (a) NOTICE OF DEBT; CONTENTS.—Within five days after the initial communication with a consumer in connection with the collection of any debt, a debt collector shall, unless the following information is contained in the initial communication or the consumer has paid the debt, send the consumer a written notice containing—
>
> (1) the amount of the debt;
>
> (2) the name of the creditor to whom the debt is owed;
>
> (3) a statement that unless the consumer, within thirty days after receipt of the notice, disputes the validity of the debt, or any portion thereof, the debt will be assumed to be valid by the debt collector;
>
> (4) a statement that if the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing within the thirty-day period that the debt, or any portion thereof, is disputed, the debt collector will obtain verification of the debt or a copy of a judgment against the consumer and a copy of such verification or judgment will be mailed to the consumer by the debt collector; and
>
> (5) a statement that, upon the consumer's written request within the thirty-day period, the debt collector will provide the consumer with the name and address of the original creditor, if different from the current creditor.[413]

The FDCPA specifies the contents of the validation notice that collectors are required to send consumers. Each element of the required notice must be effectively conveyed.[414]

An incomplete statement of the FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1) through (5) information violates the Act.[415] Prior to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), courts held that the language of the validation notice must be substantively the same as the statutory language.[416]

408 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(vii).

409 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(vii)-1.

410 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5831 (Jan. 19, 2021).

411 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(vii)-2.

412 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(d)(3)(vii)-3.

413 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a).

414 See § 9.3.5, supra.

415 See Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982); Lombardi v. Columbia Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5569465 (W.D. Wash. 2013) (omitted "any portion" of the debt); Wilson v. Mattleman, Weinroth & Miller, 2013 WL 2649507 (D.N.J. 2013) (failed to state that the debt would be assumed valid); Wenig v. Messerli & Kramer P.A., 2013 WL 1176062 (D. Minn. 2013) (failed to state thirty-day time period in which to submit written dispute); Welker v. Law Office of Horwitz, 626 F. Supp. 2d 1068 (S.D. Cal. 2009) (notice of written request requirement); McCabe v. Crawford & Co., 272 F. Supp. 2d 736 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (failure to state any portion of debt may be disputed and omitting words "in writing"); Dolan v. Schreiber & Assoc., P.C., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6005 (D. Mass. 2002), adopted, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5998 (D. Mass. 2002) (identity of original creditor misstated); Grief v. Wilson, Elser, Moskowitz, Edelman & Dicker, L.L.P., 217 F. Supp. 2d 336 (E.D.N.Y. 2002) (request for verification of debt or identity of original creditor must be in writing; amount of debt); McCabe v. Crawford & Co., 210 F.R.D. 631 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (omitted dispute must be "in writing" and may dispute "any portion" of debt); Prevete v. Margolin & Meltzger, 1998 WL 426700 (E.D.N.Y. 1998); Altergott v. Modern Collection Techniques, 1994 WL 319229 (N.D. Ill. 1994); Appx. E.2.6.5, infra. Cf. Henley v. Trustmark Recovery Services, 2016 WL 5922835 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 11, 2016) (§ 1692g notice's failure to repeat phrase "or any portion thereof" in second of its two sentences did not violate § 1692g). But cf. Bezpalko v. Gilfillan, Gilpin & Brehman, 1998 WL 321268 (E.D. Pa. 1998) (omission of right to dispute "any portion" of debt acceptable.

416 See, e.g., Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982); Bankston v. Phycom Corp., 2007 WL 4170627 (N.D. Cal. 2007); Dikun v. Streich, 369 F. Supp. 2d 781 (E.D. Va. 2005); Smith v. Hecker, 2005 WL 894812 (E.D. Pa. 2005); Foresberg v. Fid. Nat'l Credit Services, Ltd., 2004 WL 3510771 (S.D. Cal. 2004); Carbajal v. Capital One, 2003 WL 22595265 (N.D. Ill. 2003); Rosenburg v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2000 WL 420865 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 13, 2000); Harvey v. United Adjusters, 509 F. Supp. 1218 (D. Or. 1981). See also Nero v. Law Office of Sam Streeter, P.L.L.C., 655 F. Supp. 2d 200 (E.D.N.Y. 2009); FTC Official Staff Commentary §§ 809(a)-3, 809(a)-4, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; VerSteegh, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 4, 1988); Samuels, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 1, 1979). But see Campbell v. Hall, 624 F. Supp. 2d 991 (N.D. Ind. 2009) (omission of "receipt" language from start of thirty-day dispute period acceptable); Sebrow v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 2707341 (E.D.N.Y. 2009). But cf. Galuska v. Collectors Training Inst., Inc., 2007 WL 4080679 (M.D. Pa. 2007) (omission of "by the debt collector" acceptable); Rosenberg, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 16, 1991); Clement, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 12, 1985).

Regulation F's provisions for required and optional information as outlined in Reg. § 1006.34 are discussed in §§ 9.4 to 9.6, supra. Regulation F's model validation notice contains sample language.[417] Prior to Regulation F's expansion of the required validation information,[418] the debt collector only had to include the amount of the debt,[419] the name of the current creditor,[420] the debt collector's name and address,[421] a statement of the right to obtain the name of the original creditor,[422] a statement that the debt collector will assume the debt is valid if the consumer does not dispute the debt or a portion of it in thirty days,[423] and an explanation of the procedure for obtaining verification of the debt.[424] The validation notice must state that a portion of the debt may be disputed or verified.[425] The notice should be included in a single communication.[426]

This notice and its contents should be strictly required by the courts.[427] However, two courts have indicated that the notice may be effective if it instructs that the consumer may request verification of the debt without mention of the right to dispute the debt.[428] One court found that a debt collector's validation notice, which gave the consumer the option to dispute the debt on the debt collector's website, did not violate FDCPA § 1692g, as electronic requests could be considered "in writing."[429] Regulation F clarifies that a debt collector sending a validation notice electronically must allow disputes and requests for original-creditor information to be submitted electronically,[430] and, if the validation information is not provided electronically, the collector may include information about how to dispute or request original-creditor information electronically.[431]

The debt collector should not misstate on the validation notice the time the debtor has to request verification as thirty days from the date of the notice, rather than the statutorily required thirty days from the consumer's receipt of the notice.[432] Regulation F's rules for calculating and disclosing the validation period are discussed at § 9.4.8, supra. In addition the FDCPA gives the consumer thirty days from receipt of the notice to mail the request.[433]

9.7.2 Amount of the Debt

The validation notice must disclose "the amount of the debt."[434] Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) has detailed 417 Reg. F Appx. B-1 Model Form for Validation Notice.

418 See § 9.4, supra (discussing Reg. F § 1006.34(c)'s required validation information).

419 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(1); §§ 9.3.6.4, 9.3.6.5, infra.

420 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(2). See Moran v. Greene & Cooper Attorneys L.L.P., 43 F. Supp. 3d 907 (S.D. Ind. 2014); Eun Joo Lee v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 926 F. Supp. 2d 482 (E.D.N.Y. 2013). Cf. Devito v. Zucker, Goldberg & Ackerman, L.L.C., 908 F. Supp. 2d 564 (D.N.J. 2012) (failure to name creditor may be violation if confusing); Jablonski v. Capital Mgmt. Services L.P., 2011 WL 7142994 (N.D. Ohio 2011) (dun's accurate disclosure of names of current and original creditors provided sufficient identification of debt to avoid confusion); Dokes v. LTD Fin. Services, 328 F. Supp. 3d 1270, 1283 (N.D. Ala. 2018) (collector identification of original creditor did not violate § 1692g(a)(2) when current creditor is also identified).

421 See Wegmans Food Mkts., Inc. v. Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) (address appeared only on envelope). But see Blanchard v. N. Am. Credit Serv., 2016 WL 1408592 (S.D. Ill. Apr. 11, 2016) (confusing statements about address to send dispute to were not so confusing as to violate § 1692g).

422 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(5).

423 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(3). See Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 797 F.3d 219, 227 (2d Cir. 2015); Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025, 1028–1029 (6th Cir. 1992). See also Sunga v. Rees Broome, P.C., 2010 WL 1138319 (E.D. Va. 2010) (using words "intent to dispute" instead of word "dispute" acceptable).

424 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(4).

425 E.g., Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982); Patton v. Prober & Raphael, 2012 WL 294537 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 13, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 294511 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 30, 2012); Dutterer v. Thomas Kalperis Int'l, Inc., 767 F. Supp. 2d 504 (E.D. Pa. 2011); Forsberg v. Fid. Nat'l Credit Services, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7622 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2004); McCabe v. Crawford & Co., 272 F. Supp. 2d 736 (N.D. Ill. 2003); Harvey v. United Adjusters, 509 F. Supp. 1218 (D. Or. 1981); Castillo v. Balsamo Rosenblatt & Cohen, P.C., 930 N.Y.S.2d 789 (N.Y. City Civ. Ct. 2011); Weiss, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 17, 1986).

426 See Castro v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 959 F. Supp. 2d 698 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 14, 2013).

427 See Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 245 (E.D.N.Y. 2012). But cf. Devito v. Zucker, Goldberg & Ackerman, L.L.C., 908 F. Supp. 2d 564 (D.N.J. 2012).

428 See, e.g., Borucki v. Vision Fin. Corp., 2013 WL 2477067 (E.D. Wis. June 7, 2013). See also Hillman v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 5356858 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 25, 2013).

429 Blanchard v. N. Am. Credit Serv., 2016 WL 1408592 (S.D. Ill. 2016), citing Cloud Corp. v. Hasbro, Inc., 314 F.3d 289, 295 (7th Cir. 2002).

430 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(v). See § 9.4.10, infra.

431 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(v)(B). See § 9.6.1, infra.

432 See Henhaffer v. Simeone & Raynor, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6305939 (D.N.J. Oct. 27, 2016); Diaz v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 965 F. Supp. 2d 249 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); In re Turner, 2010 WL 3211030 (M.D. Ala. Aug. 13, 2010); Rivera v. Amalgamated Debt Collection Services, Inc., 462 F. Supp. 2d 1223 (S.D. Fla. 2006); Cavallaro v. Law Offices of Shapiro & Kriesman, 933 F. Supp. 1148 (E.D.N.Y. 1996). See also Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85, 90–92 (2d Cir. 2008) (notice's clear statement that thirty days started from receipt of notice was obscured by request for notice within thirty days); Monokrousos v. Computer Credit, Inc., 984 F. Supp. 233 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (collector's second letter shortened thirty-day time); In re Hathcock, 437 B.R. 696 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2010); Spears v. Brennan, 745 N.E.2d 862 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001) (omitted thirty days was calculated from receipt).

433 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5797 (Jan. 19, 2021) (clarifying that consumer just needs to send or submit dispute or request for original creditor information "within the 30-day period established in § 1006.34(b)(5), even if the debt collector does not receive the request until after the 30-day period"). See Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Services, Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008). See also Chauncey v. JDR Recovery Corp., 118 F.3d 516, 519 (7th Cir. 1997) (demand for receipt of payment within thirty days contradicted validation notice); Homer v. Law Offices of Frederic I. Weinberg & Assoc., 292 F. Supp. 3d 629 (E.D. Pa. 2017); Diaz v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 965 F. Supp. 2d 249 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Burke v. Messerli & Kramer P.A., 2010 WL 3167403 (D. Minn. Aug. 9, 2010); Swift v. Maximus, Inc., 2004 WL 1576618, at *3–4 (E.D.N.Y. July 15, 2004) (following Chauncey).

434 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(1). See also Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix) (required validation information includes the "current amount of the debt").

provisions related to the disclosure of the amount of the debt and its itemization, which are discussed at § 9.4.7, supra.

The amount specified must be the amount due as of the time of the notice.[435] Regulation F Official Interpretations clarify that the amount of the debt is the "current amount of the debt (i.e., the amount as of when the validation information is provided)."[436]

In its supplemental information about Regulation F, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau noted that it "declines to incorporate an increasing-interest-or-fee disclosure or to structure the current amount of the debt as a dynamic balance."[437] Because the amount of the debt provided as required validation information must be the current amount, "a debt collector satisfies the requirement in [Reg. F] § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix) [current amount of the debt] without providing a dynamic balance or increasing-interest-or-fee disclosure."[438]

Prior to Regulation F, many court decisions held that a validation notice or other letter violates FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A),[439] or FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1),[440] or both,[441] unless it discloses that the amount of the debt will increase due to interest or other charges. Two of these courts would also require disclosure of the rate(s) at which these charges accrue.[442] Other courts, however, rejected that position, and held that FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1)'s requirement that an initial communication disclose "the amount of the debt" does not imply an obligation to disclose that interest is accruing.[443] Instead, these cases hold that the FDCPA only requires that a validation notice state the total amount of the debt (including accrued interest and any other charges) as of the date the letter is sent, and some note that further reference to accruing 435 Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, & Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872, 875–876 (7th Cir. 2000) (section 1692g(a)(1) requires collector to "state the total amount due—interest and other charges as well as principal—on the date the dunning letter was sent"). See also Carlin v. Davidson Fink L.L.P., 852 F.3d 207, 216 (2d Cir. 2017); Taylor v. Fin. Recovery Serv., Inc., 886 F.3d 212, 215 (2d Cir. 2018) ("[I]f a collection notice correctly states a consumer's balance without mentioning interest or fees, and no such interest or fees are accruing, then the notice will neither be misleading within the meaning of Section 1692e, nor fail to state accurately the amount of the debt under Section 1692g."); Chuway v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 362 F.3d 944 (7th Cir. 2004) (collector needs to be clear and careful in directing consumer to 800 number for current balance amount, because unsophisticated consumer could be confused as to whether amounts in verification notice were owed as of date of the notice or at later date); Gesten v. Phelan Hallinan, P.L.C., 57 F. Supp. 3d 1381 (S.D. Fla. 2014); Loreaux v. ACB Receivables Mgmt., 2014 WL 6685469 (D.N.J. Nov. 26, 2014) (that correspondence referenced two amounts—$191.57 as amount "due" and $130.00 as amount "owed"—stated plausible claim for violation of FDCPA); Rivera v. Ralph F. Casale & Assoc., L.L.C., 2014 WL 2571555 (D.N.J. June 9, 2014) (providing five-year-old amount for balance stated claim); Jolly v. Shapiro, 237 F. Supp. 2d 888 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (may be disclosed as of stated date); Welker v. Law Office of Daniel J. Horwitz, 699 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (S.D. Cal. 2010); Stanley v. Stupar, Schuster & Cooper, S.C., 136 F. Supp. 2d 957 (E.D. Wis. 2001) ("$987.71, plus attorneys fees" stated claim); Leffler v. Miller & Steeno, P.C., 2014 WL 1613946 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 22, 2014) ("there is no FDCPA violation if the amount listed in the . . . collection letter is the entire debt that [the debt collector] was hired to collect"); Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 3834008 (E.D. Tenn. July 23, 2013). But see Hutton v. Law Offices of Collins & Lamore, 668 F. Supp. 2d 1251 (S.D. Cal. 2009) ("the outstanding balance due . . . may not include accruing interest" acceptable); Campbell v. Hall, 624 F. Supp. 2d 991 (N.D. Ind. 2009) (consumer could add three figures).

436 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix)-1. See § 9.4.7, infra.

437 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5808 (Jan. 19, 2021).

438 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5808 (Jan. 19, 2021).

439 See Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., 817 F.3d 72, 77 (2d Cir. 2016); Deporter v. Credit Bur. of Carbon Cty., 2015 WL 1932336 (D. Colo. Apr. 28, 2015).

440 See Stonecypher v. Finkelstein Kern Steinberg & Cunningham, 2011 WL 3489685, at *5 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 9, 2011) (notice failed to indicate that interest was accruing); Jones v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 755 F. Supp. 2d 393, 397–398 (D. Conn. 2010) ("a validation notice fails to correctly state the amount of the debt as required by § 1692g unless it discloses the fact that interest is accruing and informs the consumer of the applicable interest rate"), adhered to on reconsideration, 2012 WL 1204716 (D. Conn. 2012); Akram v. Cal. Bus. Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 7029262 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 3, 2016); Smith v. Lyons, Doughl, & Veldhuius, P.C., 2008 WL 2885887, at *6 (D.N.J. July 23, 2008) (unpublished) (letter failed to indicate date on which stated interest had been calculated, and also failed to disclose that interest would continue to accrue). See also Jackson v. Aman Collection Serv. Inc., 2001 WL 1708829, at *3 (S.D. Ind. Dec. 14, 2001) ("The absence in Aman's letter of a statement of the date from which interest is accruing leaves to proof whether the phrase 'plus accruing interest' means interest accruing from the date of the letter, as Aman suggests, interest accruing from the date the letter was sent, or interest accruing on the principal debt owed"; claim stated where it was unclear whether "TOTAL DUE" was amount due as of date letter was drafted, sent, or received); Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, & Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872, 875 (7th Cir. 2000) (debt collector must "state the total amount due—interest and other charges as well as the principal—on the date the dunning letter was sent"; fashioning "safe harbor" formula that explicitly deals with accrual of interest). But see Heffington v. Gordon, Aylworth & Tami, P.C., 2017 WL 6626317 (D. Or. Dec. 28, 2017) (no violation when notice stated interest that had accrued and provided toll-free number for consumer to call to check for updated interest amounts); Beasley v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A., 2010 WL 1980083 at *5 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 1, 2010) (no violation as "stating that 'interest may still be continuing to accrue' would not confuse the 'least sophisticated debtor' as to the amount of the debt").

441 See May v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2015 WL 4506688 (E.D. Mo. July 24, 2015); Wideman v. Kramer & Frank, P.C., 2015 WL 1623814 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 10, 2015); Marucci v. Cawley & Bergmann, L.L.P., 66 F. Supp. 3d 559, 564–567 (D.N.J. 2014); Hepsen v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 2009 WL 3064865 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 22, 2009) (dunning letter must state exact and correct amount of debt in order to comply with § 1692g(a)(1); when debt collector demands incorrect amount of money in dunning letter, it makes false and misleading representation in violation of § 1692e(2)(A); defendant overstated amount of debt, when compared with later letter), aff'd, 383 Fed. Appx. 877 (11th Cir. 2010). But see Ghulyani v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2015 WL 6503849 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 26, 2015).

442 Stonecypher v. Finkelstein Kern Steinberg & Cunningham, 2011 WL 3489685, at *5 (E.D. Tenn. Aug. 9, 2011); Jones v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 755 F. Supp. 2d 393, 397–398 (D. Conn. 2010); Smith v. Lyons, Doughl, & Veldhuius, P.C., 2008 WL 2885887, at *6 (D.N.J. July 23, 2008) (not for publication).

443 See Schaefer v. ARM Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 2847768, at *5 (D. Mass. July 19, 2011); Pifko v. CCB Credit Services, 2010 WL 2771832, at *3–4 (E.D.N.Y. July 7, 2010); Adlam v. FMS, 2010 WL 1328958, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 5, 2010). See also Bodine v. First Nat. Collection Bur., Inc., 2010 WL 5149847, at *2 (D.N.J. Dec. 13, 2010).

interest or fees may be confusing.[444] Lower courts have split over whether a false statement indicating that the amount of the debt may increase over time violates the FDCPA.[445]

Prior to Regulation F, the Seventh Circuit offered safe harbor language for debt collectors trying to collect the listed balance plus the interest running on it or other charges.[446] The Regulation F supplemental information addresses the permissibility of disclosures about dynamic balances by noting that "the final rule affirmatively permits debt collectors to include along with the required validation information other disclosures specifically required by applicable law."[447] In order to maintain the safe harbor for use of the model validation notice, collectors can only use "optional disclosures under applicable law" if they are "specifically required by, or . . . provide safe harbors under, applicable law," and such disclosures would have to appear on the reverse of the validation notice if allowed.[448]

444 See also Weiss v. Zwicker & Assoc., 664 F. Supp. 2d 214, 217 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (confusing statement that "balance may include additional charges including delinquency charges, as applied at the direction of American Express, if said charges are permissible in accordance with the terms of [the parties'] agreement" violated FDCPA because it is unclear what balance includes); Kalebaugh v. Berman & Rabin, P.A., 43 F. Supp. 3d 1215 (D. Kan. 2014). But see Stroud v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 4620482 (E.D. Mo. July 31, 2015) (not deceptive to state that interest "may" be added where consumer could not show that interest was not authorized by law or agreement; failure to add interest did not establish that statement was deceptive).

445 Compare Reeseg v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2015 WL 4525869 (D.N.J. July 27, 2015) (misrepresentation that balance may increase if not paid immediately overshadowed § 1692g notice), with Derosa v. Computer Credit, Inc., 295 F. Supp. 3d 290, 296 (E.D.N.Y. 2018), and Ghulyani v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2015 WL 6503849 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 26, 2015) (dismissing claims under §§ 1692e(10) and 1692g(a)(1) alleging that describing amount owed with language "Total Balance Due as of the Date of This Letter" falsely implied that interest or other fees may apply to consumer's balance).

446 Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols & Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872, 876 (7th Cir. 2000). See also Williams v. OSI Educ. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 675 (7th Cir. 2007) (statement that amount of debt might increase because of daily interest did not make its itemized statement of stated amount of debt deceptive; safe harbor language of Miller was not requirement for compliance); Rozier v. Fin. Recovery Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 2295116 (E.D.N.Y. June 7, 2011) ("while the letter in the instant case used the safe harbor language laid out in Miller, the additional 'may or may not be applicable' language also used in the letter could create even further confusion"); Jones v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 755 F. Supp. 2d 393 (D. Conn. 2010) ("a validation notice fails to correctly state the amount of the debt as required by § 1692g unless it discloses the fact that interest is accruing and informs the consumer of the applicable interest rate"), adhered to on reconsideration, 2012 WL 1204716 (D. Conn. Apr. 11, 2012); Brill v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2010 WL 5825480 (D. Neb. Nov. 10, 2010) (no violation because debt collector's statement that interest, late charges, and other charges "may or may not be" applicable to debtor's account was close to "safe-harbor" language in Miller). Cf. Avila v. Riexinger & Assoc., 817 F.3d 72, 77 (2d Cir. 2016) (adopting safe harbor to prevent collector liability under section 1692e for failing to disclose that the consumer's balance may increase); § 7.4.2.6, supra. But see Boucher v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 880 F.3d 362, 367 (7th Cir. Jan. 17, 2018) (Miller safe harbor language did not immunize collector from liability where state law did not allow late charges or other charges to accrue).

447 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5808 (Jan. 19, 2021).

448 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(A). See § 9.3c.2, infra.

In addition to requiring debt collectors to provide the current amount of the debt, Regulation F now requires itemization of the debt as discussed at § 9.4.7, supra. Prior to Regulation F, some courts held that itemization was not needed,[449] but found no violation of FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1) where the collector did itemize the debt.[450]

Regulation F's model validation notice at Appendix B-1 provides guidance about how the itemization and the current amount of the debt should appear. Previously, courts evaluated a variety of language about account balances for compliance with FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1).[451]

9.7.3 Name of Person to Whom the Debt Is Owed

The validation notice must contain the name of the current creditor to whom the debt is owed.[452] As the Seventh Circuit said in Steffak v. Client Services, Inc., the FDCPA requires the debt collector to "identify the current creditor clearly, without leaving the matter to guesswork."[453] In Bryan vs. Credit Control, L.L.C., the Second Circuit looked to the relevant credit card agreement to determine that the collector incorrectly listed Kohl's as the creditor when Kohl's was simply the agent for servicing the account and Capital One was the actual creditor.[454]

In Bourff v. Rubin Lublin, L.L.C., the Eleventh Circuit found it was deceptive under FDCPA § 1692e for a debt collector to name a bank as the creditor that had not yet received the assignment of the mortgage debt. The court noted that the 449 Kolbasyuk v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 918 F.3d 236, 240 (2d Cir. 2019); Walker v. Shermeta, Adams, & Von Allmen, P.C., 2014 WL 11309742 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 25, 2014), aff'd, 623 Fed. Appx. 764 (6th Cir. 2015).

450 Degroot v. Client Services, Inc., 2020 WL 5951360, at *3 (7th Cir. Oct. 8, 2020).

451 Olson v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 366 F.3d 509 (7th Cir. 2004) (unsophisticated consumer would understand that amount of debt is "Balance" and that amount "Now Due" is portion of balance that creditor will accept for the time being until next bill arrives); Koehn v. Delta Outsource Grp., Inc., 2019 WL 4666297 (7th Cir. Sept. 25, 2019) (statement of "current balance" does not mislead consumer about amount owed on the debt); Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2019 WL 3842658, at *6 (D. Conn. Aug. 15, 2019) (consumer may be misled by validation notice listing different amounts for "current balance" and "charge off balance"); Garcia v. Miramed Revenue Group, L.L.C., 2018 WL 701283 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 30, 2018) (consumer stated claim under § 1692g(a)(1) where communication stated "Amount Due" was $100 but "Total Charges were $3665 for medical bill).

452 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(2); Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(v). See Sparkman v. Zwicker & Assoc., 374 F. Supp. 2d 293 (E.D.N.Y. 2005) (collector failed to clearly identify current creditor). Cf. Dikun v. Streich, 369 F. Supp. 2d 781 (E.D. Va. 2005) (name that differed slightly from creditor's actual name was acceptable).

453 Steffek v. Client Services, Inc., 948 F.3d 761, 765 (7th Cir. 2020) (listing original creditor without identifying it is insufficient); Janetos v. Fulton Friedman & Gullace, L.L.P., 825 F.3d 317, 321 (7th Cir. 2016) ("Nowhere did the letter say that Asset Acceptance currently owned the debts in question. Asset Acceptance was identified as the 'assignee' of another company, not as the current creditor or owner of the debt.").

454 Bryan v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 954 F.3d 576, 581 (2d Cir. 2020).

false statement was "a serious matter."[455] The same result was reached by the Sixth Circuit in Wallace v. Washington Mutual Bank,[456] dealing with similar allegations in a complaint.

Prior to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), some courts found that the validation notice may identify the current creditor and the original creditor as such by name.[457] However, a lower court found that a collection letter may be confusing in the absence of an explanation of the difference between "Original Creditor" and "Creditor,"[458] or an identification of which entity was the debt collector's "client," as an unsophisticated consumer would be confused as to which entity held the debt.[459] Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), a debt collector that is collecting debt related to a consumer financial product or service[460] will need to provide the name of the creditor to whom the debt was owed on the itemization date[461] in addition to the name of the creditor to whom the debt is currently owed.[462]

Prior to Regulation F, some courts found that it was a violation to use a name for the creditor that is unfamiliar to the consumer or otherwise unclear.[463] Regulation F's Official Interpretations state that "[a] debt collector may disclose its trade or doing-business-as name, instead of its legal name."[464]

Identifying the current creditor as the "assignee"[465] or "current owner"[466] could be confusing to the consumer, and violate FDCPA § 1692g(a)(2). Giving the name of the mortgage servicer, rather than Fannie Mae, as the current creditor, stated 455 674 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2012). See also Akar v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 843 F. Supp. 2d 154 (D. Mass. 2012) (allegation that law firm sought to collect on behalf of entity that did not yet own mortgage stated a cause of action for failure to identify creditor). But see Livermore v. Unifund CCR L.L.C., 2017 WL 6459483 (E.D. Wis. Dec. 15, 2017) (disclosure of name and address of original creditor in debt buyer's letter did not violate FDCPA).

456 683 F.3d 323 (6th Cir. 2012).

457 See, e.g., Dennis v. Niagara Credit Solutions, Inc., 946 F.3d 368, 370 (7th Cir. 2019) (finding no confusion in notice that identified current and original creditors); Zuniga v. Asset Recovery Solutions, 2018 WL 1519162 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 28, 2018); Dokes v. LTD Fin. Services, 328 F. Supp. 3d 1270, 1283 (N.D. Ala. 2018).

458 See Bentkowsky v. Benchmark Recovery, Inc., 2014 WL 12579797 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 30, 2014), as amended by 2015 WL 502948 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2015) (granting summary judgment for consumer on § 1692g(a)(2) claim where collection agency's disclosure identified creditor, Bank of the West, as "Original Creditor" but did not identify it was "current" creditor; letter was confusing and left reader unaware of identity of current creditor). See also Kirkpatrick v. TJ Services, Inc., 379 F. Supp. 3d 539, 542 (E.D. Va. 2019) (denying collector's motion to dismiss when notice identified only "Original Creditor" without clearly identifying current creditor).

459 See Pardo v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5607646 (S.D. Ind. 2015) (where collection letter's body referred to "Resurgent Capital Services LP" as Allied Interstate's "Client" and offered no explanation of the relationship between LVNV and Resurgent Capital or why/how Resurgent Capital was involved with debt, consumer stated valid § 1692g(a)(2) claim). See also Fosnight v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 310 F.R.D. 389 (S.D. Ind. 2015) (class action certified); Deschaine v. Nat'l Enterprise Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 12121197 (N.D. Ill. 2013) (denying dismissal of claims under §§ 1692g(a)(2) and 1692e(10) where letter "failed to disclose the name of the current creditor effectively without any explanation of what, if any, the relationship is between the 'Current Creditor' and the debt collector's 'Client'"). But see Smith v. Simm Assoc., 926 F.3d 377, 381 (7th Cir. 2019) (by disclosing current creditor, Community Capital Bank, as "original" creditor, and by identifying PayPal Credit as "client"—the name consumer would recognize—letter complied with § 1692g(a)(2); use of term "current creditor" was not required by § 1692g); Maximiliano v. Simm Assoc., Inc., 2018 WL 783104, at *1 (S.D. Fla. 2018); Romano v. Schachter Portnoy, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2804930 (E.D.N.Y. June 28, 2017) (describing creditor as "client" sufficient; "creditor" or "the owner of the debt" were not "magic" words); Johnson v. Simm Assoc., 335 F. Supp. 3d 680, 686 (D. Del. 2018) ("client" designation sufficient given context of letter); Marti v. Schreiber/Cohen, L.L.C., 454 F. Supp. 3d 122, 127 (D. Mass. 2020). Cf. Demonte v. Client Services, Inc., 2015 WL 12556159 (S.D. Fla. 2015) (no § 1692g(a) claim stated where letter containing validation notice stated "RE: FIRESTONE-TIRES PLUS," with no mention of CFNA, creditor for store-branded credit card).

460 Reg. F § 1006.2(f). See § 9.3a.6, supra.

461 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(3). See § 9.3a.2, supra.

462 Reg. F § 1006.34(c). See § 9.3a.1, supra.

463 See Lait v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 2017 WL 3601951 (N.D. Ohio 2017) (denying collection agency summary judgment on § 1692g(a)(2) claim as there was dispute of material fact as to whether creditor's name was effectively stated where collection agency disclosed creditor's name as "Physicians Associates" rather than its full name, "Physicians Associates, LLC." The court found that "the seemingly minimal addition of 'LLC' gained importance because the name 'Physician Associates' is so common across the country"); Amina v. WMC Mortg. Corp., 2011 WL 1869835 (D. Haw. 2011) (genuine issue of material fact as to whether collector properly identified current creditor, especially given multiple entities that use name "Chase"); Blarek v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 984096 (E.D. Wis. 2007) (use of registered acronym which consumer had never encountered before could be confusing); Schneider v. TSYS Total Debt Mgmt., Inc., 2006 WL 1982499 (E.D. Wis. 2006) (collector may have violated Act by disclosing name of current creditor in confusing shorthand fashion, by using only its first name, "Target," which unsophisticated consumer would not recognize because it identifies several unrelated business entities with same first name). But see Leonard v. Zwicker & Assoc., 713 Fed. Appx. 879, 885 (11th Cir. 2017) (identifying current creditor as "American Express" was permissible, as consumer would more confused if creditor was correctly identified as "American Express Centurion Bank"); Stricklin v. First Nat'l Collection Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 1076679 (S.D. Ill. 2012) (identification of original creditor as "Sprint Services," rather than "Sprint Nextel Corporation" without more did not violate FDCPA); Hammett v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 3819848 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (reference to original creditor as "PNC Bank" was not confusing); Bode v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2493898 (E.D. Wis. 2007) (using similar name "Capital One Services, Inc." was not confusing).

464 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(c)(2)(i)-1.

465 See Neff v. Schlee & Stillman, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1058847 (E.D. Mich. 2017); Dewees v. Legal Servicing, 506 F. Supp. 2d 128 (E.D.N.Y. 2007) (disclosure that debt had been "assigned to this office" might convey that defendant had purchased debt and was confusing about identity of current creditor).

466 See Pardo v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5607646, at *3 (S.D. Ind. 2015); Walls v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 1755751 (N.D. Ill. 2012). But see Crawford v. Am. Home Mortg. Servicing, Inc., 2012 WL 12995303 (W.D. Wis. 2012) (granting summary judgment for collection attorneys on § 1692g(a) claim where letter listed servicer rather than mortgage holder as creditor). Cf. Keasey v. Judgment Enforcement Law Firm, P.L.L.C., 2014 WL 1744268 (W.D. Mich. 2014) (acceptable for collection lawyer to identify creditor by name, but label it as his client, not as creditor).

a claim.[467] Giving the creditor's name in the letter only following "Re:" without identifying the creditor as the creditor may violate FDCPA § 1692g(a)(2).[468] Listing five entities could confuse the least sophisticated consumer about which entity was the current creditor.[469] A validation notice may violate FDCPA § 1692g(a) if it does not clearly indicated that the consumer's written response should be sent to the debt collector, rather than the creditor.[470]

9.7.4 Assumption of Validity Unless Dispute

A debt collector must include "a statement that unless the consumer, within thirty days after receipt of the notice, disputes the validity of the debt, or any portion thereof, the debt will be assumed to be valid by the debt collector."[471]

The consumer is entitled to dispute a debt orally to overcome a collector's assumption that a debt is valid,[472] although only a written dispute of the debt triggers the collector's duty to provide verification of the debt.[473] Accordingly, the validation notice may not state that the consumer must use a written request to dispute the debt in order to overcome the FDCPA § 1692g(a)(3) assumption by the debt collector that the debt is valid.[474] The model validation notice in Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) states "call or write to us" for this disclosure.[475]

One court has held that a debt collector is not required to provide debtors with a telephone number in order to assist debtors in disputing the debt orally.[476] Another court found that the collector's did not violate FDCPA § 1692g(a)(3) when it limited the debtor's means of disputing the debt to one mailing address and two phone numbers.[477] Regulation F also lists telephone contact information as optional information that a debt collector can include on a validation notice.[478] Fortunately phone numbers have become easier to find on state debt collection licensing and complaint websites.

In Hart v. FCI Lender Services, Inc.,[479] the Second Circuit noted the serious nature of a validation notice omitting the required language that assumption of the validity of the debt only applies to the debt collector. "[U]nder [FDCPA] § 1692g(a) . . . such an unchallenged debt may be assumed to be valid only by the debt collector, leaving the consumer free to contest the debt with the lender either directly or in the courts."[480]

Unfortunately, a number of other appellate courts have disagreed. The Sixth Circuit considered the following collector's statement of the information required by FDCPA § 1692g(a)(3): "All portions of this claim shall be assumed valid unless disputed within thirty days of receiving this notice."[481] The 467 See Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606, 628 (D. Md. 2020); Sciortino v. Barrett Daffin Frappie Levin & Brock, L.L.P., 9 F. Supp. 3d 1322 (N.D. Ga. 2013). See also Bourff v. Rubin Lublin, L.L.C., 674 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2012) (naming future purchaser of mortgage debt as the creditor was deceptive); Shoup v. McCurdy & Candler, L.L.C., 465 Fed. Appx. 882, 883–884 (11th Cir. 2012) (listing MERS as the creditor violated FDCPA); Long v. Fenton & McGarvey Law Firm P.S.C., 223 F. Supp. 3d 773 (S.D. Ind. 2016) (identifying current creditor as "original creditor" when current creditor had bought debt from original creditor stated claim); Aribal v. GMAC Mortg., L.L.C., 2013 WL 3895282 (N.D. Ill. 2013) ("language suggests that another entity, namely, the recorded holder of the security deed, may also be a potential creditor"); Beckles v. Aldridge Connors, L.L.P., 2013 WL 5355481 (N.D. Ga. 2013) (letter may violate § 1692g when it stated creditor "may not be the current recorded holder of the security deed," and was simply "authorized to collect payment on your loan" and when trust was later identified as note holder).

468 See Dix v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 4865259 (D. Ariz. 2017) (granting summary judgment for consumer on § 1692g(a)(2) claim, but granting summary judgment for agency on § 1692e claim for same conduct); Macelus v. Capital Collection Serv., 2017 WL 5157389 (D.N.J. Nov. 7, 2017) (rejecting consumer's § 1692g(a)(2) claim where letter contained name of creditor stated as "Account for: Advanced Endoscopy & Surgical Ctr., LLC." with debt collector's name at top of letterhead; there was no other way to read statement); McGinty v. Prof'l Claims Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6069180 (E.D.N.Y. 2016); Neff v. Schlee & Stillman, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4264203 (E.D. Mich. 2016); Datiz v. Int'l Recovery Assoc., Inc., 2016 WL 4148330 (E.D.N.Y. 2016) (sole reference to current creditor was in header stating "Re: John T. Mather Hospital"). But see Goldstein v. Diversified Adjustment Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 5592683 (E.D.N.Y. 2017) (where subject line stated that letter was sent "Re Sprint" and had multiple references to "your service with Sprint" and similar usages, reading of letter as a whole compelled conclusion that consumer was on notice that she owed money to Sprint); Santibanez v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 126111 (D. Or. 2017) (disclosing creditor only as Re: Encompass Management Consultants complied with § 1692g(a)(1)); Demonte v. Client Services, Inc., 2015 WL 12556159 (S.D. Fla. July 29, 2015) (no § 1692g(a) claim stated where letter containing validation notice stated "RE: FIRESTONE-TIRES PLUS," with no mention of CFNA, creditor for store-branded credit card).

469 See Smith v. Cohn, Goldberg & Deutsch, L.L.C., 296 F. Supp. 3d 754 (D. Md. 2017).

470 See Santoro-Wanek v. Trojan Prof'l Services, Inc., 2011 WL 13238379 (D.N.J. June 30, 2011).

471 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(3); Reg. F Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(2)(ix). 1006.34(c)(3)(iii).

472 Riccio v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 954 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 2020); Macy v. GC Serv. L.P., 897 F.3d 747, 758 n.9 (6th Cir. 2018); Clark v. Absolute Collection Serv., Inc., 741 F.3d 487, 491 (4th Cir. 2014); Hooks v. Forman, Holt, Eliades & Ravin, L.L.C., 717 F.3d 282 (2d Cir. 2013). Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin. Inc., 430 F.3d 1078 (9th Cir. 2005). See also 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 581 (Jan. 19, 2021) ("The Bureau agrees with every circuit court that has addressed this issue and interprets the absence of a reference to a writing requirement in FDCPA section 809(a)(3) to mean that a writing is not required.").

473 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(b). See § 9.10, infra.

474 See, e.g., Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin. Inc., 430 F.3d 1078 (9th Cir. 2005). But see Riggs v. Prober & Raphael, 681 F.3d 1097, 1099 (9th Cir. 2012) ("a validation notice violates § 1692g(a)(3) of the FDCPA only where it expressly requires a consumer to dispute her debt in writing").

475 Reg. F Appx. B-1 Model Form for Validation Notice.

476 Nasca v. GC Services, Ltd., 2002 WL 31040647 (S.D.N.Y. 2002).

477 Rodriguez v. Cascade Collections L.L.C., 2021 WL 1222147, at *9 (D. Utah 2021).

478 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(i).

479 797 F.3d 219 (2d Cir. 2015).

480 797 F.3d 219, 227 (2d Cir. 2015). See also Reg. F Appx. B-1 Model Form for Validation Notice (instructing the consumer to "call or write to us . . . If you do not, we will assume that our information is correct."); McWilliams v. Advanced Recovery Sys., Inc., 174 F. Supp. 3d 936 (S.D. Miss. 2016); Allah-Mensah v. Law Office of Patrick M. Connelly, P.C., 2016 WL 6803775 (D. Md. 2016).

481 Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025, 1028–1029 (6th Cir. 1992).

court ruled that "even under the 'least sophisticated consumers' standard" the language satisfied the Act.[482] In Greco v. Trauner, Cohen & Thomas, L.L.P.,[483] the Second Circuit held that the debt collector's addition to the validation notice that the creditor would also assume that the debt was valid if the consumer did not dispute the debt in thirty days was not a violation of the FDCPA.[484] The Eleventh Circuit has agreed.[485]

Some lower courts have disagreed and held that the courts should give full effect to the language Congress chose, specifically "the debt will be assumed valid by the debt collector," and that the omission of that assumption by the debt collector may violate the FDCPA.[486] The statement that all the information in the letter providing the validation notice will be assumed valid in the absence of a consumer dispute was overly broad and violated FDCPA § 1692g.[487]

9.7.5 Verification Required If Consumer Timely Disputes Debt in Writing

A debt collector must include "a statement that if the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing within the thirty-day period that the debt, or any portion thereof, is disputed, the debt collector will obtain verification of the debt or a copy of a judgment against the consumer and a copy of such verification or judgment will be mailed to the consumer by the debt collector."[488]

The validation notice must state that a written response is required from the consumer requesting verification or the name of the original creditor in order for debt verification to be required of the debt collector under FDCPA § 1692g(a)(4).[489]

In Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A.,[490] the Eleventh Circuit rejected the debt collector's argument that omitting the "in writing" requirement should trigger a waiver by the debt collector of the FDCPA § 1692g(a)(4) requirement that disputes be made in writing. The court held that the FDCPA does not allow the debt collector to waive the Congressional scheme providing written notice by the consumer to trigger a verification or the termination of debt collection.[491] In a footnote, the court clarified that debt collectors can choose to cooperate with consumers who dispute their debts orally, but this cooperation does not cure improper notice under FDCPA § 1692g.[492]

---

482 Id. But cf. Philip v. Sardo & Batista, P.C., 2011 WL 5513201 (D.N.J. 2011) (complaint stated § 1692g(a) claim by alleging that validation disclosure that "the debt will be assumed valid" omitted statutorily required phrase "by the debt collector"); Koch v. Atkinson, Diner, Stone, Mankuta, & Ploucha, P.A., 2011 WL 4499100 (S.D. Fla. 2011); Galuska v. Collectors Training Inst. of Illinois, Inc., 2008 WL 2050809 (M.D. Pa. 2008); Smith v. Hecker, 2005 WL 894812 (E.D. Pa. 2005).

483 412 F.3d 360, 363 (2d Cir. 2005).

484 See also Dibattista v. Buckalew, Frizell & Crevina, L.L.P., 574 Fed. Appx. 107 (3d Cir. 2014) (statement that client as well as lawyer would assume debt to be valid did not violate § 1692g). But cf. Baker v. G.C. Services, 677 F.2d 775, 777 (9th Cir. 1982).

485 See Caceres v. McCalla Raymer, L.L.C., 755 F.3d 1299 (11th Cir. 2014).

486 See Panzer v. Alternative Claims Mgmt., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3771251 (S.D.N.Y. July 8, 2016); Matmanivong v. Nat'l Creditors Connection, Inc., 79 F. Supp. 3d 864 (N.D. Ill. 2015); Walker v. Greenspoon Marder, P.A., 2014 WL 7174220 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 17, 2014); DeCapri v. Law Offices of Shapiro Brown & Alt, L.L.P., 2014 WL 4699591 (E.D. Va. Sept. 19, 2014); Martin v. Butler & Hosch, P.A., 2014 WL 3593622 (M.D. Fla. July 18, 2014); Carbonell v. Weinstein Pinson & Riley, P.S., 2014 WL 2581043 (S.D. Fla. May 30, 2014); Diaz v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 965 F. Supp. 2d 249 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Iyamu v. Clarfield, Okon, Salomone, & Pincus, 950 F. Supp. 2d 1271 (S.D. Fla. 2013); Orr v. Westport Recovery Corp., 941 F. Supp. 2d 1377 (N.D. Ga. 2013); Smith v. Hecker, No. Civ. A. 04-5820, 2005 WL 894812, at *6 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 18, 2005).

487 Diaz v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 2013 WL 1820948 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 29, 2013).

488 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(4); Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(i).

489 See Bishop v. Ross Earle & Bonan, P.A., 817 F.3d 1268, 1271–1272 (11th Cir. 2016); Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin. Inc., 430 F.3d 1078, 1081 (9th Cir. 2005); Miller v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 943 F.2d 482 (4th Cir. 1991); Henry v. Radius Global Solutions, L.L.C., 357 F. Supp. 3d 446, 458 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (use of conditional language may have given consumer impression that an oral notice was sufficient in Third Circuit); Homer v. Law Offices of Frederic I. Weinberg & Assoc., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2017 WL 5184193 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 9, 2017) (where collection letter stated that collection law firm had to "hear from" consumer, language was deceptive because it suggested that verification request could be made orally); Conquest v. Plaza Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3401513 (E.D. Va. Aug. 8, 2017); Macy v. GC Services L.P., 2016 WL 5661525 (W.D. Ky. Sept. 29, 2016); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2016 WL 3958608 (E.D. Mo. July 22, 2016); Pearson v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 132 F. Supp. 3d 1355 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 21, 2015); Grant-Fletcher v. McMullen & Drury, P.A., 2013 WL 4051890 (D. Md. Aug. 8, 2013) (section 1692g disclosure that collector would send verification in event of oral telephone dispute overshadowed statute's writing requirement); Crafton v. Law Firm of Jonathan B. Levine, 2013 WL 3441243 (E.D. Wis. July 9, 2013); Bicking v. Law Offices of Rubenstein & Cogan, 783 F. Supp. 2d 841, 845 (E.D. Va. 2011); Welker v. Law Office of Daniel J. Horwitz, 699 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (S.D. Cal. 2010); Beasley v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A., 2010 WL 1980083 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 1, 2010); Nero v. Law Office of Sam Streeter, P.L.L.C., 655 F. Supp. 2d 200, 206 (E.D.N.Y. 2009); Bankston v. Phycom Corp., 2007 WL 4170627 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 19, 2007); McCabe v. Crawford & Co., 272 F. Supp. 2d 736 (N.D. Ill. 2003); Grief v. Wilson, Elser, Moskowitz, Edelman & Dicker, L.L.P., 217 F. Supp. 2d 336 (E.D.N.Y. 2002). See also McCabe v. Eichenbaum & Stylianou, L.L.C., 2012 WL 6624229 (D.N.J. Dec. 19, 2012) (notice stated "[i]f, for any reason, you dispute this debt or any portion thereof, you may notify us of the same in writing within thirty (30) days from receipt of this notice;" consumer could have interpreted letter to mean that debt could be contested in writing or through some other form; this ambiguity indicates possible violation of FDCPA); Hernandez v. Guglielmo, 2012 WL 993676 (D. Nev. Mar. 23, 2012); Osborn v. Ekpsz, L.L.C., 821 F. Supp. 2d 859 (S.D. Tex. 2011). Cf. Conti v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2016 WL 3566221 (E.D. Wis. June 27, 2016) (defense that allowing oral requests for verification was consumer-friendly was not stricken because it was possible factor in computation of statutory damages); Langley v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2013 WL 1896964 (S.D. Tex. May 6, 2013) (stating in one place that writing is required and then omitting that statement in other parts of notice may confuse consumer). But see Kagan v. Selene Fin. L.P., 2016 WL 5660255 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2016) (validation notice stating that dispute of debt's validity "may be" made in writing, followed immediately by telephone number, rather than that dispute will be acted on "if the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing," did not violate § 1692g(4)).

490 817 F.3d 1268 (11th Cir. 2016).

491 See also Chandler v. Eichel, 2017 WL 4236569 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 25, 2017); Bicking v. Law Offices of Rubenstein and Cogan, 783 F. Supp. 2d 841 (E.D. Va. 2011); Welker v. Law Office of Daniel J. Horwitz, 699 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (S.D. Cal. 2010); McCabe v. Crawford & Co., 272 F. Supp. 2d 736 (N.D. Ill. 2003); Grief v. Wilson, Elser, Moskowitz, Edelman & Dicker, L.L.P., 217 F. Supp. 2d 336 (E.D.N.Y. 2002).

492 See also Adams v. Homeward Residential, Inc., 2014 WL 12573389 (S.D. Ala. June 25, 2014) (dismissing § 1692e claim where mortgage

A lower court allowed a validation notice to give the consumer forty-five days to request verification and the original creditor's name and to dispute the debt.[493]

Consumer disputes are discussed at § 9.10, infra.

9.7.6 Name and Address of Original Creditor If Timely Requested

A debt collector must include "a statement that, upon the consumer's written request within the thirty-day period, the debt collector will provide the consumer with the name and address of the original creditor, if different from the current creditor."[494]

Prior to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), some courts held that notice of the right to obtain the name and address of the original creditor (under FDCPA § 1692g(a)(5)) need not be given if there was only one creditor.[495] A lower court found that there was no violation for the validation notice to offer to identify the original creditor, when the identified current creditor was also the original creditor.[496] The Eighth Circuit would allow the debt collector to disclose the original creditors and their addresses and omit the offer to provide their name and address.[497] The Regulation F supplemental information states that "[t]he Bureau did not propose an exception to this disclosure requirement if the original creditor and the current creditor" and notes that the CFPB proposed Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(ii) to implement the requirement in FDCPA § 1692g(a)(5).

9.7.7 Courts' Recommended Notices

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) created a model validation notice, which can provide certain safe harbors to debt collectors. The notice and its possible safe harbors are discussed at § 9.5.2, supra.

Prior to Regulation F, three appellate decisions suggested that additional language should be added to validation notices to avoid confusion or deception when the debt collector is demanding immediate payment, threatening suit, or filing suit in the period the consumer has the right to obtain verification of the debt. In order to maintain the safe harbor for use of the Regulation F model validation notice, collectors can only use "optional disclosures under applicable law" if they are "specifically required by, or that provide safe harbors under, applicable law" and such disclosures would have to appear on the reverse of the validation notice if allowed.[498]

In Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., the collection agent's violation of the FDCPA "consisted of its decision to ask for immediate payment without also explaining that its demand did not override the consumer's rights under FDCPA § 1692g to seek verification of the debt."[499] The court explained:

> CCI could have both sought immediate payment and complied with the Act simply by inserting into the text of its letter transitional language that referred the addressee to the validation notice. For example, CCI might have added one of the following paragraphs to its demand letter:
>
> "Although we have requested that you make immediate payment or provide a valid reason for nonpayment, you still have the right to make a written request, within thirty days of your receipt of this notice, for more information about the debt. Your rights are described on the reverse side of this notice.
>
> "Our demand for immediate payment does not eliminate your right to dispute this debt within thirty days of receipt of this notice. If you choose to do so, we are required by law to cease our collection efforts until we have mailed that information to you. Your rights are described on the reverse side of this notice."[500]

In Bartlett v. Heibl, Judge Posner announced a "safe haven" validation notice for the Seventh Circuit where the letter threatens suit during the validation period. That "safe haven" language unfortunately has a legal error in it along with its good ideas:[501]

> We commend this redaction as a safe harbor for debt collectors who want to avoid liability for the kind of suit that Bartlett has brought and now won. The qualification "for the kind of suit that Bartlett has brought and now won" is important. We are not certifying our letter as proof against challenges based on other provisions of the statute; those provisions are not before us. With that caveat, here is our letter:
>
> "Dear Mr. Bartlett:
>
> "I have been retained by Micard Services to collect from you the entire balance, which as of September 25, 1995, servicer, long after validation period had expired, sent notice that re-offered to verify debt and was not limited to written request; court deemed servicer's actions "consumer-friendly, effectively conferring on Adams an additional layer of procedural protection over and above what the FDCPA requires," and consumer produced no evidence that offer was false or not made in good faith).

493 See Greig v. Backer Aboud Poliakoff & Foelster, L.L.P., 2017 WL 57026 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 5, 2017).

494 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(5); Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(3)(ii).

495 See Cavallaro v. Law Offices of Shapiro & Kriesman, 933 F. Supp. 1148 (E.D.N.Y. 1996); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 809(a)-2, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988); Kodner, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 7, 1979); Cope, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 23, 1977). See also Robertson v. Horton Bros. Recovery, Inc., 2007 WL 2009703 (D. Del. July 3, 2007); Foresberg v. Fid. Nat'l Credit Services, Ltd., 2004 WL 3510771 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 26, 2004); Brenker v. Creditors Interchange, Inc., 2004 WL 594502 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 25, 2004). Cf. Dolan v. Schreiber & Assoc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6005 (D. Mass. 2002), adopted, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5998 (D. Mass. Mar. 29, 2002) (claim for misidentified original creditor).

496 See Islam v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2788938 (E.D.N.Y. 2017).

497 Volden v. Innovative Fin. Sys., Inc., 440 F.3d 947 (8th Cir. 2006). See also Spangler v. Conrad, 2010 WL 2389481 (E.D. Tenn. 2010).

498 Reg. F § 1006.34(d)(3)(iv)(A). See § 9.3c.2, supra.

499 164 F.3d 81, 86 (2d Cir. 1998).

500 Id.

501 See Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497, 501–502 (7th Cir. 1997).

was $1,656.90, that you owe Micard Services on your MasterCard Account No. 5414701617068749.

"If you want to resolve this matter without a lawsuit, you must, within one week of the date of this letter, either pay Micard $316 against the balance that you owe (unless you've paid it since your last statement) or call Micard at 1-800-221-5920 ext. 6130 and work out arrangements for payment with it. If you do neither of these things, I will be entitled to file a lawsuit against you, for the collection of this debt, when the week is over.

"Federal law gives you thirty days after you receive this letter to dispute the validity of the debt or any part of it. If you don't dispute it within that period, I'll assume that it's valid. If you do dispute it—by notifying me in writing to that effect—I will, as required by the law, obtain and mail to you proof of the debt. And if, within the same period, you request in writing the name and address of your original creditor, if the original creditor is different from the current creditor (Micard Services), I will furnish you with that information too.

"The law does not require me to wait until the end of the thirty-day period before suing you to collect this debt. If, however, you request proof of the debt or the name and address of the original creditor within the thirty-day period that begins with your receipt of this letter, the law requires me to suspend my efforts (through litigation or otherwise) to collect the debt until I mail the requested information to you.

"Sincerely,

"John A. Heibl"

We cannot require debt collectors to use "our" form. But of course if they depart from it, they do so at their risk. Debt collectors who want to avoid suits by disgruntled debtors standing on their statutory rights would be well advised to stick close to the form that we have drafted. It will be a safe haven for them, at least in the Seventh Circuit.

While the model letter has many salutary features, it fails to clearly inform the consumer that a dispute of a part of the debt—for example, a mysterious service charge or the method by which the current balance was determined—triggers the obligation of the collector to validate that part of the debt. Such an omission would violate the FDCPA, at least in other circuits.[502]

The Seventh Circuit in Thomas v. Law Firm of Simpson & Cybak[503] again took the precautionary step of suggesting how collection law firms could best provide the validation notice without confusing consumers if a debt collection suit was filed about the same time that the validation notice was provided. The court noted that the consumers might not understand that they had to respond to the summons to avoid a default judgment. While an amendment to the FDCPA overruled the main holding in Thomas, the court's advice regarding the notice may still be worth noting. The court recommended that collectors avoid that potential confusion altogether by sending the debt validation notice thirty days before suit, making it easier for consumers to understand that the requirements of the FDCPA and the summons are separate. Where that was not possible, the court gave collectors in the Seventh Circuit sample language to add to the FDCPA validation notice that the court believes will reduce consumer confusion:

> This advice pertains to your dealings with me as a debt collector. It does not affect your dealings with the court, and in particular it does not change the time at which you must answer the complaint. The summons is a command from the court, not from me, and you must follow its instructions even if you dispute the validity or amount of the debt. The advice in this letter also does not affect my relations with the court. As a lawyer, I may file papers in the suit according to the court's rules and the judge's instructions.[504]

9.8 Collector Actions After Providing Notice

9.8.1 Overview

Some debt collection activities are permitted during the thirty-day period in which the consumer may dispute the debt and request original-creditor information.[505] In 2006 Congress amended the FDCPA to codify this construction of the FDCPA.[506] However, the debt collection activities must be 502 See, e.g., Baker v. G.C. Services, 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982). But see Pescatrice v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2006 WL 8432179 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 18, 2006) (use of Miller safe harbor language protected collection agency from being in violation of § 1692g).

503 392 F.3d 914 (7th Cir. 2004).

504 Id. at 919. Cf. Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988).

505 15 U.S.C. 1692g(b). See Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008); Durkin v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 406 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2005) (validation period is not grace period); Palmer v. Stassinos, 348 F. Supp. 2d 1070 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (debt collector was not required to suspend debt collection activities, including pursuing litigation options, during period for requesting verification); Smith v. Computer Credit, Inc., 167 F.3d 1052, 1055 (6th Cir. 1999); Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997); Croftcheck v. Computer Credit, Inc., 2010 WL 4916213 (M.D. Pa. Nov. 24, 2010) (continued collection activities did not overshadow notice); Bey v. Daimler Chrysler Services, L.L.C., 2006 WL 361385 (D.N.J. 2006) (collection attorneys' filing of replevin action within thirty-day dispute period did not violate FDCPA); Mezines, FTC Advisory Opinion (Mar. 31, 2000). See also Weber v. Computer Credit, Inc., 259 F.R.D. 33 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (thirty-day validation period is not grace period, and, unless debt is disputed, debt collector may demand immediate payment and continue collection activity).

506 Pub. L. No. 109-351, § 802(c), 120 Stat. 1966 (Oct. 13, 2006). E.g., Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997); Miller v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 943 F.2d 482 (4th Cir. 1991). See Tilatitsky v. Medicredit, Inc., 2016 WL 5906819 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 11, 2016) (seeking carefully conducted so that they do not undermine the effectiveness of the debt verification process.

The courts have built on the principle that the validation notice must be provided effectively[507] to develop the principle that the debt collection activities must not contradict, confuse, or obscure the notice of those rights. Congress codified the case law and an FTC Formal Advisory Opinion[508] by stating that a debt collector's activities "may not overshadow or be inconsistent with the disclosure of the consumer's right to dispute the debt."

The essence of the decisions is that any debt collection activities during the validation period should not significantly interfere with the effective communication of the consumer's debt verification rights. The effectiveness may be unlawfully compromised by debt collection activities that: 1) obscure or overshadow; 2) are inconsistent with or contradict; or 3) deceive or confuse an unsophisticated consumer about their legal right to obtain verification of the debt. To do so renders the debt validation notice ineffective.

In addition, Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) states that during the validation period, "a debt collector must not engage in any collection activities or communications that overshadow or are inconsistent with the disclosure of the consumer's rights to dispute the debt and to request the name and address of the original creditor.[509] Use of the model validation notice found at Reg. F Appendix B-1 provides a safe harbor from liability for overshadowing found on the validation notice itself.[510]

The consumer must dispute the debt in writing before the debt collector is required to stop all of its collection efforts and not resume collection until it has verified the debt. On the other hand, the debt collector must not engage in activities during the thirty-day period that may undermine the effectiveness of the validation notice. So, the collector should not threaten collection activities in a way that could confuse the consumer about the right to obtain or how to obtain verification of the debt.

In Ellis v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C.,[511] the Second Circuit held that a validation notice was overshadowed by the debt collector's service of a collection lawsuit on the consumer during the thirty-day period for a consumer to request verification of the debt, since the collector failed to explain or clarify in either the dun or a notice provided with the summons and complaint that the commencement of the lawsuit had no effect on the information conveyed in the validation notice.

A court has required collectors in Oklahoma to refrain from taking a default judgment during the validation period to avoid a state law conflict with the FDCPA.[512] On the other hand, the Sixth Circuit found it possible to give the debt validation notice and file a foreclosure on the same day, despite the different time periods for the response to each, as long as the schedule was clearly explained.[513]

9.8.2 Limits on Immediate Demand for Payment

Many courts have found a collector's demand for payment within a short time frame—for example, five days—misleading when made in the same letter as the validation notice[514] or in payments and calls okay); Sprouse v. City Credits Co., 126 F. Supp. 2d 1083 (S.D. Ohio 2000); Tipping-Lipshie v. Riddle, 2000 WL 33963916 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 1, 2000); Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320 (D. Utah 1997). See also Spears v. Brennan, 745 N.E.2d 862 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001). See § 3.4.2.4, supra.

507 See Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222 (7th Cir. 1996); Graziano v. Harrison, 950 F.2d 107 (3d Cir. 1991); Miller v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 943 F.2d 482 (4th Cir. 1991); Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988); § 9.3.5, supra.

508 Mezines, FTC Advisory Opinion (Mar. 31, 2000).

Previous FTC informal staff letters were not consistent on this issue. See Freeman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 15, 1988). Cf. Miller, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 13, 1994); Evenchick, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 30, 1978); Fardell, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 1, 1980). But cf. FTC Official Staff Commentary § 809(b)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988); Wagner, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 29, 1987); Herold, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 28, 1983); Berhenke, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 21, 1979); Brown, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 15, 1978).

509 Reg. F § 1006.38(b)(1).

510 Reg. F § 1006.38(b)(2).

511 591 F.3d 130 (2d Cir. 2010). But cf. Clark v. Shapiro & Pickett, L.L.P., 452 Fed. Appx. 890 (11th Cir. 2012) (actions by foreclosure lawyer to foreclose during validation period did not interfere with notice of consumer's right to verification, noting consumer's attorney timely requested verification).

512 Mendus v. Morgan & Assoc., 994 P.2d 83 (Okla. Civ. App. 1999). See also Spears v. Brennan, 745 N.E.2d 862 (Ind. Ct. App. 2001). But see Weinstein v. Fink, 2001 WL 185194 (N.D. Ill. 2001).

513 See Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. Lamar, 503 F.3d 504 (6th Cir. 2007). See also Hall v. Leone Halpin & Konopinski, L.L.P., 2008 WL 608609 (N.D. Ind. Feb. 28, 2008).

514 Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81, 86 (2d Cir. 1998). See Taylor v. Fink, 365 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2004); Johnson v. Revenue Mgmt. Corp., 169 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 1999); Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997); Chauncey v. JDR Recovery Corp., 118 F.3d 516 (7th Cir. 1997); United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996); Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222, 226 (7th Cir. 1996); Russell v. Equifax A.R.S., 74 F.3d 30, 34 (2d Cir. 1996); Mills v. Turner, 2017 WL 3670967 (D. Mass. Aug. 25, 2017); Balke v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 2634653 (E.D.N.Y. June 19, 2017); Wolff v. Stellar Recovery, Inc., 2016 WL 461619 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2016); Schuller v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 427961 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 4, 2016); Reeseg v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2015 WL 4525869 (D.N.J. July 27, 2015); O'Connor v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2014 WL 859822 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 5, 2014); Vu v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 293 F.R.D. 343 (E.D.N.Y. 2013); Read v. Messerli and Kramer, P.A., 2012 WL 1439046 (D. Minn. Apr. 26, 2012); McCafferty v. Schwartzkopf Law Office, 2011 WL 4916382 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 17, 2011); Kight v. Eskanos & Adler, P.C., 2007 WL 173825 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 8, 2007); Francis v. Snyder, 389 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2005); Aramburu v. Healthcare Fin. Services, 361 F. Supp. 2d 21 (D. Conn. 2005); Swift v. Maximus, Inc., 2004 WL 1576618 (E.D.N.Y. July 15, 2004); Mistretta v. Babb, 2003 WL 1868717 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 9, 2003); Rhoades v. West Virginia Credit Bur. Reporting Services, 96 F. Supp. 2d 528 (S.D. W. Va. 2000); Sokolski v. Trans Union Corp., 53 F. Supp. 2d 307 (E.D.N.Y.

a phone call.[515] In Mashiri v. Epsten Grinnell & Howell,[516] the Ninth Circuit found that a demand for payment thirty-five days from the date of the letter containing the validation notice was "inconsistent" with the right to dispute the debt for thirty days after receipt of the letter, as the thirty-five-day deadline could expire before the statutory thirty-day deadline. This analysis may also apply to a follow-up letter sent in close proximity to the notice that the consumer has thirty days to request verification of the collector's claim.[517] A request for payment in thirty days may be confusing when further action is threatened if the payment is not made.[518]

In Graziano v. Harrison, which was overturned on other grounds, the Third Circuit held that an attorney's letter demanding payment within ten days upon the threat of immediate legal action would mislead the least sophisticated debtor, in violation of FDCPA § 1692g, as well as violating FDCPA § 1692e(10).[519] The Seventh Circuit held that collection letters which requested "prompt payment" or "call our office immediately" stated a cause of action under FDCPA § 1692g sufficient to withstand a rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss.[520] In Miller v. Payco-General American Credits, Inc.,[521] the Fourth Circuit found that the overriding demand for immediate payment violated the Act.[522]

As discussed in § 9.7.7, supra, the Second Circuit has offered language to a dunning letter that would in its view harmonize the demand for immediate payment and the validation notice, which explains that a demand for payment does not eliminate the right to dispute the debt.[523]

1999); Talbot v. GC Services L.P., 52 F. Supp. 2d 846 (W.D. Va. 1999); Garner v. Kansas, 1999 WL 262100 (E.D. La. Apr. 30, 1999); Veillard v. Mednick, 24 F. Supp. 2d 863 (N.D. Ill. 1998); Jenkins v. Union Corp., 999 F. Supp. 1120 (N.D. Ill. 1998); Rachoza v. Gallas & Schultz, 1998 WL 171280 (D. Kan. Mar. 23, 1998); Hairston v. Whitehorn & Delman, 1998 WL 35112 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 30, 1998); Creighton v. Emporia Credit Serv., Inc., 981 F. Supp. 411 (E.D. Va. 1997); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 960 F. Supp. 599 (E.D.N.Y. 1997); Adams v. Law Offices of Stuckert & Yates, 926 F. Supp. 521 (E.D. Pa. 1996); Lee v. CBC Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21993 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 1996); Edwards v. Nat'l Bus. Factors, Inc., 897 F. Supp. 455 (D. Nev. 1995); Johnson v. Eaton, 873 F. Supp. 1019 (M.D. La. 1995); Avila v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 1995 WL 55255 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 8, 1995), aff'd sub nom. Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222 (7th Cir. 1996); Cortright v. Thompson, 812 F. Supp. 772 (N.D. Ill. 1992); Colman v. Payco-GAC Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22733 (D. Conn. Jan. 22, 1992), rev'g 774 F. Supp. 691 (D. Conn. 1990); Masuda v. Thomas Richards & Co., 759 F. Supp. 1456 (C.D. Cal. 1991); Weber v. Payco-General Am. Credits, 1990 WL 341654 (D. Conn. Dec. 13, 1990); Ost v. Collection Bur., Inc., 493 F. Supp. 701 (D.N.D. 1980); Appx. E.2.6.2, infra. Cf. Gingiloski v. Commercial Recovery Services, 2017 WL 2334946 (E.D. Mich. May 30, 2017) (whether demand for payment in five days would overshadow consumer's dispute right was question of fact for jury subject to expert testimony); Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995). But see Renick v. Dun & Bradstreet Receivable Mgmt. Services, 290 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2002); Wilson v. Quadramed Corp., 225 F.3d 350 (3d Cir. 2000); Terran v. Kaplan, 109 F.3d 1428 (9th Cir. 1997); Eddis v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 664812 (D.N.J. Feb. 28, 2012); Lerner v. Forster, 240 F. Supp. 2d 233 (E.D.N.Y. 2003); Bernstein v. Howe, 2003 WL 1702254 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2003); Rumpler v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 219 F. Supp. 2d 251 (E.D.N.Y. 2002); Taylor v. Cavalry Invest., L.L.C., 210 F. Supp. 2d 1001 (N.D. Ill. 2002); Chapman v. ACB Bus. Services, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23743 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 13, 1997); Smith v. Fin. Collection Agencies, 770 F. Supp. 232 (D. Del. 1991); Higgins v. Capitol Credit Services, Inc., 762 F. Supp. 1128 (D. Del. 1991). But cf. Goldberg v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 1998 WL 650793 (2d Cir. 1998) (unpublished).

515 See McHugh v. Valarity, L.L.C., 2014 WL 6772469 (E.D. Mo. 2014); Glackin v. LTD Fin. Services, L.P., 2013 WL 3984520 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 1, 2013).

516 845 F.3d 984 (9th Cir. 2017). Cf. § 9.4.8.1, supra (discussing calculating and disclosing the end of the validation period under Regulation F).

517 See Russell v. Equifax A.R.S., 74 F.3d 30, 34 (2d Cir. 1996); Lane v. Bayview Loan Serv., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3671467 (N.D. Ill. 2016); Kaminsky v. Nat'l Bur. Collection Corp., 2008 WL 11330728 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 19, 2008); Allen v. ATG Credit L.L.C., 2004 WL 2931298 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 14, 2004); Allen v. NCO Fin. Services, Inc., 2002 WL 1291791 (N.D. Ill. June 10, 2002); Borcherding-Dittloff v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 59 F. Supp. 2d 822 (W.D. Wis. 1999); Withers v. Equifax Risk Mgmt. Services, 40 F. Supp. 2d 978 (N.D. Ill. 1999); Seplak v. IMBS, Inc., 1999 WL 104730 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 23, 1999); Withers v. Eveland, 988 F. Supp. 942 (E.D. Va. 1997); Monokrousos v. Computer Credit, Inc., 984 F. Supp. 233 (S.D.N.Y. 1997); Badon v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 1997 WL 149986 (E.D. La. Mar. 26, 1997); Tsenes v. Trans-Continental Credit & Collection Corp., 892 F. Supp. 461 (E.D.N.Y. 1995); Robinson v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 876 F. Supp. 385 (N.D.N.Y. 1995); Rabideau v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 805 F. Supp. 1086 (W.D.N.Y. 1992); Higgins v. Capitol Credit Services, Inc., 762 F. Supp. 1128 (D. Del. 1991); Appx. E.2.6.2, infra. See also Durham v. Cont'l Cent. Credit, 2009 WL 3416114 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 20, 2009); Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 2848278 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 27, 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 2009 WL 4826953 (11th Cir. Dec. 16, 2009); Tychewicz v. Dobberstein, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22555 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 28, 1996). But see Smith v. Computer Credit, Inc., 167 F.3d 1052 (6th Cir. 1999).

518 See Lodish v. Stellar Collection Services, Inc., 2010 WL 4235407 (N.D.N.Y. 2010).

519 Graziano v. Harrison, 950 F.2d 107, 111 (3d Cir. 1991), overruled on other grounds by, Riccio v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 954 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 2020). See also Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997); Blum v. Lawent, 2003 WL 22078306 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 8, 2003).

520 Johnson v. Revenue Mgmt. Corp., 169 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 1999). See also Marshall-Mosby v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 205 F.3d 323 (7th Cir. 2000) (threat of "immediate," "aggressive" collection stated claim); Chauncey v. JDR Recovery Corp., 118 F.3d 516 (7th Cir. 1997) (payment within thirty days demanded); Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222, 226 (7th Cir. 1996); Guzman v. HOVG, L.L.C., 340 F. Supp. 3d 526, 532 (E.D. Pa. 2018) (discussion of immediate payment in notice conflicted with validation language); Norman v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 310 F. Supp. 3d 509, 520 (E.D. Pa. 2018); Osborn v. Ekpsz, L.L.C., 821 F. Supp. 2d 859 (S.D. Tex. 2011) (requiring payment that would eliminate debt before debtor can challenge the validity of that debt directly conflicts with protections in § 1692g); Puczko v. Law Office of Sipe & Landon, 2010 WL 11519290 (D. Ariz. Mar. 16, 2010); Foti v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 424 F. Supp. 2d 643 (S.D.N.Y. 2006). But see Roudebush v. Collecto, Inc., 2004 WL 3316168 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 12, 2004).

521 943 F.2d 482 (4th Cir. 1991).

522 Id. at 484. See United States v. Nat'l Fin. Services, Inc., 98 F.3d 131 (4th Cir. 1996) (back of payment demand letter stated conflicting deadlines with notice deadlines and overshadowed notice by being in larger typeface).

523 Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81 (2d Cir. 1998). See Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008) (followed Savino and held payment demand was expressed as alternative to requesting verification).

The Second,[524] Third,[525] Fifth,[526] Sixth,[527] Seventh,[528] and Ninth[529] Circuits have added their view that a collector's low-key request for immediate payment combined with a restatement of the consumer's verification rights does not automatically contradict the right to verify the debt. The Seventh Circuit found that the words "Now Due"[530] and "Act now to satisfy your debt"[531] did not amount to language that would confuse unsophisticated consumers about their verification rights.[532] The Seventh Circuit characterized the latter language as "in the nature of puffing, e.g.,—'Buy Now!' 'Best Deal Ever!'"[533]

However, these courts agree that the demand for payment must made in a way that does not contradict or obscure the verification rights or confuse an unsophisticated consumer about those rights. For example, a demand that payment or a verification request be received by the collector within thirty days would be confusing even though the validation notice indicated that the request for verification must be made within thirty days of receipt of the notice.[534] Many courts have applied these same standards to letters with demands for payments within the debt verification request period that were stated in such a manner that there was no contradiction, overshadowing, or confusion.[535]

524 Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85, 92 (2d Cir. 2008) ("It presented [plaintiff] with two alternate ways of avoiding 'further action': either pay the debt 'within 30 days,' or submit a notice of dispute, 'within 30 days.' This right to seek validation of the debt was further explained, not on the back of the demand letter, but on its face, below the initial statement, and in clear terms."); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81 (2d Cir. 1998) (demand for payment in itself did not violate FDCPA, but defendant's violation "consisted of its decision to ask for immediate payment without also explaining that its demand did not override the consumer's rights under section 1692g to seek validation of the debt"). See also Shapiro v. Dun & Bradstreet Receivable Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2003 WL 1025581 (2d Cir. Mar. 7, 2003) (statement that debtor could "disregard this letter" if payment had been made was not at odds with validation notice and was not reasonably susceptible to misinterpretation or likely to cause debtor to misunderstand his rights); McStay v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 308 F.3d 188 (2d Cir. 2002) (statement on front of letter that if debt was not paid after unspecified thirty days it would be forwarded to credit reporting agency when read in conjunction with validation notice's statement on reverse that thirty days ran from receipt did not contradict notice); Lotito v. Recovery Assoc. Inc., 2014 WL 4659464 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 17, 2014); Lerner v. Forster, 240 F. Supp. 2d 233 (E.D.N.Y. 2003); Harrison v. NBD Inc., 968 F. Supp. 837 (E.D.N.Y. 1997) (offer to accept payment of 65% of balance for period slightly shorter than validation period); Madonna v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 1997 WL 530101 (D. Conn. Aug. 12, 1997) (request that consumer "contact" collector within validation period).

525 Wilson v. Quadramed Corp., 225 F.3d 350 (3d Cir. 2000) (offer to accept immediate payment was found not to contradict or overshadow debt validation notice that followed on same side of letter in same font, but acknowledging it was close question). See also Jarzyna v. Home Props., L.P., 114 F. Supp. 3d 243 (E.D. Pa. 2015).

526 See McMurray v. ProCollect, Inc., 687 F.3d 665 (5th Cir. 2012) (request for timely payment did not overshadow § 1692g notice). See also Mahmoud v. De Moss Owners Ass'n, Inc., 865 F.3d 322, 331 (5th Cir. 2017) ("[L]etter stated once on page one that Mahmoud and Jackson needed to pay 'on or before the expiration of thirty (30) days from and after the date hereof' or nonjudicial foreclosure would occur. But three times on page two, the letter repeated that '[U]NLESS YOU DISPUTE THE VALIDITY OF THIS DEBT OR ANY PORTION THEREOF WITHIN THIRTY (30) DAYS AFTER RECEIVING THIS LETTER, WE WILL ASSUME THE DEBT IS VALID.' This notice does not demand a concrete action period shorter than 30-days from receipt of the letter when read by the least sophisticated consumer.").

527 See Smith v. Computer Credit, Inc., 167 F.3d 1052 (6th Cir. 1999) (subsequent dun within validation period which purported to "advise [the consumer] of our final position" failing payment (before expiration of validation period) or dispute, did not contradict verification right where it mentioned possibility of disputing debt and where collector's final action was, in fact, to return debt to original creditor).

528 See Olson v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 366 F.3d 509 (7th Cir. 2004) (words "Now Due," do not eviscerate message conveyed in debt validation notice; "The phrase 'Now Due,' even to an unsophisticated consumer, simply means that the debt collector is willing to accept less than the total amount of the debt to bring the account to a current status. The consumer has the option of paying the amount due, paying the total balance, or doing neither and contesting the debt. These options do not contradict one another. When used in conjunction with a 'Balance' figure, simply listing an amount 'Now Due' does not contradict or overshadow the validation notice."); Taylor v. Calvary Inv. Co., 365 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2004).

529 Renick v. Dun & Bradstreet Receivable Mgmt. Services, 290 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2002) (stating "send your payment today" and "PROMPT PAYMENT was REQUESTED" was more in nature of request than demand and carried no sense of urgency). See also Long v. McMullen, Drury & Pinder, P.A., 2011 WL 4458849 (D. Md. Sept. 23, 2011); Lockey v. CMRE Fin. Services, Inc., 2011 WL 2971085 (S.D. Miss. July 20, 2011); Peterson v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 781538 (N.D. Ind. Feb. 28, 2011).

530 Olson v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc. 366 F.3d 509 (7th Cir. 2004). See also Sims v. GC Services L.P., 445 F.3d 959 (7th Cir. 2006) ("[t]he statement that the collection agency would continue with collection efforts until the matter is handled does not obscure the debtor's statutory entitlement to a 30-day period in which to dispute the debt").

531 Taylor v. Calvary Inv. Co., 365 F.3d 572, 575 (7th Cir. 2004).

532 Id. See also Harry v. Pentagroup Fin., L.L.C., 2007 WL 812998 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 14, 2007) (rejecting contention that Pentagroup's collection letter overshadowed validation notice by stating "if payment is not made in a timely manner, further collection activity may be instituted"; portion of letter that read "your prompt attention to this matter will be appreciated" did not overshadow validation notice).

533 Taylor v. Calvary Inv. Co., 365 F.3d 572, 575 (7th Cir. 2004).

534 See Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008). But see Mahmoud v. De Moss Owners Ass'n, Inc., 865 F.3d 322, 331 (5th Cir. 2017) (demanding payment within 30 days of date of letter with validation notice permitted where letter stated three times that consumer could obtain verification of debt by mail within 30 days of receipt of notice).

535 See Sarno v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 435 Fed. Appx. 44 (2d Cir. 2011) (sentence following statutorily required validation notice that read "Please remember, even if you make payment within 30 days after receiving this notice, you still have the remainder of the 30 days to exercise the rights described above" did not violate FDCPA); Taylor v. Cavalry Invest., L.L.C., 365 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2004) ("act now to satisfy this debt" did not violate FDCPA); Berkseth v. Cont'l Cent. Credit, Inc., 119 F. Supp. 3d 1316 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (where validation notice was same size and color as other paragraphs, plaintiffs must point to some other element of collection letter that overshadows § 1692g disclosure); Jablonski v. Capital Mgmt. Services L.P., 2011 WL 7142994 (N.D. Ohio 2011); Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Services, Inc., 434 F. Supp. 2d 133 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) (initial dun's required disclosure of consumer's right to dispute debt within thirty days from receipt of dun cured any possibility that least sophisticated consumer would be confused by separate demand for payment or dispute within thirty days

Some settlement offers have been found not to create confusion about the consumer's verification rights.[536] Two letters demanding payment but not setting deadlines and a phone call within the validation period did not clearly overshadow or contradict the validation notice. "[T]he simple act of demanding payment in a collection letter during the validation period does not automatically create an unacceptable level of confusion so as to entitle the plaintiffs to summary judgment." The debt collector need not remind the consumer of the dispute right particularly where the validation notice contained the safe harbor language from the Bartlett decision: "The law does not require us to wait until the end of the 30-day period before taking action to collect this debt."[537]

9.8.3 Limits on Suit or Threat of Suit

In Ellis v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C.,[538] the Second Circuit held that a validation notice was overshadowed by the debt collector's service of a collection lawsuit on the consumer during the validation period, since the collector failed to explain or clarify in either the dun or a notice provided with the summons and complaint that the commencement of the lawsuit had no effect on the information conveyed in the debt validation notice.[539]

The court noted that the easiest course for a debt collector was simply to wait until the end of the validation period to serve a debt collection suit on the consumer.[540]

Similarly, the FDCPA may be violated by a threat to file suit within the validation period that is made so strongly as to suggest that the collector will not cease collection efforts while validating the debt pursuant to the consumer's request.[541] In Graziano v. Harrison, which was overruled on other grounds, the Third Circuit held that an attorney's letter demanding payment within ten days upon the threat of immediate legal action would mislead the least sophisticated debtor, in violation of FDCPA § 1692g, as well as violating FDCPA § 1692e(10).[542] that omitted time when thirty days began to run); Foti v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 424 F. Supp. 2d 643 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (initial communication telling debtor that matter required "immediate attention" did not overshadow since there was "no suggestion that the thirty-day verification period should be disregarded, or that immediate payment is required"); Hernandez v. Attention, L.L.C., 429 F. Supp. 2d 912 (N.D. Ill. 2005) (debt collector's letter containing § 1692g notice was not confusing and did not violate FDCPA by stating "truism" that collection efforts would continue if debt remained unpaid); Dikun v. Streich, 369 F. Supp. 2d 781 (E.D. Va. 2005) (attorney collector's threat to file suit thirty days after consumer's receipt of initial dun did not overshadow or contradict validation notice); Palmer v. Stassinos, 348 F. Supp. 2d 1070 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (second dun sent within validation period did not overshadow § 1692g validation notice or cause confusion since its demand for payment did not state time period within which to pay and thus could not be construed as shortening available thirty-day period); Gostony v. Diem Corp., 320 F. Supp. 2d 932 (D. Ariz. 2003) (invitation to call about questions or concerns, or about methods available for payment, did not overshadow or contradict validation notice); Bernstein v. Howe, 2003 WL 1702254 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2003) (payment arrangements should be made by date prior to expiration of validation period); Young v. Meyer & Njus, P.A., 183 F.R.D. 231 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (payment by "return mail" did not mean immediate payment); Vasquez v. Gertler & Gertler, Ltd., 987 F. Supp. 652 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (request for immediate attention by payment or contacting collection attorney); Burns v. Accelerated Bur. of Collections, 828 F. Supp. 475 (E.D. Mich. 1993). See also Hennings v. Alltran Fin., L.P., 2017 WL 2312909 at 3 (E.D. Wis. May 26, 2017) (settlement offer may set its expiration date near or after expiration of 30-day verification request period without overshadowing validation notice).

---

536 See Santora v. Capio Partners, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4334128 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2017); Hamilton v. Capio Partners, L.L.C., 237 F. Supp. 3d 1109 (D. Colo. 2017); Akoundi v. FMS, Inc., 2014 WL 3632008 (S.D.N.Y. July 22, 2014); D'Addario v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 798 F. Supp. 2d 570 (D.N.J. 2011) (settlement offer deadline within thirty-day period for dispute did not overshadow); Carpenter v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 787 F. Supp. 2d 971 (D. Minn. 2011) (same as D'Addario); Day v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2009 WL 1139474 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 27, 2009) (mere inclusion of payment coupon would not confuse least sophisticated consumer about right to dispute debt and did not violate FDCPA); Gervais v. Riddle & Assoc., 479 F. Supp. 2d 270 (D. Conn. 2007) (giving settlement offer in validation notice if paid shortly before end of validation period not confusing); Soffer v. Nationwide Recovery Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 1175073 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 19, 2007) (merely presenting consumer with settlement offer does not blunt effectiveness of validation notice explaining consumer's right to dispute); Omogbeme v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2003 WL 21909773, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2003).

537 See § 9.8.6, supra.

538 591 F.3d 130 (2d Cir. 2010). See also Battle v. Gladstone Law Group, P.A., 951 F. Supp. 2d 1310 (S.D. Fla. June 28, 2013); Garcia-Contreras v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 775 F. Supp. 2d 808 (M.D.N.C. 2011); Curto v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5196708 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 31, 2011). Cf. Bunting v. Phillips Lytle L.L.P., 2011 WL 2516933 (N.D.N.Y. June 23, 2011) (rejecting argument that defendants violated FDCPA by serving summonses with 20-day period in which to answer and by advising plaintiffs that they had to contest "debt" within 30-day period as there was explanatory language about discrepancy and no action was taken within 20-day period). But cf. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. Lamar, 503 F.3d 504 (6th Cir. 2007) (finding it possible to give debt validation notice and file foreclosure on same day despite different time periods for response to each as schedule was clearly explained).

539 See also Carbonell v. Weinstein Pinson & Riley, P.S., 2014 WL 2581043 (S.D. Fla. May 30, 2014) (motion for judgment on pleadings was granted, where state court collection complaint included § 1692g notice that gave thirty days, but response to complaint was due in twenty days).

540 See Philhower v. Express Recovery Services, Inc., 2014 WL 692908 (D. Utah Feb. 21, 2014).

541 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(b).

542 Graziano v. Harrison, 950 F.2d 107, 111 (3d Cir. 1991), overruled on other grounds by, Riccio v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 954 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 2020). See also Wenig v. Messerli & Kramer P.A., 2013 WL 1176062 (D. Minn. Mar. 21, 2013); Blum v. Lawent, 2003 WL 22078306 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 8, 2003); Shaver v. Trauner, 1998 WL 35333712 (C.D. Ill. May 29, 1998); Booth v. Collection Experts, Inc., 969 F. Supp. 1161 (E.D. Wis. 1997) (letter conflicted by stating that consumer had to pay debt within five days or face "more extreme measures"; acknowledgment of debt would not be waiver of that claim); Rabideau v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 805 F. Supp. 1086 (W.D.N.Y. 1992) (sent fifteen days after initial communication, second notice, which advised debt must be paid in five days "to avoid further collection measures"). But cf. Wan v. Commercial Recovery Sys., Inc., 369 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (collector's letter to consumer did not overshadow debt validation notice simply because it suggested that consumer "consult with [her] attorney about what laws in [her] state will allow our client to do to recover moneys owed to it and further consequences of nonpayment").

The Seventh Circuit took a similar approach in Bartlett v. Heibl.[543]

However, in Zemeckis v. Global Credit & Collection Corp.,[544] the Seventh Circuit distinguished Bartlett and found that the debt collector's exhortations to pay now and threatening suit did not involve the same type of deadlines falling within the validation period for requesting verification. The court stated that "[e]ven the most unsophisticated debtor would realize that debt collectors wish to expedite payment, and urging him to hurry does not confuse or undermine his right to his validation period." In reaching its result, the court emphasized the lack of specific deadlines in the threat to take legal action. The court acknowledged that whether a dunning letter is confusing to an unsophisticated consumer is ordinarily a question of fact, but it found that as a matter of law no significant segment of unsophisticated consumers could have been misled or confused about their FDCPA § 1692g debt verification rights by the debt collector's letters. Numerous district courts have taken that position, as well.[545]

In Pollard v. Law Office of Mandy L. Spaulding,[546] the First Circuit pointed out a serious problem not addressed by the Seventh Circuit's Zemeckis decision. The First Circuit held that a law firm's validation notice stating "we further inform you that despite the fact that you have a thirty (30) day period to dispute the debt may not preclude [sic] the filing of legal action against you prior to the expiration of the period" would suggest to the unsophisticated consumer that a lawsuit was going to proceed without delay, whether the consumer disputed the debt or not. It overshadowed the validation notice, in violation of FDCPA § 1692g, as the other affirmative statements in the text of the letter—to the effect that the writer was "not inclined to use further resources attempting to collect this debt before filing suit" and was going to "pursue the next logical course of action without delay"—reinforced this reading. Although a debt collector is free to demand immediate payment or (sometimes) even to file suit during the validation period, pursuing a multidirectional course can lead to confusion, and debt collectors remain firmly bound by the FDCPA's command not to have collection activities or communications overshadow or be inconsistent with the validation notice.

A lower court left it to a jury to decide whether a "least sophisticated consumer" would be intimidated into forgoing their verification rights by a threat of possible foreclosure near the end of the time in which verification could be sought.[547] Where the debt collection threat is veiled, the courts have been less likely to find the validation notice ineffective.[548] Similarly,

543 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997). See also McCafferty v. Schwartzkopf Law Office, 2011 WL 529967 (E.D. Mo. 2011) (threat of judgment within thirty days).

544 679 F.3d 632 (7th Cir. 2012).

545 See Henhaffer v. Simeone & Raynor, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6305939 (D.N.J. Oct. 27, 2016); Kalebaugh v. Cohen, McNeile & Pappas, P.C., 76 F. Supp. 3d 1251 (D. Kan. 2015); McGhee v. Buffaloe & Assoc., 2014 WL 1333730 (E.D. Tenn. Apr. 2, 2014); Pierson v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 965 F. Supp. 2d 957 (E.D. Tenn. 2013) (urging consumer to confer with lawyer about collector's remedies and consumer defenses); Fisher v. Bernhardt and Strawser, P.A., 2013 WL 3990744 (W.D.N.C. Aug. 2, 2013) (stating legal remedies not contradictory); Lilly v. RAB Performance Recoveries, L.L.C., 2013 WL 3834008 (E.D. Tenn. July 23, 2013) (referring to legal remedies acceptable); Seeley v. Nevada Ass'n Services, Inc., 2011 WL 4470840 (D. Nev. Sept. 26, 2011) (threatened ten days before recording of a notice of delinquent assessment lien); Price v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2011 WL 1326934 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 6, 2011) (letter threatening immediate suit overshadowed validation notice in that letter); Terry v. C & D Complete Bus. Solutions, 2011 WL 144920 (W.D. Mo. Jan. 18, 2011); Dunn v. Derrick E. McGavic, P.C., 653 F. Supp. 2d 1109 (D. Or. 2009); Register v. Reiner, Reiner & Bendett, P.C., 488 F. Supp. 2d 143 (D. Conn. 2007); Blum v. Lawent, 2003 WL 22078306 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 8, 2003); Greer v. Shapiro & Kreisman, 152 F. Supp. 2d 679 (E.D. Pa. 2001); Laster v. Cole, 2000 WL 306848 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 20, 2000); Frey v. Satter, Beyer & Spires, 1999 WL 301650 (N.D. Ill. May 3, 1999); Baker v. Citibank, 13 F. Supp. 2d 1037 (S.D. Cal. 1998); Hairston v. Whitehorn & Delman, 1998 WL 35112 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 30, 1998). See also Ellis v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 701 F. Supp. 2d 215 (N.D.N.Y. 2010). Cf. Lerner v. Forster, 240 F. Supp. 2d 233 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) (letter as whole left no doubt that litigation was merely option); Barrientos v. Law Offices of Mark L. Nichter, 75 F. Supp. 2d 510 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (granting consumer's motion for summary judgment; letter stated attorney collector was authorized "to take any lawful action"); Borcherding-Dittloff v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 59 F. Supp. 2d 822 (W.D. Wis. 1999) (second letter sent only fourteen days after first letter overshadowed validation notice because it did not explain how threat affected period for requesting debt verification). But see Palmer v. Stassinos, 348 F. Supp. 2d 1070 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (threat of litigation made within validation period did not cause debtor confusion); Gostony v. Diem Corp., 320 F. Supp. 2d 932 (D. Ariz. 2003) (threat of litigation did not contradict validation notice); Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 809(b)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Leiter, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 7, 1988).

546 766 F.3d 98, 105 (1st Cir. 2014).

547 Cavallaro v. Law Offices of Shapiro & Kriesman, 933 F. Supp. 1148 (E.D.N.Y. 1996) (stating that dunning language in validation notice that overshadowed or contradicted notice and would make "least sophisticated consumer" unsure of his rights would violate § 1692g). See also Rivera v. Ralph F. Casale & Assoc., L.L.C., 2014 WL 2571555 (D.N.J. June 9, 2014) (collection letter following validation notice stating that suit and non-abeyance might occur before end of 30-day period could mislead a consumer); Kafele v. Lerner, Sampson & Rothfuss, L.P.A., 2005 WL 1379107 (S.D. Ohio June 9, 2005), appeal of different case reported at 2005 WL 3528921 (6th Cir. Dec. 22, 2005) (awarding $500 as statutory damages for defendant's failure to provide effective thirty-day validation notice at time of serving summons with twenty-eight-day deadline and complaint in underlying state court foreclosure action). But see Solomon v. HSBC Mortg. Corp., 2012 WL 1066141 (W.D. Okla. Mar. 29, 2012) (filing of foreclosure petition did not overshadow), aff'd, 504 Fed. Appx. 702 (10th Cir. 2012); Palmer v. Stassinos, 348 F. Supp. 2d 1070 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (threat of litigation made within validation period did not cause debtor confusion regarding her right to validate amount of debt where there was no statement that could be construed to shorten 30-day validation period).

548 See Peter v. GC Services L.P., 310 F.3d 344 (5th Cir. 2002) (language, "FULL COLLECTION ACTIVITY WILL CONTINUE UNTIL THIS ACCOUNT IS PAID IN FULL. . . . TO AVOID FURTHER COLLECTION ACTIVITY, YOUR STUDENT LOAN MUST BE PAID IN FULL" did not violate § 1692g); Farmer v. Buffaloe & Assoc., 2012 WL 6045976 (E.D. Tenn. Dec. 5, 2012) ("client may consider additional remedies"); Kramsky v. Mark L. Nichter, P.C., 166 F. Supp. 2d 912 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (validation notice was not overshadowed by language that collection law firm "has been engaged to proceed against you because of your failure to make payment," that it "will not another lower court found a violation in the statement that the consumer "needed" to send $500 or call to avoid referral of the claim to an attorney, presumably for suit, within forty-five days. Relying on Pollard,[549] the court found that the stated deadline conflicted with the consumer's right to be free of collection activities until the debt was verified.[550]

The Eleventh Circuit held that a debt collector may threaten to file a lien against the consumer's condominium in the same letter that the debt collector provides the debt validation notice without running afoul of the FDCPA.[551] In an unpublished decision, the Eleventh Circuit abandoned the objective least sophisticated consumer approach, and found there was not overshadowing by filing foreclosure during the validation period for the consumer to request verification because the consumer's attorney had actually requested verification during that period.[552] The consumer had lost the argument in the district court that the lien against the condo would overshadow the notice of the consumer's right to request that the debt be validated by the collector. However, the Eleventh Circuit did not consider the overshadowing problem, basing its decision on the FDCPA allowing legal debt collection, such as the Georgia lien process, to be undertaken during the validation period, until the consumer actually requested verification.

9.8.4 Limits on Credit Reporting

Similarly, the FDCPA may be violated by a threat, within the validation period, to file a credit report if payment is not sent immediately, if the threat is made strongly enough to suggest that the collector would not cease its collection efforts and validate the debt pursuant to the consumer's request.[553] A lower court found that a letter stating that the collector "could" report the debt to a credit reporting agency during the validation period did not overshadow the validation notice.[554]

9.8.5 Limits on Informing Consumer to Telephone Debt Collector

In Caprio v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C.,[555] the Third Circuit found that the boldly formatted request for the consumer to call the debt collector overshadowed and contradicted the FDCPA § 1692g requirement disclosed on the back of the letter that the consumer must write to obtain verification of the debt. "We therefore conclude that the Collection Letter was deceptive because . . . 'it can be reasonably read to have two or more different meanings, one of which is inaccurate,' i.e., that Caprio could dispute the debt by making a telephone call."[556]

Caprio followed a decision by the Fourth Circuit that a similar strong demand for a phone call in big type made the validation notice on the back ineffective. "The front of the Payco form demands "IMMEDIATE FULL PAYMENT" and commands the consumer to "PHONE US TODAY," emphasized by the word "NOW" emblazoned in white letters nearly two inches tall against a red background."[557]

The Caprio decision distinguished the Second Circuit's decision in Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P.,[558] as the dunning letter before the Second Circuit repeatedly instructed the consumer to refer to the validation notice on the back of the letter and suggested telephoning the debt collector on payment issues, but not requesting a call regarding disputes.

In Terran v. Kaplan,[559] the Ninth Circuit held that a request that the alleged debtor immediately telephone a collection assistant did not overshadow the language in the FDCPA § 1692g notice that the alleged debtor has thirty days in which to permit this debt to be ignored," and that "it would definitely be in your best interest to satisfy in full your outstanding balance"); Kramsky v. Trans-Cont'l Credit & Collection Corp., 166 F. Supp. 2d 908 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (validation notice was not contradicted or overshadowed by statement: "This past due statement reflects a balance due the above stated creditor. This account has been referred to collection and we must ask that you remit the balance shown in full using the enclosed envelope.").

---

549 See Pollard v. Law Office of Mandy L. Spaulding, 766 F.3d 98, 103 (1st Cir. 2014).

550 See Oberther v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 45 F. Supp. 3d 125 (D. Mass. 2014).

551 Shimek v. Forbes, 374 F.3d 1011 (11th Cir. 2004). But see Elliott v. GC Services, L.P., 2011 WL 5975671 (M.D. Fla. 2011).

552 Clark v. Shapiro & Pickett, L.L.P., 452 Fed. Appx. 890 (11th Cir. 2012).

553 See Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., 869 F.2d 1222 (9th Cir. 1988); Elliott v. GC Services, L.P., 2011 WL 5975671 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 28, 2011); Wells v. Thomas McDonough, 1999 WL 966431 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 29, 1999); Creighton v. Emporia Credit Serv., Inc., 981 F. Supp. 411 (E.D. Va. 1997) (threat was also false representation of urgency where collector's policy was not to report debt to credit reporting agency for sixty days); Peters v. Collection Tech. Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21810 (D. Or. Dec. 5, 1991). See also Velazquez v. Fair Collections & Outsourcing, Inc., 2013 WL 4659564 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 2013); Lee v. CBC Co., 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21993 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 26, 1996) (threat to credit combined with demand for immediate payment). But see McStay v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 308 F.3d 188 (2d Cir. 2002) (statement on front of collection letter that if debt was not paid after 30 days it would be forwarded to credit reporting agency when, read in conjunction with validation notice on reverse side, did not contradict 30-day validation notice); Schuerkamp v. Afni, Inc., 2011 WL 5825969 (D. Or. Nov. 16, 2011) (statement that "We may report information about your account to credit bureaus" is insufficient to support finding of overshadowing); Wetzel v. AFNI, Inc., 2011 WL 6122963 (D. Or. Oct. 20, 2011) ("we may report information about your account to credit bureaus" did not overshadow), adopted, 2011 WL 6122957 (D. Or. Dec. 8, 2011).

554 See Founie v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 6607197 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 19, 2014) (noting that no evidence of overshadowing was presented).

555 709 F.3d 142 (3d Cir. 2013), abrogated on other grounds by, Riccio v. Sentry Credit, Inc., 954 F.3d 582 (3d Cir. 2020).

556 Id. at 152 (citations omitted). See also Coulter v. Receivables Mgmt. Sys., 367 F. Supp. 3d 307, 315–316 (E.D. Pa. 2019).

557 Miller v. Payco-General Am. Credits, Inc., 943 F.2d 482, 483 (4th Cir. 1991). See also Laniado v. Certified Credit & Collection Bur., 705 Fed. Appx. 87 (3d Cir. Aug. 29, 2017) (second letter sent ten days before expiration of § 1692g dispute period overshadowed validation notice by asking consumer to "please call if there is any discrepancy"). But see Terran v. Kaplan, 109 F.3d 1428, 1434 (9th Cir. 1997) ("[T]he request that the alleged debtor immediately telephone a collection assistant does not overshadow the language in the notice that the alleged debtor has thirty days in which to dispute the debt.").

558 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003).

559 109 F.3d 1428, 1434 (9th Cir. 1997).

dispute the debt. Some lower courts have held that the request to telephone would be confusing to the least sophisticated consumer and contradicted the notice.[560] But other courts disagree with the analysis, finding that confusion does not necessarily result. For example, urging the consumer to call about paying the debt was not confusing where the letter twice called attention to the information in the validation notice on the back of the dunning letter.[561] Another court found that the request to call if the debt had been paid did not overshadow the requirement to dispute or seek verification of the debt in writing.[562]

A lower court was not persuaded that the directive to call the creditor in the event of suspected identity theft "overshadowed" or "contradicted" the verification right notice. The letter clearly conveyed to the debtor that, in order to dispute the underlying debt, he must contact I.C. System, and if identity theft was suspected, he must also contact the creditor.[563]

9.8.6 Restrictions on Other Debt Collection Activity During Validation Period

A threat of other consequences may also overshadow the notice.[564] Telecheck's warning that "any delay" in payment "may affect your ability to use checks" may have been deceptive because it could confuse the unsophisticated consumer by failing to explain how this comports with their thirty-day right to contest the debt.[565] One court has held that an initial 560 See Kassin v. AR Resources, Inc., 2017 WL 4316391 (D.N.J. 2017) (allegations that collection letter containing validation notice that directed consumer to call collection agency if debt was covered by his insurance plan stated claim for violation of §§ 1692g and 1692e); O'Brien v. Waldman & Kaplan, P.A., 2016 WL 3583810 (D.N.J. June 30, 2016); Vu v. Diversified Collection Services, Inc., 293 F.R.D. 343 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (request to refrain from writing collector overshadow § 1692g notice); Derry v. Buffalo & Assoc., P.L.C., 2013 WL 3865242 (E.D. Tenn. 2013) ("if you fail to contact this office, our client may consider additional remedies to recover the balance due" did not cause confusion); Riess v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2011 WL 5506290 (D. Minn. 2011) (second letter insinuated that deadline for taking action had already passed); In re Almodovar, 2011 WL 381742 (Bankr. D. P.R. 2011) (insisting that it was extremely important for consumer to contact defendant within five days); Ehrich v. I.C. Sys. Inc., 681 F. Supp. 2d 265 (E.D.N.Y. 2010) (Spanish language sentence, which was placed in otherwise compliant English language validation notice immediately following § 1692g(a)(4) written dispute disclosure and which advised consumers to telephone debt collector at listed toll-free number if they had any questions regarding debt, would leave "the Spanish-speaker uncertain as to his or her rights"); Seplak v. IMBS, Inc., 1999 WL 104730 (N.D. Ill. 1999); Macarz v. Transworld Sys., 26 F. Supp. 2d 368 (D. Conn. 1998); Blair v. Collectech Sys., 1998 WL 214705 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 1998); Withers v. Eveland, 988 F. Supp. 942 (E.D. Va. 1997) (combined with request for immediate payment); Beeman v. Lacey, Katzen, Ryen & Mittleman, 892 F. Supp. 405 (N.D.N.Y. 1995); Stebbins v. Allied Account Services, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21778 (D. Conn. Sept. 9, 1991); Read v. Amana Collection Services, 1991 WL 5155 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 15, 1991); Woolfolk v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 783 F. Supp. 724 (D. Conn. 1990); Gaetano v. Payco, Inc., 774 F. Supp. 1404 (D. Conn. 1990). But cf. Sebrow v. ER Solutions, Inc., 2009 WL 136026 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (threat to report to credit bureaus was not false, did not create false sense of urgency, and did not overshadow verification right notice; fact that defendant failed to do so after fact has no bearing on its intent at time it sent letter; nor is it evidence that letter threatened unintended reporting to credit agencies).

561 See Durkin v. Equifax Check Services, Inc., 406 F.3d 410 (7th Cir. 2005) (toll free number in follow-up letters did not detract from disclosure regarding written disputes); Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003); Terran v. Kaplan, 109 F.3d 1428 (9th Cir. 1997) (demand that consumer telephone collection lawyer's office immediately did not make notice of verification rights that followed in letter ineffective; type for both messages was same and request for telephone call from consumer was not contradictory of right to request verification in writing); Wade v. DCS Fin., Inc., 2016 WL 6267803 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 26, 2016) ("To prevent further collection efforts you must contact this office" did not overshadow § 1692g notice); Vayngurt v. Southwest Credit Sys., L.P., 2016 WL 6068132 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 14, 2016) (rejecting consumer's argument that statement "We are willing to work with you, but you must contact our office promptly" in collection letter overshadowed validation notice); Vetrano v. The CBE Grp., Inc., 2016 WL 4083384 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 1, 2016) ("Call us at (800) 348-3304 to discuss paying with a check by phone, credit card or debit card" would not "lead the least sophisticated consumer to believe that her dispute must be in writing"); Cruz v. Recoveries, 2016 WL 3545322 (D.N.J. 2016) ("The challenged provision, requesting insurance information if Plaintiff believed the insurer would cover the debt, does nothing to impact the bold-faced language outlining the debt dispute process."); Max v. Gordon & Weinberg P.C., 2016 WL 475290 (D.N.J. Feb. 8, 2016); Oberther v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 45 F. Supp. 3d 125 (D. Mass. 2014); Lerner v. Forster, 240 F. Supp. 2d 233 (E.D.N.Y. 2003) (dun requesting full payment or call to creditor to arrange partial payment did not contradict or overshadow debt validation notice in following paragraph); Wallace v. Capital One Bank, 168 F. Supp. 2d 526 (D. Md. 2001) (debt collector did not overshadow validation notice simply by including telephone number in its letter; sentence inviting debtor to call with questions did not overshadow validation notice because of its font, language, tenor, or placement); Philipps v. GC Services, 1994 WL 127283 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 7, 1994) ("[r]emit your balance in full promptly or phone the number listed above," without highlighting that phone call would not protect the consumer's verification rights did not violate § 1692g when statement that consumer must contest validity of debt in writing within thirty days or loan would be presumed valid was contained elsewhere in letter). See also Wyler v. Computer Credit, Inc., 2006 WL 2299413 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2006) (collection agency's letter not deceptive because it advised consumer that he could phone creditor hospital to discuss debt when hospital failed advise collection agency that consumer had called informing hospital that his insurance had paid hospital).

562 See Rosa v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 4472951 (D.N.J. Aug. 23, 2016). See also Moyer v. Patenaude & Felix, A.P.C., 458 F. Supp. 3d 265, 272 (E.D. Pa. 2020).

563 Abramov v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 54 F. Supp. 3d 270 (E.D.N.Y. 2014). See also Friedman v. Leading Edge Recovery, Solutions, L.L.C., 2014 WL 1674083 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 28, 2014).

564 See Mashiri v. Epsten Grinnell & Howell, 845 F.3d 984 (9th Cir. 2017) (threat to file lien on consumer's home within 35 days if payment not made overshadowed consumer's right to request verification of debt and obtain freedom from debt collection activities until verification was sent); DeSantis v. Roz-Ber, Inc., 51 F. Supp. 2d 24 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (used "IMMEDIATE ATTENTION!" in bold letters and implicitly threatened that if consumer did not remit payment in full or call to arrange settlement, he would not receive "cooperation"); Booth v. Collection Experts, Inc., 969 F. Supp. 1161 (E.D. Wis. 1997) (face "more extreme measures"). See also Harlan v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2014 WL 1414508 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 14, 2014) (proper verification disclosure on reverse side of the dun was overshadowed by language on front side that implied that collector's "diligent collection of your account" would continue without consumer's telephone response).

565 Ozkaya v. Telecheck Services, Inc., 982 F. Supp. 578 (N.D. Ill. 1997). See also Johnson v. Equifax Risk Mgmt. Services, 2004 WL 540459

dun that threatened dishonored-check penalties if the debt were not paid within thirty days unlawfully overshadowed the FDCPA validation notice's requirement that the consumer be given thirty days from receipt of the notice to dispute the debt.[566] The consumer, misdirected to turn to the reverse side of the letter to find "important information," only to find that such reverse side was blank, cannot be expected to know with certainty that another enclosed document in fact contains this "important information."[567] The debt buyer's request that the consumer confirm the amount of the debt in the same letter containing its validation notice would be confusing.[568] The debt buyer's "preapproved" credit card junk mail envelopes may have overshadowed the validation notice.[569] In another case, sending communications about reinstating the mortgage overshadowed the FDCPA § 1692g notice to hundreds of thousands of mortgage holders.[570]

The validation notice was not contradicted by language stating "Act now to satisfy your debt"[571] or "[w]e believe you want to pay your just debt,"[572] as both were "in the nature of puffing." Nor would the unsophisticated consumer be confused by language that interest would continue to accrue.[573] A collector's explicit instruction to the consumer that she must dispute the validity of the debt in writing clearly overshadowed the proper FDCPA § 1692g(a)(3) disclosure below that statement.[574] A lower court found that the misrepresentation, that the balance may increase if not paid immediately, overshadowed the FDCPA § 1692g notice.[575]

A request that the consumer "contact" the collector within the validation period and other language which did not demand payment in less than thirty days did not contradict the validation notice.[576] A letter requesting payment "to avoid further contact" did not overshadow the validation notice.[577] An initial dun that referred the consumer to the creditor to make payments or for additional information, but which clearly told the consumer to contact the collector to dispute the debt and seek verification, did not unlawfully contradict the validation notice by encouraging the debtor to dispute the debt with the creditor, rather than with the debt collector.[578] Threats to take actions after the validation period would not ordinarily violate the FDCPA.[579] A lower court rejected the claim that a dun

(S.D.N.Y. Mar. 17, 2004) (collector's dun to collect dishonored check, while not expressly demanding immediate payment, overshadowed 30-day validation period by effectively threatening that consumer's check-writing privileges within collector's national network could only be restored by tendering full payment). But cf. Goldberg v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 1998 WL 650793 (2d Cir. 1998) (unpublished) (language, "grace period about to expire" did not suggest to least sophisticated consumer that he had less than thirty days to dispute debt; in addition, stating that consumer "may eliminate the possibility of additional costs" is "no threat whatsoever, false or otherwise").

566 Bishop v. Global Payments Check Recovery Services, Inc., 2003 WL 21497513 (D. Minn. June 25, 2003). See also Turner v. Shenandoah Legal Group, P.C., 2006 WL 1685698 (E.D. Va. June 12, 2006) (collection letter which contained two different thirty-day periods (1) thirty days from date of letter and (2) thirty days from receipt of letter, as well as reference to adversarial proceeding in "re" line, raised question of fact whether letter contradicted or overshadowed validation notice or contained misleading statement in violation of FDCPA); Gervais v. Riddle & Assoc., 363 F. Supp. 2d 345 (D. Conn. 2005) (where debt collector's letter presented consumer with opportunity to satisfy outstanding balance at fifty-percent discount of over $4000 if paid within thirty days of date of letter, it violated § 1692g because consumer was entitled to full thirty days from receipt of collection letter to request debt verification and shorter period for discount overshadowed and contradicted validation notice), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 479 F. Supp. 2d 270 (D. Conn. 2007).

567 See Papetti v. Rawlings Fin. Services, L.L.C., 121 F. Supp. 3d 340 (S.D.N.Y. 2015).

568 See McKinney v. Cadleway Properties Inc., 2006 WL 208707 (N.D. Ill. 2006). See also Van v. Grant & Weber, 2008 WL 5427975 (9th Cir. Dec. 29, 2008) (collection letter containing reminder of state law requiring debtors to provide new contact information, while warning debtors that information will be used for purposes of debt collection, did not conflict with §§ 1692e, 1692f, or 1692g); Mejia v. Marauder Corp., 2007 WL 806486 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (where dispute notice asked consumer to call if debt had been paid or someone made mistake, least sophisticated consumer could conclude that debt cannot be disputed without proof of payment in violation of § 1692g).

569 See Voris v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 494 F. Supp. 2d 1156 (S.D. Cal. 2007).

570 See Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 198 F. Supp. 3d 794, 812 (E.D. Mich. 2016). But see Lane v. Bayview Loan Serv., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3671467 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2016) (advising homeowner of refinancing options and disclosing principal balance during time for requesting payment did not overshadow validation notice).

571 Taylor v. Calvary Inv. Co., 365 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2004). See also Hipolito v. Alliance Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2005 WL 1662137 (N.D. Cal. July 15, 2005) (statement in initial dun to "pay in full to [stop] all collection activity" was not demand for payment in fewer than thirty days and thus did not overshadow or contradict validation notice).

572 Gruber v. Creditors' Prot. Serv., Inc., 742 F.3d 27 (7th Cir. 2014).

573 Id.

574 Vega v. Credit Bur. Enters., 2005 WL 711657 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2005). See also § 9.10, supra. But see Allison v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 989547 (W.D. Ky. 2018).

575 See Reeseg v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2015 WL 4525869 (D.N.J. July 27, 2015).

576 Madonna v. Academy Collection Serv., Inc., 1997 WL 530101 (D. Conn. Aug. 12, 1997) (contact creditor for payment or information); Gammon v. Belzer, 1997 WL 189291 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 11, 1997) (requested immediate attention).

577 See Kane v. Prof. Medical Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 5012320 (D.N.J. Sept. 16, 2016).

578 See Shapiro v. Dun & Bradstreet Receivable Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2003 WL 1025581 (2d Cir. Mar. 7, 2003). See also Watson v. Certified Credit & Collection Bur., 2009 WL 3068387 (D.N.J. Sept. 23, 2009) (language at issue, "if you believe that these services should have been covered by your insurance company please call your insurance carrier immediately," sufficient to provide notice of debt, and insufficient upon which to build actionable violation of FDCPA; language does not appear overly antagonistic or intimidating so as to overshadow § 1692g notice); In re Hathcock, 437 B.R. 696 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. Oct. 1, 2010) (multiple references to creditor acceptable).

579 West v. Check Alert Sys., 2001 WL 1699196 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 7, 2001) (following statement in collection letter did not contradict or overshadow debt validation notice on back of letter: "Please be advised that if after thirty days your account is not paid in full or otherwise closed, the account information will be forwarded to the National Credit Reporting Agencies. This may hinder your ability to obtain credit in the future."). See McGinty v. Prof'l Claims Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6069180 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 17, 2016); Mashiri v. Grinnell, 2014 WL 12498213 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 31, 2014); Schimmel v. Slaughter, 975 F. Supp.

that paraphrased the FDCPA § 1692c(c) cease communication rights overshadowed the FDCPA § 1692g notice.[580] Inclusion of three reply-by date statements where that date was almost two weeks after the validation notice window closed was found to be consistent with the consumer's right to dispute her debt within the thirty days.[581]

9.9 Where Consumer Does Not Dispute a Debt

> (c) ADMISSION OF LIABILITY.—The failure of a consumer to dispute the validity of a debt under this section may not be construed by any court as an admission of liability by the consumer.[582]

The National Consumer Law Center urged that this provision be adopted in order to prevent the "assumption of validity" (mentioned in the notice of verification rights[583] and intended only to motivate consumers to raise disputes promptly) from diminishing the consumer's opportunity to contest the debt later.[584]

A collection letter which gives the impression, contrary to this section, that a debt not timely disputed by the consumer would be presumed valid by a court, was deceptive violating the FDCPA.[585]

The Third Circuit, in McLaughlin v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P.,[586] the Fourth Circuit, in Russell v. Absolute Collection Services, Inc.,[587] and the Second Circuit, in Vangorden v. Second Round, L.P.,[588] all found nothing in the text of the FDCPA suggests that a debtor's ability to state a section 1692e or section 1692f claim is dependent upon the debtor first disputing the validity of the debt in accordance with section 1692g, rejecting the argument that a consumer must exercise her section 1692g(b) rights seeking verification of the debt as a prerequisite to an FDCPA claim or a claim that the debt is invalid.[589] A number of lower courts had reached the opposite conclusion,[590] without pointing to any language of the FDCPA that supports their view or explaining how their view could possibly be reconciled with section 1692g(c), which those opinions failed to consider.

9.10 Consumer Dispute or Request for Creditor's Identity

9.10.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692g(b)

> If the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing within the thirty-day period described in subsection (a) that the debt, or any portion thereof, is disputed, or that the consumer requests the name and address of the original creditor, the debt collector shall cease collection of the debt, or any disputed portion thereof, until the debt collector obtains verification of the debt or a copy of a judgment, or the name and address of the original creditor, and a copy of such verification or judgment, or name and address of the original creditor, is mailed to the consumer by the debt collector. Collection activities and communications that do not otherwise violate this subchapter may continue during the 30-day period referred to in subsection (a) unless the consumer has notified the debt collector in writing that the debt, or any portion of the debt, is disputed or that the consumer requests the name and address of the original creditor. Any collection activities and communication during the 30-day period may not overshadow or be inconsistent with the disclosure of the consumer's right to dispute the debt or request the name and address of the original creditor.[591]

1357 (M.D. Ga. 1997) (threat that "suit will follow after thirty (30) days" (from date of letter) did not deceptively shorten or contradict validation period).

580 See Illobre v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6581332 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 3, 2016).

581 See Koller v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 4102744 (W.D. Mo. Sept. 15, 2017).

582 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(c). See also Reg. F § 1006.38(d)(1); Dunn v. Premier Capital, Inc., 2013 WL 3466826 (D.N.J. July 9, 2013).

583 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(3). See § 9.11.3, supra.

584 The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act: Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs of the Senate Comm. on Banking, Hous. and Urban Affairs, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 96–97 (1977) (out of print, but available for copying at U.S. government document depositories).

585 See Velderman v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2005 WL 2405959 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 29, 2005); Burdett v. Harrah's Kansas Casino Corp., 294 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (D. Kan. 2003); Neely, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 29, 1980). See also Nelson v. Select Fin. Services, Inc., 430 F. Supp. 2d 455, 457 (E.D. Pa. 2006); McCabe v. Crawford & Co., 272 F. Supp. 2d 736 (N.D. Ill. 2003). Cf. Gigli v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2008 WL 3853295 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 14, 2008). But see D'Allesandro v. Vision Fin. Corp., 2009 WL 816082 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. Mar. 31, 2009).

586 756 F.3d 240, 247 (3d Cir. 2014).

587 763 F.3d 385, 392–393 (4th Cir. 2014).

588 2018 WL 3595759, at *4 (2d Cir. 2018). See also Wong v. Alternative Claims Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5635533 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) (consumer can sue under § 1692e even if they did not use statutory verification procedure set forth in § 1692g).

589 See also Girdler v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2016 WL 7479541 (D. Mass. Dec. 29, 2016); Psaros v. Green Tree Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 9412922 (D.N.J. Dec. 21, 2015); Riley v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 1594298 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 7, 2015); Velazquez v. NCO Fin. Sys. Inc., 2011 WL 2135633 (E.D. Pa. May 31, 2011); Russell v. Absolute Collection Services, Inc., 2011 WL 13116532 (M.D.N.C. Jan. 10, 2011).

590 See, e.g., Golden v. Prosser, 2014 WL 4626489 (D. Minn. 2014); Mellinger v. Midwestern Audit Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 405008 (E.D. Mich. 2012); Carpenter v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 787 F. Supp. 2d 971 (D. Minn. 2011); Milton v. LTD Fin. Services, 2011 WL 291363 (S.D. Ga. 2011); Wright v. North Shore Agency, Inc., 2008 WL 11338704 (C.D. Cal. May 22, 2008); Whitaker v. Hudson & Keyse, L.L.C., 2007 WL 2265057 (S.D. Ind. 2007) (failure to dispute may bar consumer's later dispute); Palmer v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2005 WL 3001877, at *5 (N.D. Cal. 2005).

591 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(b).

9.10.2 Regulation F Requirements As to Consumer Dispute or Request for Creditor's Identity

9.10.2.1 Generally

For certain debt collector obligations to apply (see § 9.11, infra), Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) specifies that the consumer's dispute of the debt or a request for the name and address of the original creditor be submitted in writing within the validation period.[592] The validation period is a defined term,[593] examined in § 9.4.8.1, supra, and the end of the period is disclosed in the validation information at the section disclosing the consumer's rights, examined at § 9.4.8.2, supra.

A consumer's dispute or request for original-creditor information is timely if has been sent or submitted within the validation period, even if the collector receives the dispute beyond the period.[594] If the debt collector sends a second validation notice because it assumes the consumer did not receive the first one, then the end of the validation period is based on when the second notice was sent.[595]

The consumer must submit the dispute or request in "writing." The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide four examples of submissions in "writing":

- Mailing a written dispute or request to the debt collector;
- Returning to the debt collector the consumer-response form that the Regulation requires to appear on the validation notice,[596] and indicating on the form the dispute or request;
- Using a medium of electronic communication through which the debt collector accepts electronic communications from consumers, such as an email address or a website portal; or
- Delivering the written dispute or request in person or by courier to the debt collector.[597]

The Regulation F Official Interpretations also explain that the consumer's use of electronic media to submit a dispute or request for original-creditor information despite the statutory requirement that such submissions be "in writing" is consistent with the federal E-SIGN Act. While E-SIGN § 101(b) does not require a person to accept electronic communication in lieu of a writing, the CFPB views the consumer's use of an electronic medium through which the collector otherwise accepts communications from consumers as evidence that the collector has accepted the use of such an electronic medium.[598]

The Regulation F supplemental information states that debt collectors can request that consumers send disputes and requests for original-creditor information through designated web portals or email addresses, but clarifies that:

> The final rule's prohibitions on harassing, deceptive, and unfair practices in [Reg. F] §§ 1006.14, 1006.18, and 1006.22 continue to apply such that a debt collector should not ignore a consumer's dispute or request for original-creditor information received through an online portal or to an email address not designated by the debt collector for receiving such disputes or requests.[599]

9.10.2.2 Requests or Disputes from a Deceased Consumer's Estate

As discussed at § 9.2.3, supra, if the debt collector knows or should know that the consumer is deceased, and if the debt collector has not previously provided the validation information to the deceased consumer, a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate operates as the consumer for purposes of the validation information requirements.[600] The debt collector must provide the validation information to an individual that the debt collector identifies by name who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate.[601]

Similarly, "[i]f the debt collector knows or should know that the consumer is deceased, and if the consumer has not previously disputed the debt or requested the name and address of the original creditor, a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate operates as the consumer for purposes of [disputes and requests for original-creditor information]." In such circumstances, the debt collector must then respond to a request for the name and address of the original creditor or to a dispute timely submitted in writing by a person who is authorized to act on behalf of the deceased consumer's estate.[602] Such a request by a person authorized to act on behalf of the estate should also trigger a collection pause until the collector complies with its obligations in response to the request.[603]

9.10.3 A Sufficient Consumer Request or Dispute Prior to Regulation F

This section examines court decisions issued prior to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) about consumer disputes and requests for original-creditor information. Regulation F provisions are discussed at § 9.10.2, supra.

A consumer's written statement that "I dispute the debt"[604] or requesting "verification"[605] is sufficient to dispute the validity of a debt under the FDCPA.

592 Reg. F §§ 1006.38(c), (d)(2).
593 Reg. F § 1006.34(b)(5).
594 See 86 Fed. Reg. 5766 at 5798 (Jan. 19, 2021).
595 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(5)-2.
596 Reg. F § 1006.34(c)(4). See § 9.4.10, supra.
597 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38-1.
598 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38-2. There is a drafting error in the interpretation where the clear intent is to reference Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38-1(iii), not (ii).
599 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,844, n.552 (Nov. 30, 2020).
600 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(a)(1)-1.
601 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(a)(1)-1.
602 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38-3.
603 See § 9.11, infra.
604 Castro v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2000 WL 264310 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).
605 Gruber v. Creditors' Prot. Serv., Inc., 742 F.3d 271 (7th Cir. 2014) (section 1692g notice instructing consumer to seek verification rather than disputing debt was not violation of Act).

The validation notice must not impose additional burdens on the consumer.[606] In Castro v. ARS National Services, Inc.,[607] a district court in New York held that a debt collector had violated the FDCPA by including language in its validation notice that the least sophisticated consumer could read as imposing requirements beyond those set out in the FDCPA. The debt collector's validation notice listed six types of documents as suitable for dispute purposes, such as a cancelled check or a final billing statement. The word "dispute" need not be used in the request for verification if the meaning is otherwise clear.[608] The consumer's statement in the letter to the collector that the account had been paid in full was sufficient to obtain verification.[609] In the context of a consumer's exercise of rights under FDCPA § 1692c, the Seventh Circuit in Horkey[610] noted that the consumer should not be required to use sophisticated methods to exercise FDCPA rights and that this policy should be applied to consumers' disputes and requests for verification. An attorney seeking verification may be held to a higher standard, though.[611]

In DeSantis v. Computer Credit, Inc., the Second Circuit found that a debt collector may not add the requirement that the consumer's request for verification contain a "valid reason for nonpayment."[612]

The thirty-day period during which a consumer may request verification of a debt runs from the date of receipt of the notice of verification rights by the consumer.[613] The consumer must send the dispute or verification request within the thirty days of receiving of the validation notice.[614] If the consumer does not act in that time period, the debt collector is not obligated to provide verification of the debt.[615]

606 See Henhaffer v. Simeone & Raynor, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6305939 (D.N.J. 2016); Jones-Bartley v. McCabe, Weisberg & Conway, P.C., 59 F. Supp. 3d 617 (S.D.N.Y. 2014) (denying mortgage attorneys' motion to dismiss § 1692g(a) claim that was based upon collection letter's statement that consumer should "indicate the nature of the dispute" to lodge dispute); Dutterer v. Thomas Kalperis Int'l, Inc., 2011 WL 382575 (E.D. Pa. 2011) (may not instruct debtor to "supply us with substantive information proving payment within 30 days"); Beasley v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A., 2010 WL 1980083 (E.D.N.C. 2010); Walters v. PDI Mgmt. Services, 2004 WL 1622217 (S.D. Ind. 2004) (no certified mail); Sambor v. Omnia Credit Services, 183 F. Supp. 2d 1234 (D. Haw. 2002) ("suitable dispute documentation"); Whitten v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2002 WL 1332001 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (suitable dispute documentation); Frey v. Satter, Beyer & Spires, 1999 WL 301650 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (nature of dispute); Krisor, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 3, 1992). See also Johnson v. Equifax Risk Mgmt. Services, 2004 WL 540459 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (affidavit of forgery acceptable, but should not imply that consumer's verification dispute was ineffective); Forsberg v. Fid. Nat'l Credit Services, Ltd., 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7622 (S.D. Cal. 2004) (requested documentation). Cf. Mendez v. M.R.S. Assoc., 2004 WL 1745779 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (explain nature of dispute). But see Renick v. Dun & Bradstreet Receivable Mgmt. Services, 290 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2002) (collector's letter made it clear that phone company should be contacted only with questions pertaining to phone account and that inquiries about collection of money owed should be directed to collector); Franzos v. Pinnacle Credit Services L.L.C., 332 F. Supp. 2d 682 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (listing documents to submit as proof that debt was not owed acceptable); Foresberg v. Fid. Nat'l Credit Services, Ltd., 2004 WL 3510771 (S.D. Cal. 2004) ("please include documentation"); Valdez v. Hunt, 2002 WL 433595 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (directing consumer to creditor to make payments would not confuse consumer as to whom to direct verification request); Sandlin v. Shapiro & Fishman, 919 F. Supp. 1564 (M.D. Fla. 1996) ($60 fee for payoff figures acceptable).

607 2000 WL 264310 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 8, 2000).

608 Gruber v. Creditors' Prot. Serv., Inc., 742 F.3d 271, 274 (7th Cir. 2014); Webster v. ACB Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 15 F. Supp. 3d 619 (D. Md. 2014) (requesting validation rather than verification acceptable); Clark's Jewelers v. Humble, 823 P.2d 818 (Kan. Ct. App. 1991). See also Kasalo v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 53 F. Supp. 3d 1072 (N.D. Ill. 2014) (FDCPA complaint provided the consumer's timely written dispute of the debt by stating it had been paid); Mendez v. M.R.S. Assoc., 2005 WL 1564977 (N.D. Ill. June 27, 2005) ("explain nature of dispute").

609 See Devlin v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2012 WL 4469139 (D. Mass. Sept. 25, 2012). See also Hair v. Lazega & Johanson L.L.C., 2014 WL 12571424 (N.D. Ga. July 7, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 12575746 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 6, 2014) (statements that "debt is being handled through another agency" and "[p]ayment terms have been accepted and agreed" were sufficient to raise question of fact).

610 Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003). See also Gruber v. Creditors' Prot. Serv., Inc., 742 F.3d 271, 274 (7th Cir. 2014); March v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 2011 WL 3648235 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 18, 2011) (issue of material fact existed as to whether letter could lead a trier of fact to conclude that plaintiff's letter was meant as RESPA qualified written request and not as request to verify plaintiff's debt); Reese v. CAC Services, Inc., 2011 WL 830084 (D. Or. Mar. 3, 2011) ("the ordinary usage of "dispute" is defined as "to call into question; . . . to struggle against; . . . to contend over"; could not conclude as a matter of law that plaintiff's letter did not constitute notice of his dispute); Burke v. Messerli & Kramer P.A., 2010 WL 3167403 (D. Minn. Aug. 9, 2010) (prior correspondence during period sufficient; written dispute of paid debt).

611 See Andrade v. Erin Capital Mgmt. L.L.C., 2010 WL 1961843 (S.D. Fla. May 17, 2010).

612 269 F.3d 159, 162 (2d Cir. 2001). See also Mikolajczyk v. Universal Fid., L.P., 2017 WL 706301 (E.D. Wis. Feb. 22, 2017) (requiring reasons for dispute); Mendez v. M.R.S. Assoc., 2005 WL 1564977 (N.D. Ill. June 27, 2005) ("explain the nature of the dispute").

613 See § 9.7.5, supra. See also Settle v. Bank of Am., 2010 WL 682296 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 23, 2010) (pro se consumer requested verification prior to receipt of defendant's initial debt collection communication, mortgagee's alleged failure to respond did not amount to § 1692g violation). Cf. Slanina v. United Recovery Sys., L.P., 2011 WL 5008367 (M.D. Pa. Oct. 20, 2011) (consumer does not have a verification right until claim goes into collection, usually after default); Settle v. Bank of Am., 2010 WL 682296 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 23, 2010).

614 See § 9.10.2.1, supra; Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Services, Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008). See also Kasalo v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 53 F. Supp. 3d 1072 (N.D. Ill. 2014) (service of complaint from consumer's lawyer provided consumer's timely written dispute of debt).

615 See Crain v. Pinnacle Fin. Group, Inc., 2007 WL 3408540 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 14, 2007) (where consumer did not request verification within 30-day period, she had no claim); Shah v. Collecto, Inc., 2005 WL 2216242 (D. Md. Sept. 12, 2005) (consumer's request for verification outside request period did not impose liability under § 1692g); Senftle v. Landau, 390 F. Supp. 2d 463 (D. Md. 2005); Asset Acceptance L.L.C. v. Davis, 2004 WL 2940747 (Ohio Ct. App. Dec. 13, 2004) (debt collector's failure to provide verification, which was requested by consumer more than three years after collector sent its initial communication containing § 1692g notice, was not unlawful since that section requires collector to comply only with such requests lodged within 30 days after consumer's receipt of communication containing validation notice).

However, certain actions by the debt collector can extend the validation period.[616]

While the verification request is generally mailed, an emailed request to the debt collector may also be effective.[617] The consumer should write down the date of receiving the validation notice from the debt collector and the date and address to which the consumer mailed their request to the debt collector disputing, or requesting verification of, the debt. With that information, the consumer may take advantage of the "mailbox rule," that presumes that a letter sent to correct address is received at that address.[618] The consumer may authorize their attorney or agent to request the debt be verified so long as the authorization is clearly provided to the debt collector.[619]

The clear language of FDCPA § 1692g(b) requires the debt collector to cease collection of the debt until it provides verification of the debt.[620] This provision is silent on whether the debt collector that ceases collection must still provide verification. The courts generally do not require verification if the debt collector ceases collection.[621]

616 See Reg. F Official Interpretations § 34(b)(5)-2 (if debt collector sends second validation notice, because it assumes consumer did not receive first one, then end of validation period is based on when second notice was sent); Young v. G.L.A. Collection Co., 2011 WL 6016650 (S.D. Ind. Dec. 1, 2011) (considered collector's offer of a second 30-day period to request verification binding on collector).

617 See Caldwell v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 2016 WL 10592261 at 7 (W.D. Tenn. 2016).

618 See, e.g., Boatswain v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2010 WL 11483195 (E.D.N.C. 2010). See also § 9.3.3, supra (discussing the "mailbox rule").

619 See Horkey v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 333 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2003) (collection agency failed to provide validation notice to consumer, violating FDCPA; collection agency's ignorance of consumer's new address was not excuse when it could have sent validation notice to consumer's attorney); Kasalo v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 53 F. Supp. 3d 1072 (N.D. Ill. 2014) (FDCPA complaint written by consumer's lawyer provided consumer's timely written dispute of debt); Cowell v. Creditors Interchange Receivable Mgmt., L.L.C., 2009 WL 465580 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 25, 2009) (debt settlement company's request for verification was proper); Owens v. Howe, 2004 WL 6070565, at *38 (N.D. Ind. Nov. 8, 2004) (debt collector must respond to dispute letter written by debtor's wife; "communication was clearly sent at [plaintiff's] direction"); Gostony v. Diem Corp., 320 F. Supp. 2d 932, 942 (D. Ariz. 2003) (dispute letter from someone claiming to be plaintiff's father).

620 See § 9.8.1, infra.

621 See Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions, L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926, 940 (9th Cir. 2007) ("[n]othing in [§ 1692g(b)] suggests an independent obligation to verify a disputed debt where the collector abandons all collection activity with respect to the consumer"); Jang v. A.M. Miller & Assoc., 122 F.3d 480, 482 (7th Cir. 1997) ("[w]hen a collection agency cannot verify a debt, the statute allows the debt collector to cease all collection activities at that point without incurring any liability for the mistake"); Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025, 1031 (6th Cir. 1992) (debt collector did not violate FDCPA when it ceased collection activity after receiving request for validation); Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 519 F.3d 416, 419 (8th Cir. 2008); Jacques v. Solomon & Solomon P.C., 886 F. Supp. 2d 429 (D. Del. 2012); F.T.C. Staff Opinion Letter, 1997 WL 33791232 (Dec. 23, 1997) ("[t]here is nothing in the FDCPA that requires a response to a written dispute if the debt collector chooses to abandon its collection effort with respect to the debt at issue"); F.T.C. Staff Opinion Letter, 1992 WL 12144210 (Mar. 3, 1992) ("[i]n the event the collector decides not to pursue the collection efforts, there is no requirement to furnish the documentation of the indebtedness to the consumer").

9.11 Collector Response to Consumer Dispute or Request for Creditor's Identity

9.11.1 Debt Collector Obligations Under Regulation F

9.11.1.1 Obligations After a Dispute

Under Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), upon receipt of a dispute submitted by the consumer in writing or electronically (where the collector accepts such electronic communication from consumers)[622] and within the validation period,[623] a debt collector must cease collection of the debt, or any disputed portion of the debt.[624] The collector must cease such collection until it sends to the consumer, in writing or electronically in the proper manner,[625] a copy either of verification of the debt or of a judgment.[626]

The Regulation F supplemental information explains that the Bureau declined "to define what it means to verify a debt" and that "the Bureau generally expects that debt collectors will respond to non-duplicative disputes by providing verifications of debts (or copies of judgments) as they do today."[627]

If the debt collector reasonably determines that the consumer's dispute is a duplicative dispute, the collector can still send the verification or judgment.[628] Alternatively, it can notify the consumer that the dispute is duplicative, provide a brief statement of the reasons for the determination in the proper manner,[629] and refer the consumer to the debt collector's response to the earlier dispute.[630] The Regulation F Official Interpretations state concerning duplicative disputes:

> A debt collector complies with the requirement to provide a brief statement of the reasons for its determination if the notice states that the dispute is substantially the same as an earlier dispute submitted by the consumer and the consumer has not included any new and material information in support of the earlier dispute. A debt collector complies with the requirement to refer the consumer to the debt collector's response to the earlier dispute if the notice states that the debt collector responded to the earlier dispute and provides the date of that response.[631]

Regulation F defines a duplicative dispute as one the consumer submits in writing within the validation period that is

622 See § 9.10.2, supra.

623 See §§ 9.4.1, 9.10.2, supra.

624 Reg. F § 1006.38(d)(2).

625 See § 9.11.1.3, infra.

626 Reg. F § 1006.38(d)(2)(i).

627 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,847 (Nov. 30, 2020). See § 9.11.2, infra (discussing pre-Regulation F verification practices).

628 Reg. F § 1006.38(d)(2)(ii)(B).

629 See § 9.11.1.3, infra.

630 Reg. F § 1006.38(d)(2)(ii)(A).

631 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38(d)(ii)-1.

substantially the same as a dispute the consumer previously submitted in writing within the validation period for which the debt collector already has sent to the consumer in writing in the proper manner a copy either of verification of the debt or of a judgment.[632] A later dispute can be substantially the same as an earlier dispute, even if the later dispute does not repeat verbatim the language of the earlier dispute.[633]

Even if the dispute is substantially the same, it is not duplicative if it contains new and material information to support the dispute.[634] Information is new if the consumer did not provide the information when submitting an earlier dispute.[635] Information is material if it is reasonably likely to change the verification the debt collector provided or would have provided in response to the earlier dispute.[636] The Regulation F Official Interpretations provide an example where the consumer disputes a debt and the collector provides verification. "The consumer then sends a cancelled check showing the consumer paid the debt. The cancelled check is new and material information."[637]

9.11.1.2 Obligations After a Request for Original-Creditor Information

Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that upon receipt of a request for the name and address of the original creditor submitted by the consumer in writing or electronically (where the collector accepts such electronic communication from consumers)[638] and within the validation period,[639] a debt collector must cease collection of the debt.[640] It must cease such collection actions until the debt collector sends to the consumer in writing or electronically in the proper manner[641] the name and address of the original creditor.[642]

Regulation F provides an alternative option for a collector where the name of the original creditor and current creditor are the same. In utilizing that option, the debt collector ceases collection until it reasonably determines that the original creditor is the same as the current creditor and until it notifies the consumer of that fact in writing or electronically in the proper manner,[643] and refers the consumer to the validation information previously provided that includes the name of the current creditor.[644] This is a strange option, because the referenced validation information does not include the address of the current creditor, so the consumer's request for the original creditor's address is not fulfilled.

632 Reg. F § 1006.38(a)(1)(i).
633 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38(a)(1)-1.
634 Reg. F § 1006.38(a)(1)(ii).
635 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38(a)(1)-2.
636 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38(a)(1)-2.
637 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 38(a)(1)-2(i).
638 See § 9.10.2, supra.
639 See §§ 9.4.1, 9.10.2, supra.
640 Reg. F § 1006.38(c).
641 See § 9.11.1.3, infra.
642 Reg. F § 1006.38(c)(1).
643 See § 9.11.1.3, infra.
644 Reg. F § 1006.38(c)(2).

9.11.1.3 Form of Collector Responses

As noted above, Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) provides that the collector must submit to the consumer in the proper manner the four different collector responses:

- Verification of the debt or of a judgment;
- Notice regarding a duplicative dispute;
- The original creditor's name and address; and
- Notification where the original creditor is the current creditor.

All of these responses must be sent in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice, and in a form that the consumer may keep and access later.[645]

If the collector sends any of these notices electronically, other than the notice of a duplicative dispute, it must do so in accordance with E-SIGN § 101(c), 15 U.S.C. § 7001(c).[646] The requirements of E-SIGN § 101(c), including its consumer consent requirement, are described at § 9.3.2, supra.

Even though an electronic duplicative dispute notice need not comply with E-SIGN § 101(c), it still must be sent in a manner that is reasonably expected to provide actual notice, and in a form that the consumer may keep and access later.[647] All four responses must be written or electronic, and cannot be made orally.[648]

9.11.2 Ceasing Collection Prior to Regulation F

9.11.2.1 Generally

This section examines court decisions issued prior to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) about ceasing collection after consumers dispute or request original-creditor information. Regulation F provisions outlining obligations after a dispute or request for original-creditor information are discussed at § 9.11.1, supra.

The collector must cease collection activities on the date it receives the request for verification,[649] and will be held liable if it continues to collect the debt until it provides an appropriate verification.[650] The collector may not resume collection

645 Reg. F §§ 1006.38(c)(1), (c)(2), (d)(2)(i), (d)(2)(ii)(A) (all referencing § 1006.42); § 9.3.2, supra.
646 Reg. F § 1006.38(c)(1), (c)(2), (d)(2)(i) (all referencing § 1006.42); § 9.3.2, supra.
647 Reg. F § 1006.38 (d)(2)(ii) (referencing § 1006.42(a)(1)); § 9.3.2, supra.
648 85 Fed. Reg. 76734 at 76847 (Nov. 30, 2020).
649 See Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp., 806 F.3d 895 (7th Cir. 2015); Dragon v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 483 F. Supp. 2d 198 (D. Conn. 2007); Jeffries v. Dutton & Dutton, P.C., 2006 WL 1343629 (N.D. Ill. May 11, 2006); United States v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 667 F. Supp. 370 (N.D. Tex. 1986), aff'd per curiam, 823 F.2d 880 (5th Cir. 1987); Appx. E.2.6.7, infra. But see Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 22, 1989) (no liability where collector sent collection letter day after it received request for verification, but before it had processed it).
650 Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp., 806 F.3d 895 (7th Cir. 2015); Thebert v. Potestivo & Assoc., 2017 WL 3581322 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 18, 2017); Garcia-Contreras v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 775 F. Supp. 2d 808

activities,[651] including affirmative steps in a debt collection suit[652] or filing a lien on the consumer's property,[653] until it mails[654] verification to the consumer, even if the consumer was already aware of the basis of the claim.[655] If only a portion of the debt remains unverified, continuing to collect on that unverified portion of a debt violates FDCPA § 1692g(b).[656] The consumer need not dispute the validity of the debt to recover for a validation notice violation.[657]

Key to the informal dispute resolution device of debt verification is the requirement that the debt collector cease collecting the debt when the collector receives a timely written dispute of the debt or a written request for verification of the debt. The cessation requirement gives the debt collector an incentive to investigate the dispute and provide the required information about its claim to the consumer, because its fee often depends on the amount collected.[658] The FDCPA does not require that consumers be notified that debt collectors, after receiving a timely written dispute or request for verification, must suspend collection until they verify the debt.[659] However, under Regulation F debt collectors will be required to inform consumers about the collection pause.[660]

In Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp.,[661] the Seventh Circuit rejected the collection agency's argument that the plaintiff consumer was not misled by its request for payment after receiving the consumer's dispute and held that an objective standard is appropriate for determining whether a debt collector has failed to "cease collection" by sending a particular letter. That objective analysis considers the content of the letter and the context in which it was sent, including the nature and scope of the parties' relationship, the consumer's request for an acknowledgment of the dispute, and the consumer's belief that he did not owe the debt as his medical insurance was obligated to pay it.

9.11.2.2 Putting Lawsuits on Hold

The Eleventh Circuit joined the Seventh Circuit in holding that a debt verification request during a suit requires the collector to put the collection suit on hold.[662] The Eleventh Circuit

(M.D.N.C. 2011) (rejecting argument that contents of lawsuit could constitute verification; defendants violated FDCPA by filing their lawsuit before complying with requirement a verification be "mailed"), adopted in part, rejected in part by 775 F. Supp. 2d 808 (M.D.N.C. 2011); Casas v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 249992 (S.D. Cal. 2009); Spencer v. Hendersen-Webb, 81 F. Supp. 2d 582 (D. Md. 1999); In re Young, 280 B.R. 864 (Bankr. S.D. Ala. 2001). See also Dikun v. Streich, 369 F. Supp. 2d 781 (E.D. Va 2005); Martinez v. Credit Bur., 2005 WL 1972538 (S.D. Fla. 2005); Bohensky v. Hosp. Billing & Collection Services, Ltd., 1999 WL 294726 (E.D.N.Y. 1999). Cf. Allen v. ATG Credit L.L.C., 2004 WL 2931298 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (called consumer five times to confirm that verification information was received, not to collect).

651 Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc., 445 F. Supp. 3d 1271, 1283 (D. Colo. 2020) (phone call after receipt of dispute violated FDCPA; however, letter confirming receipt of dispute that invited call, but did not demand payment, did not violate statute); Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 2848278 (N.D. Ga. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 2009 WL 4826953 (11th Cir. 2009); Zaborac v. Mut. Hosp. Serv., Inc., 2004 WL 2538643 (S.D. Ind. 2004) (collector may continue settlement negotiations initiated by consumer's attorney); Johnson v. Statewide Collections, Inc., 778 P.2d 93 (Wyo. 1989). See also Spencer v. Hendersen-Webb, 81 F. Supp. 2d 582 (D. Md. 1999) (did not comply by faxing printout itemizing debt to consumer's future father-in-law); Castle, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 13, 1995).

652 See Shimek v. Forbes, 374 F.3d 1011 (11th Cir. 2004); Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997); U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n v. Martin, 2015 WL 2227792 (D. Haw. Apr. 23, 2015) (bank was precluded from proceeding with its case—including serving consumer); Garcia-Contreras v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2010 WL 4962940 (M.D.N.C. Nov. 30, 2010), adopted in part, rejected in part by 775 F. Supp. 2d 808 (M.D.N.C. 2011); Forman v. Lauinger, 2007 WL 1580082 (D. Mont. May 31, 2007); Lietz v. Mikel M. Boley Attorney at Law, 2006 WL 335854 (D. Utah Feb. 14, 2006); Recker v. Cent. Collection Bur., Inc., 2005 WL 2654222 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 17, 2005); McDaniel v. South & Assoc., P.C., 325 F. Supp. 2d 1210 (D. Kan. 2004); Levin v. Kluever & Platt, L.L.C., 2003 WL 22757763 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 19, 2003); Frey v. Satter, Beyer & Spires, 1999 WL 301650 (N.D. Ill. May 3, 1999); Taylor v. Fink, 1994 WL 669605 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 25, 1994).

653 See Haddad v. Alexander, Zelmanski, Danner & Fioritto, P.L.L.C., 758 F.3d 777, 786 (6th Cir. 2014); Essique v. Walnut Woods Condo. Ass'n, 2016 WL 7337246 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 19, 2016); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2016 WL 3958608 (E.D. Mo. July 22, 2016).

654 See Puczko v. Law Office of Sipe & Landon, 2010 WL 11519290 (D. Ariz. Mar. 16, 2010). See also Ghanta v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 1423597 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 18, 2017) (plain language of § 1692g requires that verification be "mailed," and it was therefore "irrelevant" that debtor received some part of verifying information through the CFPB portal). Cf. § 9.11.1.3, supra (discussing acceptable ways to provide consumer response information under Regulation F).

655 See Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp., 806 F.3d 895, 898 (7th Cir. 2015) (applying objective test and determining that debt collector did not cease collecting debt where its collection letter requesting more information about consumer's § 1692g dispute also requested payment; consumer's subjective belief that he did not owe debt did not strip him of his § 1692g(b) protections).

656 Haddad v. Alexander, Zelmanski, Danner & Fioritto, P.L.L.C., 758 F.3d 777 (6th Cir. 2014).

657 Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982).

658 Although it is common for some debt collectors to cease their collection efforts and return the debt to creditor who is not bound directly by the FDCPA or the debt verification request. However, other laws may compel the creditor to respond to the consumer's dispute of the debt. See § 16.3.4, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

659 See also Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497, 502 (7th Cir. 1997) (Judge Posner's safe haven model validation notice does inform consumer that collector must suspend its collection efforts pending its response to consumer's verification request).

660 Reg. F §§ 1006.34(c)(3)(i)–(ii). See § 9.4.8.2, supra.

661 806 F.3d 895 (7th Cir. 2015). See also McCray v. Deitsch & Wright, P.A., 356 F. Supp. 3d 1358, 1360 (M.D. Fla. 2019) (demand in validation notice to immediately contact creditor overshadowed consumer's rights and violated § 1692g(b)).

662 See Shimek v. Forbes, 374 F.3d 1011 (11th Cir. 2004); Bartlett v. Heibl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997); Forman v. Lauinger, 2007 WL 1580082 (D. Mont. 2007); McDaniel v. South & Assoc., 325 F. Supp. 2d 1210 (D. Kan. 2004) (collector violated FDCPA by initiating judicial foreclosure action seeking money judgment as well as foreclosure after receiving timely verification request, but before responding to it); Levin v. Kluever & Platt, L.L.C., 2003 WL 22757763 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (may not seek default judgment); Lietz v. Mikel M. Boley Attorney at Law, 2006 WL 335854 (D. Utah 2006) (claim was stated where defendant filed complaint and summons after verification was requested and before it had been provided); Recker v. Cent. Collection Bur., Inc., 2005 WL acknowledged that the FDCPA prohibited the debt collector from taking further steps to collect the debt until it had validated the debt once the consumer had requested debt verification. However, the court found that the debt collector had no obligation to stop the clerk from recording the previously filed lien against the condominium after receiving the consumer's request for verification.[663] The lower courts had looked to the Seventh Circuit decision by Judge Posner in Bartlett v. Heibl,[664] which recognized the confusion created by the threat to bring suit during the period that the consumer could request verification of the debt, because the consumer's verification request would force a suspension of collection efforts, including suit, until verification of the debt was provided.

While FDCPA § 1692g(b) requires a collector to cease collection activities pending its verification of a debt after a written request from the consumer disputing the debt, FTC staff letters erroneously believed it was permissible for the collector to continue litigation proceedings—for example, filing suit, taking a default judgment, and enforcing the judgment—during the cessation period.[665] The FTC staff did not believe that pursuing legal remedies pending verification was "unfair,"[666] although it believed a warning to the consumer that the collector might undertake legal proceedings during the thirty-day period or the cessation period would be appropriate, to avoid "confusion."[667] The courts have held otherwise—that, where verification was requested, suit may not be initiated or actively pursued until verification of the debt has been provided.

A lower court denied the debt collector summary judgment on its bona fide error defense that it had somehow lost the consumer's debt verification request and filed suit, as the debt collector failed to show reasonable procedures to prevent such an error.[668]

9.11.2.3 Limits on Credit Reporting

A debt collector which receives a dispute of the debt is required by FDCPA § 1692e(8) to report the dispute to any credit reporting agency to which it reports the debt.[669] The Fair Credit Reporting Act requires that a dispute of any debt reported to a credit reporting agency triggers a requirement that the furnisher, including a debt collector, investigate the dispute.[670]

In Ewers v. Rainmaker Recovery 3, Inc.,[671] the Eastern District of Michigan found that the collector violated FDCPA § 1692g(b) by reporting the debt at issue to Equifax after receiving a letter disputing the debt and seeking verification. In recognizing the critical nature of credit reporting as collection activity, the court stated: "A credit rating is extremely important to consumers, and can affect the ability to obtain credit, the rate of interest on loans, and even insurance rates. The reporting mechanism can thus pressure the consumer to pay the debt, perhaps to an even greater extent that a letter or a telephone call."[672]

9.11.3 Collector's Verification of Debt

9.11.3.1 Generally

The FDCPA does not define the operative word "verification" used in section 1692g(b).[673] The Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) supplemental information explains that the Bureau declined "to define what it means to verify a debt" and that "the Bureau generally expects that debt collectors will respond to non-duplicative disputes by providing verifications 2654222 (S.D. Ind. 2005) (attaching verification of debt to small claims complaint was improper); Frey v. Satter, Beyer & Spires, 1999 WL 301650 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (validation notice should also state that if debt verification was requested, suit would be paused until verification was provided); Taylor v. Fink, 1994 WL 669605 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

663 Shimek v. Forbes, 374 F.3d 1011 (11th Cir. 2004). See also McNichols v. Moore Law Group, 2012 WL 667760 (S.D. Cal. 2012) (allegations that defendant attorney collector filed suit to collect debt without first providing verification as consumer had requested in writing stated claim for relief); Humphrey v. Brown, 2011 WL 53081 (D. Md. 2011) (debt collector properly ceased collection, but FDCPA did not required collector to unwind foreclosure relief scam).

664 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997). But see Thomas v. Law Firm of Simpson & Cybak, 392 F.3d 914, 920 (7th Cir. 2004) (providing validation notice language to collection lawyers who planned to file suit during period for consumer to request verification).

665 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 809(b)-1, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Weinberg, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 16, 1992); Wytychak, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 16, 1992); Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988); Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 16, 1987); Polito, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 8, 1987); Kent, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 10, 1986).

666 Levin, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 12, 1986). See also § 8.2, supra.

667 Luby, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 5, 1986); McPhee, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 17, 1986); Levin, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 12, 1986).

668 See VanHuss v. Rausch, Sturm, Israel, Enerson & Hornik, 2017 WL 1379402 (W.D. Wis. Apr. 14, 2017).

669 See § 7.2.8, supra.

670 See § 14.6, infra.

671 393 F. Supp. 3d 614 (E.D. Mich. 2019).

672 Id. at 621.

673 See Reg. F § 1006.38(d)(2)(i).

See also H.R. Rep. No. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 5 (1977) ("Although the term "certification" [later changed to "verification"] which is used in section 808, validation of debts, is not defined in the bill, the committee feels compliance would be achieved by a debt collector if the debt collector obtained from the creditor a statement which includes an itemization of the amount of the debt, and the name of the consumer, a statement that the debt has not been paid, and a statement that the creditor (to whom the debt was originally owed), in consideration of the consumer's debt, had either delivered a merchantable product or properly rendered a service."); H.R. Rep. No. 1202, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 4 (1976) (nearly identical language).

The Consumer Credit Protection Act, of which the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act is part, cautions against reliance on captions, removing the word "validation" from contention in interpreting this provision. See Brady v. Credit Recovery Co., 160 F.3d 64, 65 (1st Cir. 1998) ("Pub. L. 90-321, § 502 (May 29, 1968), 82 Stat. 146, 147, reported as a note following 15 U.S.C. § 1601 (forbidding reliance on captions)"); Appx. E.2.6.4, infra.

of debts (or copies of judgments) as they do today."[674] The common meaning of "verification" is to "prove by evidence."[675]

As discussed in § 9.11.3.2, infra, the Fourth, Seventh, and Ninth Circuits have departed from the common meaning of the word in a way that may undermine the effectiveness of this error resolution procedure that was considered by the Senate to be a "significant feature" of the Act.[676]

In contrast, the Sixth Circuit provides for more robust verification rights as discussed in § 9.11.3.3, infra.

A collector may attempt to verify a debt before a consumer requests it to avoid requests for verification, but a request for verification calling for information not previously provided would require the provision of new information.[677]

A debt collector's verification may be deceptive violating FDCPA § 1692e.[678]

FDCPA § 1692g(b) references a response "mailed" to the consumer by the debt collector. Regulation F has expanded the permissible ways that a response to a dispute may be provided to the consumer as discussed in § 9.11.1.3, supra. A debt collector's record that the verification was mailed to the consumer may create a presumption that it was mailed.[679] The consumer may rebut that presumption by evidence that it was sent to the wrong address.[680]

Verification requirements should vary depending upon the reason for the dispute over the alleged debt. For example, a consumer claiming mistaken identity as a debtor or forgery needs very different verification than a consumer claiming full payment or uncredited payments or no contract because of lack of acceptance, or delivery, or breach of warranty. Where the amount of the debt was disputed, the collector must verify the amount.[681] Where the balance of the debt is disputed, monthly statements of the amount owed may be probative and verify the debt.[682] Responding to a consumer's request to verify a debt pursuant to FDCPA § 1692g with incomplete information may be deceptive and unfair.[683] Verification regarding a car deficiency claim which included a retail installment contract, a loan application, a notice of sale, and an accounting of the sale was sufficient.[684]

Copies of original billing statements that verified that the amount demanded and showed the dates on which charges were incurred, together with a supporting "Affidavit of Claim and Certification of Amount Due," was sufficient verification.[685] Palisades properly validated the account by informing the consumer that it had acquired the account from Discover Card

674 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734 at 76,847 (Nov. 30, 2020). See § 9.8.2, infra (discussing pre-Regulation F verification practices).

675 "[V]erify: 1. To prove the truth of by presentation of evidence or testimony; substantiate. 2. To determine or test the truth or accuracy of, as by comparison, investigation, or reference." The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language (4th ed. 2000).

676 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra.

677 Castle, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 13, 1995); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 809(a)-8, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Freeman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 15, 1988); Xiao-lin, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 3, 1987); Polito, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 8, 1987). See Bridge v. Ocwen Fed. Bank, 681 F.3d 355, 361 (6th Cir. 2012) ("debt collector must verify a disputed debt even if he has included proof of the debt with the first communication, because the section is intended to assist the consumer when a debt collector inadvertently contacts the wrong consumer at the start of his collection efforts"). See also Essique v. Walnut Woods Condo. Ass'n, 2016 WL 7337246 (E.D. Mich. 2016) (denying summary judgment for collection attorney who did not show that ledger included in initial communication was sufficient to satisfy § 1692g(b)); Feuerstack v. Weiner, 2014 WL 3619675 (D.N.J. 2014) (lawyer did not violate § 1692g by failing to notify consumer that he could request verification, because defendant had sent verification, doctor's bill for medical services, with initial letter).

678 See McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2597933 (N.D. Ill. 2012) (claim stated for violating §§ 1692e and 1692f where defendant responded to consumer's validation request and omitted fact that debt was fifteen years old and instead disclosed that debt was most recently sold to defendant in previous recent months).

679 See Mahon v. Credit Bur., 171 F.3d 1197 (9th Cir. 1999).

680 See Schroeder v. Meyer, 2017 WL 1238016 (N.D. Ind. 2017) (denying collector summary judgment dismissing consumer's claim that debt collector's failed to properly mail requested verification of debt and initiated state debt collection suit; debt collector mailed verification of debt to consumer's prior address after consumer alleged he informed collector that he was moving, and mail should be sent to his mother's address; noting that mailbox rule would not apply if finder of fact found consumer's allegations to be true); Campbell v. Credit Bur. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 211046 (E.D. Ky. 2009).

681 Glover, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 23, 1986). See Bey v. Daimler Chrysler Services, L.L.C., 2006 WL 361385 (D.N.J. 2006) (as verification which was higher than amount initially demanded did not violate FDCPA, since higher amount was merely interim accrued attorney fees). See also Dikeman v. Nat'l Educators, Inc., 81 F.3d 949 (10th Cir. 1996) (jury found debt had not been verified when verification given was inaccurate because it overstated collector's claim, but jury excused violation as bona fide error); Wollman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 10, 1993).

682 See Martinez v. Johnson, 2013 WL 1031363 (D. Utah 2013) (monthly credit card statements sufficient); Bascom v. Dubin, 2007 WL 210387 (W.D.N.Y. 2007) (provided plaintiffs copies of original billing statements); Weissman v. Unifund CCR Partners Assignee of Discover, 2009 WL 6407538 (Tex. App. 2009) (some monthly statements acceptable). See also Wittenberg v. Wells Fargo Bank, 852 F. Supp. 2d 731 (N.D. W. Va. 2012) (debt collector satisfied its burden to verify debt by providing deed of trust, misdated note, and loan history in response to homeowner's claim that note was invalid), aff'd, 2013 WL 3929082 (4th Cir. July 31, 2013); Griggs v. Howell & Vail, L.L.P., 2011 WL 7169021 (D. Idaho 2011) (granting summary judgment to defendant on pro se consumers' § 1692g claims since defendant, when debt was disputed, provided proper verification comprised of a copy of installment contract and its client's statement showing balance owed), adopted, 2012 WL 405047 (D. Idaho 2012); Ayers v. Flagstar Bank, 2011 WL 2433394 (E.D. Mich. 2011) (payment history was sufficient verification and was not deficient even though it was not "competent evidence" of underlying contract that consumer requested). Cf. Holland v. Draper, 2013 WL 1914388 (W.D. Wash. 2013) (contract and print out showing the balance sufficient for truck loan balance request).

683 Young v. Meyer & Njus, P.A., 1997 WL 452685 (N.D. Ill. 1997). See also Zirogiannis v. Nat'l Recovery Agency, Inc., 2015 WL 8665448 (E.D.N.Y. 2015) (collection letter responding to consumer's debt verification request was materially misleading under FDCPA, as letter erroneously suggested that consumer's dispute and verification requests were governed only by FCRA).

684 See Blome v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, 2007 WL 4374498 (D. Mont. 2007).

685 See Bascom v. Dubin, 2007 WL 210387 (W.D.N.Y. 2007).

and by providing the account application with the consumer's signature and the relevant account statements, in response to her request for verification that it was her debt.[686]

One court held that billing statements alone were sufficient.[687] Where there was a judgment resolving a disputed debt, providing the judgment verified the debt.[688] A court held that a verification which was higher than the amount initially demanded did not violate the FDCPA, since the higher amount reflected accrued attorney fees.[689]

9.11.3.2 Fourth, Seventh, and Ninth Circuits Provide Weak Verification Rights

Fourth, Seventh, and Ninth Circuit decisions may diminish consumers' FDCPA § 1692g debt dispute rights.

In Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc.,[690] the Ninth Circuit announced it was adopting a lower, "reasonable" standard for the response required of debt collectors when a consumer timely disputes the debt in writing.

The consumer in Clark had consistently disputed a series of medical bills first with the provider, then with the doctor that purchased the provider's practice, then with the collection agency that purchased the debt, and then with a collection lawyer for the collection agency. The consumer had detailed records which she presented at every step. In response, the doctor who purchased the account provided an eight-page[691] itemization of the medical services and "information about the nature and balance of the . . . bill" to the collection agency, which used it for verification of the debt and provided it to the collection attorney who also used it for verification. The Court in Clark, however, cited to the Fourth Circuit's dicta in Chaudhry v. Gallerizzo stating that "verification of a debt involves nothing more than the debt collector confirming in writing that the amount being demanded is what the creditor is claiming is owed."[692] It is important to note that while the debt collector in Clark was found to have provided sufficient verification, it was found liable for not stating the amount of the debt accurately.

In the Fourth Circuit's Chaudhry decision adopted by the Clark court, the collection attorney's verification response was a detailed statement of all the charges and payments to the account, but only a statement that the inspection fees had been verified. The $8600 collection lawyer fee was verified with detailed billing statements that were redacted with a black marker to avoid disclosing confidential information under attorney-client privilege. This was held sufficient verification. The verification would have been meaningfully improved if the collection attorney had obtained a copy of the lender's check to the inspection company. However, in unfortunate dicta the court stated that verification involves confirming in writing the amount demanded. "The debt collector is not required to keep detailed files of the alleged debt."[693]

In Walton v. EOS CCA,[694] the Seventh Circuit adopted the Fourth and Ninth Circuits' weak approach to FDCPA debt verification. "It would be both burdensome and significantly beyond the Act's purpose to interpret [FDCPA] § 1692g(b) as requiring a debt collector to undertake an investigation into whether the creditor is actually entitled to the money it seeks."

In Dunham v. Portfolio Recovery Associates, L.L.C.,[695] the Eighth Circuit also allowed weak verification of the debt, but not as weak as in Clark and Chaudhry. The plaintiff exercised his FDCPA § 1692g rights by requesting that the debt buyer verify the debt. The court found that the debt buyer, PRA's, response to the alleged consumer, a lawyer, satisfied FDCPA § 1692g:

> Here, PRA's . . . [verification] letter sufficiently notified Dunham that he was not the "James Dunham" who owed 686 See Palisades Collection, L.L.C. v. Besthorne, 2007 WL 506101 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div 2007). See also Frees v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 2012 WL 600785 (S.D. Ohio 2012) (validation sufficient where Pioneer sent plaintiff name of USA Funds, Inc., and told him how to obtain copies of his promissory note and account information from it); Uche v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2010 WL 5256351 (D. Neb. 2010) (collector sufficiently showed debt was still owed by consumer).

687 See Worch v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 477 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (E.D. Mo. 2007).

688 See Marshall v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 2011 WL 345988 (E.D. Ark. 2011).

689 See Bey v. Daimler Chrysler Services, L.L.C., 2006 WL 361385 (D.N.J. 2006).

690 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006).

691 See Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 2004 WL 1305326 (D. Or. Jan. 23, 2004).

692 Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Services, Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1174 (9th Cir. 2006). See also Lee v. Sec. Check, L.L.C., 2010 WL 3075673 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 5, 2010); Rudek v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 2009 WL 385804 (E.D. Tenn. 2009); Holsinger v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2006 WL 2092632 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (NAF MBNA claim sent to consumer constituted sufficient verification even though it listed attorney fees that could have been unreasonably high); Frederick v. Discover Bank, 901 N.E.2d 79 (Ind. Ct. App. 2009) (no copy of signed contract and detailed payment history acceptable); Weathersby v. Citibank, 928 So. 2d 941 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006) (copies of periodic statements and employee affidavits stating they were sent was sufficient despite not providing requested signed agreement).

693 Chaudhry v. Gallerizzo, 174 F.3d 394, 406 (4th Cir. 1999). See also Tripoli v. Branch Banking & Trust Corp., 2012 WL 2685090 (D. Utah 2012) (detailed accounting of debt and credit application not required; uncertified copies of the note, deed of trust, and the assignment sufficient); Smith v. MERS, 2012 WL 1963605 (E.D. Mich. 2012) (response complied with § 1692g(b) where it provided the borrower's name, the property address, origination date, loan amount, the current mortgagee and its address, and the original mortgagee and its address), adopted, 2012 WL 1963604 (E.D. Mich. 2012); Nikiforuk v. Citimortgage, Inc., 2011 WL 7113469 (E.D. Mich. 2011 ("[T]he note, mortgage, application, payment history, and the owner and servicer of the mortgage was more than ample to 'verify' under the statute."), adopted, 2012 WL 262531 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 30, 2012); Anderson v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 361 F. Supp. 2d 1379 (N.D. Ga. 2005); Zaborac v. Mut. Hosp. Serv., Inc., 2004 WL 2538643 (S.D. Ind. 2004) (provided detailed billing statement).

694 885 F.3d 1024, 1027–1028 (7th Cir. 2018).

695 663 F.3d 997 (8th Cir. 2011). See also Jarzyna v. Home Props., L.P., 114 F. Supp. 3d 243 (E.D. Pa. 2015) (in responding to § 1692g dispute, debt collector is not charged with auditing creditor's records or forming opinion about debt's validity; collector must merely forward supporting information to consumer so that consumer can better understand alleged debt's origin and perhaps dispute it further).

> PRA a payment obligation. In response to Dunham's dispute letter, PRA sent Dunham a . . . letter containing the debtor's name, address, and the last four digits of the debtor's social security number; the date of the payment obligation; the date PRA purchased the payment obligation; and the current outstanding balance on the payment obligation. Additionally, PRA attached to the . . . letter the affidavit of one of its employees, averring that, according to PRA's records, Dunham incurred a debt that now totaled $2,906.55 to Credigy Receivables, and, on January 31, 2008, Credigy Receivables sold, assigned, and transferred that debt to PRA. Upon receiving this letter, Dunham glanced at the last four digits of the debtor's social security number and knew that he did not owe the payment obligation.[696]

Significantly, the court recognized that a response that was adequate in this situation might not suffice in other situations.

One reading of Clark and Chaudhry could be that the very detailed statements and confirmation of the balance that were provided by the debt collectors in those cases are all that is required to verify a debt, where the consumer disputes the amount claimed, but not liability for some of the debt. Another, more dangerous reading of those decisions would be that the debt collector need only get a "certification" from the creditor that the balance claimed reflects the creditor's current belief and that no reexamination of the claim by the debt collector or the creditor is required in response to the consumer's dispute.[697] This could flow from the Chaudhry statement that "confirming in writing that the amount being demanded is what the creditor is claiming is owed" is all that is required.

However, that approach to the Chaudhry decision ignores the plain language of the statute and the legislative history leading to the replacement of the word "certification"[698] with the word "verification" in the FDCPA and undermines a requirement of a "significant"[699] debt collector response to consumers' disputes.

For one thing, the Chaudhry standard does not begin to deal with the myriad of common consumer disputes. For example, if the consumer disputes the balance of an account, based on the misapplication of the last installment payment, a meaningful response would be to check primary records to see if the payment in fact had been received, but not credited or applied to the wrong account. If, on the other hand, the consumer disputes the common mistaken debt collector claim that they are responsible for one of their relative's bills, an examination of the signatures to the underlying agreement is called for to determine whether they actually accepted the obligation for the debt. If the consumer asserts their name was forged on a check, an examination of the signature is required to compare the signature with the consumer's signature and a disclosure of the time and place where the check was signed to compare with the consumer's location that day. If the consumer asserts they were a minor without capacity to contract on the day the debt was incurred, the transaction date would be the relevant focus. If the consumer alleges they had responded to a debt buyer's offer of full settlement with payment of a portion of the balance, the debt buyer's offer and the date and amount of the consumer's payment are the relevant information. Consumers disputing debts under this provision of the FDCPA, at least in other circuits, may have better responses if they can specify the basis of their dispute.

Where a debt collector was collecting a debt discharged in bankruptcy, the court, following Chaudhry, found that the collection agency had adequately verified the debt by forwarding the creditor's confirmation of the amount of the car deficiency claim, even though this court agreed with the consumer's legal argument that the consumer had fully paid the deficiency in her chapter 13 plan.[700]

Even if the courts apply the weak Chaudhry approach, the consumer should be entitled to engage in discovery about the verification the debt collector received from the creditor.[701]

The Seventh and the Ninth Circuits disagree on whether the debt collector's verification to the consumer's lawyer must comply with the FDCPA and whether the collector must cease its collection activities with regard to the consumer's attorney.[702]

If the consumer telephones before verification is provided, the debt collector may not request payment.[703] The debt collector may ask for clarification upon receiving a timely dispute of the debt, as long as payment is not requested.[704]

9.11.3.3 Sixth Circuit Provides More Robust Verification Rights

The Sixth Circuit in Haddad v. Alexander, Zelmanski, Danner & Fioritto, P.L.L.C. rejected the weak verification approach taken by the Fourth and Ninth Circuits and found

696 Id. at 1003.

697 See Maynard v. Cannon, 401 Fed. Appx. 389 (10th Cir. 2010) (debt collector complied with § 1692g(b) when it responded to consumer's verification request since it "nam[ed] the original creditor, and correctly identify[ied] the mortgage amount in default"); Reed v. AFNI, Inc., 2011 WL 112430 (D. Utah Jan. 13, 2011); Poulin, Jr. v. Thomas Agency, 2011 WL 159889 (D. Me. 2011). Hollis v. Stephen Bruce & Assoc., 2007 WL 4287623 (W.D. Okla. 2007).

698 See, e.g., H.R. Rep. No. 131, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 5 (1977).

699 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra (identifying validation of debts as "significant feature" of FDCPA).

700 See Goodwyn v. Capital One, 127 F. Supp. 3d 1367 (M.D. Ga. 2015).

701 See, e.g., Panzer v. Alternative Claims Mgmt., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3771251 (S.D.N.Y. July 8, 2016).

702 See Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007) ("[w]e conclude that any written notice sent to the lawyer must contain the information that would be required by the Act if the notice were sent to the consumer directly"), citing National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Credit Law Manual § 8.02[5][b] (2004). See also Moriarty v. Capital Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2005 WL 2042302 (D. Neb. 2005). Cf. Heintz v. Jenkins, 514 U.S. 291, 115 S. Ct. 1489, 131 L. Ed. 2d 395 (1995). Contra Guerrero v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 499 F.3d 926 (9th Cir. 2007).

703 See Luxenburg v. Equifax Credit Info. Services, 2005 WL 78947 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 12, 2005).

704 See Marro v. Crosscheck, Inc., 2004 WL 3688137 (E.D. Va. Aug. 6, 2004), aff'd, 115 Fed. Appx. 168 (4th Cir. 2004).

support in other circuit court decisions[705] on the debt verification issue and the debt collection industry's practice of providing more information to resolve disputes. Haddad held:[706]

> The verification provision must be interpreted to provide the consumer with notice of how and when the debt was originally incurred or other sufficient notice from which the consumer could sufficiently dispute the payment obligation. This information does not have to be extensive. It should provide the date and nature of the transaction that led to the debt, such as a purchase on a particular date, a missed rental payment for a specific month, a fee for a particular service provided at a specified time, or a fine for a particular offense assessed on a certain date.[707]

In so holding, the court clarified that its earlier statement[708] that no "independent investigation" is required under the FDCPA only applies to avoiding liability under 1692e(2)(A), and not to verification under 1692g(b).[709]

705 758 F.3d 777 (6th Cir. 2014). See Dunham v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 663 F.3d 997, 1004 (8th Cir. 2011); Mahon v. Credit Bur. of Placer County Inc., 171 F.3d 1197 (9th Cir. 1999); Graziano v. Harrison, 950 F.2d 107 (3d Cir. 1991).

706 758 F.3d 777 (6th Cir. 2014). See also Cooper v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 4098824 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 15, 2017); Ghanta v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 1423597 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 18, 2017); Mack v. Progressive Fin. Services, Inc., 2015 WL 123742 (E.D. Tex. Jan. 8, 2015) (adopting analysis in Haddad); Appx. E.2.6.4, infra.

707 Id. at 785–786.

708 Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025 (6th Cir. 1992).

709 See also Thebert v. Potestivo & Assoc., 2017 WL 3581322 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (by reciting $125,000 loan amount and $106,777.03 principal amount, but not mentioning prior-referenced debt amount of $115,267, let alone not addressing what payments had been made, foreclosure lawyer's letter verifying debt could plausibly mislead or deceive least sophisticated consumer about the amount of debt, violating § 1692e, even if it did comply with § 1692g(b)).

Chapter 10 FDCPA §§ 1692h, 1692*i*, 1692j: Applying Payments; Distant Forum Abuse; False Impression of Debt Collector Involvement

10.1 Introduction

This chapter discusses the specific requirements the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) imposes on debt collectors under 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692h, 1692*i*, and 1692j. FDCPA § 1692h addresses the application of payments when a consumer owes multiple debts to a debt collector. FDCPA § 1692*i* defines the acceptable venues where lawsuits can be filed to collect a debt. FDCPA § 1692j prohibits certain practices related to the creation or provision of forms that give a false impression of a collection agency's, attorney's, or another entity's participation in the collection of the debt.

10.2 Consumer May Direct Application of Payments When a Collector Holds Multiple Accounts

> If any consumer owes multiple debts and makes any single payment to any debt collector with respect to such debts, such debt collector may not apply such payment to any debt which is disputed by the consumer and, where applicable, shall apply such payment in accordance with the consumer's directions.[1]

FDCPA § 1692h gives a consumer the right to decide how to allocate payments among multiple debts being collected by the same collector.[2] A consumer in this situation may thus choose to give preference, for example, to a secured debt over an unsecured debt. The section also requires that a collector apply a consumer's payments to debts not disputed by the consumer.

The section of Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) implementing FDCPA § 1692h, 12 C.F.R. § 1006.30(c), rearranges the statutory text for clarity but does not provide any additional substantive guidance.[3]

There is no provision for providing consumers with notice of this right, and there has been little enforcement of the right in the courts.[4] One court has held that this does not give the consumer the right to direct how payments of a single debt be applied between disputed and undisputed parts of the debt.[5] That right may exist under other laws, such as the Fair Credit Billing Act.[6]

Another court found that FDCPA § 1692h does not require a collector to refund payments made to a collector when one account is settled, but a debt is owed on another account.[7]

10.3 Restrictions Against Bringing Suits in Inconvenient Forums

10.3.1 Text of FDCPA § 1692i, Legislative History, and Regulations

> (a) Any debt collector who brings any legal action on a debt against any consumer shall—
>
> (1) in the case of an action to enforce an interest in real property securing the consumer's obligation, bring such action only in a judicial district or similar legal entity in which such real property is located; or
>
> (2) in the case of an action not described in paragraph (1), bring such action only in the judicial district or similar legal entity—
>
> (A) in which such consumer signed the contract sued upon; or

1 15 U.S.C. § 1692h.

The initial House debt collection bill contained more detailed requirements for the application of payments among different accounts than the section now does, including formula to apply when the consumer gave the collector no instructions or when there was no dispute. H.R. 10191, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. § 808 (1975). Subsequent bills addressed only the application of payments to disputed debt. E.g., H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 809 (1976); S. 3838, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 809 (1976). The requirement that the collector follow the consumer's instructions was reintroduced in S. 918, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 810 (1977).

2 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra; Glover, FTC Informal Staff Letter (June 23, 1986). See also Torrie v. Goodman Law Offices P.C., 2014 WL 5594452 (D. Ariz. Nov. 4, 2014) (§ 1692h applies only when a debtor owes two separate debts and directs a payment to a particular debt; it does not require a debt collector to accept a payment when only one debt is unpaid); Denman v. W. Mercantile Agency, Inc., 2012 WL 1698173 (D. Or. May 11, 2012) (finding that the plaintiff presented "just enough evidence" to create a genuine issue of material fact as to whether he gave specific instructions to the defendant regarding the allocation of his payments with instruction not to apply the payments to the judgment but to another account).

3 12 C.F.R. § 1006.30(c) (eff. Nov. 30, 2021). See also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,843 ("The proposed provision generally restated the statutory text, with only minor revisions for clarity.").

4 Cf. Silver v. Law Offices of Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2010 WL 3000053 (D. Conn. July 28, 2010) (claim required trial).

5 See Dowling v. Litton Loan Serv., L.P., 2006 WL 3498292 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 1, 2006).

6 See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 7.9.8 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

7 Turner v. Syndicated Office Sys., L.L.C., 2018 WL 1230599 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 16, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 1311250 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 5, 2018), aff'd, 741 Fed. Appx. 767 (11th Cir. 2018).

(B) in which such consumer resides at the commencement of the action.

(b) Nothing in this subchapter shall be construed to authorize the bringing of legal actions by debt collectors.[8]

Early bills differed on how to deal with venue abuse, but subsequent major bills uniformly prohibited it.[9] The word "signed" in FDCPA § 1692*i*(a)(2)(A) was used consistently in the earlier bills, dropped in favor of "entered" by the Senate Consumer Affairs Subcommittee,[10] and reintroduced during the Senate Banking Committee markup. This indicates that Congress rejected the idea of setting venue on the basis of where the creditor was located at the time the contract was formed, choosing instead to set venue on the basis of where the consumer physically signed the contract.

Many earlier bills restricted the use of process servers. They appeared redundant, given the requirements of other state and federal laws.[11] FDCPA § 1692*i*(b) was first contained in S. 918.[12] The National Consumer Law Center urged the inclusion of section 1692*i*(b) in order to state explicitly that the FDCPA does not alter state laws prohibiting suits by a debt collector (for example, those proscribing unauthorized practice of law).

The section of Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) implementing FDCPA § 1692*i*, 12 C.F.R. § 1006.30(d), rearranges the statutory text for clarity, but does not provide any additional substantive guidance.[13]

10.3.2 Where Suit Can Be Filed

This section prohibits a debt collector, including attorney debt collectors, from taking legal action to collect a consumer obligation in a "judicial district or similar legal entity" other than where the consumer resides or signed the contract[14] or, in the case of real estate, where the property is located.[15] This section is built upon an approach adopted by the FTC and the courts prior to the FDCPA's enactment.[16]

To determine the proper "judicial district or similar legal entity" for the purposes of FDCPA § 1692*i*, the courts have generally looked to the administrative structure of the state courts.[17] As the Seventh Circuit explained, the "correct interpretation of 'judicial district or similar legal entity' in § 1692*i*

8 15 U.S.C. § 1692*i*.

9 Cf. H.R. 11969, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. § 811 (1976); S. 656, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 810 (1977).

10 Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 811(a)(2)(A) (1977).

11 See, e.g., H.R. 13720, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. §§ 810(b), 810(c) (1976).

12 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 811(b) (1977).

13 12 C.F.R. § 1006.30(d) (eff. Nov. 30, 2021); see also 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,843 ("The proposed provision generally restated the statutory text, with only minor revisions for clarity.").

14 See Suesz v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 757 F.3d 636 (7th Cir. 2014) (en banc); Addison v. Braud, 105 F.3d 223 (5th Cir. 1997); Fox v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 15 F.3d 1507 (9th Cir. 1994); Scott v. Jones, 964 F.2d 314 (4th Cir. 1992); Dixon v. J. Scott Watson, P.C., 2018 WL 4110605 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 28, 2018) (tuition collection suit filed where college was located violated § 1692*i* as student did not sign tuition agreement in that state or live there); Samms v. Abrams, Fensterman, Fensterman, Eisman, Formato, Ferrara & Wolf, L.L.P., 163 F. Supp. 3d 109 (S.D.N.Y. 2016); Holton v. Huff, 2012 WL 1354024 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 16, 2012) (under state law venue would have been proper, but the FDCPA "preempts state law for venue purposes" and is a strict liability statute); Harrington v. CACV, L.L.C., 508 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D. Mass. 2007) (FDCPA violation even though venue would have been proper under state law in that district); Flores v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2007 WL 433239 (D. Or. Jan. 31, 2007); Hester v. Graham, Bright & Smith, 2005 WL 994704 (E.D. Tex. Apr. 1, 2005); Canady v. Wisenbaker Law Offices, P.C., 372 F. Supp. 2d 1379 (N.D. Ga. 2005); McKnight v. Benitez, 176 F. Supp. 2d 1301 (M.D. Fla. 2001) (initiation of replevin action on behalf of secured creditor, as required by state law, in judicial district where secured vehicle was being held by local sheriff as allegedly having been used in drug deal, violated § 1692*i* when replevin action also sought money damages against consumer); Crawford v. Credit Collection Serv., 898 F. Supp. 699 (D.S.D. 1995); Blakemore v. Pekay, 1995 WL 399460 (N.D. Ill. June 27, 1995); Asset Acceptance Corp. v. Robinson, 625 N.W.2d 804 (Mich. Ct. App. 2001); Jack Mailman & Leonard Flug D.D.S., P.C. v. Whaley, 2002 WL 31988623 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. Nov. 25, 2002); Appx. E.2.7, infra. See also Wadlington v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 76 F.3d 103 (6th Cir. 1996) (attorneys who filed suit on behalf of financer were debt collectors and liable under FDCPA for filing suit in venue not permitted by § 1692*i*(a)(2), but remanding issue of whether venue protection was waived by sales contract); Kucker v. Kaminsky & Rich, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9877 (S.D.N.Y. July 12, 2001) (motion to reassign case from division where consumer received dun to another division within federal district was denied); Durve v. Oker, 1996 WL 355311 (Ohio Ct. App. July 8, 1996) (trial court erred by granting summary judgment to collectors against consumer's claim under § 1692*i* that collectors had filed their collection action in improper venue).

15 Shapiro & Meinhold v. Zartman, 823 P.2d 120 (Colo. 1992), aff'g Zartman v. Shapiro & Meinhold, 811 P.2d 409 (Colo. App. 1990); Candlewood Lake Assoc. v. Scott, 2001 Ohio 8873 (Ohio Ct. App. Dec. 27, 2001).

16 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 5, 8, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See Spiegel, Inc. v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 540 F.2d 287 (7th Cir. 1976) (nationwide mail order retailer sued and obtained judgments against its distant customers in court in Cook County, Ill; practice was "unfair"). See also Aguchak v. Montgomery Ward Co., 520 P.2d 1352 (Alaska 1974) (using distant forums violation of due process rights); Keever; FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 19, 1989); Reffkin, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 29, 1988); § 15.6.3, 16.2.4.4, 16.3.5, infra (unfair use of distant courts for collection suits).

17 See, e.g., Suesz v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 757 F.3d 636 (7th Cir. 2014) (en banc) (judicial district in Marion County, Indiana, was township, not county); Hess v. Cohen & Slamowitz L.L.P., 637 F.3d 117 (2d Cir. 2011) (interpreting § 1692*i* in light of New York state jurisdiction rules for city and county courts); Fox v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 15 F.3d 1507 (9th Cir. 1994) (where Arizona provided formal transfer mechanism between courts in different counties, county was "judicial district or similar legal entity"); McKay v. Scott & Assoc., 2018 WL 548678 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 24, 2018) (judicial district or similar legal entity in § 1692*i* should be interpreted in Texas as precinct—smallest geographic area relevant to venue in Texas court system); Linehan v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 13567494, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 18, 2015) (three divisions of King County District Court constitute judicial entities for purposes of § 1692*i*); Nichols v. Byrd, 435 F. Supp. 2d 1101 (D. Nev. 2006) (relevant Nevada judicial district was township); Crawford v. Credit Collection Serv., 898 F. Supp. 699 (D.S.D. 1995) (relevant South Dakota judicial district was state judicial circuit); Dutton v. Wolhar, 809 F. Supp. 1130 (D. Del. 1992), aff'd, 5 F.3d 649 (3d Cir. 1993) (relevant Delaware judicial district was county).

is the smallest geographic area that is relevant for determining venue in the court system in which the case is filed."[18]

If a consumer did not sign a contract, the collector may only sue the consumer where the consumer resides.[19]

With respect to mortgage debt, one court said that FDCPA § 1692*i* venue for a postforeclosure deficiency action was the place of mortgage loan, not the consumer's current, out-of-state residence.[20]

A lawyer for a bankruptcy trustee or debtor may not file claims against consumers in the bankruptcy court unless it is a proper venue under FDCPA § 1692*i*.[21]

One court held that use of National Arbitration Services did not violate FDCPA § 1692*i*, as the arbitration could be requested in the consumer's locale.[22]

One court held that the FDCPA venue provision preempted a state joinder rule allowing suit on all accounts in a venue proper for some accounts, and summary judgment was granted in favor of the consumer where the debt collector brought a single suit on several accounts, where venue on some of the accounts was improper within the FDCPA.[23]

An FTC informal staff letter recommended that when a collector proceeds against real property in which it has no interest—for example, by attachment or execution—the action should be brought either where the consumer resides or where the contract was signed.[24] FTC staff warned that a lawyer would violate this provision if the creditor filed pro se in an improper forum and the lawyer entered an appearance retaining control over the case.[25] FTC staff also warned that suit may not be filed in the venue of the consumer's employment if it is not a venue specified in FDCPA § 1692*i*.[26]

10.3.3 Applicability of FDCPA § 1692i Protections in Different Types of Proceedings

Under FDCPA § 1692*i*, a "legal action on a debt against any consumer" includes a lawsuit against a consumer to collect alleged consumer debts.[27]

The courts have split on the availability of the FDCPA § 1692*i* protections for consumers facing a garnishment of their wages or bank account. The Ninth Circuit[28] and lower courts in other circuits[29] have held that an application for a writ of garnishment was a "legal action on a debt" covered by FDCPA § 1692*i*, and that seeking garnishment in a venue other 18 Suesz v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 757 F.3d 636 (7th Cir. 2014) (en banc).

19 Fox v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 15 F.3d 1507 (9th Cir. 1994); Crawford v. Credit Collection Serv., 898 F. Supp. 699 (D.S.D. 1995) (may only be filed where that spouse resided when she did not join in signing contract); Martinez v. Albuquerque Collection Serv., 867 F. Supp. 1495 (D.N.M. 1994). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary §§ 811-2, 811-4, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Krisor, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 10, 1994); Giloley, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 6, 1992); Masters, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 10, 1992); Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988); Benedict, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 5, 1987); Thomasson, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 19, 1978); Eskanos, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 19, 1978). See also Frazier v. Matrix Acquisitions, L.L.C., 873 F. Supp. 2d 897 (N.D. Ohio 2012) (denying collector's motion for summary judgment on § 1692*i* claim where collector could not prove consumer resided in or signed contract in venue; evidence of credit card purchases in venue not sufficient where lacked signed receipts or case law supporting the idea that such evidence was sufficient to establish venue under § 1692*i*). Cf. Crawford v. Credit Collection Serv., 898 F. Supp. 699 (D.S.D. 1995) (finding no violation of § 1692*i* where "Patient Registration Form" that recited credit terms was signed in judicial district where legal action was brought).

20 See Huthsing v. Law Offices of Daniel C. Consuegra, P.L., 2015 WL 6777466 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 27, 2015). But see Aluia v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 205 So. 3d 768 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2016) (§ 1692*i* does not apply to claim for deficiency decree following foreclosure sale; a "deficiency suit is not a 'legal action on' the note; it is an action on the final judgment of foreclosure").

21 Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988).

22 See Lamb v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 2005 WL 4137778 (S.D. Ohio Jan. 24, 2005).

23 Harper v. Collection Bur., Inc., 2007 WL 4287293 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 4, 2007).

24 See FTC Official Staff Commentary §§ 811-2, 811-3, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Sweigart, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 25, 1978). See also Smith v. Kramer & Frank, P.C., 2009 WL 4725285 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 2, 2009) (application for writ of garnishment, as action in enforcement of previously obtained judgment, is "legal action" which falls within § 1692*i*); Celebrezze v. United Research, Inc., 482 N.E.2d 1260 (Ohio Ct. App. 1984) (enjoined distant forum abuse under FDCPA as well as UDAP).

25 Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988). See also Keever, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 19, 1989); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 811-6, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Shuman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 19, 1987).

26 Kwait, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 24, 1989); Goldfarb, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 23, 1988). See also Garvett, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 10, 1987).

27 See Beeler-Lopez v. Dodeka, L.L.C., 711 F. Supp. 2d 679, 681 (E.D. Tex. 2010) ("The Court finds that to 'bring an action' means '[t]o sue; institute legal proceedings.'").

28 Fox v. Citicorp Credit Services, Inc.,15 F.3d 1507 (9th Cir. 1994). See also Cole v. Cardez Credit Affiliates, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1281651 (D. Idaho Mar. 19, 2015) (collection agency's application for postjudgment garnishment of consumer's bank account constituted bringing of legal action on that debt for § 1692*i* purposes; where state debt collection suit against consumer was brought in wrong venue, later garnishment action was not insulated from FDCPA as not being "against the consumer"); Flores v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2007 WL 2769003, at *3 (D. Or. Sept. 18, 2007). Cf. Sniadach v. Family Fin. Corp. of Bay View, 395 U.S. 337, 341–342, 89 S. Ct. 1820, 1822–1823, 23 L. Ed. 2d 349 (1969) (finding that prejudgment garnishment of worker's wages without notice and hearing violated worker's right to due process, recognized garnishment as action against worker). But see Randall v. Maxwell & Morgan, P.C., 321 F. Supp. 3d 978, 981–982 (D. Ariz. 2018) (declining to apply Fox because debtor had contested underlying action and, thus, had day in court); Muhammad v. Reese Law Grp., 2017 WL 4557194 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 12, 2017) (FDCPA's venue provision does not apply because wage garnishment procedures in California do not qualify as actions against a consumer as defined under § 1692*i*).

29 Barboza v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2020 WL 5849549, at *4 (E.D. Tex. Oct. 1, 2020) ("When a debt collector brings a garnishment action based on a default judgment obtained in the wrong venue, the Court finds it reasonable to interpret the action as 'against any consumer,' for the consumer, while not the subject of the garnishment action, experiences the inability to have his day in court, in a proper venue, on the merits of the judgment."); Adkins v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., L.P.A., 2012 WL 604249 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 24, 2012).

than where the consumers resided or the contract was signed violated section 1692*i*.

The First,[30] Seventh,[31] Eighth,[32] and Eleventh Circuits,[33] as well as lower courts in other circuits,[34] all disagreed and found that FDCPA § 1692*i* does not apply to garnishment where the state garnishment procedure is not a "legal action brought on a debt against any consumer," but rather one brought against the consumer's employer.

Similarly, some courts have held that garnishment of the consumer's bank account was not a legal proceeding against the consumer, and therefore was not subject to FDCPA § 1692*i*.[35]

Provisions of the FDCPA other than section 1692*i* may apply to postjudgment garnishment.[36] For example, a debt collector that fails to comply with procedural obligations, such as serving proper garnishment notices on the debtor, may engage in a false representation under FDCPA § 1692e.[37]

In addition to garnishment, some courts have held that other types of postjudgment proceedings do not need to comply with FDCPA § 1692*i*.[38] The FTC stated in its Staff Commentary that "[i]f a judgment is obtained in a forum that satisfies the requirements of this section, it may be enforced in another jurisdiction, because the consumer previously has had the opportunity to defend the original action in a convenient forum."[39] One court held that collection attorneys' counterclaim in federal FDCPA case in order to collect underlying debt "is not the same thing as filing a lawsuit in a distant forum" and therefore did not violate the FDCPA's distant forum provision.[40]

The term "brings legal action" in FDCPA § 1692*i* includes a collector's court filing to reinstate a dismissed lawsuit due to the consumer's default on the settlement.[41]

One court found that a student loan administrative hearing may not be a "legal action" to which this provision applies.[42]

10.3.4 Additional Issues Related to the Debt Collector's Choice of Forum

A consumer's participation in a collection action filed in a distant forum did not waive[43] or preclude[44] the consumer's right to bring an FDCPA action for that violation of FDCPA § 1692*i*.

Some state courts have held that violation of FDCPA § 1692*i* was not a valid defense to a judgment transferred from 30 Smith v. Solomon & Solomon, P.C., 714 F.3d 73 (1st Cir. 2013).

31 Jackson v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 833 F.3d 860 (7th Cir. 2016) (§ 1692*i*'s consumer protections do not apply to Illinois garnishment of a consumer's funds).

32 Hageman v. Barton, 817 F.3d 611 (8th Cir. 2016).

33 Ray v. McCullough Payne & Haan, L.L.C., 838 F.3d 1107 (11th Cir. 2016) (garnishment is an action between the judgment-creditor and the garnishee); Marshall v. Hanna, 671 Fed. Appx. 766 (11th Cir. 2016).

34 See, e.g., Fish v. Stone, Higgs & Drexler, P.C., 2017 WL 6757575, at *9 (W.D. Tenn. Dec. 29, 2017) (granting summary judgment for collection law firm on § 1692*i* claim because "[w]age garnishment proceedings in Tennessee are not legal actions 'against any consumer' under § 1692*i*"); Turnbull v. O'Reilly Rancilio P.C., 2017 WL 4572334 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 13, 2017) (Michigan garnishment proceedings do not constitute legal action against consumer subject to § 1692*i*); Schuback v. Law Offices of Phillip S. Van Embden, P.C., 2013 WL 432641 (M.D. Pa. Feb. 1, 2013) (pursuant to New Jersey law, garnishment or a writ of execution to enforce previous judgment was not "any legal action on a debt against any consumer" covered by § 1692*i*, but rather action against employer or bank); Geffrard v. Rolfe & Lobello, P.A., 2010 WL 1924434 (S.D. Tex. May 11, 2010); Pickens v. Collection Serv. of Athens, Inc., 165 F. Supp. 2d 1376 (M.D. Ga. 2001), aff'd, 273 F.3d 1121 (11th Cir. 2001) (postjudgment garnishment action was against garnishee, and consumer was not party; therefore, FDCPA's venue provisions did not apply).

35 See, e.g., Ray v. McCullough Payne & Haan, L.L.C., 838 F.3d 1107 (11th Cir. 2016) (assuming garnishment at issue was bank account garnishment); Baltazar v. Houslanger & Assoc., 2018 WL 3941943, at *2 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 4781143 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2018) (no violation of § 1692*i* where state bank garnishment was not "against the consumer").

36 See §§ 7.2.4.1, 8.3.6, supra. See also § 16.2.4.4.6, infra.

37 Lewis v. Hiday & Ricke, P.A., 2018 WL 6308672 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 18, 2018) (granting summary judgment to consumer when collector proceeded to garnish pursuant to an order made invalid by collector's failure to provide notice).

38 Hendricks v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 12534774 (E.D. Tenn. Sept. 30, 2014) (issuance of postjudgment discovery subpoena in wrong § 1692*i* venue was considered not to be debt collection, since collection lawyer was just seeking information about consumer's assets); Golem v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2995480 (N.D. Ohio July 23, 2012) (postjudgment deposition in distant county did not violate § 1692*i*, since it was not "legal action," but simply discovery request); Barney v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2012 WL 2995471 (N.D. Ohio July 23, 2012) (same); Aluia v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 205 So. 3d 768, 773 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2016) (§ 1692*i* does not apply to claim for deficiency decree following foreclosure sale; a "deficiency suit is not a 'legal action on' the note; it is an action on the final judgment of foreclosure").

39 FTC Official Staff Commentary §§ 811-5, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

40 McNeill v. Graham, Bright & Smith, P.C., 2006 WL 1489502, at *2 (N.D. Tex. May 26, 2006).

41 See Glazewski v. CKB Firm, P.C., 2015 WL 661278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 15, 2015).

42 Lawson v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur. Inc., 1997 WL 283027 (N.D. Ill May 15, 1997) (collector's assertion to debtor in collection letter that pre-wage garnishment administrative hearings would be held in Colorado when debt originated in, and debtor resided in, Illinois, was not in violation of § 1692*i*(a)(2) because hearing, which could be conducted by documents or telephone, was not "legal action" for purposes of FDCPA).

43 Cole v. Cardez Credit Affiliates, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1281651 (D. Idaho Mar. 19, 2015) (consumer's failure to challenge venue in state debt collection suit did not waive § 1692*i* claim for collector's garnishment proceeding against consumer's bank account); Blakemore v. Pekay, 1995 WL 399460 (N.D. Ill. June 27, 1995) (debtor does not waive FDCPA venue claims by appearing in "judicial district" other than where they resided or signed contract). See also Canady v. Wisenbaker Law Offices, P.C., 372 F. Supp. 2d 1379 (N.D. Ga. 2005) (consumer's failure to notify attorney collection firm of its violation of FDCPA venue provision or otherwise object to its filing in improper venue was irrelevant to firm's defense to violation or its establishment of its putative bona fide error defense). But cf. Wadlington v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 76 F.3d 103 (6th Cir. 1996) (remanding issue of whether venue protection was waived by sales contract as not addressed by lower court).

44 Begum v. Harrison, 2021 WL 1748102, at *2 (D.N.J. May 3, 2021) (debtor's participation in state law medical debt lawsuit involved substantively different issues than § 1692*i* claim and, therefore, did not result in claim or issue preclusion).

another, improper jurisdiction.[45] It may be a counterclaim, however.[46]

Filing in an improper venue may not violate the FDCPA where the lawsuit was filed but never served on the consumer.[47]

While the threat of filing in an improper venue did not violate FDCPA § 1692*i*, it did violate FDCPA § 1692e(5) by threatening action that legally could not be taken.[48] A lower court denied dismissal of FDCPA § 1692d and 1692f claims for the filing and then the intentional and knowing continuation of a collection suit in a venue prohibited by FDCPA § 1692*i*.[49]

While creditors are generally exempt and usually not bound by the requirements of FDCPA § 1692*i*,[50] other laws may impose similar requirements on creditors.[51]

Section 1692*i*(b) establishes that the FDCPA does not authorize debt collectors to bring suit, leaving that decision to the states.[52]

A debt collector may assert the FDCPA's bona fide error defense to a section 1692*i* violation. This defense is discussed in § 12.2, infra.

Plaintiffs filing FDCPA § 1692*i* claims can encounter questions about when the FDCPA's statute of limitations has run. This issue is covered in § 12.3.2.2, infra, discussing applicable date for violations involving collection lawsuits.

For a discussion of standing in FDCPA § 1692*i* cases, see § 11.15.12, infra.

10.4 Forms Providers Who Misrepresent Their Collection Involvement Violate the Act, FDCPA § 1692j

10.4.1 Flat-Rate and Other Collectors Covered

The text of FDCPA § 1692j says:

> Furnishing certain deceptive forms. (a) It is unlawful to design, compile, and furnish any form knowing that such form would be used to create the false belief in a consumer that a person other than the creditor of such consumer is participating in the collection of or in an attempt to collect a debt such consumer allegedly owes such creditor, when in fact such person is not so participating.
>
> (b) Any person who violates this section shall be liable to the same extent and in the same manner as a debt collector is liable under section 1692k of this title for failure to comply with a provision of this subchapter.[53]

Although it does not use the term "flat-rate," this section targets flat-rate companies that charge a few dollars or less to mail a debt collection letter in its name. "Flat-rating" is the practice of designing or selling to creditors form letters on a per item basis. That method of billing is not illegal, but is often associated with deception, which is proscribed. If the flat-rater's name is on the letterhead, thereby falsely suggesting the flat-rater's active participation in the collection process, it violates FDCPA § 1692j.[54] At least one court has required the collector to actually sell the letterhead, rather than allow the creditor to use it, to state a claim under FDCPA § 1692j.[55] In reported cases, the flat fee ranged from $.50 to $2.45 per letter.[56]

If the collector participated actively in the collection of the debt in addition to sending a series of letters, this section does not apply,[57] unless the collector's participation

45 Marina Assoc. v. Mase, 1994 WL 669635 (Conn. Super. Ct. Nov. 10, 1994). See also Wade v. TBF Fin., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1051599 (Tex. App. Mar. 6, 2019) (finding that raising FDCPA issue was insufficient to contest venue absent Motion to Transfer).

46 See Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Hottenroth, 26 N.E.3d 269 (Ohio Ct. App. 2014).

47 See Orellana-Sanchez v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2015 WL 532517 (D.N.J. Feb. 6, 2015), adopted, 2015 WL 758522 (D.N.J. Feb. 23, 2015); Gillis v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2015 WL 5821637 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 1, 2015). But see Desfassiaux v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 142 F. Supp. 3d 667 (N.D. Ill. 2015) (§ 1692*i* violation which occurred at filing was not cured by dismissing the suit before service).

48 Wiener v. Bloomfield, 901 F. Supp. 771 (S.D.N.Y. 1995). See also Halverson, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 15, 1993).

49 See Boldon v. Riverwalk Holdings, Ltd., 2016 WL 900639 (D. Minn. Mar. 9, 2016). But cf. Beeler-Lopez v. Dodeka, L.L.C., 711 F. Supp. 2d 679 (E.D. Tex. 2010) (no violation of § 1692*i* where defendant took over lawsuit after another law firm filed it in wrong venue, since second law firm did not bring lawsuit).

50 Farmers Nat'l Bank v. Hall, 791 P.2d 752 (Kan. Ct. App. 1990).

51 See §§ 15.6.3, 16.2.4.3, 16.3.5, infra.

52 Bey v. Daimlerchrysler Serv., L.L.C., 2005 WL 2090207 (D.N.J. Aug. 29, 2005). See Kolker v. Sanchez, 1991 WL 11691589 (D.N.M. Dec. 10, 1991) (§ 1692*i*(b) does not authorize debt collectors to file any lawsuits).

53 15 U.S.C. § 1692j.

54 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 3, at 5, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra; Christy, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Jan. 19, 1981); Connelly, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 10, 1980). But see Johnson v. Hamilton Point Prop. Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 8186857, at *9 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 8, 2017) (use of publicly available court-supplied forms does not trigger liability), adopted, 2018 WL 1246984 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 15, 2018).

55 Himmelfarb v. Nat'l Bur. Collection Corp. 2018 WL 5456649, at *4 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2018).

56 See, e.g., Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002) (defendant, lawyer, was paid $2.45 per letter and paid mailing service $0.99 per letter for printing and mailing them); Peters v. AT&T Corp., 43 F. Supp. 2d 926 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (paid GC Services $0.54 per account for collection letters).

57 See Bonfiglio v. Citifinancial Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5612194 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 23, 2015); Echlin v. PeaceHealth Sw. Med. Ctr., 2015 WL 1538569 (W.D. Wash. Apr. 7, 2015); Epps v. Etan Indus., 1998 WL 851488 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 1, 1998); Watson v. Auto Advisors, Inc., 822 N.E.2d 1017 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005) (no misrepresentation of car dealer's assignee's participation in seeking small claims court judgment, was less than that reasonably implied from the collection message.[58]

Flat-rate fees are less common in the collection industry than contingent fees. Most commonly, a creditor hires a collector on a contingency basis, and the collector is paid by keeping a portion of the money collected, often twenty to thirty percent. Many recent court decisions and older FTC staff letters deal with the question of when the level of participation of a flat-rate debt collector[59] was so minimal as to create liability under this provision. These are discussed in the next subsection.

This section is the only proscription of the Act not limited to "debt collectors." Even creditors[60] and others specifically excluded from the FDCPA definition of "debt collector" should be liable for violations of this section based on the statutory language. A debt collection agency or collection lawyer that supplies dunning letters to a creditor without any additional involvement in the collection process runs the risk of getting both of them in trouble under this provision of the FDCPA.[61] To avoid violating this section, a flat-rate supplier of form letters to creditors should remove its name from the letter.[62] This provision may not bring a printing and mailing service that was not involved in drafting or designing collection letters within the restrictions of the Act.[63]

The section of Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021) implementing FDCPA § 1692j(a), 12 C.F.R. § 1006.30(e), rearranges the statutory text for clarity, but does not provide any additional substantive guidance.[64] The CFPB did not issue regulations interpreting FDCPA § 1692j(b). In its draft of the regulations, the CFPB explained that this was "[b]ecause the Bureau's rulemaking authority under FDCPA section 814(d) [§ 1692*l*(d)] is limited to debt collectors, as that term is defined in the FDCPA, proposed § 1006.30(e)'s coverage is more limited than that of FDCPA section 812(a), which applies to any person."[65] As the CFPB recognizes, the limited scope of their rule does not narrow coverage under the statute.[66]

although assignment may have been invalid); Lipsett, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 22, 1990); Rackett, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Nov. 15, 1985) (letter writing service covered); Smith, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 5, 1984); Mezines, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 21, 1982); Warwood, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Oct. 20, 1980); Berhenke, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 21, 1979) (flat-rating not per se illegal); Feldman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 30, 1979). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 812-5, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

58 Sullivan, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Feb. 21, 1984). See also FTC Official Staff Commentary § 812-5, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

59 While the legislative history of this section emphasized prohibiting flat-rate debt collection, FTC staff letters have construed the statutory language to be concerned about misrepresenting the extent of the collector's participation in collecting the debt rather than the method of the collector's compensation.

60 See Domico v. Etan Indus., 1998 WL 765058 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 26, 1998). See also Denkers v. United Compucred Collections, Inc., 1996 WL 724784 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 27, 1996) (issue of whether public utility was debt collector where it hired collection agency only to send out dunning letters); Fratto v. Citibank, 1996 WL 554549 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 1996) (issue of whether Citibank was covered by Act where it hired collection agency only to send out form letters on attorney's letterhead); Villarreal v. Snow, 1996 WL 473386 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 19, 1996) (lender did not become debt collector by "using" an attorney's name when attorney spent about one minute on each account); FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 13, 1996); FTC Official Staff Commentary §§ 812-2, 812-5, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra. But see Erceg v. Concord Servicing Corp., 2019 WL 658828, at *3 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 13, 2019) (stating that creditors could not be held liable under § 1692j); Busby v. Vacation Resorts Int'l, 2019 WL 669641, at *10 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 19, 2019) (same); Wegmans Food Mkts., Inc. v. Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) (grocery store that hired agency to send series of computer printed letters demanding payment to store was not covered by § 1692j). See generally Gallaher v. Estates at Aloma Woods Homeowners Ass'n, Inc. 316 F. Supp. 3d 1358, 1364 (M.D. Fla. 2018) (noting that § 1692j is not limited to debt collectors, but dismissing for failing to allege sufficient facts); Johnson v. Hamilton Point Prop. Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 8186857, at *6 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 8, 2017) (although § 1692j applies beyond debt collectors, the use of court-supplied forms does not trigger liability), adopted, 2018 WL 1246984 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 15, 2018); § 4.7.4, supra, Appx. E.1.3, E.2.8, infra.

10.4.2 Extent of Participation in the Collection Process

Federal courts have wrestled with the issue of when a flat-rate relationship with a collector triggers liability for a creditor through FDCPA §§ 1692a(6) or 1692j. In Nielsen v. Dickerson, the court found a collection firm liable under FDCPA § 1692j when it furnished a form letter that gave the consumer the false impression that the firm was meaningfully involved in the case.[67] Similarly, in Sokolski v. Trans Union Corp.,[68] the court found a flat-rating arrangement in violation of the Act and the creditor liable where the collection agency's activities were "limited to the furnishing of collection letters."[69] The collection agency did not receive the creditor's files on each debtor, its letters directed that any correspondence be sent to the creditor, it had no authority to negotiate settlements with 61 Rummel, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 16, 1979); Davidson, FTC Informal Staff Letter (May 18, 1978); Gilbert, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 28, 1978); Mansfield, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Mar. 20, 1978). But see Arellano v. Etan Indus., 1998 WL 911729 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 23, 1998) (§§ 1692e and 1692j(a) are mutually exclusive, since former applies only to debt collector and latter only to those who "falsely pretend to be a debt collector"). See generally Ch. 7, supra.

62 FTC Official Staff Commentary § 812-3, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Lisanti, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 8, 1978).

63 See Trull v. Lason Sys., Inc., 982 F. Supp. 600 (N.D. Ill. 1997); Laubach v. Arrow Serv. Bur., Inc., 987 F. Supp. 625 (N.D. Ill. 1997). See also § 4.3.1, supra, Appx. E.2.4.5, infra. Cf. Romine v. Diversified Collection Serv., Inc., 155 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 1998).

64 12 C.F.R. § 1006.30(e) (eff. Nov. 30, 2021).

65 See 84 Fed. Reg. 23,274, 23,333 (Aug. 19, 2019).

66 Id.

67 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002).

68 53 F. Supp. 2d 307 (E.D.N.Y. 1999).

69 Id at 313. See also Hartley v. Suburban Radiologic Consultants, Ltd., 295 F.R.D. 357 (D. Minn. 2013).

debtors, and it received only a flat rate based on the number of letters sent.[70]

Greater involvement by the collection agency, however, may prevent liability under FDCPA § 1692j. In White v. Goodman,[71] the court found that a creditor and collection agency had not violated FDCPA § 1692j where the creditor electronically transmitted information regarding delinquent accounts to the collection agency, the agency then prepared letters on its letterhead on forms prepared by it but approved by the creditor, the letters contained the phone number of the agency, and any uncollected debts remained with the agency.[72] Despite the debt collectors' lack of authority to engage in "hallmark activities" of collection, the Ninth Circuit, in Echlin v. PeaceHealth, found that the debt collector was not a flat-rater given the other actions the collector took, such as screening accounts, drafting and mailing letters, and inviting debtors to call the collector.[73]

In Larson v. Evanston Northwestern Healthcare Corp.,[74] the court listed the types of evidence indicating whether the collection agency's participation was so minimal that the creditor should be deemed liable as a debt collector, or whether the facts supported liability.[75] In applying these indicators, the court in Larson found that the collection agency performed more than "ministerial" tasks for the creditor, that it was engaged in traditional debt collection activities for the creditor, and that it was not a "mere mailing service" in sending out a "pre-collection" letter.[76]

In Hartley v. Suburban Radiologic Consultants, Ltd.,[77] a lower court considering the liability of a medical services provider and its collection agency noted that "[t]he analysis of whether a collection agency is acting as a flat-rater instead of as a true debt collector examines identical factors . . . for determining whether a creditor is acting as a debt collector."[78]

A series of informal FTC staff letters had dealt with this same issue some years ago. An FTC staff letter clarified that there is no set minimum level of sufficient participation in the collection of a debt to take a flat-rater or any other collector outside the proscription of FDCPA § 1692j.[79] The minimum level of participation necessary to ensure that the consumer was not deceived about the collector's involvement depends upon a comparison of the collector's representations of its involvement with its actual participation.[80] Thus, to avoid misrepresentations of its participation, a collector that threatened further action against the consumer must be more involved in the collection of the debt than merely sending letters on its own letterhead requesting payment to the creditor.[81]

10.4.3 Lawyers Must Review File Before Signing Collection Letter

By implication, a letter on a lawyer's letterhead would imply greater participation than a letter on a collection agency's letterhead because of the stronger remedies available to attorneys. The Third Circuit recognized this:

> Abuses by attorney debt collectors are more egregious than those of lay collectors because a consumer reacts with far more duress to an attorney's improper threat of legal action than a debt collection agency committing the same practice. A debt collection letter on an attorney's letterhead conveys authority and credibility.[82]

If an attorney, for example, supplied form letters to a creditor or collection agency and did not otherwise participate in the collection efforts in the manner implied by the letters, they violate FDCPA § 1692j.[83] However, the leading case on

70 Id.

71 41 F. Supp. 2d 794 (N.D. Ill. 1998), aff'd, 200 F.3d 1016 (7th Cir. 2000). See also § 2.5.5, supra.

72 Id. at 797. See also Larson v. Evanston Nw. Healthcare Corp., 1999 WL 518901 (N.D. Ill. July 19, 1999) (collection agency performed more than "ministerial" tasks for creditor and was not "mere mailing service" in sending out "pre-collection" letter); Epps v. Etan Indus., Inc., 1998 WL 851488 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 1, 1998) (collection agency performed traditional collection activities, charged percentage of recovery, and was not merely mailing service).

73 Echlin v. PeaceHealth, 887 F.3d 967, 972, 974 (9th Cir. 2018).

74 1999 WL 518901 (N.D. Ill. July 19, 1999). See also Hartley v. Suburban Radiologic Consultants, Ltd., 295 F.R.D. 357 (D. Minn. 2013).

75 Larson v. Evanston Nw. Healthcare Corp., 1999 WL 518901 at *4 (N.D. Ill. July 19, 1999); Erceg v. Concord Servicing Corp, 2019 WL 658828 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 13, 2019) (applying Larson factors in denying debt collector's motion to dismiss. See also Garner v. ClaimAssist, L.L.C., 2018 WL 3772166, at *10 (D. Md. Aug. 9, 2018) (granting summary judgment based on debtor's failure to provide evidence of flat-rating); Hartley v. Suburban Radiologic Consultants, Ltd., 295 F.R.D. 357 (D. Minn. 2013).

76 Larson v. Evanston Nw. Healthcare Corp., 1999 WL 518901 at *5 (N.D. Ill. July 19, 1999); Williams v. Danek Med., Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13031, at *6 (E.D. La. Aug. 23, 1999). See also Hartley v. Suburban Radiologic Consultants, Ltd., 295 F.R.D. 357 (D. Minn. 2013).

77 295 F.R.D. 357 (D. Minn. Sept. 30, 2013).

78 Id. at 372.

79 Smith, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 5, 1984).

80 Id.

81 See also Knobel, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Oct. 5, 1987) (collector sending letters in creditor's name violated § 1692e(14), but not § 1692j since its participation was not misrepresented); Feldman, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Apr. 30, 1979).

82 Crossley v. Lieberman, 868 F.2d 566, 570 (3d Cir. 1989). But cf. Anthes v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 765 F. Supp. 162 (D. Del. 1991) (letter sent by outside attorney retained by debt collector was neither impersonation of attorney nor use of name other than its own; whether debt collector's routine request for outside attorney to send dunning letters would mislead consumer into believing collection activities had entered more serious stage raised questions not appropriate for summary judgment).

83 See Taylor v. Perrin, Landry, deLaunay & Durand, 103 F.3d 1232 (5th Cir. 1997); Littles v. Lieberman, 90 B.R. 700 (E.D. Pa. 1988); Smith, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Dec. 13, 1978). See also Newman v. CheckRite California, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 1354 (E.D. Cal. 1995) (lawyers collecting debts for check collection agency covered, and that coverage was not an unconstitutional interference with state judiciary's supervision of lawyers); Obidinski v. Interstate Serv., Inc., Civ. No. 81-0044 (M.D. Pa. 1981) (there was evidence that attorneys/defendants participated in collecting debts); In re Scheck, 574 N.Y.S.2d 372 (App. Div. 1991) (upholding four charges of professional misconduct against this type of violation found that the violation was of FDCPA § 1692e(3), misrepresenting that a communication was from a lawyer when the lawyer had no significant involvement in the case.[84] an attorney who allowed collection agency to use his name and letterhead without his supervision); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 812-3, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; Michael, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 15, 1988); § 7.2.3.3, supra. But see Rumpler v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 219 F. Supp. 2d 251 (E.D.N.Y. 2002) (use of title "Esq." did not create impression that collector was an attorney where he was collecting under title "Executive Vice President"). But cf. Wegmans Food Mkts., Inc. v. Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982) (grocery store which hired an agency to send series of computer printed letters demanding payment not covered by § 1692j).

84 Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314 (2d Cir. 1993). Accord Martinez v. Albuquerque Collection Serv., 867 F. Supp. 1495 (D.N.M. 1994). But see Keele v. Wexler, 1995 WL 549048 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 12, 1995) (appearance of attorney's name in letterhead insufficient evidence to overcome affidavit that attorney was not partner and was not involved in sending of letter that allegedly violated FDCPA; dismissing attorney from lawsuit). See generally § 7.2.3.3, supra, Appx. E.2.4.4, infra.

Chapter 11 FDCPA Litigation and Remedies

11.1 Private Remedy Is Primary Enforcement Mechanism

A debt collector who violates the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act ("FDCPA" or "Act") while collecting a consumer debt is subject to suit by "any person"[1] adversely affected by the violation. The Act grants concurrent federal and state jurisdiction,[2] and the successful plaintiff may recover:

- Actual damages;[3]
- Additional statutory damages;[4]
- Attorney fees;[5] and
- Costs.[6]

The FDCPA is silent as to declaratory or injunctive relief,[7] and few courts have allowed such relief concerning FDCPA violations.[8] Punitive damages[9] are also not mentioned in the FDCPA, but they may be available under other federal statutes or similar state laws. A consumer may seek remedies either in an individual or in a class action.[10]

Congress intended private actions to be the main vehicle for enforcing the Act: "The committee views this legislation as primarily self-enforcing; consumers who have been subject to collection abuses will be enforcing compliance."[11] Thus, consumers enforcing compliance with the Act are acting as "private attorneys general."[12]

1 See § 4.10, supra.
2 See § 11.2.1, infra.
3 See § 11.8, infra.
4 See § 11.9, infra.
5 See § 11.13, infra.
6 Id.
7 See § 11.12.2, infra.
8 See § 11.12.1, infra.
9 See § 11.10, infra.
10 See § 11.11, infra.
11 S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 5 (1977), reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. See also Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 603, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010) (referring to "the FDCPA's calibrated scheme of statutory incentives to encourage self-enforcement").

Some of the bills leading to the Act contained enforcement provisions, such as criminal penalties and administrative rulemaking, that were subsequently omitted. Every bill, however, provided for private actions as a primary enforcement mechanism. Criminal sanctions were contained in all of the House bills and many of the Senate bills, but were deleted immediately prior to House passage of H.R. 5294. 95th Cong., 1st Sess. § 813 (1977). The early bills contained several remedial provisions that were not carried forward into subsequent bills. These provisions included enforcement by private consumer organizations, liability of corporate officers, and making a violation a complete defense to collection of the debt. E.g., H.R. 10191, 94th Cong. §§ 811 to 813 (1975).

12 Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055, 1062 (9th Cir. 2011) ("Congress encouraged private enforcement by permitting aggrieved individuals to bring suit as private attorneys general."); Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Services, Inc., 516 F.3d 85, 91, 96 (2d Cir. 2008) ("FDCPA permits and encourages parties who have suffered no loss to bring civil actions for statutory violations").

11.2 Jurisdiction and Venue

11.2.1 State and Federal Courts Have Concurrent Jurisdiction

> (d) An action to enforce any liability created by this subchapter may be brought in any appropriate United States district court without regard to the amount in controversy, or in any other court of competent jurisdiction . . .[13]

This provision establishes concurrent jurisdiction in United States district courts[14] and in competent state courts[15] over FDCPA actions, regardless of the amount of money in controversy.[16] Private FDCPA actions also fall within another federal jurisdictional statute allowing federal jurisdiction over Acts of Congress regulating commerce, without regard to the amount in controversy.[17] The pendency of a related state court proceeding is not necessarily a ground for the federal court to abstain from hearing FDCPA claims, but a federal court may stay an action where there is a parallel state court action

13 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(d).
14 Keep in mind, as discussed in detail in § 11.15, infra, a party invoking federal jurisdiction must prove they have Article III standing to remain in federal court.
15 See Levine v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 926 N.W.2d 49, 54 (Minn. Ct. App. 2019) (Minnesota district court is "court of competent jurisdiction" to adjudicate cases under FDCPA); Randall v. Paul, 897 N.W.2d 842, 845 (Minn. Ct. App. 2017) ("A plaintiff may sue a debt collector for FDCPA violations in federal or state court and recover actual damages, statutory damages, attorney fees, and costs."); Caputo v. Koenig, 46 N.Y.S.3d 880 (N.Y. App. Div. 2017) (reversing lower court's dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, since Supreme Court, New York County, was "court of competent jurisdiction" under § 1692k(d)).
16 See Itri v. Equibank, 464 A.2d 1336 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1983) (under 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(d), a Pennsylvania Court of Common Pleas had subject matter jurisdiction over an FDCPA claim). See also Biddle v. Santander Consumer USA, 2011 WL 1637989 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 29, 2011) (denying motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction based on defendant allegedly not being a "debt collector," but converting motion to one for summary judgment); Weiss v. Collection Ctr., Inc., 667 N.W.2d 567 (N.D. 2003); Nunez v. Etan Indus., Inc., 1999 WL 14483 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 6, 1998) (federal court had subject matter jurisdiction to determine whether defendant was a "debt collector"). Cf. Meehan v. Cable, 489 S.E.2d 440 (N.C. Ct. App. 1997) (N.C. Superior Court $10,000 minimum amount in controversy requirement precluded jurisdiction for FDCPA claim for $1000 statutory damages).
17 28 U.S.C. § 1337. See also Vantu v. Echo Recovery, L.L.C., 85 F. Supp. 3d 939 (N.D. Ohio 2015) (on Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, question of whether repossession company was debt collector went to merits of FDCPA claim and not court's power to adjudicate case).

pending.[18] A federal court may also have no jurisdiction over an FDCPA claim that challenges a state court judgment.[19]

FDCPA claims that exist upon filing of a bankruptcy become property of the bankruptcy estate.[20] The bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to "hear and determine all cases under title 11 and all core proceedings arising under title 11 or arising in a case under title 11" of the Bankruptcy Code.[21] The Third Circuit and a number of courts have determined that a proceeding is "related to" a bankruptcy case if the outcome of a proceeding could have any conceivable effect on the administration of the bankruptcy estate.[22] A claim against a collector which files bankruptcy may be stayed by the bankruptcy court, requiring litigation of the claim in the bankruptcy court or obtaining relief from the stay.[23]

Where the FDCPA violation occurs on a tribal reservation, the FDCPA claim is required to be initially litigated in the tribal court.[24] Where the forum-selection clause contained in the consumer's loan agreement required that litigation related to the loan must be heard only in the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribal courts, a federal district court rejected the doctrine of tribal jurisdiction as the basis for dismissal of the FDCPA complaint.[25]

State courts that are competent to hear claims analogous to FDCPA claims, such as tort claims, cannot refuse to hear an FDCPA claim simply because it is based on a federal statute.[26] Where a consumer brings a purely state claim for debt collection abuse in state court, without bringing an FDCPA count, the action may not be removed to federal court, even if state laws implicate the FDCPA.[27]

When the FDCPA claim is raised as a counterclaim in a state court collection action, a defendant cannot remove it to federal court on that basis, because a counterclaim cannot provide the basis for federal jurisdiction.[28] The majority view is that the same is true for third-party claims.[29] If the consumer

18 See § 12.6.3, infra.

19 See § 12.6.4.1, infra.

20 See § 13.2.5, supra.

21 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(1); 28 U.S.C. § 1409(a); 28 U.S.C. § 1334(b). See § 2.3, supra, § 13.3, Appx. E.3.7.5, infra.

22 See Pacor v. Higgins, 743 F.2d 984 (3d Cir. 1984). See also In re Time Constr., Inc., 43 F.3d 1041 (6th Cir. 1995) (bankruptcy court has jurisdiction over proceeding if outcome could alter debtor's rights, options, or freedom of action); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 14.2.2 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also In re Williams, 612 B.R. 682, 696 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 2020) (raising question of subject-matter jurisdiction; FDCPA claim of misapplication of mortgage payments was not "related to" bankruptcy case, and so court lacked subject matter jurisdiction over that count); Buckingham v. Baptist Mem. Hosp., Inc., 283 B.R. 691 (N.D. Miss. 2002) (denying motion to transfer FDCPA case to bankruptcy court because claims were not "related to" bankruptcy petition; all dealt with postpetition conduct and any recovery would go to plaintiff and would have no conceivable effect on estate); In re Garcia, 2013 WL 414177 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. Feb. 1, 2013) (majority of courts have concluded that bankruptcy courts do not have "related to" jurisdiction over chapter 7 debtor's postpetition claims for unfair debt collection practices); In re Csondor, 309 B.R. 124 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2004) (bankruptcy court has neither "core" nor "related to" jurisdiction over post-filing violations of FDCPA since bankruptcy estate is not affected).

23 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Bankruptcy Law and Practice Ch. 18 (12th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

24 Tiessen v. Capital, 2016 WL 6782776, at *2 (D. Minn. Oct. 20, 2016) (tribal exhaustion doctrine; "due to considerations of comity, federal court jurisdiction does not properly arise until available remedies in the tribal court system have been exhausted"), adopted, 2016 WL 6803076 (D. Minn. Nov. 15, 2016).

25 Gonnella v. Delbert Serv. Corp., 2015 WL 1299364 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 19, 2015).

26 See Testa v. Katt, 330 U.S. 386; 67 S. Ct. 810, 91 L. Ed. 967 (1947) (Rhode Island state court's refusal to enforce Federal Emergency Price Control Act); McKnett v. St. Louis & S.F. Ry., 292 U.S. 230, 54 S. Ct. 690, 78 L. Ed. 1227 (1934) (Federal Employers' Liability Act); C. Wright, Law of Federal Courts § 45 (1970). See also Caputo v. Koenig, 46 N.Y.S.3d 880 (N.Y. App. Div. 2017) (reversing lower court's dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, since Supreme Court, New York County, was "court of competent jurisdiction" under § 1692k(d)). But cf. G.E. Capital Mortg. Serv., Inc. v. Baker, 1999 WL 511156, at *1, 4 (Conn. Super. Ct. July 2, 1999) (defenses based upon alleged violations of FDCPA were not available in foreclosure action because they did not "address the making, validity or enforcement of the mortgage and/or note" and "failed to assert any connection with the subject matter of the foreclosure action"; as such, "it did not arise out of the same transaction as the foreclosure action"); Missionary Sisters v. Dowling, 703 N.Y.S.2d 362 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1999) (FDCPA violations do not give rise to affirmative defense to eviction proceeding).

27 See Appx. E.3.7.1, infra.

28 See U.S. Bank v. Verity, 2015 WL 1469736 (D.N.J. Mar. 27, 2015); HSBC Bank v. Bryant, 2009 WL 3787195 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 10, 2009); First Horizon Home Loans v. Gardner, 2009 WL 1107818 (W.D. Pa. Apr. 23, 2009); Burbage v. Richburg, 417 F. Supp. 2d 746 (D.S.C. 2006) (debtor's purported defenses under FDCPA to state case did not create federal question jurisdiction); Greene Home Owners Ass'n v. Vogel, 1999 WL 292718 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 12, 1999). See also Perreault v. Model Fin. Co., 2019 WL 1493343, at *3 (S.D. Cal. 2019) ("That Plaintiffs assert a federal claim against Big Time does not give the Court federal question jurisdiction over Big Time's claims against MFC, all of which are based on state law. There is no independent basis for the Court's jurisdiction over the cross-complaint.").

29 Home Depot U.S.A., Inc. v. Jackson, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1743, 204 L. Ed. 2d 34 (2019) (general removal statute does not permit removal by any counterclaim defendant, including parties brought into lawsuit for the first time by counterclaim, and Class Action Fairness Act's (CAFA) removal provision does not permit third-party defendant to remove); Palisades Collections, L.L.C. v. Shorts, 552 F.3d 327 (4th Cir. 2008) (in state collection action by debt collector, where consumer joined original creditor as additional counter-defendant for state consumer protection claims and moved for class action certification, third-party creditor could not remove action on basis of diversity and pursuant to Class Action Fairness Act); First Nat'l Bank of Pulaski v. Curry, 301 F.3d 456, 461 (6th Cir. 2002) ("Having carefully considered the issue, we conclude that neither § 1441(a) nor § 1441(c) provides third-party defendants with the right to remove a case to federal court."); Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co. v. Diamond, 2017 WL 587253, at *2–3 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 14, 2017); Rizwan v. Lender Services, Inc., 176 F. Supp. 3d 513 (D. Md. 2016) (mortgagee and mortgage servicer, added as third-party defendants in state court foreclosure action, could not remove third-party claims, even where those claims were properly severed); Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n v. Morris, 118 F. Supp. 3d 1288, 1291–1298 (N.D. Ala. 2015) (where defendant in foreclosure action asserted counterclaim against third-party mortgage servicer, removal was improper); Access Credit Mgmt., Inc. v. Lacy, 2013 WL 4012658, at *1 (E.D. Ark. Aug. 5, 2013) (in dicta, "the Eighth Circuit has held that, in almost prefers to litigate the FDCPA claim in federal court, it should be brought as a separate suit and not as a counterclaim to the collection action. Whether such a separate FDCPA claim is barred by a judgment on the underlying debt is discussed at § 12.6, infra.

A defendant may, however, remove an FDCPA suit from state court to federal court, if the federal courts would have original jurisdiction over it.[30] When a claim is properly removed, the court may remand separable state law claims while retaining jurisdiction of the federal claims.[31] If the federal district court dismisses all federal claims within a complaint, and diversity jurisdiction does not exist over the remaining state statutory and/or common law claims, the court has discretion to retain, dismiss, or remand the remaining state law claims pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1367.[32]

The choice of federal or state forum usually depends on local factors: controlling case law, standing facts and laws,[33] the relative quality of the judiciary, the relative congestion of the court's dockets and the pace at which cases move, and differences in procedural rules (such as discovery, jury, and class action rules). The consumer can certainly file the FDCPA claim in federal court if that is the preferred forum. If the consumer prefers state court, then to avoid removal the consumer must consider not raising an FDCPA claim or doing so as a counterclaim in a state court collection case.

11.2.2 Personal Jurisdiction over Out-of-State Collectors

11.2.2.1 Generally

State long-arm statutes subject nonresident individuals or corporations to the in personam jurisdiction of local courts on the basis of their having performed some act affecting the state. The plaintiff has the burden of establishing jurisdiction.[34] Federal procedure uses the long-arm statute of the forum state,[35] which may allow fairly extensive service on nonresidents.

Long-arm statutes commonly allow jurisdiction over anyone who engages in "the transaction of any business within this State" or "the commission of a tortious act within this State" related to the cause of action.[36] Collecting debts from state residents may qualify as transacting business within the state.[37] Violating the FDCPA is analogous to committing a tort, because the Act is partly a codification of tort law and because a violation affecting a state resident within the state creates a cause of action within the meaning of such a statute.[38] Ironically, and unfortunately, a debt collector who sues the consumer in a distant state, thereby violating the FDCPA, may have to be sued in the distant state.[39]

11.2.2.2 "Transaction of Business" Test in Long-Arm Statutes

Courts usually interpret the statutory "transaction of business" test as broadly as possible within the minimum contacts standard required by the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The Supreme Court, in International Shoe Co. v.

all cases, a third-party defendant may not remove a case to federal court under 28 U.S.C. § 1441(c)," (citing Lewis v. Windsor Door Co., 926 F.2d 729, 733 (8th Cir. 1991)). But see Carl Heck Eng'rs, Inc. v. Lafourche Parish Police Jury, 622 F.2d 133 (5th Cir. 1980) (permitting third-party removal); WGB, L.L.C. v. Bowling, 18 F. Supp. 3d 1288, 1294 (N.D. Ala. 2014) ("the Fifth Circuit's rationale for permitting a newly added defendant to remove a civil action to federal court under § 1441(c) remains valid and binding in the Eleventh Circuit").

30 28 U.S.C. § 1441; Currier v. First Magnus Fin. Corp., 2011 WL 4043423 (D. Nev. Sept. 8, 2011) (removal was proper where state statutory claim provided no private cause of action, but was premised entirely upon violations of standards that gave rise to independent federal claim based on FDCPA); Shock v. CDI Affiliated Serv., Inc., 2010 WL 672148 (D. Idaho Feb. 20, 2010); Simmons v. Countrywide Home Loans, 2010 WL 670032 (M.D. Tenn. Feb. 19, 2010). See also Knapp-Prasek v. California State Auto. Ass'n, 2011 WL 4368672 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 19, 2011) (given similarity of FDCPA and California Rosenthal Act, it was far from clear that plaintiff's cause of action arose under federal law or that right to relief depended on resolution of substantial question of federal law, and because federal jurisdiction must be rejected if there is any doubt as to right of removal, removal was improper).

31 See, e.g., Wagner v. Bank of Am., 2012 WL 6586347 (S.D. Ill. Dec. 17, 2012) (state claims severed and remanded to state court).

32 See Valhalla Inv. Properties, L.L.C. v. 502, L.L.C., 832 Fed. Appx. 413 (6th Cir. 2020) (with FDCPA claim dismissed, court did not retain jurisdiction over supplemental state-law claims); Rogers v. J.P. Morgan Chase Bank, 466 F. Supp. 3d 791 (N.D. Ohio 2020) (where creditor was not debt collector under FDCPA, case dismissed and state law claims remanded); Perreault v. Model Fin. Co., 2019 WL 1493343, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2019); Dawson v. DovenMuehle Mortg., Inc., 2002 WL 501499 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 3, 2002); Jang v. A.M. Miller & Assoc., Inc., 1996 WL 435096, at *5 (N.D. Ill. 1996). See also Evans v. Better Homes & Gardens Real Estate, L.L.C., 2014 WL 11858176 (N.D. Ga. May 29, 2014) (court had discretion to maintain supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims); Roberts v. Chase Home Fin., L.L.C., 2014 WL 11930589 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 3, 2014) (denying consumer's motion to remand state law claims to state court from which they were removed, as court had jurisdiction of FDCPA claim and supplemental jurisdiction over state claims); Cable v. Prot. One, Inc., 2009 WL 2970111 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2009).

33 See § 11.15, infra.

34 See Carmona v. Leo Ship Mgmt., Inc., 924 F.3d 190 (5th Cir. 2019) (plaintiff bears burden of establishing prima facie case of personal jurisdiction); Knox v. MetalForming, Inc., 914 F.3d 685 (1st Cir. 2019) (same). See also Musso v. Seiders, 194 F.R.D. 43 (D. Conn. 1999) (if defendant raises lack of personal jurisdiction before discovery was conducted, plaintiff can defeat motion to dismiss by good faith allegation of jurisdiction; if defendant raises lack of personal jurisdiction by motion for summary judgment, plaintiff has the burden of establishing jurisdiction by preponderance of evidence).

35 Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(k).

36 E.g., 735 Ill. Comp. Stat. §§ 5/2-209(a)(1), 5/2-209(a)(2). See also Appx. E.3.7.4, infra.

37 See § 11.2.2.2, infra.

38 See § 11.2.2.3, infra.

39 See Neal v. Buffaloe & Assoc., 2011 WL 6754056 (D. Neb. Dec. 23, 2011) (dismissing FDCPA case for lack of personal jurisdiction in Nebraska over Tennessee collection law firm that sued Nebraska consumer in Tennessee, where his mother lived). See also Fitzgerald v. Zakheim & LaVrar, P.A., 90 F. Supp. 3d 867 (D. Minn. 2015) (forum had no jurisdiction where Florida collection law firm garnished Minnesota account, instead of intended Florida account, at national bank).

State of Washington,[40] required that the nonresident defendant have minimum contacts with the forum state "such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.'"[41] McGee v. International Life Insurance Co.[42] further broadened the extent of long-arm jurisdiction.

In Hanson v. Denckla,[43] the Supreme Court limited the broad rule of International Shoe and McGee. Minimum contacts, it held, require that the defendant "purposefully avail itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws."[44]

The current general requirements of the minimum contacts rule may be summarized as follows:[45]

- The nonresident defendant must act or must consummate a transaction purposefully in the forum state;
- The cause of action must have some connection with the act or transaction; and
- Jurisdiction in the forum state must not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.

The last requirement considers the quality, nature, and extent of the activity in the forum state, the relative convenience of the forum for the parties, the benefits and protections the parties receive from the laws of the state, and the basic equities of the situation.

The First Circuit has a similar three-part inquiry to determine whether a court can assert specific jurisdiction of an out-of-state defendant. First, the legal claims must relate to or arise out of the defendant's contacts in the forum. Second, the defendant's contacts must constitute "purposeful availment of the benefits and protections" of the forum's laws. Third, the exercise of jurisdiction must be reasonable, in light of the First Circuit's "gestalt factors."[46]

Courts typically find long-arm jurisdiction over an out-of-state debt collector who sends multiple collection letters and makes several phone calls to the consumer in the forum state.[47] Thus, the Ninth Circuit found long-arm jurisdiction over an out-of-state collector who contacted a company in the forum state to get the consumers' new address, sent one or two collection notices to the consumers in the forum state, and telephoned them once in the forum state.[48] The Second Circuit found that New York's long-arm statute applied to a Pennsylvania law firm that mailed a debt collection letter to the consumer, called the consumer, and mailed the summons and complaint to the consumer in New York.[49] Some state debt collection statutes may specifically describe debt collection contacts as "doing business within this state."[50] Courts have also found long-arm jurisdiction over individuals who direct the operations of an out-of-state collection agency, because of the individual's indirect efforts to collect a debt in the forum state.[51] On the other hand, courts will deny personal jurisdiction where there has 40 326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95 (1945) (action by state to collect contributions for state unemployment compensation permitted when corporation employed salesmen in forum state).

41 Id., 326 U.S. at 316.

42 335 U.S. 220, 78 S. Ct. 199, 2 L. Ed. 2d 223 (1957) (sale of single insurance policy through mail subjected company to forum state's jurisdiction). See also Patterson v. Latimer Levay Jurasek L.L.C., 2009 WL 1862427 (S.D. Cal. June 29, 2009) (collection law firm sending letter into district constitutes minimum contacts for purposes of exercising personal jurisdiction over firm).

43 357 U.S. 235, 78 S. Ct. 1228, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1283 (1958).

44 Id., 357 U.S. at 253. See also Grice v. VIM Holdings Group, L.L.C., 280 F. Supp. 3d 258 (D. Mass. 2017) (Illinois payday lender purposefully availed itself of the benefits and protections of Massachusetts law, as required for Massachusetts district court to exercise specific jurisdiction over lender in Massachusetts debtor's action for alleged violations of Massachusetts law and FDCPA, where lender owned and operated website through which it voluntarily bid for loan to debtor and initiated interactive contact with her regarding the loan); Maloon v. Schwartz, Zweban & Slingbaum, L.L.P., 399 F. Supp. 2d 1108 (D. Haw. 2005) (defendant purposefully availed itself of forum by sending a debt collection letter, allegedly in violation of the FDCPA, to plaintiff in Hawaii). See also Palmer v. Idalia Llorens Collection Agency, Inc., 434 F. Supp. 3d 462, 469–470 (E.D. Tex. 2020) (mailing of one invoice by nonresident University to plaintiff's residence in Texas was too minimal a contact to establish jurisdiction via Texas long-arm statute); Mulato v. Wells Fargo Bank, 76 F. Supp. 3d 929, 948–949 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (court declined to exercise personal jurisdiction over Wells Fargo employees who showed they were communicating with plaintiff on behalf of Wells Fargo and not in their individual capacity).

45 See Michel v. Am. Capital Enter., Inc., 884 F.2d 582 (9th Cir. 1989) (unpublished); Casano v. WDSJ-TV, Inc., 313 F. Supp. 1130 (S.D. Miss. 1970), aff'd, 464 F.2d 3 (5th Cir. 1972). See also Nordess v. Faucheux, 170 So. 3d 454 (Miss. 2015) (provides history of progression of U.S. Supreme Court's evaluation of "minimum contacts.").

46 Phillips Exeter Acad. v. Howard Phillips Fund, Inc., 196 F.3d 284, 288 (1st Cir. 1999).

47 See Grice v. VIM Holdings Group, L.L.C., 280 F. Supp. 3d 258, 272, 276 (D. Mass. 2017) ("Because the Loan was issued to a Massachusetts bank account, the Website was available in Massachusetts, and Grice's alleged harm occurred in Massachusetts as a result of the Loan, the relatedness prong is satisfied.").

48 Michel v. Am. Capital Enter., Inc., 884 F.2d 582 (9th Cir. 1989) (unpublished). But see Burry v. Cach L.L.C., 2015 WL 328182 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 22, 2015) (debt buyer's filing of hundreds of lawsuits in Pennsylvania did not subject it to general jurisdiction where consumer failed to offer evidence of nature of suits, and consumer, suing over debt buyer pulling his credit report, had not been contacted or sued; case was transferred to collector's home state).

49 Eades v. Kennedy, P.C. Law Office, 799 F.3d 161 (2d Cir. 2015).

50 See Fla. Stat. § 559.55(8); White v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 379 So. 2d 136 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1980).

51 See Gallegos v. Tygart, 2017 WL 4872887 (D.N.M. July 20, 2017) (denying motion to dismiss owner of collection agency for lack of personal jurisdiction where claims were based on misconduct by her agents during calls to plaintiff in New Mexico, since evidence established owner "had considerable control over both the means and the results of her debt collectors' work," even though they were paid on commission basis); Appx. E.3.7.4, infra. See also Fabio v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2014 WL 713104 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 25, 2014) (Florida collector "selected Wisconsin as the staging ground for its collection calls to plaintiff, thereby purposefully availing itself of the privilege of conducting business in this state"). But cf. Grice v. VIM Holdings Group, L.L.C., 280 F. Supp. 3d 258, 278 (D. Mass. 2017) (no personal jurisdiction over owners and managers of debt collectors; mere participation in corporation's affairs is insufficient); Ernst v. Jesse L. Riddle, P.C., 964 F. Supp. 213 (M.D. La. 1997) (long-arm jurisdiction could not be exercised over collector's corporate officer without proof of officer contacting state as debt collector, rather than in his capacity as corporate officer).

been essentially no contact with the forum state,[52] unless the defendant is headquartered in the forum state.[53] The plaintiff must also establish personal jurisdiction over each defendant independently in a multi-party case. The contacts of one defendant may not be imputed to another defendant for jurisdictional purposes, unless the plaintiff can show that it would be appropriate to pierce the corporate veil.[54]

11.2.2.3 Tort Tests in Long-Arm Statutes

Courts broadly construe provisions of long-arm statutes, allowing jurisdiction over parties who commit torts in whole or in part within the state as providing a basis for jurisdiction over FDCPA defendants.[55] These cases follow similar holdings for claims under state tort and related state statutes.[56] Tort-based personal jurisdiction in libel, slander, and misrepresentation cases in particular can provide useful analogies for supporting jurisdiction in debt collection cases. Precedent in the forum state should be consulted in this regard.

11.2.3 Federal Court Venue

Federal suits may be brought in any judicial district in which the defendant "resides, if all defendants are residents of the State in which the district is located" or in which a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to the claim occurred.[57] The federal venue provisions should therefore be construed to permit suit to be brought in any competent federal court of a state that has long-arm jurisdiction over the defendant.[58] Unlike claims of improper jurisdiction, objections to venue are waived if not raised in a timely fashion.[59]

Federal court venue for an FDCPA action based upon where a claim arose is generally proper where the consumer received a dunning message alleged to violate the FDCPA,[60] and not where the underlying debt was consummated, where that is a different jurisdiction.[61] The Second Circuit has also found that the claim arose where the consumer received the dunning letter, even if it was mailed to a different state and forwarded to the consumer's new address.[62]

Even if venue is proper, however, the court has authority under 28 U.S.C. § 1404(a) to transfer the case "[f]or the convenience of parties and witnesses, in the interest of justice, . . . to any other district or division where it might have been brought."[63] Deference is given to a plaintiff's choice of forum, 52 See Bonilla v. Nelson & Kennard, 2020 WL 5763774 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2020) ("None of the events took place in New York. The only connection to New York in this action is Plaintiff's residence in New York," so "the Court finds that the situs of injury is California, and not New York."); Sarracco v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C. 220 F. Supp. 3d 346 (E.D.N.Y. 2016) (foreclosure law firm had no N.Y. contacts, although mortgagee did); Howell v. Clark County Collection Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1210599 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 16, 2015) (merely filing credit report upon consumer who happened to live in Indiana did not invoke benefits and protections of its laws and court lacked personal jurisdiction); Kopp v. Hornung, 2015 WL 585746 (D. Colo. Feb. 11, 2015); Burry v. Cach L.L.C., 2015 WL 328182 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 22, 2015) (debt buyer's hard inquiry on consumer's TransUnion credit report did not operate to subject it to specific jurisdiction in Pennsylvania, even though TransUnion has a location in Pennsylvania); Appx. E.3.7.4, infra. See also Kangas v. Kieffer, 495 Fed. Appx. 749, 751 (8th Cir. 2012) ("These isolated contacts [serving notice of foreclosure in Wis. in N.D.] are insufficient to satisfy the due process clause."); Fitzgerald v. Zakheim & LaVrar, P.A., 90 F. Supp. 3d 867 (D. Minn. 2015).

53 See Daimler AG v. Bauman, 571 U.S. 117, 134 S. Ct. 746, 187 L. Ed. 2d 624 (2014).

54 See Carrington v. Experian Holdings, Inc., 469 F. Supp. 3d 891 (W.D. Wisc. 2020), citing KM Enterprises, Inc. v. Global Traffic Technologies, Inc., 725 F.3d 718, 733–734 (7th Cir. 2013).

55 See Grice v. VIM Holdings Group, L.L.C., 280 F. Supp. 3d 258, 273 (D. Mass. 2017) (where content of collection lawyer's communications with forum gives rise to intentional tort, this constitutes personal availment for purposes of personal jurisdiction); Johnson v. Critical Resolution Mediation L.L.C., 2017 WL 2590007 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 24, 2017) (because consumer's claims arose from unfair debt collection calls to telephones in Florida, court had specific jurisdiction over collection agency under Florida's long-arm statute's "tortious act" provision); Appx. E.3.7.4, infra ("tortious act").

56 First Act, Inc. v. Brook Mays Music Co., 311 F. Supp. 2d 258 (D. Mass. 2004); White v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 379 So. 2d 136 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1980); Norton v. Local Loan, 251 N.W.2d 520 (Iowa 1977).

57 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b).

Note that the Federal Courts Jurisdiction and Venue Clarification Act of 2011 substantially revised this statute for cases filed on or after January 6, 2012. Cases arising under this statute, as amended, in contexts other than the FDCPA should also be consulted for their analysis of such issues as determining the residence of defendants and when a defendant is subject to the court's personal jurisdiction, as these may determine whether venue is proper under the statute.

58 See Dellget v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2007 WL 4142769 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 21, 2007).

59 Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(1); Comm. v. Dennis Reimer, Co., L.P.A., 150 F.R.D. 495 (D. Vt. 1993).

60 See generally Bates v. C & S Adjusters, Inc., 980 F.2d 865 (2d Cir. 1992); Michel v. Am. Capital Enters., Inc., 884 F.2d 582 (9th Cir. 1989); Appx. E.3.7.4, infra. See also Fabio v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2014 WL 713104 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 25, 2014) (ruling venue proper in Wisconsin where robo-calls to Minnesota resident's cell phone from Florida collector were made while plaintiff was in Wisconsin). Note that debt collectors bringing suit against consumers must follow the venue dictates of 11 U.S.C. § 1692*i*.

61 Howard v. Judge Law Firm, 2010 WL 2985686 (D. Minn. July 26, 2010). See also Bates v. C & S Adjusters, Inc., 980 F.2d 865 (2d Cir. 1992) (venue proper in New York when debt arose in Pennsylvania and collection letter sent to Pennsylvania, but forwarded to consumer's new address in New York).

62 Bates v. C & S Adjusters, Inc., 980 F.2d 865 (2d Cir. 1992).

63 See Appx. E.3.7.4, infra See, e.g., Hampton-Muhamed v. James B. Nutter & Co., 687 Fed. Appx. 890 (11th Cir. 2017) (if claims had not been dismissed, transfer of case to Florida would be proper where Georgia court did not have jurisdiction over individual defendants and property, foreclosure proceedings, witnesses, and relevant documents were in Florida); Gentry v. Leading Edge Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2014 WL 131811 (D.N.J. Jan. 10, 2014) (granting transfer to N.Y. where consumer's lawyer received collection letter); Mobley v. ADP Screening & Selection Services, Inc., 2013 WL 396165, at *3 (D.N.J. Jan. 30, 2013) (granting transfer to Fort Collins, CO, where allegedly inaccurate reports were produced and defendant also maintained its records and computer server). See also Havanec v. EMC Mortg., L.L.C., 2012 WL 1646863 (N.D. Tex. May 10, 2012) (transferring FCRA case to a different federal district in Texas, where defendant's principal or main office was located); Kierstead v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2011 WL 1375361 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 11, 2011) (granting change of venue in individual case involving mixed files from location unless the defendant makes a strong showing of inconvenience that warrants upsetting that choice.[64]

Courts sometimes allow a transfer of venue where all of the evidence is to be found in another jurisdiction.[65] Thus, a court transferred venue to Florida where all the operative facts occurred there and the consumer had only recently moved to another state.[66] Where a debt collection dispute involved property wrongfully seized in Tennessee, an Illinois federal court found that Tennessee was the proper venue—not Illinois, where the consumer resided.[67] On the other hand, even where the claims arise from a contract with a forum selection clause, transfer will be denied when enforcement of the clause would be unreasonable and unjust, would render the proceedings gravely difficult for the plaintiff and inconvenient to the point of practical impossibility, and would contravene a strong public policy of the forum in which suit is brought.[68]

11.2.4 Joining State Law Claims in Federal Court

Supplemental jurisdiction, defined in part by United Mine Workers of America v. Gibbs[69] and in part by 28 U.S.C. § 1367, allows a federal court considering a federal claim to hear a closely related state claim that lacks an independent basis for federal jurisdiction. The Gibbs court held that the jurisdictional power of federal courts hearing federal claims includes the power to decide all state claims that "derive from a common nucleus of operative fact" with the federal claim.[70] However, the court in Gibbs cautioned that this power to decide related state claims should be exercised with great care and should not be exercised when considerations of judicial economy, convenience, and fairness to the litigants are not served. The exercise of this power should be further influenced by considerations of comity and of the predominance in a particular case of either state or federal issues. Thus, a federal court considering a substantial federal claim should exercise its power to assume supplemental jurisdiction over a closely related state claim requiring little or no additional commitment of court resources and raising no novel issues of state law or policy.[71]

Later, Congress added the following jurisdictional statute for supplemental jurisdiction:

> Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c) or as expressly provided otherwise by Federal statute, in any civil action of which the district courts have original jurisdiction, the district courts shall have supplemental jurisdiction over all other claims that are so related to claims in the action within such original jurisdiction that they form part of the same case or controversy under Article III of the United States Constitution. Such supplemental jurisdiction shall include claims that involve the joinder or intervention of additional parties.[72]

This statute codifies the term supplemental jurisdiction, which replaced the concepts of pendent and ancillary jurisdiction over parties and claims in their broad forms. Subsequent federal decisions have extended supplemental jurisdiction.[73] of defendant's corporate headquarters to location of plaintiff's residence, over plaintiff's objection); Smith v. Hireright Solutions, Inc., 2010 WL 2270541 (E.D. Pa. June 7, 2010) (granting transfer of nationwide FCRA class action brought on behalf of employment applicants to venue of defendant's principal place of business). Cf. Saxerud v. T-H Prof'l & Med. Collections Ltd., 482 F. Supp. 3d 900, 901–902 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 27, 2020) (denying collection agency's motion for change of venue to location of its offices); Robey v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 343 F. Supp. 3d 1304 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 4, 2018) (transfer of venue per 28 U.S.C. § 1406(a) from Florida to North Carolina warranted where wrongful foreclosure occurred in North Carolina and bulk of witnesses were in North Carolina); Ainsworth v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2011 WL 2135713 (C.D. Cal. May 12, 2011) (denying change of venue in individual case involving mixed files from location of defendant's corporate headquarters to location of plaintiff's residence).

---

64 See Lyons v. Michael & Assoc., 2013 WL 4680179 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 29, 2013); Ferri v. Del Medico, 2013 WL 12156114 (M.D. Fla. May 21, 2013); Tobey v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 3734320 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 4, 2009) (granting plaintiff's choice even though entitled to less deference in class action). Cf. Peatrowsky v. Persolve, L.L.C., 2012 WL 13012679, at *3 (C.D. Cal. May 22, 2012) (after weighing numerous factors, granting debt collector's motion to transfer case to Nevada federal court; for venue purposes, FDCPA claim should be brought in district in which plaintiff received debt collection communication; "receipt of a collection notice is a substantial part of the events giving rise to a claim under the FDCPA" (emphasis in original)).

65 See LeRoy v. Great W. United Corp., 443 U.S. 173, 99 S. Ct. 2710, 61 L. Ed. 2d 464 (1979) (venue not proper where plaintiff was injured because bulk of evidence was more conveniently accessible in another district).

66 Sias v. Law Offices of Andreu, Palma, & Andreu, P.L., 2011 WL 345928 (D.N.J. Feb. 2, 2011).

67 Brooks v. Holmes, Rich & Sigler, P.C., 1998 WL 704023 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 1, 1998).

68 Grice v. VIM Holdings Grp., L.L.C., 280 F. Supp. 3d 258, 280–281 (D. Mass. 2017).

69 383 U.S. 715, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1966) (referred to this aspect of supplemental jurisdiction as pendent jurisdiction).

70 Id., 383 U.S. at 725.

71 See Lanton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 793 Fed. Appx. 398 (6th Cir. 2019) (where court overturned dismissal of RESPA claim, district court should consider whether to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over state claim (breach of contract)); Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264 (11th Cir. 2019) (same for overturned dismissal of FDCPA claim); McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 775 F.3d 109 (1st Cir. 2014); Hemmingsen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 674 F.3d 814 (8th Cir. 2012); Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011); Robert J. Caluda, A.P.L.C. v. City of New Orleans, 403 F. Supp. 3d 522 (E.D. La. 2019) (district court severed claims against the city and remanded those claims to state court, while retaining jurisdiction over remaining claims including FDCPA against tax debt collectors); Appx. E.3.7.3, infra. See also Evans v. Better Homes & Gardens Real Estate, L.L.C., 2013 WL 12061906 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 7, 2013) (where homeowner's state law claims were based on same set of allegations as FDCPA claims concerning loan transaction, foreclosure sale, and dispossessory proceeding, jurisdiction over all claims was proper, since they all arose out of common nucleus of operative fact). Cf. PNC Bank v. Millaway, 1996 WL 684245 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 21, 1996) (granting bank's motion to remand to state court as there were no federal claims in complaint; homeowner had asserted FDCPA only as counterclaim).

72 28 U.S.C. § 1367.

73 E.g., Jones v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 358 F.3d 205 (2d Cir. 2004) (finance company's counterclaims seeking amounts allegedly due on

District courts may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction if:

(1) The claims raise a novel or complex issue of State law;
(2) The claim substantially predominates over the claim or claims over which the district court has original jurisdiction;
(3) The district court has dismissed all claims over which it has original jurisdiction; or
(4) In exceptional circumstances, there are other compelling reasons for declining jurisdiction.[74]

The statute of limitations for a claim raised pursuant to supplemental jurisdiction that is subsequently dismissed because the court declines to exercise supplemental jurisdiction is tolled for a period of thirty days, unless a longer tolling period is allowed by state law.[75]

The wide variety of FDCPA claims, and the even greater variety of state claims that might accompany an FDCPA suit, make it difficult to predict what state claims a court will allow under its supplemental jurisdiction. Courts will probably allow supplemental jurisdiction over claims arising under provisions of state law that parallel those of the FDCPA. For example, federal district courts considering FDCPA claims have exercised supplemental jurisdiction to consider state claims for a debt collector's torts[76] and violations of state consumer protection laws.[77]

A supplemental state claim may provide greater or simply additional relief to a consumer than an FDCPA claim. For example, punitive damages are more clearly available under state tort law than under the FDCPA.[78] Damages may sometimes be recovered simultaneously under both the FDCPA and the state law claim, but not invariably.[79] Where cumulative relief is not available, the consumer nevertheless should be able to proceed under both a federal and state law theory before they must choose the best remedy.[80] certain borrowers' vehicle finance loans satisfied "common nucleus of facts" standard for supplemental jurisdiction in borrowers' putative class action alleging race discrimination under Equal Credit Opportunity Act (ECOA)).

---

74 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c). See Lanton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 793 Fed. Appx. 398 (6th Cir. 2019) (where court overturned dismissal of RESPA claim, district court must consider whether to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a state claim (breach of contract)); Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264 (11th Cir. 2019) (same for overturned dismissal of FDCPA claim); Khosroabadi v. N. Shore Agency, 439 F. Supp. 2d 1118 (S.D. Cal. 2006) (court declined to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over state law claim where claim asserting federal jurisdiction had been dismissed); Ferguson v. Credit Mgmt. Control, Inc., 140 F. Supp. 2d 1293 (M.D. Fla. 2001) (court may decline to exercise supplemental jurisdiction when all federal claims were dismissed or state law claims raised novel or complex issue of state law).

75 28 U.S.C. § 1367(d).

76 See Appx. E.3.7.3, infra See, e.g., Garner v. Barton, 2015 WL 1120085 (E.D. Mo. Mar. 12, 2015) (because court had jurisdiction over consumer's FDCPA claims, it also had supplemental jurisdiction over her state law claims for abuse of process and conversion); Reid v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2015 WL 926146 (D. Utah Mar. 4, 2015) (recognizing identity theft victim's claim of invasion of privacy as state common law cause of action "which may be heard alongside the federal claims brought under the FDCPA"). But see Ferrell v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 2450615 (N.D. Ala. May 22, 2015) (state litigation privilege based on filing of collection suit required dismissal of consumer's subsequent state invasion of privacy claim).

77 See Appx. E.3.7.3, infra. See, e.g., Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., 920 F.3d 1264, 1274 (11th Cir. 2019) (court found supplemental jurisdiction over Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act as it related to FDCPA claims); Montoya v. Spinella & Assoc., P.C., 2013 WL 5203780 (D. Conn. Sept. 13, 2013) (overruling defendant's motion to dismiss where state law claims too were based on same collection procedures employed by defendants, and thus court had supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367); Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 216 F.R.D. 325 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (not forced to elect claims prior to damage determination); Kaplan v. Assetcare, Inc., 88 F. Supp. 2d 1355 (S.D. Fla. 2000) (plaintiff also stated cause of action under Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act, because knowledge could be imputed to defendants; declining to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over plaintiff's Florida Insurance Code claim because it raised novel or complex issue of state law). But see Alger v. Ganick, O'Brien & Sarin, 35 F. Supp. 2d 148 (D. Mass. 1999) (mag.; refusing to exercise jurisdiction over state tort, statutory debt collection, and UDAP claims, as state claims encompassed three years of collection activities not within FDCPA claim, state claim was made against creditor, and there were unanswered questions of state law under statute; tort claims raised evidentiary issues not presented by FDCPA claims).

78 See § 11.10.3, infra.

79 Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011) (court found that state statute in question bolsters, not undermines, the protections afforded by FDCPA, and plaintiffs were therefore awarded damages under both state statute and FDCPA); Dean v. Compass Receivables Mgmt., Corp., 148 F. Supp. 2d 116 (D. Mass. 2001). See also Leto v. World Recovery Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1897060 (W.D.N.C. Apr. 27, 2015) (awarding $1000 FDCPA damages and $1000 per violation in North Carolina Debt Collection Act damages for attempts to collect discharged debt); Gamboa v. Carruthers, 2010 WL 4823671 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 19, 2010) (awarding maximum statutory damages pursuant to FDCPA and Florida statute; $1000 per statute for deceptive and harassing collection letters); Silva v. Jason Head, P.L.C., 2010 WL 4593704 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 4, 2010) (where conduct violates both FDCPA and Rosenthal Act, consumer may recover one award of up to $1000 statutory damages under each act); Som v. Daniels Law Offices, P.C., 573 F. Supp. 2d 349 (D. Mass. 2008) (FDCPA does not preempt Mass. UDAP statute); Clark v. Universal Debt Solutions, Inc., 2007 WL 2386581 (D. Haw. Aug. 16, 2007) (statutory damages pursuant to both FDCPA and state statute, in addition to actual damages); Cf. Abby v. Paige, 2013 WL 141145, at *10 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 11, 2013) (declining to make second award of "additional damages" under state debt collection law), aff'd, 553 Fed. Appx. 970 (11th Cir. 2014); Hunter v. Oasis Fin. Solutions, L.L.C., 2010 WL 6210035 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2010) (award of maximum statutory damages under both FDCPA and Rosenthal Act not double recovery where collector violated provisions of Rosenthal Act not found in FDCPA), adopted, 2011 WL 997375 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 2011).

80 Albanese v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 301 F. Supp. 2d 389, 392 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (Pennsylvania statute banning cumulative penalties for violations of both that state's Fair Credit Extension Uniformity Act and FDCPA did not prevent debtor from proceeding under both statutes simultaneously, so long as he chose one of the two statutory remedies under which to seek damages); Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 216 F.R.D. 325 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (granting consumer's renewed motion to certify state law counts in addition to FDCPA claims in case involving collection of delinquent water and sewer bills; although consumer could not recover under both state and federal laws, law does not bar consumer from proceeding under both statutes before they choose state or federal remedy).

The likelihood that a federal court will exercise its power to hear a supplemental state claim is ultimately a function of two variables: the extent to which evidence of the state claim intertwines with evidence of the federal claim and the quantity of judicial resources required to handle the supplemental state claim. If these considerations are not adequately answered, supplemental state law claims may be dismissed.[81] Avoiding confusion of the jury is another reason cited to deny exercising supplemental jurisdiction over the consumer's state claims.[82]

When all federal claims are eliminated before trial, the court will generally decline to exercise jurisdiction over any remaining supplemental state law issues.[83] Supplemental claims to an FDCPA claim should be carefully screened so they do not invite or support a debt collection counterclaim by the collector.[84]

11.2.5 Federal Court Joinder of Creditors Subject to State Claims

The doctrine of supplemental jurisdiction over parties has given many federal courts a rationale for exercising supplemental jurisdiction over parties otherwise not subject to the federal claim in the case.[85] Supplemental party jurisdiction gives the court discretion to allow the consumer to join in federal court a creditor not covered by the FDCPA, under a state claim closely related to an FDCPA claim.[86] The most appropriate case for joinder is when the creditor and the debt collector are joint tortfeasors or when there are serious factual disputes over which party committed the violations (with each potential defendant blaming the other), creating the possibility of conflicting decisions if each defendant is tried separately.

Given that the FDCPA generally does not cover creditors collecting in their own name, creditors might claim that Congress intended to exclude them from federal jurisdiction.[87] The legislative history[88] indicates that creditors are generally excluded from the FDCPA only because of the lower incidence of collection abuses among creditors than among debt collectors; even so, creditors are covered under certain circumstances.[89] FDCPA coverage of creditors in some situations is inconsistent with an argument that Congress intended to preclude all federal suits against creditors.

11.3 Mandatory Arbitration of Consumers' Claims

11.3.1 Overview

Creditors, debt buyers, or those collecting on behalf of creditors or debt buyers often seek to thwart a consumer's FDCPA or state claims by attempting to enforce a mandatory arbitration clause found in the credit agreement between the original creditor and the consumer. These clauses require consumers to bring legal claims in private arbitration as opposed to litigation in court.

Consumers suing creditors, debt buyers, and debt collectors are almost always better off keeping an action in court. The arbitration clause often designates the arbitration provider, leaving the consumer with no say in selecting the arbitration forum or the rules to which the arbitration will be subject. Though consumers retain a narrow right to appeal, in general arbitrators need not follow the law, nor even reasonably judge the facts. Arbitrators familiar with commercial arbitration may not be attuned to differences that exist for consumer litigation.

Arbitration clauses—and the arbitration providers they designate—often provide consumer claimants with limited discovery. Arbitration clauses can also include various limits on a consumer's rights to pursue a claim and can also include a clause requiring issues as to a dispute's arbitrability to be determined by the arbitrator. While these limits may be unenforceable, it will require litigation to strike them. Perhaps most significantly for FDCPA claimants, arbitration clauses in consumer credit contracts typically require consumers to arbitrate their claims individually, prohibiting them from bringing class or collective actions in either court or arbitration, and the Supreme Court has ruled that these limits on class actions are enforceable.

This section surveys the arguments consumers can make to defeat a motion to compel arbitration of an FDCPA cause 81 See Appx. E.3.7.3, infra; Randall v. Nelson & Kennard, 2009 WL 2710141 (D. Ariz. Aug. 26, 2009) (court refused to exercise supplemental jurisdiction where it would increase complexity and length of time to resolve FDCPA claim); Wholesale Info. Network, Inc. v. Cash Flow Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 1893343 (W.D. Wash. June 29, 2007) (debt appeared to be FDCPA-exempt commercial debt, so litigating state claim would expend far greater resources than would FDCPA claim); Walker v. Lynn M. Olivier, P.C., 2006 WL 467912, at *2 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 23, 2006) (court refused to hear state claims because they would "substantially expand the scope of this case beyond that necessary and relevant to the federal claims under the FDCPA"). Cf. Malik v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2006 WL 13148 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 3, 2006) (unilaterally dismissing consumer's state law supplemental claims because of judicial inefficiency and comity).

82 E.g., Shaffer v. ER Solutions, 2006 WL 1547755 (E.D. Mich. May 31, 2006).

83 See Lanton v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 793 Fed. Appx. 398 (6th Cir. 2019) (originally, district court refused to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over state claim (breach of contract) after it dismissed federal claims); Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 920 F.3d 1264 (11th Cir. 2019) (same). See also Carnegie-Mellon Univ. v. Cohill, 484 U.S. 343, 350, 108 S. Ct. 1130, 106 L. Ed. 2d 720 (1988); Taylor v. Luper, Sheriff, & Niedenthal, 74 F. Supp. 2d 761 (S.D. Ohio 1999); Johnson v. NCB Collection Services, 799 F. Supp. 1298 (D. Conn. 1992) (settled upon collector's payment of $4000 for consumer to withdraw appeal).

84 See § 12.8, infra.

85 See, e.g., Cannon v. Kelly, 2009 WL 1158695 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 28, 2009) (exercising supplemental jurisdiction over Internet payday lender); Jones v. Vill. of Villa Park, 784 F. Supp. 533 (N.D. Ill. 1992). See also ITT Commercial Fin. v. Unlimited Auto., Inc., 814 F. Supp. 664 (N.D. Ill. 1992).

86 See 28 U.S.C. § 1367(c).

87 See § 4.8.1, supra.

88 S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 2 (1977), reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 169 1696, and at Appx. A.3, infra.

89 See §§ 4.5, 10.4, supra.

of action or state law collection abuse claim. This section also considers strategies consumers ought to pursue if they are unable to resist a motion to compel arbitration—for example, the pursuit of class-wide relief or punitive damages through the arbitration proceeding.

Before discussing these issues in more depth, it is helpful to observe the unique character of consumer arbitration law as applied to debt collection claims. Although there is a federal policy favoring the enforcement of arbitration agreements, arbitration is a creature of private contract, and this purported policy favoring arbitration only applies if there is a binding agreement enforceable by the parties to the lawsuit. But where a debt buyer or debt collector is the defendant, that party will have to seek to enforce an agreement between the consumer and the original creditor, not between the consumer and the debt buyer or debt collector.

As a result, debt collectors and debt buyers face a double hurdle. They must prove their right to enforce the agreement between the original creditor and the consumer. Then they have to show that the arbitration requirement found in the creditor's agreement with the consumer is enforceable. Far more detail on all these subjects is found in NCLC's Consumer Arbitration Agreements,[90] which also contains sample briefs and other key documents.

11.3.2 Defendant Must Produce Arbitration Agreement Binding on the Consumer

Debt buyers and debt collectors wishing to take advantage of the arbitration agreement entered into between the consumer and the creditor have the burden of presenting to the court that actual arbitration agreement. The Federal Arbitration Act does not require arbitration of disputes, but only enforces arbitration agreements that have been validly created. Production of the actual agreement is also essential to determine what parties and disputes are covered by the agreement and whether any aspect of the agreement is unenforceable. A debt buyer or debt collector wishing to force the consumer's lawsuit into arbitration must produce both the arbitration agreement and evidence that the consumer has consented to that specific agreement.[91] At a minimum, this means that there will need to be a factual development of the record; a motion to dismiss should not be entertained, at least until evidence of a binding arbitration agreement is produced.[92]

In Bazemore v. Jefferson Capital Systems, L.L.C.,[93] the Eleventh Circuit concluded that a debt buyer could not compel arbitration of the consumer's FDCPA claims without producing the actual contract entered into by the consumer. It was not enough in that case to produce a declaration from a creditor employee attesting that the consumer had agreed to the credit agreement's terms and conditions, and that the terms and conditions that "would have been sent to" the consumer included an arbitration clause like the sample clause attached to the declaration.[94]

Similarly, it is not enough, for a debt collector to point to a standard form agreement drafted in 2020 when the consumer defaulted in 2018. The standard form agreement must be specifically linked to the consumer. In addition, the standard form agreement must not only be the contract that governs the creditor's transaction with the consumer, but there must also be evidence that the consumer signed the agreement or otherwise assented to it.[95] Furthermore, producing a credit card agreement is not enough to compel arbitration if the plaintiff was the victim of identity theft and did not, themself, assent to the credit agreement or its arbitration clause.[96] In some cases, however, it may be enough for a defendant to introduce testimony that the consumer must have received and assented to the arbitration clause at issue in order to access the underlying credit at a particular time period.[97]

Contracts allegedly formed on a website present particular challenges for a collector to show that there was a binding agreement and that the consumer had assented to particular language.[98] The binding effect of terms indicated on a website is examined in detail at NCLC's Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 4.3.4 (electronic assent) (7th ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

90 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

91 See, e.g., Shoe v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2014 WL 12769220 (W.D. Ky. Apr. 4, 2014); Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (D. Neb. 2012).

92 See Brown v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2110795 (D.N.J. May 24, 2021); Kress v. Cavalry SPV, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1139875 (D.N.J. Mar. 24, 2021); Torres v. Rushmore Serv. Ctr., L.L.C., 2018 WL 5669175 (D.N.J. Oct. 31, 2018).

93 827 F.3d 1325 (11th Cir. 2016).

94 Id. at 1331. See also Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Raney, 93 N.E.3d 724 (Ill. App. Ct. Jan. 4, 2018); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Bordeaux, 147 A.3d 885 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. Sept. 29, 2016). But cf. Danley v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 680 Fed. Appx. 394 (6th Cir. 2017) (sufficient evidence introduced of arbitration agreement).

95 For examples of debt collectors' failures to produce valid arbitration agreements applicable to the consumer-plaintiffs, see Cox v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 12862931 (N.D. Ga. June 11, 2015); Kulig v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6017444 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 13, 2013); Hinten v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5739035 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 22, 2013); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Bordeaux, 147 A.3d 885 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2016). In each of these cases, the defendant-debt collector argued that, even though the form contract it produced was adopted by the creditor after the plaintiff had started using her credit card, the plaintiff had assented to the form contract by continuing to use her card. Both courts held that, without any evidence that the plaintiff had even received the form contract or that she should have reasonably understood that she would assent to it by using her card, the defendant could not prove that she had agreed to arbitrate. But see Hilton v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2016 WL 1253273, at *6 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 31, 2016) (coming to opposite conclusion where plaintiff conceded that agreement to arbitrate existed between parties).

96 See Boran v. Columbia Credit Services, Inc., 2006 WL 3388400 (D. Conn. Nov. 21, 2006).

97 Krulee v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2015 WL 3638546, at *5 (N.D. Cal. June 11, 2015).

98 See, e.g., Gilbert v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 292852 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 28, 2021).

The evidentiary burden of establishing a binding arbitration agreement lies with the defendant seeking to arbitrate. Experience suggests that debt buyers and debt collectors often cannot produce the agreement itself or sufficient evidence of contract formation, such as that the consumer ever received the credit agreement containing the arbitration requirement.[99] It may even be difficult for the originating creditor to do so. At the very least, even if a debt buyer is ultimately able to enforce an arbitration agreement through proof that the consumer assented to it, it will be very difficult to enforce the agreement without discovery into the underlying issue—in other words, courts should not grant a motion to compel arbitration without adequate factual development.[100] More detail on proof of an enforceable contract between a consumer and debt buyer or creditor is found in NCLC's Collection Actions.[101]

11.3.3 Debt Buyer's Right to Enforce the Creditor's Arbitration Agreement

When a debt buyer seeks to force a consumer's debt collection claim into arbitration, the debt buyer has initial hurdles to overcome. The debt buyer must produce the credit agreement binding on the consumer that contains an arbitration requirement, the debt buyer must prove that it has been assigned the credit agreement,[102] and it must prove it has rights to enforce the creditor's arbitration agreement.

These hurdles may be difficult for the debt buyer to overcome. Proof of the arbitration agreement is discussed at § 11.3.2, supra. Debt buyers may not receive the actual contract from the creditor and, after the consumer's action is filed, will have to go back to the creditor and request a copy of the relevant contract.

Debt buyers usually purchase blocks of thousands of accounts at a time, and may be able to produce a purchase agreement for that block of accounts, but not be able to prove that a particular consumer's account at issue is found in that block of accounts,[103] and thus cannot prove that the debt buyer has been assigned the consumer's contract. In addition, the debt buyer being sued may not be the debt buyer who purchased the account from the originating creditor, but instead someone who has purchased the account from another debt buyer, who in turn may have purchased the account from yet another debt buyer. As a result, for the defendant debt buyer to prove it is an assignee taking rights from the original creditor, it must prove an unbroken chain of assignments from the original creditor to the defendant debt buyer. Proof that a debt buyer has been assigned a particular account, and thus can enforce the arbitration agreement as an assignee, is examined in detail at NCLC's Collection Actions.[104]

Even if the debt buyer can prove there has been an assignment, the debt buyer must show that it has been assigned rights under the contract including the arbitration requirement, and not just that the debt buyer has been assigned the right to collect receivables.[105] The right to collect receivables does not provide rights under the contract, and thus no rights under the arbitration agreement.[106] Where the nature of the assignment to a debt buyer is defined in documents never submitted to the court, the debt buyer does not prove it has rights under the arbitration agreement.[107] But assignees may be able to enforce an arbitration agreement if assigned all rights in the credit agreement.[108]

After clearing these hurdles, the debt buyer still must show that it has rights to enforce an arbitration agreement between the consumer and the creditor. Arbitration agreements may specify that they apply to the creditor and to the creditor's assignees and successors, and courts generally find that a debt buyer, as an assignee, can then enforce the arbitration requirement.[109] Even without such language, courts

99 Proctor v. First Premier Corp., 2021 WL 131447 (D.D.C. Jan. 13, 2021).

100 Brown v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2110795 (D.N.J. May 24, 2021); Kress v. Cavalry SPV, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1139875 (D.N.J. Mar. 24, 2021); Torres v. Rushmore Serv. Ctr., L.L.C., 2018 WL 5669175 (D.N.J. Oct. 31, 2018); Pearson v. United Debt Holdings, L.L.C., 123 F. Supp. 3d 1070, 1073 (N.D. Ill. 2015).

101 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions §§ 4.3, 4.5 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

102 See, e.g., Brown v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2110795 (D.N.J. May 24, 2021); Mark v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 1910527, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 27, 2015); Martin v. Cavalry SPV, 2014 WL 1338702 (E.D. Ky. Mar. 21, 2014); Thomas v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2013 WL 4538362 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 27, 2013) (finding insufficient proof of chain of title to plaintiff's debt); Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (D. Neb. 2012); Starr v. Hameroff Law Firm, P.C., 2007 WL 3231988 (D. Ariz. Oct. 31, 2007), adopted, 2008 WL 906822 (D. Ariz. Mar. 31, 2008). Cf. Sweiger v. Calvary Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1940678 (W.D. Pa. May 29, 2012) (debt buyer offered sufficient proof of assignment).

103 See, e.g., Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 894 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (D. Neb. 2012).

104 National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 4.3.4 (5th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See Haston v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 2020 WL 7490231 (W.D. Pa June 7, 2021). Cf. Skinner v. Garry, 2021 WL 2315417 (D. Md. June 7, 2021) (collector failed initially to prove complete chain of ownership, but on submission of additional evidence sufficient proof was provided).

105 Smith v. Cavalry Portfolio Services L.L.C., 2020 WL 7682236 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 26, 2020) (failure to produce contract setting out terms of assignment prevents enforcement of arbitration agreement).

106 Lester v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 3374107 (N.D. Ala. July 11, 2018) (assignment of receivables does not provide rights under contract, such as right to enforce arbitration clause); Pounds v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 851 S.E.2d 423 (N.C. Ct. App. 2020); Spector v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 6438572 (N.C. Ct. App. Nov. 3, 2020).

107 Brown v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2110795 (D.N.J. May 24, 2021); Kress v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1139875 (D.N.J. Mar. 24, 2021); Lance v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 375 F. Supp. 3d 604 (E.D. Pa. 2019).

108 Peterson v Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 6719116 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 16, 2020).

109 See Barbosa v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 981 F.3d 82, 91 (1st Cir. 2020) ("[P]ursuant to the assignment provision and the express assignment of 'all' rights to Barbosa's account in the 'Bill of Sale,' Midland Funding does in fact stand in Barclays' shoes as its assignee and now has all the same rights regarding Barbosa's account as Barclays had when the Cardmember Agreement was formed."); Koch v. Compucredit Corp., 543 F.3d 460 (8th Cir. 2008); Russell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2021 WL 1192580 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2021); Cobb v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 2021 WL 321408 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, often find that assignees can generally enforce an arbitration agreement enforceable by the assignor where the assignee has been assigned all contract rights,[110] and the assignee's agents or affiliate may be able to do so as well.[111]

On the other hand, if an arbitration clause is narrowly drafted not to apply to assignees, then the debt buyer cannot enforce the agreement. For example, when the arbitration clause explicitly states it is between the consumer and "us" (meaning the creditor), courts may find it does not apply to the creditor's assignee.[112] Where the general definitions in a credit agreement apply "us" to the creditor and assignees, but where the arbitration agreement's definition of "us" does not, the more specific provision controls and assignees cannot enforce the arbitration agreement.[113]

11.3.4 Can a Collection Agency or Attorney Enforce the Creditor's Arbitration Agreement?

11.3.4.1 Generally

Third-party collectors and collection attorneys typically do not enter into contracts with the consumer, and thus there will be no arbitration agreement between these parties. Instead, the collector or attorney will seek to piggy-back onto an arbitration agreement between the creditor and consumer.

When the debt collector or attorney is hired by a debt buyer, the first step to prove the defendant's rights under the creditor's arbitration agreement is to show that the debt buyer has rights under that agreement. Whether the debt buyer has rights is examined in the prior subsection.[114] The next step is to determine if the collection agency or attorney has rights under the creditor's arbitration agreement, as examined in the rest of this subsection.

11.3.4.2 Primacy of the Arbitration Agreement's Language

Courts first look to the plain language of the contract and the relationship between the collection agency or attorney and the original creditor to see whether the arbitration agreement extends to cover parties with that relationship to the original creditor.[115] For example, one version of the GE Money Bank arbitration clause stated that it applied to disputes between the consumer and "us," defined as the creditor's parents, subsidiaries, predecessors, successors, assigns, employees, officers, and directors. Since a collection agency did not fall within any of these terms, it could not enforce the collection action.[116]

Another court similarly interpreted Citicorp's arbitration clause, based on South Dakota law (the law specified in Citicorp's credit card agreements). Because the Citicorp arbitration agreement did not explicitly provide for enforcement by agents, but only enforcement by Citicorp for claims relating to its agents, its agents could not enforce the arbitration requirement.[117] Similarly, the Discover Card arbitration provision at one time did not state that it applied to the creditor's agents, and a federal court concluded that this meant the clause did not apply to an action against a collection law firm collecting on a Discover debt.[118]

Other times, an arbitration agreement will state that it only applies to agents where the creditor is being sued at the same time as the agent, and thus does not provide a basis to 2021) (need not be immediate assignee, but can be further down chain of ownership); Hauptman v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 8436961 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2019); Zambrana v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2016 WL 7046820 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 2, 2016); Coleman v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2016 WL 3521939 (N.D. Ill. June 28, 2016); Harris v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2016 WL 475349 (D.N.J. Feb. 8, 2016); Bolanos v. First Investors Servicing Corp., 2010 WL 4457347 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 29, 2010); Webb v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2006 WL 618186 (E.D. Ark. Mar. 10, 2006); Miller v. Northwest Tr. Services, Inc., 2005 WL 1711131 (E.D. Wash. July 20, 2005); Hoefs v. CACV of Colorado, L.L.C., 365 F. Supp. 2d 69 (D. Mass. Mar. 25, 2005).

110 Barbosa v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 981 F.3d 82 (1st Cir. 2020); Morrison v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2529618 (W.D.N.Y. June 21, 2021); Lebovits v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1198967 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2021); Valentine v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 5946975 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 7, 2020); Rosales v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2020 WL 5891387 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 5, 2020); Bowker v Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 5743044 (D.N.J. Sept. 25, 2020); Peterson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 6719116 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 16, 2020). But see Williams v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2020 WL 7480404 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 18, 2020).

111 Barbosa v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 981 F.3d 82 (1st Cir. 2020); Morrison v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2529618 (W.D.N.Y. June 21, 2021); Valentine v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 5946975 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 7, 2020); Bowker v Midland Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 5743044 (D.N.J. Sept. 25, 2020).

112 Jenkins-Brown v. Liberty Acquisitions Servicing L.L.C., 2015 WL 1757220 (D. Or. Apr. 16, 2015); Buford v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 552 F. Supp. 2d 800 (N.D. Ill. 2008). But see Little v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2021 WL 1382257 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 24, 2021); Evans v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1347694 (W.D. Ky. Apr. 10, 2017); Wood v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 12868067 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 1, 2015).

113 Williams v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2020 WL 7480404 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 18, 2020).

114 See § 11.3.3, supra.

115 See Landry v. Transworld Sys. Inc., 149 N.E.3d 781, 788 (Mass. 2020) (collection agency cannot enforce arbitration agreement as creditor's agent where not referenced in arbitration agreement, where consumer is not suing on contract). But see Vasquez. v. National Enter. Systems, Inc., 2021 WL 1399862 (D. N.J. Apr. 14, 2021) (agent could enforce arbitration requirement despite lack of contractual language).

116 Fox v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2010 WL 3420172 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 25, 2010). See also Neal v. Navient Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3779519 (W.D. Mo. Aug. 12, 2019). Cf. Hayes v. Delbert Services Corp., 2015 WL 269483, at *4 (E.D. Va. Jan. 21, 2015), rev'd and remanded on other grounds, 811 F.3d 666 (4th Cir. 2016) (allowing collector to compel arbitration based on language in agreement covering "collection representatives and agents," but not allowing collector to invoke forum selection clause that did not include that language).

117 Saroza v. Client Services, Inc., 2020 WL 948793 (D.N.J. Feb. 27, 2020).

118 Nazar v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2007 WL 2875377 (D. Kan. Oct. 3, 2007). See also Butto v. Collecto Inc., 802 F. Supp. 2d 443 (E.D.N.Y. 2011) (denying arbitration request by non-signatory debt collector for AT&T/Verizon, since disavowal of both agency and control in collection agreements nullified collector's assertion that these agreements could form basis for finding that agency relationship existed). But see Liedtke v. Frank, 437 F. Supp. 2d 696 (N.D. Ohio 2006).

enforce the arbitration agreement when the creditor is not a co-defendant with the agent.[119] The MBNA arbitration agreement at one time explicitly applied to the creditor's "agents" and also applied to "collectors" when such collectors were named as co-defendants in claims against MBNA. While the arbitration clause clearly applied to collectors named as co-defendants,[120] it was ambiguous as to whether this clause applied to debt collectors sued alone, not in conjunction with MBNA, because of their status as MBNA's "agents." Courts resolved this ambiguity by finding that the more specific second condition controlled. Even if collectors were MBNA's agents, collection agencies and collection attorneys were not covered by the arbitration provision unless they were named as co-defendants with MBNA.[121]

A debt collection agency cannot enforce an arbitration agreement that applies only to assignees and not to agents, since the creditor's assignment of the account to the collection agency does not involve assignment of ownership of the account but is an assignment for collection purposes only.[122]

On the other hand, if the arbitration agreement explicitly refers to third parties, courts often find that those parties can enforce an agreement. An arbitration agreement referencing "agents" has been held to include debt collectors[123] and collection attorneys.[124] This may include agents of the creditor's assignee.[125] Similarly, a collector has been able to enforce an arbitration agreement that applies broadly to any other third party involved with servicing related to the credit account.[126] An arbitration clause applying to "anyone connected with us" has been found to apply to a debt collector hired by the creditor,[127] as has a clause applying to "related third parties."[128]

Other arbitration agreements explicitly apply to "affiliates." One federal court found that a clause applying to affiliates covers the creditor's debt collection agency."[129]

Similarly, another federal court has found that where the arbitration agreement applies to affiliates, and where Midland Funding can enforce an arbitration agreement, the same is the case with Midland Credit, because it is an affiliate of Midland Funding.[130] Some courts have even found collection attorneys can enforce an arbitration agreement that provides that arbitration is required as to "any disputes relating in any way to this loan agreement."[131]

11.3.4.3 Is the Collector an Agent

A collection agency or collection attorney can only enforce an arbitration agreement as the agent of the creditor or the creditor's assignee if there is an agency relationship. To shield themselves from liability for a debt collector's misconduct, creditors and debt buyers often state in their contracts with debt collectors that the debt collectors are independent contractors and not agents. In that case, a debt collector should not be able to take advantage of language that an agreement applies to the creditor's agents.[132]

Even without such contractual language in the creditor's agreements with the debt collector, it will be the debt collector's burden of proof to show an agency relationship.[133] Thus, in one case, a federal court has found that the creditor's attorney could not enforce the arbitration agreement, even though the agreement applied to the creditor's agents.[134] In another, a loan servicer could not enforce an agreement, since it was an independent contractor.[135]

To prove agency, the debt collector may have to show that the creditor or debt buyer exercises control over a collector's daily activities.[136] The creditor's right to review the collector's 119 Rizzo v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 2018 WL 851386 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 12, 2018); Leibowitz v. Shindler, 2017 WL 3421530 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 9, 2017); Wood v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 616442, at *2 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 11, 2015) (regarding clause language covering collector only "if you assert a Claim against such other person or company at the same time you assert a Claim against any Bank Party").

120 Feil v. MBNA, 417 F. Supp. 2d 1214 (D. Kan. 2006).

121 Cohen v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2008 WL 4513569 (D.N.J. Oct. 2, 2008); Bontempo v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2006 WL 3040905 (W.D. Pa. Oct. 24, 2006); Karnette v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 444 F. Supp. 2d 640 (E.D. Va. 2006).

122 Koby v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2018 WL 707805 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2018).

123 Barbosa v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 981 F.3d 82 (1st Cir. 2020); Bailey v. Diversified Consultants Inc., 444 F. Supp. 3d 1330, 1335 (N.D. Ala. 2020).

124 Barbosa v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 981 F.3d 82 (1st Cir. 2020); Fedotov v. Peter. T. Roach & Assoc., 2006 WL 692002 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 2006).

125 Morrison v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2529618 (W.D.N.Y. June 21, 2021).

126 Hornicek v. Cardworks Servicing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2623274 (E.D. Pa. June 29, 2011).

127 Lomell v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4695279 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 26, 2019).

128 Roberson v. Plaza Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5542080 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 16, 2020).

129 Bakon v. Rushmore Serv. Ctr., L.L.C., 2017 WL 2414639 (E.D.N.Y. June 2, 2017).

130 Mounts v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 257 F. Supp. 3d 930 (E.D. Tenn. June 28, 2017).

131 Nichelson v. Soeder, 2006 WL 3079109 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 27, 2006); Morrow v. Soeder, 2006 WL 2855024 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2006). See also Schiano v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35606 (D.N.J. Dec. 20. 2005) (collection attorney could enforce arbitration clause based upon broad scope of claims to which agreement covered).

132 Aliff v. Vervent, Inc., 2020 WL 5709197 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2020) (servicing agreement for private student loans explicitly states servicer is independent contractor); Smith v. GC Services L.P., 289 F. Supp. 3d 935 (S.D. Ind. 2018); Butto v. Collection Inc., 845 F. Supp. 2d 491 (E.D.N.Y. 2012), denying motion for reconsideration of ruling in 802 F. Supp. 2d 443 (E.D.N.Y. 2011); Lucy v. Bay Area Credit Services, L.L.C., 792 F. Supp. 2d 320 (D. Conn. 2011). See also Mims v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 803 F. Supp. 2d 1349 (S.D. Fla. 2011).

133 Bultemeyer v. Sys. & Services Tech., Inc., 2012 WL 4458138 (D. Ariz. Sept. 26, 2012).

134 Kimble v. W. Ray Jamieson, P.C., 2018 WL 814225 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 9, 2018).

135 Aliff v. Vervent, Inc., 2020 WL 5709197 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2020).

136 Aliff v. Vervent, Inc., 2020 WL 5709197 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 24, 2020); Butto v. Collection Inc., 845 F. Supp. 2d 491 (E.D.N.Y. 2012), denying motion for reconsideration of ruling in 802 F. Supp. 2d 443 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

communications is not enough to create that control.[137] Nor is an agency relationship created because the collector also temporarily holds funds collected from consumers.[138] Of course, when the consumer admits that the collection agency and collection attorney are agents, and the arbitration clause applies to the creditor's agents or the assignee's agents, then the collection agency and attorney can enforce the arbitration requirement.[139]

11.3.4.4 Collateral Estoppel or Third-Party Beneficiary As Grounds to Enforce Arbitration Requirement

Where the language of an arbitration agreement does not allow debt collectors and collection attorneys to enforce the arbitration requirement, they may try to enforce the arbitration agreement under an equitable estoppel argument. However, courts find this doctrine generally applies only when the consumer has alleged interdependent and concerted misconduct between the creditor (who is a signatory to and can enforce the arbitration requirement) and the non-signatory collection agency.[140] Other courts only find equitable estoppel when the consumer's legal action against the collector in some manner takes advantage of the contract between the consumer and the creditor.[141]

Collectors' third-party beneficiary arguments should confront the same challenges.[142] Thus, a federal court has found no third-party beneficiary status for a collector hired by the creditor's assignee.[143] As a result, when the arbitration agreement lists parties who could enforce the arbitration agreement (including agents and assignees), there is a heavy burden for someone not listed to claim third-party beneficiary status.[144]

11.3.5 Defendant's Waiver of Right to Enforce Arbitration Agreement

11.3.5.1 Waiting Too Long to Enforce Arbitration Agreement

A defendant debt buyer, debt collector, or collection attorney can waive the right to enforce an arbitration agreement by waiting too long in the court litigation to raise the arbitration requirement. By acting inconsistently with a known right, to the consumer's prejudice, the defendant has waived the arbitration requirement.[145] Such may be the case when the defendant first raises the arbitration requirement after extensive discovery, motions to dismiss or summary judgment, or other litigation activity.

11.3.5.2 Refusing to Cooperate in the Arbitration Proceeding

The two major arbitration forums, the American Arbitration Association and JAMS (formerly known as Judicial Arbitration and Mediation Services, Inc.), require that the defendant business pay almost all of the arbitration fees and costs for consumer arbitrations (which can run into many thousands of dollars), with the consumer paying only $200 or $250. When the consumer proceeds to arbitration, the defendant may balk at the high arbitration fees and refuse to pay them or otherwise participate in the arbitration, which may result in AAA or JAMS refusing to proceed to arbitration. The defendant's conduct in thwarting the arbitration procedure may be viewed as a waiver of the arbitration requirement,[146] allowing the consumer to proceed in court.

11.3.5.3 Waiver Based on Prior Collection Lawsuit

Where a collector first avails itself of the court system by bringing a collection action in state court, this may act as a 137 Butto v. Collection Inc., 845 F. Supp. 2d 491 (E.D.N.Y. 2012), denying motion for reconsideration of ruling in 802 F. Supp. 2d 443 (E.D.N.Y. 2011).

138 Id.

139 Hoefs v. CACV of Colo., L.L.C., 365 F. Supp. 2d 69 (D. Mass. 2005).

140 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 5.5.3 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Saroza v. Client Services, Inc., 2020 WL 948793 (D.N.J. Feb. 27, 2020); Neal v. Navient Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3779519 (W.D. Mo. Aug. 12, 2019); Leibowitz v. Shindler, 2017 WL 3421530 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 9, 2017); Adams v. Dell Computer Corp., 2006 WL 2670969 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 18, 2006). Cf. Mims v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 803 F. Supp. 2d 1349 (S.D. Fla. 2011) (claims against collector not based on such conduct). But see Butto v. Collection Inc., 845 F. Supp. 2d 491 (E.D.N.Y. 2012), denying motion for reconsideration of ruling in 802 F. Supp. 2d 443 (E.D.N.Y. 2011) (no such relationship exists between collector and creditor).

141 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 5.5.3 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See Ioane v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 484 F. Supp. 3d 888 (D. Haw. Sept. 4, 2020); Butto v. Collection Inc., 845 F. Supp. 2d 491 (E.D.N.Y. 2012), denying motion for reconsideration of ruling in 802 F. Supp. 2d 443 (E.D.N.Y. 2011); Smith v. GC Services L.P., 289 F. Supp. 3d 935 (S.D. Ind. 2018) (no estoppel where no evidence that plaintiff's claims involved contract); Bultemeyer v. Sys. & Services Tech., Inc., 2012 WL 4458138 (D. Ariz. Sept. 26, 2012) (no equitable estoppel when consumer did not take advantage of contract); Mims v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 803 F. Supp. 2d 1349 (S.D. Fla. 2011) (collecting on debt does not presume existence of contract between creditor and consumer, so equitable estoppel does not apply).

142 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 5.5.4 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Bultemeyer v. Sys. & Services Technologies, Inc., 2012 WL 4458138 (D. Ariz. Sept. 26, 2012); Landry v. Transworld Sys. Inc., 149 N.E.3d 781, 788 (Mass. 2020).

143 Lucy v. Bay Area Credit SVC L.L.C., 792 F. Supp. 2d 320, 325 (D. Conn. 2011); Mims v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 803 F. Supp. 2d 1349 (S.D. Fla. 2011).

144 Mims v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 803 F. Supp. 2d 1349 (S.D Fla. 2011).

145 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreement Ch. 6 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Davi v. White, 795 Fed. Appx. 764 (11th Cir. 2020); Howard v. LVN Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 7130562 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 4, 2020); Schafer Allied Interstate L.L.C., 2020 WL 4457922 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 2, 2020 Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Hilliker, 68 N.E.3d 542 (Ill. App. Ct. 2016

146 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreemen (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

waiver of the collector's right to enforce an arbitration requirement where the consumer later sues the collector. The consumer will have a difficult time arguing for waiver where the consumer's debt collection abuse claims are entirely distinct from the issues in the collector's lawsuit.[147]

However, where an FDCPA claim is directly tied to conduct within the collector's collection action, courts have found waiver of the arbitration requirement.[148] In that case, the creditor has chosen not to use the arbitration process in its collection action and cannot compel the consumer to do so in the consumer's related action. As the Nevada Supreme Court explained: "If the judgment the [debt collector] obtained was the product of fraud or criminal misconduct and is unenforceable for that reason, it would be unfairly prejudicial to the judgment debtor to require arbitration of claims seeking to set that judgment aside, to enjoin its enforcement, and otherwise to remediate its improper entry."[149]

Some courts hold to the contrary.[150] But much of this precedent seems to be grounded on the mistaken view that a party can only waive the right to arbitrate through litigation conduct that occurs within the same proceeding that it seeks to arbitrate. In fact, contractual waiver is also possible. Contractual waiver is different from judicial or litigation waiver. Litigation waiver occurs when a party waives an argument by failing to raise it during the course of that same litigation. Contractual waiver occurs when a party acts inconsistently with a known right; there is no requirement that such waiver occur within the same proceeding as the subsequent attempt to assert such a right. On the other hand, where the arbitration agreement explicitly stated that if the company sues in court, the company did not waive its right to demand arbitration of the consumer's claim, this has been enforced and no waiver was found by the collector's collection lawsuit.[151]

11.3.6 Does the Consumer and the Nature of Consumer's Claims Fall Under the Arbitration Agreement?

Because arbitration is a matter of contract, only disputes that the parties agree must go to arbitration must then go to arbitration. If a claim is outside the scope of disputes covered by the arbitration agreement, the consumer can bring that claim in court. In close cases, courts tend to favor finding that an arbitration agreement must be read carefully to determine what disputes it covers.

For example, some arbitration agreements cover only those disputes that "arise" out of the contract, while others govern disputes that "relate to" or are "connected with" the contract. The consumer's FDCPA claim will be within the scope of general arbitration language such as disputes "arising from or relating to the contract or the relationships which result from the contract" or "related in any way" to the services or agreement with the original creditor.[152] If a FDCPA claim is within the scope of an arbitration clause, then courts find there is no special status for FDCPA claims that allow for them to avoid the arbitration requirement.[153] Arbitration requirements, absent special statutory language, apply to federal statutory claims in the same way that they apply to any other claim.

But courts may find arbitration clauses not to apply to tort claims that are independent of the contract, such as those that arise from a breach of a duty created by law that is generally owed to others, and not just to the contracting parties.[154]

147 Izett v. Crown Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2019 WL 4845575, at *10 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 1, 2019); Davis v. CACH, L.L.C., 2015 WL 913392, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 2, 2015). See also Prasad v. Barclays Bank Delaware, 2020 WL 6083663, at *2 (C.D. Cal. July 29, 2020).

148 Castillo v. Duke Capital, L.L.C., 2021 WL 734951 (D. Utah Feb. 25, 2021); Novic v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 271 F. Supp. 3d 778 (D. Md. 2017); Barbagallo v. Niagara Credit Solutions, Inc., 2012 WL 6478956, at *3 (D. Md. Dec. 4, 2012) (creditor's filing of collection suit contributed to conclusion that creditor waived arbitration of debtor's subsequent unfair debt collection practices suit); Cain v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 156 A.3d 807 (Md. 2017); Principal Investments, Inc. v. Harrison, 366 P.3d 688 (Nev. 2016); Levonas v. Regency Heritage Nursing & Rehab. Ctr., L.L.C., 2013 WL 4554509 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. Aug. 29, 2013) (nursing home's filing of suit on its arbitrable collection claims contributed to conclusion that nursing home waived arbitration of wrongful death suit subsequently filed against it); Am. Gen. Fin. v. Griffin, 2013 WL 3422900, at *7 (Ohio Ct. App. July 3, 2013) (lender's filing of suit on its arbitrable collection claims contributed to conclusion that lender waived arbitration of class counterclaims); Nelson v. Liberty Acquisitions Servicing, L.L.C., 374 P.3d 27 (Utah Ct. App. 2016).

149 Principal Investments v. Harrison, 366 P.3d 688, 697 (Nev. 2016).

150 Spencer v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2016 WL 8677216 (D. Or. Oct. 21, 2016); Garcia v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co. of Mich., 2014 WL 1746522, at *6 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 30, 2014) (collecting cases); Wiese v. Cach, L.L.C., 358 P.3d 1213, 1221 (Wash. Ct. App. 2015). Cf. Castellanos v. Mariner Fin., L.L.C., 2018 WL 488725 (D. Md. Jan. 19, 2018) (arbitration agreement did not apply to cases brought in small claims court, which is where collector had filed its collection case).

151 Reifenberger v. Autovest L.L.C., 2021 WL 212237 (D. Utah Jan. 21, 2021)

152 Russell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2021 WL 1192580 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2021); Lebovits v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1198967 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2021); Nettles v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2021 WL 1193165 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 3, 2021); Little v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2021 WL 1382257 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 24, 2021); Bailey v. Diversified Consultants Inc., 444 F. Supp. 3d 1330, 1335 (N.D. Ala. 2020); Cabrales v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 6145110 (N.D. Tex. Oct. 7, 2020); Brown v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 5117975 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 31, 2020); Fuller v. Rozlin Fin. Group, Inc., 2020 WL 5036215 (D.N.J. Aug. 26, 2020); Felix v. Richard D. London & Assoc., 2020 WL 4933632 (D. Md. Aug. 24, 2020); Bowles v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2016 WL 775786, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 24, 2016); Eaton v. AD Astra Recovery Services, Inc., 80 F. Supp. 3d 973, 979 (E.D. Mo. 2015); Hagy v. Demers & Adams, L.L.C., 2012 WL 359577 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 2, 2012). For a discussion of the issue and the cases on both sides, see Delgado v. Progress Fin. Co., 2014 WL 1756282 (E.D. Cal. May 1, 2014).

153 See Snyder v. CACH, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6662675 (D. Haw. Nov. 10, 2016).

154 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements Ch. 5 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also King Motor Co. v. Jones, 901 So. 2d 1017 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2005) (invasion of privacy claim not covered by arbitration clause); Green Tree Servicing Corp. v. Fisher, 162 P.3d 944 (Okla. Civ. App. 2007); Chassereau v. Global-Sun Pools, Inc., 611 S.E.2d 305 (S.C. Ct. App. 2005). Cf. Jones v. Halliburton, Inc., 625 F. Supp. 2d 339 (S.D. Tex.

Similarly, a federal court has found that an arbitration agreement covering disputes concerning an account does not apply to debt collection practices.[155]

On the other hand, a court has found an arbitration clause to apply to a collection dispute when the clause applies to "collection of amounts" owed in connection with the account.[156]

An arbitration requirement may not apply to an individual's claim against a collector where the individual is not a party to the original credit agreement. For example, where only one spouse has signed a credit agreement, the other spouse is not subject to the credit agreement and not bound by the arbitration clause when subjected to debt harassment.[157] The defendant's estoppel and third-party beneficiary arguments to cover non-signatories generally will not be successful.[158]

11.3.7 Effect of Judgment in Prior Collection Action

The merger doctrine generally provides that, upon entry of a judgment, a plaintiff's claims against a defendant are merged into the judgment. This means that when there is a judgment in a breach of contract collection action, at least certain of the collector's rights under the contract cease. But courts generally find that the arbitration provision in the contract survives, even though other aspects of the contract (such as the obligation to pay money) is merged into the judgment.[159]

Whether the prior collection action in court waives the collector's right to enforce the arbitration agreement is examined in § 11.3.5.3, supra. Another question is whether the collector has admitted in a state court collection action that there is no binding agreement, so that it is judicially estopped later from arguing that there is a binding contract including an arbitration requirement. But the mere failure to prove a contract may not be enough to estop the collector, unless the court ruled there was no binding contract.[160]

11.3.8 Congress Overrides CFPB Rule Restricting Arbitration of Class Actions

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) was granted authority to issue a rule limiting consumer arbitration agreements involving consumer financial products and services after it conducted a study of arbitration agreements.[161] The CFPB completed its study in 2015 and submitted a lengthy report to Congress.[162]

In July 2017, the CFPB issued its long-awaited final rule limiting the effect of mandatory arbitration agreements involving specified consumer financial products and services.[163] The rule prohibited financial services providers from using an arbitration agreement that prevents consumers from filing or participating in a class action.[164] It would have applied to arbitration agreements entered into on or after March 19, 2018.

However, the rule never went into effect because Congress, pursuant to the Congressional Review Act,[165] enacted a law signed by the President that repealed the rule.[166] Under the Congressional Review Act, not only is the rule repealed, but the CFPB is prohibited from reissuing the rule or a new rule in substantially the same form unless specifically authorized by Congress.[167]

11.3.9 Federal Law Prohibits Mandatory Arbitration in Mortgage Loans

The Truth in Lending Act (TILA) prohibits contract terms requiring the arbitration of disputes involving closed-end loans secured by a dwelling and open-end loans secured by a consumer's principal dwelling.[168] This TILA provision also provides that no other provision of such loans shall "bar a consumer from bringing an action" in court.[169] TILA's Regulation 2008) (various tort claims not arbitrable, including intentional infliction of emotional distress); Runion v. Am. Gen. Fin. Services, Inc., 2008 WL 2468573 (Ohio Ct. App. June 20, 2008) (tort claim for destruction of property after foreclosure unrelated to mortgage document); Coleman v. Am. Gen. Fin. Services, Inc., 2008 WL 8030039 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 27, 2008) (tort claim for failure to file termination statement unrelated to loan agreement). But see Koch v. Compucredit Corp., 543 F.3d 460 (8th Cir. 2008); Bolanos v. First Investors Servicing Corp., 2010 WL 4457347 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 29, 2010); Fedotov v. Peter. T. Roach & Assoc., 2006 WL 692002 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 2006); Webb v. MBNA Am. Bank, 2006 WL 618186 (E.D. Ark. Mar. 10, 2006); Pridgen v. Green Tree Fin. Servicing Corp., 88 F. Supp. 2d 655 (S.D. Miss. 2000); Hawkins v. O'Brien, 2009 WL 50616 (Ohio Ct. App. Jan. 9, 2009).

155 Jenkins-Brown v. Liberty Acquisitions Servicing L.L.C., 2015 WL 1757220 (D. Or. Apr. 16, 2015).

156 Hornicek v. Cardworks Servicing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2623274 (E.D. Pa. June 29, 2011).

157 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 4.3.6 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Johnson v. Westlake Portfolio Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 5526386 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 15, 2020).

158 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Johnson v. Westlake Portfolio Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 5526386 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 15, 2020).

159 See, e.g., Morrison v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2021 WL 2529618 (W.D.N.Y. June 21, 2021); Valentine v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 5946975 (N.D. Ill. Oct, 7, 2020).

160 See Nettles v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2021 WL 1193165 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 3, 2021) (no judicial estoppel where collector did not allege contract in prior action, but claimed an account stated); Valentine v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2020 WL 5946975 (N.D. Ill. Oct, 7, 2020) (no judicial estoppel where collector did not allege contract in prior action, but claimed account stated).

161 12 U.S.C. § 5518.

162 CFPB, Arbitration Study: Report to Congress, Pursuant to Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act § 1028(a) (Mar. 2015), available at www.consumerfinance.gov.

163 82 Fed. Reg. 33,210 (July 19, 2017).

164 12 C.F.R. § 1040.4(a).

165 5 U.S.C. § 801, et seq.

166 Pub. L. No. 115-74 (Nov. 1, 2017).

167 See 5 U.S.C. § 801(b)(2).

168 15 U.S.C. § 1639c(e)(1).

169 15 U.S.C. § 1639c(e)(3).

Z implements this provision, effective June 1, 2013.[170] Because federal law limits a creditor's ability to enforce arbitration concerning a mortgage loan, debt collectors, debt buyers, and collection attorneys cannot do so either where they are relying on the creditor's arbitration agreement found in a mortgage loan.

TILA contains two different prohibitions on mortgage loan arbitration clauses, and Regulation Z does as well. One provision, found at 15 U.S.C. § 1639c(e)(1),[171] provides that mortgages shall not "include" terms which require arbitration. A second provision, found at 15 U.S.C. § 1639c(e)(3),[172] provides that no mortgage provision shall be "applied" to prevent a consumer from bringing a federal cause of action.

Use of the term "applied" implies that arbitration clauses found in mortgages executed prior to the statute's effective date should not be applied to force arbitration of claims brought after the statute's effective date. The distinction between the two provisions is accentuated by the fact that section 1639c(e)(3) prohibits application of an arbitration requirement to federal, but not state claims, while section 1639c(e)(1) prohibits inclusion of a clause that requires arbitration of either federal or state claims.[173]

Importantly, 15 U.S.C. § 1639c(e)(3) also provides that "no other agreement between the consumer and the creditor relating to the residential mortgage loan . . . referred to in paragraph (1), shall be applied or interpreted so as to bar a consumer from bringing an action in an appropriate district court of the United States . . . for damages or other relief in connection with any alleged violation of this section, any other provision of this subchapter, or any other Federal law." As a result, an arbitration agreement found not only in the mortgage loan, but also in an agreement relating to the mortgage loan, is not binding on a consumer bringing a federal claim, such as an FDCPA claim. Even a third-party payment processor that processes the consumer's mortgage payments cannot enforce an arbitration requirement where the consumer brings an FDCPA claim against the processor or the processor's debt collector.[174]

11.3.10 No Mandatory Arbitration Where Debt Incurred by Active-Duty Military Personnel or Their Dependents

The Talent-Nelson Military Lending Act prohibits creditors from enforcing mandatory arbitration agreements in certain types of consumer credit contracts against those who, at the time the agreement is made, were active -duty military personnel or their dependents.[175] An arbitration requirement is unenforceable, even if the consumer is no longer a servicemember or a dependent of a servicemember, so long as the consumer was covered by the Act when the credit was originated.[176] As a result, debt collectors, debt buyers, and collection attorneys cannot rely on the creditor's arbitration requirement where it has been made unenforceable by the Talent-Nelson Military Lending Act.

The Act also provides that creditors cannot extend consumer credit which requires that the borrower submit to arbitration.[177] Thus, the Act both prohibits the inclusion of an arbitration requirement in the credit agreement and renders any included arbitration requirement unenforceable. Department of Defense interpretations of the Act provide that credit agreements are allowed to include an arbitration agreement so long as the agreement contains a savings clause that excludes the agreement's application to servicemembers or their dependents.[178]

The Talent-Nelson Military Lending Act does not apply to residential mortgages[179] or purchase money automobile loans, or other purchase money personal property loans.[180] The Act also delegates to the Department of Defense authority to define what consumer credit contracts are covered by the Act.[181] In 2015, the Department of Defense amended its regulations to broaden significantly the scope of "consumer credit" covered by the Act's prohibitions, including the prohibition on the enforcement of arbitration requirements.[182] The prohibition on arbitration now applies to almost all forms of credit within the scope of the Truth In Lending Act when offered to servicemembers or their dependents, except for residential mortgages

170 12 C.F.R. § 1026.36(h), as amended by 78 Fed. Reg. 11,279, 11,413 (Feb. 15, 2013).

171 See also 12 C.F.R. § 1026.36(h)(1).

172 See also 12 C.F.R. § 1026.36(h)(2).

173 But see Weller v. HSBC Mortg. Services, Inc., 2013 WL 4882758 (D. Colo. Sept. 11, 2013) (court fails to notice this difference in language). For a discussion of the retroactive date of the TILA provisions to mortgage loans prior to June 1, 2013, see generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

174 Thomas-Lawson v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2021 WL 1253578, at *1 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 5, 2021); Attix v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5757624, at *9 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 16, 2020).

175 See 10 U.S.C. § 987(f)(4) ("Arbitration. Notwithstanding section 2 of title 9 [9 U.S.C. § 2], or any other Federal or State law, rule, or regulation, no agreement to arbitrate any dispute involving the extension of consumer credit shall be enforceable against any covered member or dependent of such a member, or any person who was a covered member or dependent of that member when the agreement was made.").

176 See 10 U.S.C. § 987(f)(4).

177 10 U.S.C. § 987(e)(3).

178 See 81 Fed. Reg. 58,840, 58,844 (Aug. 18, 2016).

179 10 U.S.C. § 987(i)(6)(A).

180 See 10 U.S.C. § 987(i)(6)(B); Goodwin v. H.M. Brown & Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 820025, at *9 (D. Colo. Mar. 2, 2011). See also Beard v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2012 WL 1292576 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 16, 2012) (Act does not prohibit enforcement of arbitration clause or class action ban provision in car loan modification agreement), adopted, 2012 WL 1576103 (E.D. Cal. May 3, 2012).

181 10 U.S.C. § 987(h)(2)(D), (i)(6).

182 80 Fed. Reg. 43,559 (July 22, 2015).

and purchase money loans. Notably the coverage now includes credit cards and other forms of open-end credit.

The changes to the regulation broadening the scope of covered credit were effective October 3, 2016, for closed-end credit and effective for credit cards and other open-end credit October 3, 2017.[183]

The Act now applies to most types of open and closed-end credit, including:

- All payday loans, automobile title loans, and refund anticipation loans, even those structured to avoid the former Department of Defense regulations;
- Installment loans (as opposed to retail installment loans);
- Any non-purchase money loan secured by the consumer's automobile;
- Private student loans;
- Loans on the consumer's future income stream;
- Credit cards;
- Certain overdraft loans;[184]
- Any form of tax-time credit;
- Purchase money loans when the amount of credit extended exceeds the amount needed to purchase the goods;[185] and
- Any other form of consumer credit besides home mortgages and purchase money loans.

11.3.11 Unavailability of the Sole Arbitration Provider?

Arbitration clauses in credit agreements typically specify one or two arbitration providers, such as the American Arbitration Association (AAA) or JAMS. Until a law enforcement action ended its ability to conduct consumer arbitrations in 2009, the National Arbitration Forum (NAF) was the preferred provider for many creditors.[186]

There are any number of other reasons why an arbitration provider may be unavailable to administer an arbitration. For example, AAA will not conduct arbitrations where the business has not registered its arbitration agreement with the AAA and the agreement meets certain consumer due process protocols. Both AAA and JAMS will not arbitrate disputes where the business does not pay upfront large filling and other fees.

A significant number of courts have ruled that, when an arbitration agreement designates an arbitration forum as the sole designated arbitration forum, then this is grounds to throw out the arbitration requirement if the selection of the forum is integral to the agreement and not ancillary.[187] If integral, the arbitration agreement cannot be fulfilled according to its terms. If a court were to rule otherwise, the court would have to select the arbitrator if the parties cannot agree on one, because the designated arbitration provider will not do so.[188]

11.3.12 Other Grounds to Challenge the Arbitration Clause's Enforceability

In addition to challenges to an arbitration requirement set out earlier in this section, there are a number of other grounds to attack an arbitration requirement. The Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) finds arbitration clauses to be enforceable "save upon such grounds as exist at law or equity for the revocation of any contract."[189] One such ground to revoke any contract is unconscionability, and hundreds of decisions have found arbitration clauses unenforceable on this ground.[190]

The unconscionability claim will typically rest on both procedural and substantive unconscionability. The procedural aspects may include a take-it-or-leave-it adhesion contract when most other competitors also require mandatory arbitration, or when the arbitration requirement is concealed from the consumer in some fashion. Substantive unconscionability may involve the arbitral forum not offering the same relief as available in court, such as limiting punitive, treble or consequential damages, restricting attorney fees for prevailing consumers, shortening the statute of limitations, or requiring excessive and unaffordable fees and costs. Other aspects of substantive unconscionability might be that the clause has the practical effect of requiring only the consumer and not the creditor to arbitrate claims, requiring an inconvenient venue, or requiring that the arbitration proceeding be kept secret.

In addition to state unconscionability law, the federal "effective vindication" doctrine is also a ground for striking down a clause that prevents the plaintiff from effectively vindicating their rights under federal law.[191] If the provisions of an arbitration agreement prevent effective vindication of an FDCPA claim, the provisions are open to challenge. The doctrine of effective vindication may be more forgiving than unconscionability challenges, because it does not require procedural unconscionability.

One provision that is not open to challenge under either an unconscionability or effective vindication theory is a provision banning class arbitration. The Supreme Court has ruled that individual, not class arbitration is fundamental to the nature of FAA arbitration, and that this trumps any challenge to the class arbitration ban.[192]

183 Id.

184 See 81 Fed. Reg. 58,840 (Aug. 18, 2016) (discussing which overdraft loans are covered).

185 See 81 Fed. Reg. 58,840, 58,841 (Aug. 18, 2016).

186 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements Ch. 9 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

187 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements Ch. 8 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

188 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements Ch. 8 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

189 9 U.S.C. § 2.

190 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 8.5 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See, e.g., Dunn v. Glob. Tr. Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 7260771 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 10, 2020).

191 Hayes v. Delbert Services Corp., 811 F.3d 666, 673 (4th Cir. 2016) ("This arbitration agreement fails for the fundamental reason that it purports to renounce wholesale the application of any federal law to the plaintiffs' federal claims.").

192 Am. Express Co. v. Italian Colors Rest., 570 U.S. 228, 133 S. Ct. 2304, 186 L. Ed. 2d 417 (2013); AT&T Mobility L.L.C. v. Concepcion, 563 U.S. 333, 131 S. Ct. 1740, 179 L. Ed. 2d 742 (2011).

Another limitation to both the unconscionability and effective vindication doctrines is that a court, once it determines that an arbitration provision is improper, must then fashion an effective remedy. One option is to find the whole arbitration clause unenforceable, but another option is to strip the offending provision and enforce the rest of the arbitration clause.[193]

Misrepresentation as to the nature of the arbitration clause (not the contract as a whole) is also grounds to find an arbitration clause unenforceable.[194] Fraud in the factum, duress, and infancy in the creation of the contract as a whole are all grounds to revoke the arbitration agreement, as well.[195] These and additional bases for an arbitration clause to be unenforceable are detailed in National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

11.3.13 Does the Court or Arbitrator Decide the Challenge to the Arbitration Requirement?

In any challenge to an arbitration agreement, a preliminary issue is who decides the challenge, the court or the arbitrator. The Supreme Court has ruled that issues of enforceability are for the court unless there is a "delegation" clause giving the arbitrator authority to decide issues of enforceability of the arbitration agreement.[196] Even if there is such a delegation clause, the issue is still for the court if the consumer's challenge is whether an arbitration agreement was ever consummated.

Otherwise, if there is a delegation clause, the consumer cannot initially bring a court challenge to the arbitration agreement as a whole, but instead must first attack the delegation clause. After a court finds a delegation clause unenforceable, and only then, will the court hear a challenge to the arbitration requirement itself.[197]

For example, when there is a delegation clause, do not initially attack the arbitration requirement as being too costly. Instead, attack the delegation clause, arguing that the arbitrator, who is the beneficiary of the high cost, should not be deciding whether the cost is too high. Instead of initially arguing that the collector cannot enforce an arbitration requirement, first argue that the collector cannot enforce the delegation clause.

11.3.14 Bringing an Individual Case in Arbitration

While consumers typically are better off bringing a FDCPA or other debt collection harassment case before a court, rather than an arbitrator, sometimes there is no choice—either the arbitration clause is enforceable or it is impractical to draw out the litigation by challenging the requirement's enforceability. In that case, proper client representation may require that the case proceed in arbitration.

Practitioners report excellent results if the case if brought before the right arbitrator. A chapter offering advice on proceeding in individual arbitration is found at NCLC's Consumer Arbitration Agreements Chapter 9 (7th ed. 2015), updated at www.nclc.org/library. Advice is presented on selecting the arbitration forum and arbitrator, understanding arbitration forum rules and fees, options where the defendant does not pay its fees, the importance of the preliminary hearing, setting the scope of discovery, preliminary motions, putting on the case, post-hearing briefs, and confirming the arbitration award.

11.3.15 Punitive Damages in Arbitration

When a debt harassment case is forced into arbitration, and the facts are egregious, a consumer should not shy away from pursuing punitive damages. Typically, neither an arbitration agreement nor the rules of an arbitration service provider will limit the availability of punitive damages. (If there is such a limitation, this may be grounds to find the arbitration requirement unenforceable.[198])

There are many reasons why a consumer may wish to avoid arbitration,[199] and an arbitrator is far less likely than a jury to award punitive damages. Nevertheless, once an arbitrator has awarded punitive damages, there will be very limited court review of such an award, and the award is far more likely to remain intact than one issued by a jury.[200]

A good example is a case in which the Eighth Circuit upheld an arbitrator's $6 million punitive damages award against a collector found liable on various tort claims and FDCPA violations.[201] There is an extremely high standard to overrule an arbitration award, and the Eighth Circuit found no basis to do so. Moreover, most courts find that there is no due process review of an arbitrator's punitive damages award, because there is no state action. Having selected the private arbitration procedure, the defendant is in no position to claim the process is unconstitutional.[202]

193 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 8.8.2 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Hunter v. Kaiser Found. Health Plan, Inc., 434 F. Supp. 3d 764 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (severing unconscionable provisions and enforcing the agreement).

194 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 4.3.7 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

195 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 4.3.7 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

196 Rent-A-Center, West, Inc. v. Jackson, 561 U.S. 63, 130 S. Ct. 2772, 177 L. Ed. 2d 403 (2010).

197 See Green v. G. Reynolds Sims & Assoc., 2013 WL 1212775 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 25, 2013).

198 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 8.7.6.2.2 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

199 See generally § 11.3, supra.

200 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 9.11 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

201 Stark v. Sandberg, Phoenix & Von Gontard, Prof'l Corp., 381 F.3d 793 (8th Cir. 2004).

202 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 11.7.6 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

11.3.16 Class Arbitration

The 2011 Supreme Court decision in Concepcion has made class arbitration much less available to consumers, by allowing businesses to require consumers to give up their right to join in a class action either in court or in arbitration.[203] Concepcion holds that the Federal Arbitration Act preempts a state rule that an arbitration clause's ban on class arbitration is unconscionable. This problem was compounded by the Supreme Court's subsequent decision in Italian Colors, which holds that a ban on class arbitration (otherwise known as a class waiver) is enforceable even if it prevents claimants from effectively vindicating their federal statutory rights, such as because the costs of litigation far outweigh any recovery in an individual action.[204]

As a result, a large percentage of credit contracts include requirements that debtors arbitrate disputes individually, thereby foreclosing class litigation and class arbitration. Faced with an agreement that specifically prohibits class arbitration, no arbitrator will allow class arbitration to proceed. Thus, class arbitration will become virtually impossible in the majority of consumer contracts that explicitly prohibit class arbitration. Instead, the better approach will be to argue that the arbitration agreement is unenforceable on some other grounds, and then to bring the class action in court.

However, when debt buyers or collectors seek to enforce consumer contracts that do not expressly state whether class arbitration is allowed, consumers can seek a construction of the arbitration agreement that class arbitration was within the parties' original intent. In Oxford Health Plans v. Sutter, the Court clarified that, as with any contract, whether class arbitration is allowed depends on what the parties intended in their agreement.[205] Oxford holds that, when an arbitrator construes a contract as allowing class arbitration, a reviewing court should almost never vacate such a ruling. As a result, in a significant number of cases, arbitrators have construed otherwise silent arbitration clauses as allowing class arbitration.

The determination must be made as to the parties' intent; it cannot be based upon policy considerations.[206] In 2019, the Supreme Court further found that where a court finds the parties' intent to be ambiguous, it cannot rule in favor of class arbitration on the basis that contracts are to be construed against the drafter. Instead, there must be some affirmative contractual basis for concluding that the parties' intent is to allow class arbitration. Nevertheless, the Court leaves open the possibility that a contract can be interpreted that the parties' intent is to allow class arbitration.[207]

Courts, at the moment, reach different results as to who determines the parties' intent as to class arbitration—the court or the arbitrator. But where the arbitration agreement delegates to the arbitrator issues of the agreement's enforceability, it may be the arbitrator that determines the parties' intent.[208]

11.4 Evaluating Cases

11.4.1 Overview

The FDCPA's purpose is to protect consumers from collection misconduct and resulting injuries. If the Act is to continue to accomplish its purpose, counsel and consumers bringing FDCPA claims as private attorneys general should keep in mind the public interest embodied in the statute as well as their own claims. It may be important for counsel to discuss with clients the possible effect of an individual case on the development of the law construing the Act.

Collectors' protestations that some consumers' suits are based on technical claims should be met with explanations of the protective purpose of the FDCPA provisions involved in the case and illustrations of how the consumer was, in fact, harmed by the violation. Such injury should be used as a rejoinder to the claim that the violation was merely technical.[209]

Cases raising close issues of law or fact or coming before an unsympathetic judge should be settled, if possible, before there is an opportunity for an unfavorable construction of the Act, and adverse decisions in marginal cases should rarely, if ever, be appealed. Awards in FDCPA cases are noted at Appendix E, infra.[210]

11.4.2 Considerations Concerning Remedies

11.4.2.1 Increasing FDCPA Individual Awards

With the passage of time since the enactment of the FDCPA, it has become more important to explore the possibility of developing and recovering actual damages for harm suffered by a consumer as a result of an FDCPA violation. In addition to the requirement of concrete harm for Article III standing in federal court discussed at § 11.15, infra, the real value of statutory damages under the FDCPA has declined substantially since its enactment. The $1000 ceiling in individual actions and the $500,000 ceiling in class actions have remained unchanged since 1977.

One strategy to increase FDCPA awards in individual actions is to focus on cases that involve egregious debt

203 AT&T Mobility L.L.C. v. Concepcion, 563 U.S. 333, 131 S. Ct. 1740, 179 L. Ed. 2d 742 (2011).

204 Am. Express v. Italian Colors Rest., 570 U.S. 228, 133 S. Ct. 2304, 186 L. Ed. 2d 417 (2013). See also Shetiwy v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 959 F. Supp. 2d 469, 474 (S.D.N.Y. 2013) (arbitration agreements enforceable even if costs of individual arbitration relative to potential award prevent consumers from effectively vindicating their rights under FDCPA).

205 Oxford Health Plans, L.L.C. v. Sutter, 569 U.S. 564, 133 S. Ct. 2064, 186 L. Ed. 2d 113 (2013).

206 Stolt-Nielsen S.A. v. AnimalFeeds Int'l Corp., 559 U.S. 662, 130 S. Ct. 1758, 176 L. Ed. 2d 605 (2010).

207 Lamps Plus, Inc. v. Varela, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1407, 203 L. Ed. 2d 636 (2019).

208 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Arbitration Agreements § 8.3 (8th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

209 See § 11.15, infra, on the importance of concrete harm for Article III standing.

210 See Appx. E.3.1, E.3.2, E.3.3.3, infra.

collector abuse or harassment and the resulting significant consumer injury, including emotional distress.[211] An award of punitive damages in such cases pursuant to a state law claim will further enhance the consumer's recovery.[212]

Another strategy is to focus on cases with overcharges and seek those overcharges as actual damages[213] or disgorgement[214] in a class action. A payment made by a debtor as a result of an act that violated the FDCPA may be considered actual damages, without regard to whether the debt was in fact owed.[215] Another possibility to produce a sizeable actual damages award is bringing an FDCPA case alleging litigation misconduct by a debt buyer or other collector in bringing a prior collection action against the consumer or a class of consumers. The consumer's actual damages may include the attorney fees the consumer had to expend to prevail in the collection action or other costs to defend the suit.[216]

11.4.2.2 Class Actions Seeking FDCPA Damages

The FDCPA expressly provides for class-wide statutory damages "without regard to a minimum individual recovery"[217] and the number of class actions under the FDCPA for both actual and statutory has been growing.[218] The increasing numbers of very large interstate debt collection agencies and collection law firms has stimulated an increase in FDCPA class actions for damages, because such firms often have substantial net worth, leading to the possibility of increased recoveries. Class actions may benefit many debtors who otherwise would be unaware that their rights had been violated or unable to obtain representation. Courts which might view individual FDCPA cases as unimportant may view FDCPA class actions as more worthwhile. There is no limit on the amount of actual damages that can be recovered in FDCPA class actions, plus statutory damages may be awarded; however, statutory damages may not exceed the lesser of $500,000 or one percent of the collector's net worth.[219]

Class actions may be appropriate even when class members' recoveries are not large, and even where the class award is less than may feasibly be distributed to the class members. The primary relief may be a declaratory judgment[220] and the damages' recovery may be the basis for a cy pres distribution to a nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting justice for vulnerable consumers.[221] However, such a cy pres award must still provide benefits to class members, as the Ninth Circuit highlighted in Koby v. ARS National Services, Inc.,[222] when it concluded that the proposed injunctive relief and cy pres award in a class settlement failed to provide such benefits.

Class actions under the FDCPA are treated in depth at § 11.11, infra.

11.4.2.3 Bringing a Class Action Seeking Declaratory or Injunctive Relief

Limiting class relief to declaratory or injunctive relief, where available under either the FDCPA or state law,[223] may be the best choice in some cases, such as actions against undercapitalized, rogue debt collectors.[224] The proof needed to establish a class-wide declaratory judgment is likely to be much the same as the proof needed to obtain a monetary recovery for an individual plaintiff, thus requiring few additional resources.

Class equitable relief extends the FDCPA's remedial purposes to the entire community by providing a strong incentive for the collector to alter its practices to conform to the FDCPA. Courts have been more willing to award greater compensation for the consumer's attorney fees in cases in which there is class-wide relief.

Nevertheless, it may be difficult to obtain injunctive relief through an FDCPA class action, because the predominant view is that such relief is not available under the FDCPA.[225] While this view is subject to criticism, it may be easier to seek

211 See § 11.8.2, infra.

212 See § 11.10, Chs. 15, 16, infra.

213 See § 7.2.2, supra.

214 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 17.4.4 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 11.8.5.2 (7th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

215 See, e.g., Hamid v. Stock & Grimes, L.L.P., 876 F. Supp. 2d 500, 503 (E.D. Pa. 2012) ("If her payment was not a proper element of actual damages under the FDCPA, a debt collector could harass a debtor in violation of the FDCPA, as a result of that harassment collect the debt, and thereafter retain what it collected. We do not believe that Congress intended this result."). Accord Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group L.L.C., 962 F. Supp. 2d 1188, 1198 (E.D. Cal. 2013). See also Villanueva v. Account Discovery Sys., L.L.C., 77 F. Supp. 3d 1058 (D. Colo. 2015) (default judgment awarded plaintiff $1000 for emotional distress, and $150 to compensate for out-of-pocket expenses: $115 that defendant withdrew from plaintiff's bank account and $35 overdraft fee that caused); In re Lord, 270 B.R. 787, 799 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1998).

216 See, e.g., Moore v. Wells Fargo Bank, 908 F.3d 1050 (7th Cir. 2018) (attorney fees can be actual damages if caused by violation); Hinderliter v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, Inc., 2013 WL 3833982 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 24, 2013) (awarding actual damages of $1880 in attorney fees and costs for defending time-barred state court action plus $3540 for emotional distress).

217 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692k(a)(2)(B), 1692k(b)(2).

218 See Appx. E.3.2, E.3.4, infra.

219 See § 11.11.3.1, infra.

220 See § 11.12.1, infra.

221 See also Zimmerman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 1245552, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 2013); O'Connor v. AR Res., Inc., 2012 WL 12743, at *1 (D. Conn. Jan. 4, 2012) (approving settlement including cy pres payments to the National Consumer Law Center and the National Association of Consumer Advocates); Garland v. Cohen & Krassner, 2011 WL 6010211, at *15 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 29, 2011) (ordering that, after ninety days, uncashed settlement funds would be distributed as cy pres award to National Consumer Law Center). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.6.2.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

Author's disclaimer: NCLC has been a recipient of cy pres awards, which has enabled NCLC to continue providing services to those offering legal services for low-income individuals. For more on cy pres awards, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 14.7 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

222 846 F.3d 1071 (9th Cir. 2017).

223 See §§ 11.12, 16.7, infra.

224 See Gammon v. GC Services L.P., 162 F.R.D. 313 (N.D. Ill. 1995).

225 See § 11.12.2, infra.

declaratory relief,[226] or join state law claims that provide for equitable relief.[227] The procedural requirements for a class action seeking equitable relief are discussed at § 11.11.2.3.3, infra.

11.4.3 A Wide Range of Parties May Bring FDCPA Actions

A private right of action is available not only to the "consumer," that is, the putative debtor, but also, in some cases, to "any person" adversely affected by an FDCPA violation.[228] Moreover, most FDCPA provisions protect not just consumers, but any person affected by violations occurring during the collection of consumer debts. Therefore, friends, relatives, neighbors, or an employer, even though not obligated or alleged to be obligated on a debt, may bring an action under the Act.[229] An executor of a deceased party also has standing to bring an FDCPA claim that the deceased could have brought.[230]

11.4.4 A Wide Range of Defendants May Be Named Under the FDCPA

11.4.4.1 Employees and Officers

The FDCPA defines a debt collector to include "any person" who regularly collects debts owed to another,[231] and therefore coverage is not limited to collection agencies. Agency employees and officers are individually liable under the Act to the extent they are "debt collectors" under the Act and participate in the FDCPA violation.[232] Liability is based upon these individuals' participation in the violation, though, and not simply on their association with the collection agency.[233]

Corporate officers and members of law firms may be named as individual defendants where they are personally involved in establishing or carrying out the proscribed activities of the corporation or law firm. The Sixth Circuit and most district courts that have addressed the issue have held that shareholders, officers, or directors are not insulated from personal liability under the FDCPA by the corporate structure, and can be held personally liable without piercing the corporate veil if they are debt collectors under the FDCPA.[234] The plaintiff must show that the defendant materially participated in collecting the debt, exercised control over the business's affairs, was personally involved in the debt collection at issue, and regularly engaged in debt collection.[235]

Even if officers are not directly involved in the collection efforts, they can be liable if they exercise supervisory authority over the corporation, are intimately involved with the practices and procedures of the corporation or developed and implemented the particular collection practice challenged.[236] An attorney in a sole proprietorship should be individually liable in addition to the sole proprietorship's liability.[237]

The Seventh Circuit, however, has held that a shareholder or officer of a debt collecting corporation cannot be personally liable unless the plaintiff pierces the corporate veil, regardless of the person's involvement with the corporation's debt collection practices.[238]

---

226 See Gammon v. GC Services L.P., 162 F.R.D. 313 (N.D. Ill. 1995). See also Labbate-D'Alauro v. GC Serv. L.P., 168 F.R.D. 451 (E.D.N.Y. 1996); § 11.12.1, infra.

227 See § 16.7, infra.

228 See, e.g., Appx. E.1.4, infra. including Todd v. Collecto, Inc., 731 F.3d 734 (7th Cir. 2013); Sykes v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 780 F.3d 70 (2d Cir. 2015); Villarreal v. Snow, 1996 WL 28308 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 19, 1996) (individual who was not actually obligated, had signed as owner of the collateral for a loan, and was an addressee of the deceptive dunning letter). See also § 4.10, supra.

229 See § 4.10, supra See, e.g., Heard v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, 216 F.3d 1087 (10th Cir. 2000) (mother of debtor); West v. Costen, 558 F. Supp. 564 (W.D. Va. 1983) (consumer's mother); Whatley v. Universal Collection Bur., Inc., 525 F. Supp. 1204 (N.D. Ga. 1981) (parents). See Flowers v. Accelerated Bur. of Collections, Inc., 1997 WL 136313 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 19, 1997) (spouse); Appx. E.1.4, infra.

230 See Appx. E.1.4.2, infra, including Cruz v. Int'l Collection Corp., 673 F.3d 991 (9th Cir. 2012); Wright v. Fin. Serv. Inc., 996 F.2d 820 (6th Cir. 1993), aff'd en banc, 22 F.3d 647 (6th Cir. 1994); Finney v. MIG Capital Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 1276159 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 27, 2014) (an FDCPA claim is remedial rather than penal, and thus claim survives consumer's death; estate is proper party for substitution); § 4.10, supra.

231 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6).

232 See Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 438 (6th Cir. 2008); Wilson v. Aargon Agency Inc., 2015 WL 7185451 (D. Nev. Nov. 13, 2015); ValleCastro v. Tobin, Melien & Marohn, 2015 WL 6478412 (D. Conn. Oct. 27, 2015) (servicer's employee); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivables Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009); FTC Official Staff Commentary §§ 803(6)-1; 813, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra; § 4.7, supra. But see Pettit v. Retrieval Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 211 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 2000) (dicta; but not followed in circuit).

233 See Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivables Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (employees of a debt collection organization may be "debt collectors" under the FDCPA and held personally liable for acts committed during the scope of their employment).

234 See Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 438 (6th Cir. 2008); Gonzales v. Stillman Law Office, 2015 WL 4903344 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 17, 2015) (denying motion to dismiss as to individual lawyer's liability where he signed state court papers and individually participated in collection efforts on behalf of his firm); Smith v. Levine Leichtman Capital Partners, Inc., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1205 (N.D. Cal. 2010); Robinson v. Managed Accounts Receivables Corp., 654 F. Supp. 2d 1051, 1059 (C.D. Cal. 2009); Schwarm v. Craighead, 552 F. Supp. 2d 1056 (E.D. Cal. 2008); Albanese v. Portnoff Law Assoc., Ltd., 301 F. Supp. 2d 389 (E.D. Pa. 2004).

235 Smith v. Levine Leichtman Capital Partners, Inc., 723 F. Supp. 2d 1205, 1213 (N.D. Cal. 2010); Schwarm v. Craighead, 552 F. Supp. 2d 1056, 1073 (E.D. Cal. 2008).

236 See Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 438, 439 (6th Cir. 2008); Brumbelow v. Law Offices of Bennett & Deloney, P.C., 372 F. Supp. 2d 615 (D. Utah 2005); Musso v. Seiders, 194 F.R.D. 43 (D. Conn. 1999); Pope v. Vogel, 1998 WL 111576 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 5, 1998); Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320 (D. Utah 1997). But see Reese v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 202 F.R.D. 83 (D. Conn. 2001) (dismissing case against officers of collection agency although they allegedly adopted, ratified, and approved violations).

237 Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 438 (6th Cir. 2008). Contra Bartlett v. Herbl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997).

238 See § 11.4.4.2, infra; Pettit v. Retrieval Masters Creditor Bur., Inc., 211 F.3d 1057, 1059 (7th Cir. 2000); White v. Goodman, 200 F.3d 1016, 1019 (7th Cir. 2000). See also Carrington v. Experian Holdings, Inc.,

While most debt collection employees and officers are impecunious, others, such as a person who is both an officer and actively involved in the collection activities of a small company, may be wealthier than the company itself. Joining as a party an employee or officer involved in the debt collection also facilitates discovery, which is typically more expensive and cumbersome against a nonparty. Care should be taken that the employee is not one who may solicit undue sympathy from a jury.[239] Because collection employees often use fake names while collecting a debt, it may be necessary to sue them as "John Doe a.k.a. Robert Smith," and discovery may be needed to obtain the information necessary to serve them.

11.4.4.2 Owners, Partners, Franchisors, and Parent Companies

Apart from the possibility of direct liability discussed in the preceding section, the owner of a collection agency may be held vicariously liable for FDCPA violations committed by agency employees[240] if there is sufficient evidence to pierce the corporate veil.[241] The applicable state law to evaluate piercing the corporate veil is the state of incorporation of the entity whose veil is sought to be pierced.[242] Seeking to pierce the veil of an alleged parent corporation is a high burden, and courts generally look at whether "the entities are so interconnected in interest and ownership that the separate individual corporations no longer exist and that the recognition of the separate corporate entities would promote fraud or injustice."[243] In addition, even if owners are not directly involved in the collection efforts, they can still be liable if they exercise supervisory authority over the corporation, are intimately involved with the practices and procedures of the corporation, or developed and implemented the particular collection practice challenged.[244]

Under partnership law, the general partners of limited partnership debt collection agencies are vicariously liable for the limited partnership's violations.[245] A franchisor may be liable for those acts of its franchisee debt collector which it controls.[246] A parent company can be found liable for the FDCPA violations of its corporate subsidiary collection agency even where the subsidiary collects debts in the subsidiary's own name.[247] This liability can be established where the parent instigated the practices of its subsidiaries[248] or the subsidiary was merely an instrumentality for the parent and the entire group of corporations constituted a single economic enterprise.[249]

11.4.4.3 Collection Attorneys and Collectors Employing Attorneys

Collection attorneys, originally broadly excluded from FDCPA coverage, are now subject to the Act's provisions and to private FDCPA actions, as any other debt collector would be.[250] Suing a collection agency's attorney may provide deeper pockets than suing a collection agency. If a law partner is liable under the FDCPA, the partnership may also be liable under state partnership principles.[251] However, some judges may react badly to suits against collection attorneys. Consumer lawyers should obtain experienced co-counsel before bringing their first suit of this type.

Debt collectors employing attorneys[252] or other agents[253] to carry out debt collection practices that violate the FDCPA have been held vicariously or directly liable for their agents'

469 F. Supp. 3d 891 (W.D. Wis. 2020) (contacts of one defendant may not be imputed to another defendant for jurisdictional purposes, unless plaintiff can show that it would be appropriate to pierce corporate veil).

239 See Johnson v. Eaton, 873 F. Supp. 1019 (M.D. La. 1995) (jury found paralegal's violation should not result in award of statutory damages)

240 See § 4.7.3, supra.

241 See Kistner v. Law Offices of Michael P. Margelefsky, L.L.C., 518 F.3d 433, 438, 439 (6th Cir. 2008); White v. Goodman, 200 F.3d 1016 (7th Cir. 2000) (shareholders of debt collectors were not liable absent piercing of the corporate veil, and joining them was frivolous); Klco v. Elmhurst Dodge, 2002 WL 193461 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 6, 2002) (insufficient evidence). See also Pettit v. Retrieval Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 211 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 2000) (an owner, officer of corporation, or shareholder may be held personally liable for corporation's violation of FDCPA only if they were involved in FDCPA violations); Semper v. JBC Legal Group, 2005 WL 2172377 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 6, 2005) (lawyer who owned law firm, but did not personally participate in activities at issue, was not personally liable).

242 See, e.g., On Command Video Corp. v. Roti, 705 F.3d 267, 272 (7th Cir. 2013).

243 Hystro Prods., Inc. v. MNO Corp. 18 F.3d 1384, 1388–1389 (7th Cir. 1994); Klco v. Elmhurst Dodge, 2002 WL 193461 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 6, 2002). See also Backuswalcott v. Common Ground Cmty. HDFC, Inc., 104 F. Supp. 2d 363 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

244 See § 11.4.4.1, supra.

245 See § 4.7.3, supra.

246 Taylor v. Checkrite, Ltd., 627 F. Supp. 415 (S.D. Ohio 1986).

247 See §§ 4.7.3, 4.7.5, supra. See also LeBlanc v. Unifund CCR Partners, 601 F.3d 1185 (11th Cir. 2010) (partners of debt collector limited partnership may be held jointly and severally liable for partnership's conduct regardless of whether they violated FDCPA and whether or not they are debt collectors); Peter v. G.C. Services, L.P., 310 F.3d 344 (5th Cir. 2002) (general partners are liable for all obligations of partnership, including FDCPA violations).

248 Fuller v. Midland Credit Mgmt. Inc., 2014 WL 883757, at *7 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 6, 2014).

249 See Appx E.1.2.4, infra; Janetos v. Fulton Friedman & Gullace, L.L.P., 825 F.3d 317 (7th Cir. 2016); Jenkins v. Union Corp., 999 F. Supp. 1120 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (parent corporation could be liable, but in this case insufficient evidence to create such liability). Cf. Litt v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 1977137 (E.D. Mich. May 15, 2014) (absent some abuse of corporate form, parent and subsidiary corporations are separate and distinct entities).

250 See § 4.7.3.3, supra.

251 See Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols, & Clark, L.L.C., 214 F.3d 872 (7th Cir. 2000); Albanese v. Portnoff Law Assoc., Ltd., 301 F. Supp. 2d 389 (E.D. Pa. 2004); Cashman v. Ricigliano, 2004 WL 1920798 (D. Conn. Aug. 25, 2004).

252 See Janetos v. Fulton Friedman & Gullace, L.L.P., 825 F.3d 317, 325 (7th Cir. 2016) (Asset Acceptance can be held liable for letters drafted and sent by its collection attorney); Fox v. Citicorp Credit Serv., Inc., 15 F.3d 1507, 1516 (9th Cir. 1994).

253 See Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379 (3d Cir. 2000) (debt buyer vicariously liable for FDCPA violation of its collection agency). See also McAdory v. M.N.S. & Assoc., 952 F.3d 1089 (9th Cir. 2020) (remanding to determine "whether and when a debt collector can be held vicariously liable for the actions of another debt collector" where debt buyer used debt collector for collection of debts).

conduct.[254] As the Third Circuit noted: "We believe this is a fair result because an entity that is itself a 'debt collector'—and hence subject to the FDCPA—should bear the burden of monitoring the activities of those it enlists to collect debts on its behalf."[255] Exceptions may apply to this general rule where the attorney is considered an independent contractor, and not the debt collector's agent,[256] or where the intentionally fraudulent conduct was outside of the agency relationship.[257]

The consumer has the option of suing the collection lawyer's debt collector client, either alone or together with the collection attorney, to redress the attorney's FDCPA violations. Where suing an attorney is met with hostility from the local bench, naming only the collection lawyer's debt collector client may be an attractive practical option, except in the rare jurisdiction that does not impose vicarious liability on a lawyer's client for the lawyer's FDCPA violations.

Consumers should proceed with caution when raising FDCPA claims against an attorney in the same collection case that the attorney is bringing against the consumer. Joining the creditor's lawyer in a third-party complaint or otherwise in the collection case in which the lawyer is appearing may not be permissible or advisable.[258] Collection attorneys, claiming ethical violations, have even sought sanctions (without success) against consumers' attorneys for doing so. The most prudent course may be to file a separate FDCPA suit against the creditor's attorney.

11.4.4.4 Forms Suppliers, Repossessors, and Insurers

It is an FDCPA violation to design, compile, and furnish any form while knowing that the form will be used to create the false impression that a person other than the creditor (such as an attorney or a collection agency) is participating in the collection of the debt.[259] An example of this conduct is someone who sends a default letter to a debtor portraying themselves as a debt collector when they actually have no involvement in the debt collection effort. They are just lending out their name to the creditor for its intimidation value, many times in exchange for a "flat rate" per notice.[260] The FDCPA section states "any person who violates this section [such as "flat raters"] shall be liable to the same extent and in the same manner as a debt collector is liable under section 1692k."[261] A repossession company may be liable under the Act and may work in conjunction with other debt collectors.[262]

Collecting a consumer's judgment against a usually thinly capitalized local collection agency may be problematic.[263] For this reason, a negotiated settlement that includes a certified check or a bank's letter of credit supporting an installment agreement is advisable regarding smaller collection agencies.[264] If the collection agency or attorney has a liability insurer, as many do, that may provide another avenue for recovery.[265] Although most states do not permit joinder of an insurer in an action to determine an insured's liability, statutes in most states authorize a direct action against a collector's insurer after judgment against the collector or upon the collector's bankruptcy.[266]

The ACA International (Association of Credit and Collection Professionals, formerly the American Collector's Association) markets, and other groups may also market, professional liability insurance to debt collection agencies, attorneys, and creditors. Such insurance has satisfied the claims of many consumers suing under the FDCPA. The existence and contents of such insurance agreements are expressly discoverable in federal courts.[267] Determination of insurance coverage assists the process of negotiating settlements, because it reveals the insurer's presence and interests in the action and decreases concern over the ability to recover a judgment from an impecunious collector. Also, many states provide by statute for direct actions by claimants against insurers after obtaining judgment against the insured.[268] In other states, such an 254 See Appx. E.1.2.4, infra. See also Barbato v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 916 F.3d 260, 261 (3d Cir. 2019); Janetos v. Fulton Friedman & Gullace, L.L.P., 825 F.3d 317, 325–326 (7th Cir. 2016); Oei v. N. Star Capital Acquisitions, L.L.C., 486 F. Supp. 2d 1089 (C.D. Cal. 2006); Fox v. Citicorp Credit Services, Inc., 15 F.3d 1507, 1516 (9th Cir. 1994). Cf. Wadlington v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 76 F.3d 103, 108 (6th Cir. 1996) (company that was not debt collector under FDCPA would not be held vicariously liable for acts of attorney). But see Reygadas v. DNF Assoc., 982 F.3d 1119 (8th Cir. 2020) (debt buyer not found vicariously liable for third party debt collector's contact while consumer was represented by counsel because, even though debt buyer knew of representations, third-party debt collector did not); Clark v. Main Street Acquisition Corp., 553 Fed. Appx. 510 (6th Cir. 2014) (debt buyer was not vicariously liable for attorney's alleged violations relating to admission requests, as consumer failed to offer any evidence that debt collector exercised control over, or even had knowledge of, requests for admissions at issue).

255 Pollice v. Nat'l Tax Funding, L.P., 225 F.3d 379, 404–406 (3d Cir. 2000).

256 Byrd v. Law Offices of John D. Clunk Co., L.P.A., 2010 WL 816932 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 8, 2010) (collection law firm not vicariously liable for acts of independent contractor who served process when law firm was unaware of process server's methods and did not have supervisory authority).

257 In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013).

258 See Yale New Haven Hosp. v. Orlins, 1992 WL 110707 (Conn. Super. Ct. May 11, 1992); Egan v. Williams, 709 A.2d 1057 (R.I. 1998). But see Kuhn v. Account Control Tech., Inc., 865 F. Supp. 1443 (D. Nev. 1994).

259 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692j(a); § 10.4, supra.

260 See Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 626 (7th Cir. 2002).

261 Id.; 15 U.S.C. § 1692j(b).

262 See §§ 4.7.5.1, supra.

263 See West v. Costen, 826 F.2d 1376 (4th Cir. 1987) (collection agency's chapter 11 bankruptcy discharged FDCPA judgment).

264 See Miller v. Prompt Recovery Services, Inc., 2014 WL 4230895 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 25, 2014) (ordering collection agency to tender $4000 provided in settlement agreement to consumer in ten days; exercising its inherent power to enforce the settlement agreement entered into by the parties).

265 See, e.g., Columbia Cas. Co. v. HIAR Holding, L.L.C., 411 S.W.3d 258 (Mo. 2013) (TCPA $500-per-occurrence statutory damages awards are remedial and not penal in nature).

266 See § 2.8, supra.

267 Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2). However, evidence of insurance liability is not generally admissible against the insured. Fed. R. Evid. 411.

268 See 7A Couch on Insurance 3d ch. 104 (1985).

insurance agreement may be subject to attachment in aid of execution.

Insurance policies will contain a deductible of varying amounts, but a common deductible is $5000. The debt collector is responsible for the deductible amount and the insurance company would cover any amount higher, subject to the limits of the policy.

Under some state direct action statutes, the insurer may raise any defenses which it would have against the insured. One frequent defense, the insured's noncooperation with the insurer, may be avoided by a consumer's lawyer directly supplying the insurer with copies of demand letters, the complaint, and motions to the insurer to avoid the defense of noncooperation. Noncooperation should not be an issue when the insurer provides the lawyers for the collector's defense.

11.4.4.5 Creditors

Creditors who, in the process of collecting their own debts, use any name other than their own which would indicate a third party is collecting the debt are subject to the FDCPA.[269] Generally, however, creditors collecting under their own name are exempt from FDCPA coverage for their own debt collection activities, but a state claim usually is available to challenge a creditor's misconduct. Similarly, creditors not covered by the FDCPA are generally not responsible for the FDCPA violations of their debt collectors, including collection agencies and collection lawyers.[270] Creditors are typically liable, however, under state laws of agency, for the state law violations of collection agencies and collection attorneys who are found to be the creditor's agents. If the collector is an agent, the creditor is legally responsible for the agent's wrongful acts which are within the scope of the relationship.[271]

Creditors and others exempt from the FDCPA may be joined as co-defendants in a federal court FDCPA action against a collection agency if the court accepts supplemental jurisdiction over state law claims against these other parties. Particularly where the collection agency or collection attorney has limited assets, it may be prudent to sue the creditor, or at least join the creditor to other defendants. Creditors often have more capital against which recovery may be obtained. Joinder of the creditor should be considered in suits against collection agencies, repossession companies, attorneys, and the creditor's employees.

If the collector is an independent contractor, however, the creditor is generally not per se legally responsible for the collector's wrongful acts; the consumer must establish additional actions by the creditor to establish creditor liability, such as negligent selection of the agency or the creditor's ratification of the collector's conduct.[272] A key question, then, is whether the collection agency or collection attorney is the creditor's agent or is an independent contractor. The more control exercised by the creditor over the collector, the more likely the relationship is that of principal and agent. Some cases have found a collection agency[273] or attorney[274] to be an agent for which the creditor was responsible, while other courts have indicated that the issues of control and scope of employment are for the jury to decide.[275]

Even if the court determines a collection agency is an independent contractor, the creditor may be responsible for 269 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6); § 4.8.9.1, supra.

270 See Wadlington v. Credit Acceptance Corp., 76 F.3d 103 (6th Cir. 1996); Faiella v. Green Tree Servicing L.L.C., 2017 WL 589096 (D.N.H. Feb. 14, 2017); Bywater v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2014 WL 1256103 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 24, 2014); London v. Gums, 2014 WL 546914 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 10, 2014); Cangelosi v. New Orleans Hurricane Shutter & Window, L.L.C., 2013 WL 395138 (E.D. La. Jan. 31, 2013); Garcia v. Solomon, Grindle, Silverman & Wintringer APC, 2012 WL 12846995 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 23, 2012); Frascogna v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2009 WL 2843284 (S.D. Miss. Aug. 31, 2009); Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002); Caron v. Charles E. Maxwell, P.C., 48 F. Supp. 2d 932, 936 (D. Ariz. 1999).

271 3 Am. Jur. 2d Agency § 264 (2002). See Household Credit Services, Inc. v. Driscol, 989 S.W.2d 72 (Tex. App. 1998) (evidence supported jury finding that collection agency was agent of Household and that Household authorized or ratified its conduct). See also Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (employer not responsible for employee's unauthorized collection abuses under punitive damages statute).

272 41 Am. Jur. 2d Independent Contractors §§ 27, 32–37 (2005). See also Household Credit Services, Inc. v. Driscol, 989 S.W.2d 72 (Tex. App. 1998).

273 See Appx E.1.2.4, infra. See also Morante v. Am. Gen. Fin. Ctr., 157 F.3d 1006 (5th Cir. 1998) (when collection subsidiary of finance company had right of control over debt collection agency, subsidiary was liable for punitive damages resulting from agency's debtor harassment); Patzka v. Viterbo Coll., 917 F. Supp. 654 (W.D. Wis. 1996) (collection agency was agent of college, resulting in college's liability under state statute for collector's demands for illegal fees and interest); Taylor v. Checkrite, Ltd., 627 F. Supp. 415 (S.D. Ohio 1986) (collector on dishonored checks and credit reporting agency was responsible for FDCPA violations of its franchisee agents when it exercised control over activities of franchise which resulted in violations); Southwestern Bell Tel. Co. v. Wilson, 768 S.W.2d 755 (Tex. App. 1988) (creditor was held responsible under agency principles for torts committed by private attorneys retained for collection efforts; attorneys, in turn, were held responsible for torts committed by constable and deputy in course of execution and levy). But see Craig v. Andrew Aaron & Assoc., 947 F. Supp. 208 (D.S.C. 1996) (creditor was not liable for collector's actions when it did not know what collector was going to do and terminated its contract with collection agency as soon as it learned of misconduct).

274 Kimber v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 668 F. Supp. 1480, 1486 (M.D. Ala. 1987) (acts of attorney are regarded as acts of client); Southwestern Bell Tel. Co. v. Wilson, 768 S.W.2d 755 (Tex. App. 1988) (creditor was held responsible under agency principles for torts committed by private attorneys retained for collection efforts; attorneys, in turn, were held responsible for torts committed by constable and deputy in course of execution and levy).

275 Jacksonville State Bank v. Barnwell, 481 So. 2d 863 (Ala. 1985) (facts sufficient for jury to find repossessor to be agent of bank); Loughan v. Harger-Haldeman, 7 Cal. Rptr. 581 (Cal. Ct. App. 1960); Sherman v. Field Clinic & Collection Accounts Terminal, 392 N.E.2d 154 (Ill. App. Ct. 1979). See also Howe v. Reader's Digest Ass'n, Inc., 686 F. Supp. 461 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (magazine retailer was not a debt collector since it never undertook collection activities; it would not be held responsible on agency grounds without consumer proving an agency relationship); Breuleux v. Pentagon Fed. Credit Union, 460 N.E.2d 306 (Ohio Ct. App. 1983) (collection agency found not to be agent of creditor).

negligently failing to terminate the collector's collection authority,[276] for negligent selection of the collector,[277] for failure to prevent or remedy unlawful conduct,[278] or for ratification of the wrongful conduct.[279] The creditor's control of the debt collector may lead to the creditor's liability for the acts of the collector if negligent supervision is shown.[280]

11.4.5 Jury Trials

11.4.5.1 Right to a Jury Trial

The Seventh Amendment to the United States Constitution guarantees the right to a jury trial in FDCPA private actions seeking actual or statutory damages.[281] Collectors have argued that the use of the word "court" in 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692k(a)(2)(A) and 1692k(b)(1) evidenced a congressional intent to limit FDCPA actions to bench trials. This argument has been consistently rejected.[282] The word "court" is not the equivalent of the word "judge" and is used in numerous federal statutes to include both the judge and jury in circumstances that merely beg the Seventh Amendment question.[283] As an FDCPA action is similar to types of actions recognized at common law, the Seventh Amendment guarantees the right to a jury trial to any party in an FDCPA action seeking damages.[284] A waiver of a jury trial in a mortgage may be unenforceable after foreclosure,[285] by a mortgage servicer not a party to the mortgage,[286] or where it was not knowingly and intentionally waived.[287]

11.4.5.2 Benefit of a Jury Trial

Generally, debtors should request jury trials at the beginning of a debt collection harassment cases. This is such a strong preference that differences among courts as to the makeup, procedures, and delay in obtaining a jury may dictate the debtor's choice of forum. There are sufficient appellate cases reversing debt collection harassment decisions that included sizable jury awards (as well as sufficient cases tried by a judge alone in which small damages were awarded) to suggest strongly that juries are more likely to award larger damages than judges.[288]

11.4.5.3 Preparing for a Jury Trial of an FDCPA Case

In federal court, where cases pursuant to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act are usually brought, a demand for trial by jury must be made "not later than [ten] days after the service of the last pleading."[289] The better practice is to request a trial by jury in the consumer's complaint. The method of requesting a jury trial, for example, by doing so in the caption, is often governed by local rules. Once a trial by jury has been demanded, it may only be withdrawn upon the consent of all parties.[290]

Lawyers specializing in debt collection abuse cases find mock juries valuable for framing their jury presentation and valuing the case. In preparation for a jury trial, the consumer's attorney should provide the judge with proposed voir dire questions, jury instructions, and a special verdict sheet. Samples are available online as companion material to this 276 Loughan v. Harger-Haldeman, 7 Cal. Rptr. 581 (Cal. Ct. App. 1960) (jury could find creditor waived its acceleration and negligently failed to tell repossession company to terminate its efforts).

277 41 Am. Jur. 2d Independent Contractors § 36 (2005). See Colorado v. Owens, 227 F.R.D. 181 (E.D.N.Y. 2005). See also Sherman v. Field Clinic, 392 N.E.2d 154 (Ill. App. Ct. 1979).

278 41 Am. Jur. 2d Independent Contractors § 31 (2005).

279 41 Am. Jur. 2d Independent Contractors § 32 (2005). See also Flamm v. Sarner & Assoc., 2002 WL 31618443 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 6, 2002) (creditor and her collection attorney would be vicariously liable for harassing debt collection tactics of process server they hired if they authorized or ratified those tactics); Household Credit Services, Inc. v. Driscol, 989 S.W.2d 72 (Tex. App. 1998) (while agency's death threats and job contacts were beyond scope of its duties, Household could have ratified agency's abuses as found by jury). But cf. Breuleux v. Pentagon Fed. Credit Union, 460 N.E.2d 306 (Ohio Ct. App. 1983).

280 Freeman v. CAC Fin., Inc., 2006 WL 925609 (S.D. Miss. Mar. 31, 2006) (Miss. law).

281 Kobs v. Arrow Serv. Bur., Inc., 134 F.3d 893 (7th Cir. 1998); Sibley v. Fulton Dekalb Collection Serv., 677 F.2d 830 (11th Cir. 1982); Lassiter v. Integrity Solution Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 1040677 (D. Colo. Mar. 18, 2014). But see Lucas v. U.S. Bank, 953 N.E.2d 457 (Ind. 2011) (FDCPA, a legal claim, was subsumed in equitable foreclosure issues; no right to jury in essentially equitable proceeding).

282 Kobs v. Arrow Serv. Bur., Inc., 134 F.3d 893 (7th Cir. 1998); Sibley v. Fulton Dekalb Collection Serv., 677 F.2d 830 (11th Cir. 1982); Adams v. Schumacher, 2015 WL 1538788 (D. Or. Apr. 7, 2015); Lassiter v. Integrity Solution Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 1040677, at *6 (D. Colo. Mar. 18, 2014); Delalat v. Syndicated Office Sys., Inc., 2013 WL 8364853, at *5 (S.D. Cal. July 30, 2013); Martsolf v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2009 WL 275719, at *11 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 30, 2008); Trans-Continental Credit and Collection Corp., 1999 WL 292623, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. May 10, 1999) (recognizing potential right to jury; awarding $1000 statutory damages to consumer contingent on defendant not seeking jury trial on statutory damages; noting that avoiding a jury trial would avoid costs to jury and public). But see Padilla v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 264 (S.D.N.Y. 2001); Dewey v. Associated Collectors, Inc., 927 F. Supp. 1172 (W.D. Wis. 1996).

283 Kobs v. Arrow Serv. Bur., Inc., 134 F.3d 893 (7th Cir. 1998); Sibley v. Fulton Dekalb Collection Serv., 677 F.2d 830 (11th Cir. 1982).

284 See also § 2.5.12, supra.

285 See DeFrancesco v. Veripro Solutions Inc., 2015 WL 179376 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 14, 2015). But see Poynter v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2779489 (W.D. Ky. June 27, 2017) (jury trial waiver in loan modification agreement was enforced).

286 See, e.g., Burdick v. Bank of Am., 2015 WL 11199690 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 4, 2015).

287 See Leasing Serv. Corp. v. Crane, 804 F.2d 828, 832–833 (4th Cir. 1986); K.M.C. Co. v. Irving Trust Co., 757 F.2d 752, 755–756 (6th Cir. 1985); Nat'l Equip. Rental Ltd. v. Hendrix, 565 F.2d 255, 258 (2d Cir. 1977); Levinson v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1912276 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 27, 2015) (in FDCPA case arising from mortgage, consumers knowingly and voluntarily waived their right to jury trial upon signing mortgage).

288 E.g., Smith v. Law Office of Mitchell N. Kay, 124 B.R. 182 (D. Del. 1991) (entering default judgment against debt collector and jury awarding $15,000 actual damages for emotional distress, plus $1000 statutory damages; debt collector's motion for new trial on damages was granted on ground that actual damages of $15,000 awarded by jury was excessive unless consumers filed remittitur to reduce actual damages to $3000). See also § 15.2, infra.

289 Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(b).

290 Fed. R. Civ. P. 38(d).

treatise. In some U.S. district courts the judge or the clerk conducts the questioning of potential jurors. In those jurisdictions, the consumer must submit proposed voir dire for those questions to be asked.

Most courts require the submission of proposed jury instructions and a special verdict sheet, as well as trial briefs. Check the local court rules to determine those requirements. The consumer's proposed jury instructions should address the issues which will be decided by the jury. Well-drafted jury instructions will not only enhance the likelihood of success, but will also protect the record on those issues that may be raised upon appeal. Properly drafted instructions supported by legal authority will enhance the consumer's case.

Special verdicts and jury interrogatories may be submitted to the jury pursuant to rule 49 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Often local rules will elaborate upon this process. The consumer's attorney should prepare and submit a proposed special verdict sheet for the submission to the jury. The jury may be asked to determine what violations of the Act the debt collector has committed and then specify the award of actual damages and statutory damages.[291] A well-drafted special verdict sheet will help the jury reach its determination of whether the debt collector violated the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act and also to reach its conclusion upon the amount of actual and statutory damages to be awarded.

Where a consumer's lawyer remarked in his closing statement to the jury about the unreliability of computer records in general, the jury had been instructed not to consider a closing argument as evidence, and there was sufficient evidence from the consumer for the jury to reject the collector's records being reliable.[292]

11.4.5.4 Jury Does Not Determine Attorney Fees

The determination of attorney fees is not a question for the jury. As the Ninth Circuit stated: "The award of attorneys' fees is a matter for the judge, not the jury."[293] The court explained:

> In a case where the plaintiff is entitled to compensatory damages, informing the jury of the plaintiff's potential right to receive attorneys' fees might lead the jury to offset the fees by reducing the damage award. Even more troubling, however, is the case where actual damages are small or nonexistent. When damages are nominal, there is a risk that the jury may believe that the "harm" does not justify the payment of a large fee award. The jury may thus decide to find for the defendant rather than allow the plaintiff's attorney to recover fees.[294]

Thus, the availability of attorney fees pursuant to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act should not be brought to the attention of the jury. If this should happen, the court may direct the jury to disregard the matter,[295] or in more serious cases, grant a motion for mistrial.[296] A motion in limine precluding certain lines of questioning may be appropriate.[297]

11.5 Developing the Facts

11.5.1 First Steps

One important first step in developing a case for debtor harassment is preparing a chronology of the events involved in the harassment. Events seemingly insignificant to the claim may prove significant later, may aid a witness's memory, or may indicate discrepancies in evidence. It can also be helpful in establishing a client's credibility in front of a judge or jury.

291 See Dickens v. GC Services L.P., ___ Fed. Appx. ___, 2017 WL 3616345 (11th Cir. Aug. 23, 2017) (reversing lower court's sua sponte assessment of $1 in statutory damages, as consumer was entitled to jury trial on the issue). Cf. Clayson v. Rubin & Rothman, L.L.C., 2011 WL 13209935 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2011) (outlining very limited testimony necessary to allow jury to award FDCPA statutory and actual damages where collection law firm's strict liability had been determined by a prior trial).

292 See Danow v. Borack, 346 Fed. Appx. 409, 411 (11th Cir. 2009) (consumer's lawyer's attempt to cast doubt in his closing remarks to jury on relevance and reliability of collection lawyer's computerized records were not grounds for overturning jury verdict).

293 Brooks v. Cook, 938 F.2d 1048, 1051 (9th Cir. 1991).

294 Id. at 1051.

295 Lanham v. Whitfield, 805 F.2d 970, 972 (11th Cir. 1986). But cf. Johnson v. Eaton, 80 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 1996).

296 Brooks v. Cook, 938 F.2d 1048 (9th Cir. 1991).

297 See Hamburger v. Northland Group, Inc., 2015 WL 2341901 (M.D. Pa. May 13, 2015) (granting consumer's motion in limine precluding reference to possible award of attorney fees, as attorney fees are within province of court, not jury; denying as premature collector's motion in limine to preclude consumer from testifying as to consumer use of credit card as based on assumptions that are not developed in record); Tallman v. Freedman Anselmo Lindberg, L.L.C., 2013 WL 2631754 (C.D. Ill. June 12, 2013) (defendant ordered not to reference plaintiff's ability to recover attorney fees; plaintiff's counsel's area of practice; comments about "greedy lawyers," comments implying that consumer or his counsel were pursuing the claims for "nefarious or unwholesome reasons," or other derogatory comments about plaintiff's or his counsel's motivation for bringing this case); Nelson v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc., 2013 WL 12234542 (W.D. Wis. June 5, 2013) (granting consumer's motions in limine to exclude potential allegation that she was suing "for the money" and to exclude potential allegation that she was a "deadbeat" who brought suit "to avoid paying her debts"; as to any evidence about motives of any lawyers in the case: "Those motives have nothing to do with liability or damages."); Lee v. Robins Preston Beckett Taylor & Gugle Co., L.P.A., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12969 (S.D. Ohio July 9, 1999) (granting motion in limine precluding defendant from raising consumer plaintiff's eleven prior FDCPA cases or mentioning her past relationship with her attorney or availability of attorney fees to successful plaintiff). Cf. Wright v. Best Recovery Services L.L.C., 2015 WL 6468135 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 27, 2015) (denying consumer's motion in limine to exclude testimony or evidence related to his state of mind; his purchase, payments, or default on vehicle sought to be repossessed; his payment arrangements with finance company; and his understanding of whether his vehicle was eligible for repossession; however, consumer's credit history was outside of his purchase, and payment history regarding the vehicle was irrelevant and prejudicial, and therefore excluded); Lee v. Phelan Hallinan, P.L.C., 303 F.R.D. 671 (S.D. Fla. 2014) (in FDCPA putative class action, law firm's failure to identify its expert witness on net worth denied consumers opportunity to provide rebuttal report or to depose expert; thus, expert's affidavit and supporting documents were stricken).

There are usually a substantial number of documents connected with a consumer transaction; these are particularly useful for pinpointing significant dates in a chronology.

It may be a long time between the consumer attorney's initial interview with the client and trial. It is good practice to obtain a statement of the client's story and have them sign it. The statement may be used at trial to refresh the client's memory.[298] The effect of this statement on the client-attorney privilege and the work product rule is beyond the scope of this subsection but should be considered by counsel.[299]

The next step is to get statements from sympathetic witnesses while events (and a sense of outrage) are still fresh in their minds. Family members, friends, fellow employees (or the client's employer) and the client's physician and/or counselor or clergy should be interviewed if they witnessed collection contacts or injuries the client suffered, such as emotional distress. If the case involves abusive phone calls, a request could be sent to the telephone or cellphone company requesting an investigation and retention of the records of the collector's telephone calls to and from the consumer and the third parties involved during the relevant period. Most cellphones will have records of all numbers dialed and income numbers. Recordings of the calls can be invaluable in developing a chronology of facts for the case, as discussed at § 11.5.2, infra. It is also helpful to obtain from the client statements of witnesses who may have been present when the abusive calls were made, or who may have overheard a message left by the collector.

In addition to the development of a chronology of facts, consider beginning a case with an Evidence/Proof Chart to determine the elements counsel will need to prove for each claim and the evidence needed to prove each element at trial or on summary judgment. An FDCPA claim can have several subclaims depending on which section the collector's behavior violated. A collector's call threatening to garnish wages before a court judgment, for example, may constitute harassment (§ 1692d), misleading representations (§ 1692e) and unfair practices (§ 1692f), as well as violate other provisions of the Act. Overall, the consumer will have to prove overarching elements such as that the caller was a "debt collector" under the FDCPA,[300] the subject transaction is covered by the Act[301], the plaintiff was harmed by the act, and the plaintiff is protected from such conduct under the Act.[302] As discussed at Chapters 5 through 10, supra, each FDCPA section has its own requirements and must be parsed carefully to ensure each element is addressed. Creating a chart that has columns for each claim, the elements of each claim, the evidence needed to prove each claim, and how to obtain each piece of evidence to be used at trial (i.e., interrogatories, deposition, affidavit, live witness, etc.) will aid in crafting the complaint and, also, discovery requests.

As another first step, before or upon filing a lawsuit, practitioners should send a letter to the defendant requesting preservation of specified categories of current and ongoing data that ultimately will be requested in discovery. Almost every important document used to prove the plaintiff's case against a defendant, particularly in a class action, is in the hands of the defendant, not the plaintiff; most of it is electronically stored.[303] Call logs, account notes, e-mails, loan transaction histories, and policies and procedures are all in the custody or control of the defendant. Each party has a duty to preserve unique, relevant evidence that might be useful to an adversary. In addition, as of November 30, 2021, debt collectors must retain evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and Regulation F starting on the date that the debt collector begins collection activity on a debt until three years after the debt collector's last collection activity on the debt.[304] For phone recordings, the debt collector must retain the recordings for three years after the date of each telephone call.[305] However, debt collectors are not required to create additional records or even record phone calls if that is not already part of their regular business practice. A debt collector only must retain applicable records or recordings that are already created in the ordinary course of its business.[306] The preservation letter should include a reminder that, if the collector already maintains such records of compliance and noncompliance, they must retain such records in accordance with Regulation F.[307]

The preservation letter also supports a potential subsequent claim for spoliation, helping to establish bad faith and conscious disregard of the duty to preserve relevant evidence. The more effective the preservation letter, conveying specifically what must be retained including methodologies for preservation and consequences of failure, the greater the likelihood the defendant will be punished for failing to produce evidence they claim is no longer available.

11.5.2 Recording of Phone Calls

11.5.2.1 Generally

FDCPA cases often involve proof of the content of phone conversations with debt collectors. Recordings can be an invaluable way to develop the chronology of facts in a case and support a consumer's claims. This subsection examines:

- Whether it is legal for a consumer to record a phone call from a collector;
- Whether it is legal for the consumer's attorney to advise the consumer to do so, or to participate in the recording;
- Options if the consumer does not record the conversation;
- The fact that the collector can record the conversation as a means of substantiating its version of a conversation; and
- Basic evidentiary considerations for using recordings.

298 See Fed. R. Evid. 612, 803(5).
299 See Fed. R. Evid. 501.
300 15 U.S.C. § 1692a(6). See § 4.7, supra.
301 15 U.S.C. § 1692a. See § 4.4, supra.
302 See § 4.4, supra. See also § 11.15, infra, regarding Article III standing.
303 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 6.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.
304 Reg. F § 1006.100. See § 11.5.4.2a, infra.
305 Id.
306 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-2.
307 Id.

11.5.2.2 Is It Legal for a Consumer to Record the Collector's Call?

A number of jurisdictions require that both parties consent to the recording of a call: California,[308] Connecticut,[309] Florida,[310] Georgia,[311] Illinois,[312] Maryland[313], Massachusetts,[314] Michigan,[315] Montana,[316] Nevada,[317] New Hampshire,[318] Pennsylvania,[319] Puerto Rico,[320] and Washington.[321] Other states though require the consent of only one of the parties to the call.[322] This generally means in these other states that, if one is not a party to the conversation, one can record a conversation or phone call only if at least one party consents and has full knowledge that the communication will be recorded. What constitutes "consent" in a given state can vary in terms of whether it must be express or can be implied based on the circumstances.

Care should be taken as to the choice of law when the collector's call originates in another state.[323] The question becomes 308 Cal. Penal Code § 632 (preempted in part by Calif. constitutional provisions), § 637.2 (civil damages); Cal. Pub. Util. Code Gen. Order 107-B(II)(A); People v. Guzman, 217 Cal. Rptr. 3d 509 (Cal. Ct. App. 2017), aff'd, 453 P.3d 1130 (Cal. 2019). See also Kuschner v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2009 WL 1531574 (E.D. Cal. June 2, 2009) (counterclaim permitted against FDCPA plaintiff for secretly tape -recording phone conversation with debt collector); Flanagan v. Flanagan, 41 P.3d 575 (Cal. 2002).

309 Conn. Gen. Stat. § 53a-187 (definition), § 53a-189 (penalty), § 52-570d (civil definition & damages).

310 Fla. Stat. §§ 934.01 to 934.50 (definition and penalties) (§ 934.09[1 repealed).

311 Ga. Code Ann. §§ 16-11-62, 16-11-66 (definitions), § 16-11-69 (penalty).

312 Ind. Code § 35-31.5-2-176 (definition), § 35-33.5-5-5 (penalty), § 35-33.5-5-4 (civil damages).

313 Md. Code, Cts. & Jud. Proceedings § 10-402 (definition and penalty), § 10-410 (civil damages); Malpas v. State, 695 A.2d 588 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1997).

314 Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 272, § 99 (definition, penalty, civil damages); See also Commonwealth v. Hyde, 750 N.E.2d 963 (Mass. 2001) (no exception to criminal eavesdropping when one party to the conversation consents to taping). But cf. Martin v. Gross, 340 F. Supp. 3d 87, 109 (D. Mass. 2018), aff'd in part, vacated in part, remanded sub nom. Project Veritas Action Fund v. Rollins, 982 F.3d 813 (1st Cir. 2020) (declaring Section 99 unconstitutional insofar as it prohibits audio recording of government officials, including law enforcement officers, performing their duties in public spaces, subject to reasonable time, place, and manner restrictions; corresponding injunction against defendants); Commonwealth v. Douglas, 236 N.E.2d 865 (Mass. 1968) (consent of taped party unnecessary).

315 Mich. Comp. Laws § 750.539c (definition and penalty), § 750.539h (civil damages), Sullivan v. Gray, 324 N.W.2d 58 (Mich. Ct. App. 1982).

316 Mont. Code Ann. § 45-8-213 (definition and penalty).

317 Nev. Rev. Stat. § 200.620.

318 N.H. Rev. Stat. § 570-A:2 (definition and penalty), § 570-A:11 (civil damages); New Hampshire v. Locke, 761 A.2d 376 (N.H. 1999).

319 18 Pa. Con. Stat. Ann. §§ 5703, 5704 (preempted by federal wiretap act) (definition & penalty), §§ 5725, 5747 (civil damages).

320 P.R. Laws Ann. tit. 33 § 2160.

321 See Wash. Rev. Code § 9.73.030 (definition), § 9.73.080 (penalty), § 9.73.060 (civil damages).

322 Alabama: Ala. Code § 13A-11-30 (definition), § 13A-11-31 (penalty); Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 42 20.310 (definition), § 42.20.330 (penalty), Palmer v. State, 604 P.2d 1106 (Alaska 1979); Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. §§ 13-3005, 13-3012 (definition and penalty), § 12-731 (civil damages); Arkansas: Ark. Code Ann. § 5-60-120 (definition and penalty); Colorado: Colo. Rev Stat § 18-9-303 (wiretapping definition and penalty), § 18-9-304 (eavesdropping definition and penalty); Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 53a-187 (definition), § 53a-189 (penalty), § 52-570d (civil definition and damages); Delaware: Del. Code Ann. tit. 11, § 2402 (wiretapping definition and criminal penalty), § 2409 (wiretapping civil liability), § 1335 (privacy violation definition and penalty), U.S. v. Vespe, 389 F. Supp. 1359 (D. Del. 1975); District of Columbia: D.C. Code § 23-542 (definition and penalty), § 23-554 (civil damages); Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. §§ 16-11-62, 16-11-66 (definitions), § 16-11-69 (penalty); Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. § 803-42 (definition and penalty), § 803-48 (civil damages); Idaho: Idaho Code § 18-6702 (definition and penalty), § 18-6709 (civil damages); Indiana: Ind. Code § 35-31.5-2-176 (definition), § 35-33.5-5-5 (penalty), § 35-33.5-5-4 (civil damages); Iowa: Iowa Code § 727.8 (eavesdropping definition), § 808B.1 (wiretapping definition), § 808B.2 (definition and penalty), § 808B.8 (civil damages); Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 21-6101 (definition & penalty), § 22-2518 (civil damages); Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. § 526.010 (definition), § 526.020 (penalty); Louisiana: La. State. Ann. § 15:1303 (definition and penalties), § 15:1312 (civil damages); Maine: Me. Stat. tit. 15, § 709 (definition; §§ 1-B and 1-C amended 2021); § 710 (penalty), § 711 (civil damages); Griffin v. Griffin, 92 A.3d 1144 (Me. 2014); Minnesota: Minn. Stat. § 626A.02 (definition and penalty), § 626A.13 (civil damages); Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 41-29-531 (definition), § 41-29-533 (penalty), § 41 29 529 (civil damages); Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. § 542.402 (definition and penalty), § 542.418 (civil damages); Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. § 86-290 (definition and penalty), § 86-297 (civil damages); New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 2A:156A-3, 2A:156A-4 (definition and penalty), § 2A:156A-24 (civil damages); New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 30-12-1 (definition and penalty), § 30-12-11 (civil damages); New York: N.Y. Penal Law §§ 250.00, 250.05 (definition and penalty); North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 15A-287 (definition and penalty), § 15A-296 (civil damages); North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 12.1-15-02 (definition and penalty); Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 2933.51 (definition and penalty), § 2933.65 (civil liability); Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 13, §§ 13-176.3, 13-176.4 (definition and penalty); Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws § 11-35-21 (definition and penalty), § 12-5.1-13 (civil damages); South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. §§ 17-30-20, 17-30-30 (definition and penalty), § 17-30-135 (civil damages); Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 39-13-601, 39-13-604 (definitions), § 39-13-602 (penalty), § 39-13-603 (civil damages); Texas: Tex. Penal Code § 16.02 (definition and penalty), Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code § 123.004 (civil damages); Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 77-23a-4 (definition and penalty; civil damages), § 77-23b-8 (civil damages); Vermont: no specific statute to address consent for recording conversations; Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 19.2-62 (definition and penalty), § 19.2-69 (civil damages); West Virginia: W. Va. Code § 62-1D-3 (definition and penalty), § 62-1D-12 (civil damages); Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. § 968.31 (definition, penalty, and civil damages); Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 7-3-702 (definition and penalty).

323 See, e.g., MacNeill Eng'g Co. v. Trisport, Ltd., 59 F. Supp. 2d 199, 202 (D. Mass 1999) ("secretly recording a conversation outside Massachusetts does not give rise to liability under Mass. law prohibiting secret recording even if the call originated within Massachusetts"); Kearney v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc., 137 P.3d 914 (Cal. 2006) (California law requiring two-party consent to recording of phone call prohibited Georgia brokerage's secret recording, despite fact that only one-party consent is required under Georgia law); Locke v. Aston, 814 N.Y.S.2d 38 (N.Y. App. Div. 2006) (secret recording of phone call by Cal. resident with N.Y. resident admissible in N.Y. courts, though prohibited by Cal. law, but permitted in N.Y.); Ball v. Ehlig, 2005 WL 1023650 (Pa. Com. Pl. Jan. 31, 2005) (Call recorded in Texas with only consent of one party required application of Texas law, even though case brought in PA), aff'd, 889 A.2d 107 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2005); Larrison v. Larrison, 750 A.2d 895, 898 (Pa. Super. Ct. Apr. 12, 2000) (recording whether the applicable law about recording calls is the state where the collector placed the call or the state where the consumer received the call. Muddying the legal issue is the common use by debt collectors of telephone services that provide a caller ID local to the consumer for all outgoing collection calls, with the result that consumers may falsely believe they received an in-state call when it was actually an out-of-state call.

11.5.2.3 Is It Ethical for the Consumer's Attorney to Suggest or Assist in the Recording?

While it may be legal in many states for a consumer to record a collector's call, a separate question is whether it is ethical for the consumer's attorney to participate in, assist, or even suggest that the call be recorded. ABA Opinion 337 (1974) initially held that recording without consent was conduct involving fraud, dishonesty, or misrepresentation, prohibited by ABA Ethical Rule 8.4,[324] but that rule was reversed in June, 2001, by ABA Formal Opinion 01-422. The 2001 opinion provides that the nonconsensual tape recording of a conversation to which the recording attorney is a party is not unethical if it is lawful in that state and the recording attorney does not falsely deny that the conversation is being recorded. If the recording is unlawful in the state, then the attorney's involvement is unethical.[325]

Nevertheless, state ethics rules may not follow the 2001 ABA model. Colorado and South Carolina have issued rules expressly rejecting ABA Formal Opinion 01-422, and Arizona, Idaho, Indiana,[326] Iowa, Kansas, and Kentucky[327] have not withdrawn their ethics opinions issued prior to ABA Formal Opinion 01-422. On the other hand, a number of states' ethics opinions explicitly find it ethical for a lawyer to tape record without the other party's consent when it was legal, including Hawaii,[328] Maine,[329] Mississippi,[330] Minnesota,[331] New York,[332] Oklahoma,[333] Oregon,[334] and Texas.[335] The New York City Bar has concluded that an attorney may not routinely tape record conversations, but may do so in pursuit of a societal good.[336] A good overview of attorney ethical considerations concerning recording of phone calls is found at a Congressional Reserve Service publication.[337]

Assuming it is unethical for a lawyer to record or assist in recording the calls, a separate issue is whether an attorney can advise the client about recording calls. In one state where it was legal, but previously unethical to surreptitiously record a conversation, the ethics authority opined that the lawyer may not request the client to surreptitiously record a conversation with an adverse party, but may tell that client that it is legal for the client to do so.[338] Other ethics opinions provide that an attorney cannot indirectly record a call,[339] so that advising the client to record a call could be seen as indirectly recording the call.

A lawyer may not advise a client to engage in criminal conduct. A lawyer who does so incurs criminal responsibility for the crime. If surreptitious tape recording is unethical for the lawyer, but legal for others, a lawyer advising a client on the subject must avoid even an appearance of impropriety.

Acknowledging the violation of ethical standards, some courts have nevertheless allowed at least the limited evidentiary use of a secretly obtained tape recording,[340] while others of call in NY with only consent of sender or receiver allowed, even though used in PA court).

324 See also Nissan Motor Co., Ltd. v. Nissan Computer Corp., 180 F. Supp. 2d 1089 (C.D. Cal. 2002) (taping of opposing counsel without consent would be criminal and unethical and enjoined).

325 See State ex. rel. Neb. State Bar Ass'n v. Schleich, No. 5-97-1214 (Neb. 1998) (suspending repentant lawyer for six months for illegally taping wife's phone call prior to instituting divorce); Conn. Bar Ass'n Informal Op. 94-30 (Oct. 19, 1994); N.C. State Bar Ass'n Op. 192 (Jan. 13, 1995) (lawyer may not listen to client's illegal tape recording); Or. Ethics Op. 2005-156, 2005 WL 5679581 (Or. St. Bar Ass'n Aug. 2005).

326 Ind. State Bar Ass'n, Legal Ethics Subcommittee, Formal Op. No. 2, res gestae 234 (July 1975).

327 Ky. Bar Ass'n Ethics Op. KBA E-289 (1984).

328 Haw. Op. 30 (July 27, 1995) (not per se unethical when legal, but must be made and used in ethical way).

329 Me. Prof'l Ethics Comm'n Op. 168, 14 Me. Bar J. 132 (Mar. 9, 1999).

330 Attorney M v. Mississippi Bar, 621 So. 2d 220 (Miss. 1992) (attorney's call to treating physician was explicitly involving malpractice claim putting doctor on notice that his statement was for potential republication, therefore no deceit was involved in tape recording of conversation; action for unethical conduct was dismissed). See Propriety of Attorney's Surreptitious Sound Recording of Statements by Others Who Are or May Become Involved in Litigation, 32 A.L.R.5th 715 (1995).

331 See, e.g., Edward J. Cleary, Privacy Rights and Ethical Provisions (Bench & Bar of Minnesota 1999), available at http://lprb.mncourts.gov.

332 N.Y. County Ethics Op. 696 (1993) (invalidating prior contrary opinion). Compare Ass'n of the Bar of the City of New York Formal Opinion 2003-02.

333 Okla. Bar Ass'n Op. 307 (Mar. 5, 1994) (lawyer must disclose recording if asked to avoid deceit).

334 Or. Ethics Op. 2005-156, 2005 WL 5679581 (Or. St. Bar. Ass'n Aug. 2005); Or. State Bar Op. 1991-74 (may record phone conversation if it is legal to do so; may not secretly tape record in-person conversation).

335 Tex. Ethics Op. 575, 2006 WL 4045664 (Nov. 1, 2006).

336 Ass'n of the Bar of the City of New York Formal Opinion 2003-02.

337 Charles Doyle, Wiretapping, Tape Recorders, and Legal Ethics: An Overview of Questions Posed by Attorney Involvement in Secretly Recording Conversation (Congressional Research Service Aug. 9, 2012), available at https://sgp.fas.org.

338 Tex. State Bar Prof'l Ethics Comm'n, Op. 514 (Dec. 27, 1995) (this opinion may have been overruled in Texas by Tex. Ethics Op. 575, 2006 WL 4045664 (Nov. 1, 2006)).

339 Ky. Bar Ass'n Ethics Op. KBA E-289 (1984).

340 See United States v. Ewald, 398 Fed. Appx. 657 (2d Cir. 2010) (while court precluded defendant from playing audiotape itself, it permitted him to use transcript of audiotape, without restriction, for purpose of refreshing witness's recollection); Miano v. A.C.R. Advertising, 148 F.R.D. 68 (S.D.N.Y. 1983); State v. Muhammad, 927 A.2d 769 (Vt. 2007). See also Koller ex rel. Koller v. Richardson-Merrell, 737 F.2d 1038 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (unethical secret tape recording of witness was not misconduct that would disqualify pro hac vice counsel as taping was motivated by desire to get at the truth), rev'd on other grounds, 472 U.S. 424 (1984); In re PRB, 989 A.2d 523 (Vt. 2009).

have refused to allow its use, even if their refusal may have helped perpetuate a fraud.[341]

11.5.2.4 Alternative Means to Substantiate a Call's Substance

In states where tape recording without consent or warning "beeps" is illegal, or where it is unethical for the attorney to suggest that collection calls be recorded, the consumer still can keep paper and pen by the telephone and take notes of future collection calls. Alternatively, the consumer can seek the collector's consent to the call being recorded. Debt collectors increasingly are recording their conversations with consumers, and these tapes can be sought in discovery.[342]

Debt collectors may leave messages on the consumer's voicemail, and this should be deemed the collector's consent to the recording. These recordings may be introduced in evidence at trial—the recordings are not being submitted to prove the truth of the language used, but that the language used in fact took place.[343] On such occasions, the client should be instructed to bring the tape containing the collector's message to the attorney, so that it may be preserved as evidence. Similarly, texts and emails should be preserved and provided to the consumer's attorney.

11.5.2.5 Can the Collector Record Its Own Call?

Larger debt collectors record many of their debt collection calls and are increasingly able to retrieve many of those calls when sued. A debt collector's tapes may be used to exonerate the debt collector.[344]

The same standards should apply to a collector recording the call as apply to the consumer, so that in some states, the collector will need the consumer's consent to record the call. Collectors may seek to obtain that consent by informing the consumer that the call will be recorded for quality assurance purposes. It is unclear whether the consumer's silence after that announcement is sufficient consent.

11.5.2.6 How to Use Recordings to Support a Case

Where allowed under state law, consumers sometimes tape record their telephone conversations with debt collectors without disclosing that the recording is taking place.[345] Tape recording reduces contests about the actual contents of abusive calls. Several courts have issued protective orders which prevent the disclosure of consumer's recordings until after the debt collector who was unknowingly recorded has been deposed.[346] These courts reason that the party in possession of the tape has a right to hear the unrefreshed and unpolished recollections of the person on tape, and that pre-deposition access to the tapes will give the recorded person an opportunity to tailor their testimony to fit the contents of the tape.[347]

One court has noted that problems associated with tailored testimony have been long recognized and practices such as witness sequestration have been developed to combat the effects.[348] These courts reason that post-deposition disclosure of the recording will allow the deponent to explain any inconsistencies at trial, thereby mitigating any prejudice.[349] Although the weight of authority suggests that recordings should be withheld until after the person recorded has been deposed, it is a matter of the trial court's discretion.[350]

Parties who have been unknowingly recorded argue that it is unfair to depose them without knowledge of a recording's contents while the other party is deposed after hearing the tapes.[351] Courts that have accepted this argument reason 341 See Iowa S. Ct. Bd. of Prof'l Ethics and Conduct v. Plumb, No. 91/95-1852 (Iowa 1996) (taping private conversation with magistrate was unethical, even if done to record threats of false accusation of drug dealing). See also Parrot v. Wilson, 707 F.2d 1262 (11th Cir. 1983) (any work product privilege that may have applied to taped conversation was lost because of unethical secret tape recording); Meacham v. Outdoor World Corp., 12 ABA/BNA Lawyers Manual on Prof'l Conduct 443 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Nov. 27, 1996) (disqualifying class counsel for secretly taping adverse party's phone call).

342 See § 1.5.3, supra; § 11.5.4.2, infra (regarding debt collector's obligation under Reg. F § 1006.100(b) to retain call recording for three years after call is recorded).

343 Walker v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2012 WL 2839807 (D.N.J. July 10, 2012). See § 11.5.2.6, infra (introducing calls as evidence at trial).

344 See Ford v. Principal Recovery Group, Inc., 2012 WL 930334 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2012) (tape transcript showed debt collector said debt had just come to "my office" rather than to collection agency's offices).

345 In some states, it is criminal for a party to tape record a call without disclosing that the call is being recorded. In those and additional states, it may be unethical for an attorney to advise tape recording without mutual consent. See §§ 11.5.2.2, 11.5.2.3, supra.

346 See McQueen v. Huddleston, 2015 WL 3746733 (W.D.N.Y. June 15, 2015); Poppo v. Aon Risk Services, Inc., 2000 WL 1800746, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 6, 2000); Walls v. Int'l Paper Co., 192 F.R.D. 294, 298–300 (D. Kan. 2000); Ward v. CSX Transp., Inc., 161 F.R.D. 38, 41 (E.D.N.C. 1995); Torres-Paulett v. Tradition Mariner, Inc., 157 F.R.D. 487, 488 (S.D. Cal. 1994); Blount v. Wake Elec. Membership Corp., 162 F.R.D. 102, 104 (E.D.N.C. 1993); Sherrell Perfumes, Inc. v. Revlon, Inc., 77 F.R.D. 705, 707 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). See also Hildebrand v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 194 F.R.D. 432, 435 (D. Conn. 2000); Charles A. Wright, et al., 8 Federal Practice and Procedure Civ. 2d § 2015 n.26 (compiling authorities).

347 See Young v. BC Services, Inc., 2011 WL 2443765 (S.D. Ala. 2011); Poppo v. Aon Risk Services, Inc., 2000 WL 1800746, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 6, 2000); Walls v. Int'l Paper Co., 192 F.R.D. 294, 298–300 (D. Kan. 2000); Torres-Paulett v. Tradition Mariner, Inc., 157 F.R.D. 487, 489 (S.D. Cal. 1994); Sherrell Perfumes, Inc. v. Revlon, Inc., 77 F.R.D. 705, 707 (S.D.N.Y. 1977).

348 Poppo v. Aon Risk Services, Inc., 2000 WL 1800746, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 6, 2000).

349 Torres-Paulett v. Tradition Mariner, Inc., 157 F.R.D. 487, 489 (S.D. Cal. 1994). See Walls v. Int'l Paper Co., 192 F.R.D. 294, 299 (D. Kan. 2000). See also Sherrell Perfumes, Inc. v. Revlon, Inc., 77 F.R.D. 705, 707 (S.D.N.Y. 1977).

350 See Doebele v. Sprint Corp., 2001 WL 392513, at *2 (D. Kan. Apr. 10, 2001), citing Pro Billiards Tour Ass'n, Inc. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco, Co., 187 F.R.D. 229, 230 (M.D.N.C. 1999).

351 See Fausto v. Credigy Services Corp., 251 F.R.D. 436 (N.D. Cal. June 19, 2008) (denying protective order to produce tape recordings only after depositions were completed because it would be unfair not to that withholding of certain recordings encourages trying to create inconsistencies in deposition testimony to be used as impeachment evidence during trial.[352] Another court decided that if "the real value of the recording is not in impeaching a witness, but in the facts and issues determined by the recording," then the recording must be disclosed prior to the deposition of the party who was unknowingly recorded.[353]

Defendants may try to avoid having to give a deposition before hearing the tapes by deposing the plaintiff first and asking to hear the tape and testimony about it at the deposition. In order to avoid this, plaintiffs should notice their depositions as soon as possible and urge the court to adhere to the customary practice of holding depositions in the order that they were noticed.[354]

If the recording was obtained through legal methods, keep in mind the evidentiary elements in using such recordings at trial.[355] This may include verification of the speakers, date of the recording, recording device used, and whether any changes or deletions were made.[356] The Eighth Circuit considered seven factors when determining the admissibility of tape-recorded conversations, including:

1. That the recording device was capable of taking the conversation now offered in evidence.
2. That the operator of the device was competent to operate the device.
3. That the recording is authentic and correct.
4. That changes, additions or deletions have not been made in the recording.
5. That the recording has been preserved in a manner that is shown to the court.
6. That the speakers are identified.
7. That the conversation elicited was made voluntarily and in good faith, without any kind of inducement.[357]

Courts have since used the seven factors as a guide to review the totality of the circumstances regarding the reliability and the admissibility of the recordings.[358]

11.5.3 The Collector's Own Documents

The collector's records of collection contacts are often useful; obtaining them should be a priority at this stage. The database screens that contain the dates and amounts of payments should be requested in discovery from the creditor, collection agency, or attorney. These records, telephone logs, e-mails between collector and creditor, and recordings of telephone conversations may be central to the issue of liability on the purported debt. The documents in the creditor's and collector's account file (including, in some cases, references to tape recordings), may identify at least some of the dates and contents of collection contacts.

These documents are maintained by most collection agencies[359], as well as by creditors.[360] If these documents are not furnished voluntarily, they should be obtained through discovery.[361] If they are not available, their absence (or destruction) should be thoroughly explored to determine whether or not a basis for an adverse inference or presumption may exist.[362] In many cases, it can be informative to obtain communications between the collection law firm or collection agency and the creditor or debt buyer. These communications may be found in email or some other electronic system.

allow defendant to access recording); Stamps v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 232 F.R.D. 419, 420, 424 (N.D. Ga. 2005) (plaintiff failed to articulate value of defendant's unrefreshed recollection of events giving rise to this litigation in seeking to delay production of recordings until after depositions); Smith v. WNA Carthage, L.L.C., 200 F.R.D. 576, 579 (E.D. Tex. 2001); Roberts v. Americable Int'l, Inc., 883 F. Supp. 499, 504 (E.D. Cal. 1995). See also Evan v. Estell, 203 F.R.D. 172, 175 (M.D. Pa. 2001); Frazier v. Southeastern Penn. Transp. Auth., 161 F.R.D. 309 (E.D. Pa. 1995).

352 See Fausto v. Credigy Services Corp., 251 F.R.D. 436 (N.D. Cal June 19, 2008) (denying protective order to produce tape recordings only after depositions were completed because it would be unfair not to allow the defendant to access the recording); Stamps v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 232 F.R.D. 419, 420, 424 (N.D. Ga. 2005) (plaintiff failed to articulate the value of defendant's unrefreshed recollection of the events giving rise to this litigation in seeking to delay production of recordings until after depositions); Innovative Therapy Prods., Inc. v. Roe, 1998 WL 293995, at *2 (E.D. La. June 4, 1998); Roberts v. Americable Int'l, Inc., 883 F. Supp. 499, 505 (E.D. Cal. 1995).

353 Pro Billiards Tour Ass'n, Inc. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 187 F.R.D. 229, 231 (M.D.N.C. 1999). See also Innovative Therapy Prods. v. Roe, 1998 WL 293995, at *2 (E.D. La. June 4, 1998).

354 See, e.g., Sprague Elec. Co. v. Cornell-Dubilier Elec., Corp., 4 F.R.D. 113, 114 (D. Del. 1944).

355 Fed. R. Evid. 901 ("To satisfy the requirement of authenticating or identifying an item of evidence, the proponent must produce evidence sufficient to support a finding that the item is what the proponent claims it is."). See § 11.5.4.6, infra.

356 See, e.g., Hochroth v. Ally Bank, 461 F. Supp. 3d 986, 999 (D. Haw. 2020); Asia Econ. Inst. v. Xcentric Ventures, L.L.C., 2010 WL 4977054, at *12 (C.D. Cal. July 19, 2010).

357 United States v. McMillan, 508 F.2d 101, 104 (8th Cir. 1974).

358 United States v. Oslund, 453 F.3d 1048 (8th Cir. July 14, 2006); United States v. Matta-Ballesteros, 71 F.3d 754, 768 (9th Cir. 1995); United States v. Clark, 986 F.2d 65, 68 (4th Cir. 1993).

359 As of November 30, 2021, debt collectors must retain evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and Regulation F starting on the date that the debt collector begins collection activity on a debt until three years after the debt collector's last collection activity on the debt. For phone recordings, the debt collector must retain the recordings for three years after the dates of the telephone calls. However, a debt collector is not required to create or maintain additional records to evidence compliance or record calls, but only must retain applicable records, including call recordings, that are already created in the ordinary course of its business. Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-2. See § 11.5.4.2, infra.

360 Collection agencies that do no more than send a series of letters to consumers are unlikely to keep records of contacts other than an identification of which series was sent to whom.

361 Sample discovery documents are available online as companion material to this treatise.

362 See Rogers v. Exxon Research & Eng'g Co., 550 F.2d 834, 843 (3d Cir. 1997); United States v. Roelof Constr. Co., 418 F.2d 1328, 1331 (9th Cir. 1969). See also Cooling Sys. & Flexibles v. Stuart Radiator, 777 F.2d 485 (9th Cir. 1985) (failure to produce evidence may result in negative inference). Cf. Wilson v. Aargon Agency Inc., 2015 WL 7185451 (D. Nev. Nov. 13, 2015) (collector must offer evidence regarding destroyed policy manuals outside of presence of jury).

A collector's notes regarding collection contacts present several difficulties. If handwritten, they may be barely legible. Often the notes are computer recorded and contain unfamiliar abbreviations, such as "PH" for "phoned," "POE" for "place of employment," and "S" for "spouse," and unfamiliar codes, such as a series of digits representing a series of letters, a referral to a collection agency, or a phone call. Appendix G, infra, sets out frequently used codes.[363]

The record and abbreviations can usually be deciphered, with some time and patience, using the following method. Duplicate what is written on the card or computer record from the beginning, writing out each word, abbreviation, or letter that is obvious, and leaving blanks and question marks when the writing or abbreviations are unclear. Patterns will develop to place abbreviations and illegible handwriting in sufficient context to make their meaning clear.

A friendly bank examiner, collection attorney, or former collection employee can be of great assistance, since many codes and abbreviations are used industry-wide. Employee training programs and operations manuals may also be helpful in deciphering the codes and abbreviations. In discovery, it is important to request a key to the abbreviations and codes used in the call logs and notes.

After obtaining and examining the relevant documents and information, the client should be interviewed again to verify dates, fill in gaps, solve discrepancies in developing a written chronology, and determine if any follow-up discovery is needed to prove each and every element of the claim.[364]

It is not unusual for the collector's records to be incomplete (for example, failing to record abusive collection contacts).

11.5.4 Discovery

11.5.4.1 Initial Focus

Interrogatories, admissions, and a request for production of documents should be served with the complaint or soon thereafter to maintain the momentum of the case and to obtain critical evidence while it is still fresh and available. Include a request for a key to the codes and abbreviations used in the collector's records. Sample discovery requests and depositions are included in this treatise's digital version under Companion Material>Pleadings and Discovery.[365]

In order to establish the contents of collection records as evidence, and ensure they can be admitted into evidence, plaintiff's counsel can depose a custodian of the records or another qualified witness to establish a hearsay exception under Federal Rule of Evidence 803(6). Identify the best adverse witnesses to depose for purposes of introducing and interpreting the collector's records. Employees that worked on the account, their supervisors, their job duties, their roles relative to the account, their last known address(es) and telephone numbers, and their current employers must be identified.

A deposition of a witness familiar with the codes and abbreviations used can provide information regarding any unsolved codes or abbreviations. A witness familiar with the collection attempts on the consumer's file can help determine if the defendant has any independent recollection of their phone calls to the consumer.

To the extent permissible under local ethics rules, recent former employees of the collector should be identified and located, since they may be less hostile to the client and more willing to provide complete information about the collector's business routines and record-keeping methods. Particularly if resources for depositions are limited, it may be worthwhile to interview any former employees prior to taking their deposition to determine if they are cooperative and able to help. However, some states may not permit ex parte communications with former employees as they may be considered represented by their former employer's legal counsel.[366]

If contact with former employees is permitted, local ethics rulings may require that disclosures be made by the consumer's attorney about the relationships involved.[367] If no former employee is available, it may be worthwhile deposing a lower-ranking collector employee before, or rather than, the manager, because they may have less loyalty to the debt collector and less of a financial stake in defending the collector's practices.

Debt collectors may argue that Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(b)(1) prevents discovery about collection letters, contacts, and other conduct that is not specifically pleaded in the consumer's complaint because such a request is not relevant or "proportional to the needs of the case." Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(b)(1) requires "proportionality" of the requested discovery to the needs of the case as a factor in determining allowable discovery.[368]

---

363 See also Artese v. Academy Collection Serv., 1997 WL 509404, at *2 (D. Conn. July 28, 1997) (denying motion to compel production of "plain English transcript" of defendant debt collector's records, including meaning of codes and abbreviations, because specimen attached by defendant seemed entirely understandable and no "plain English transcript" was necessary).

364 See, e.g., Burton v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., 934 F.3d 572 (7th Cir. 2019) (affirming summary judgment for collection law firm and collection agency on §§ 1692d and 1692e claims where consumer, who denied that debt was his, failed to present sufficient evidence that alleged debt was consumer debt).

365 See § 1.1.1.3, supra.

366 See, e.g., S. Becker, Discovery of Information and Documents from a Litigant's Former Employees: Synergy and Synthesis of Civil Rules, Ethical Standards, Privilege Doctrines, and Common Law Principles, 81 Neb. L. Rev. 868 (2003). See also Intergen N.V. v. Grina, 231 F. Supp. 2d 393 (D. Mass. 2002) (granting counsel permission to speak to opposing party's former employees); ABA Model Rule of Prof'l Conduct 4.2 cmt. 7 (lawyer may communicate with former employees without consent of former employer's counsel).

367 See S. Becker, Discovery of Information and Documents from a Litigant's Former Employees: Synergy and Synthesis of Civil Rules, Ethical Standards, Privilege Doctrines, and Common Law Principles, 81 Neb. L. Rev. 868 (2003). See also ABA Model Rule of Prof'l Conduct 4.3 (lawyer must disclose that they are not disinterested).

368 "Parties may obtain discovery regarding any nonprivileged matter that is relevant to any party's claim or defense and proportional to the

These arguments should fail, since one of the factors that the court must consider in setting the amount of statutory damages is the frequency and persistence of noncompliance by the debt collector.[369] Collection contacts other than the ones pleaded in the complaint are also relevant to show intent, another listed factor for setting statutory damages.[370]

Indeed, the Advisory Committee Notes of Rule 26(b)(1) list "other incidents of the same type, or involving the same product," as an example of information that may well be relevant and discoverable under the new standard. The revised rule also makes clear that information is discoverable even if inadmissible, as long as it is relevant to the subject matter involved in the action: "Information within this scope of discovery need not be admissible in evidence to be discoverable." Discovery of nonprivileged information not admissible in evidence remains available, so long as it is otherwise within the scope of discovery. Nonetheless, it is prudent to plead that the debt collector's violations "include, but are not limited to," the specific contacts set forth in the complaint.

A more serious problem may be the difficulty of conducting discovery to determine whether there are grounds for additional legal claims. For example, the consumer may want to plead a defamation claim in addition to the FDCPA claim but needs additional information about the extent to which the debt collector communicated with other people. Consider a discovery plan at the time of pleading and try to plead some facts or some claims on which discovery into missing elements can be based. In addition, a debt collector may first have to establish that the requested discovery is burdensome, before addressing the issue of proportionality.[371]

A debt collector may provide the court with its records, such as call logs or collector's notes, to show that a contact alleged by the consumer did not occur.[372] The consumer's call log or notes, or detailed memory, could create a triable issue in such a situation.

If the collector provides such evidence outside the pleadings in a motion to dismiss, if the court allows such submissions, it may convert the motion to a motion for summary judgment.[373] In either case, the consumer's attorney should oppose such motions, arguing that more time for discovery is necessary, and asserting the evidence sought that would create an issue of fact to defeat the collector's motion to dismiss[374] or summary judgment motion.[375]

An affidavit submitted by the plaintiff's attorney in opposition to a motion to dismiss, outlining the multiple items sought that are relevant to their claims, may be sufficient to establish that more time for discovery is needed, and may forestall conversion of any motion to dismiss to a motion for summary judgment.[376] The Second Circuit found an abuse of discretion when summary judgment was not postponed until the consumer had an opportunity to depose the defendant's affiants.[377] needs of the case, considering the importance of the issues at stake in the action, the amount in controversy, the parties' relative access to relevant information, the parties' resources, the importance of the discovery in resolving the issues, and whether the burden or expense of the proposed discovery outweighs its likely benefit. Information within this scope of discovery need not be admissible in evidence to be discoverable."

---

369 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(b)(1); Shields v. Prof'l Bur. of Collection of Maryland, Inc., 2021 WL 1736862 (D. Kan. 2021) (allowing discovery beyond just letters defendant mailed to plaintiff, in part, because claims for damages includes "frequency and persistence of noncompliance" as factor); Kimbro v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1816820 (D. Conn. July 22, 2002) (overruling collector's objections to routine FDCPA discovery requests—seeking, inter alia, itemization of debt, plain English translation of its collection/contact notes, details of collector's reporting to credit bureaus, later changes made to subject dun, copies of other complaints and judgments against collector, and arrangement and communication between collector and creditor—as each was found to meet standards for discovery in federal court; inviting consumer to request award of attorney fees for successfully prosecuting discovery motion). Cf. Navarro v. Eskanos & Adler, 2006 WL 3533039 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 7, 2006) (granting consumer leave to amend to assert collection lawyers who deceptively rubber -stamped collection letters without legal review, as consumer promptly requested leave to amend after learning of this deceptive practice in depositions). But see Lewis v. ACB Bus. Serv., Inc., 135 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998) (debtor not entitled to discovery of contract between creditor and debt collector where debtor did not dispute existence of debt and debt collector did not dispute that it had sent letter at issue; thus questions of whether letter was sent pursuant to contract or whether debt collector acted outside terms of contract were not relevant).

370 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(b)(1). Fed. R. Evid. 404(b) provides that evidence of other acts is admissible to show intent.

371 See Halvorsen v. Credit Adjustments Inc., 2016 WL 1446219, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 11, 2016).

372 See Laabs v. ER Solutions, Inc., 2011 WL 1337100 (W.D. Pa. Apr. 7, 2011).

373 See Greater Balt. Ctr. for Pregnancy Concerns, Inc. v. Mayor of Balt., 721 F.3d 264, 281 (4th Cir. 2013).

374 Jackson v. Sagal, 370 F. Supp. 3d 592 (D. Md. 2019).

375 See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(d); Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003); Copeland v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, Inc., 2019 WL 3777630 (E.D. Mo. Aug. 12, 2019) (allowed collection agency discovery to ascertain the circumstances surrounding the challenged telephone call and the consumer's resulting "belief" and "understanding" before summary judgment); Jackson v. Sagal, 370 F. Supp. 3d 592, 599 (D. Md. Mar. 29, 2019) (court declined to convert motion to dismiss to motion for summary judgment because discovery was necessary); Black v. AFNI, Inc., 2016 WL 4249491 (D.N.J. Aug. 10, 2016); Miller v. Account Mgmt. Services, 2008 WL 596011 (N.D. Ind. Feb. 29, 2008). But see Raburn v. Community Mgmt., L.L.C., 761 Fed. Appx. 263, 268 (5th Cir. 2019) (Rule 56(d) relief denied where plaintiff did not comply with all elements of Rule); Argentieri v. Fisher Landscapes, Inc., 15 F. Supp. 2d 55 (D. Mass. 1998) (debtor not entitled to opportunity to discover evidence in support of debtor's claim that law firm collector was "debt collector" under FDCPA, given lack of any concrete basis in record for questioning firm's affidavit that no more than 0.4% of its practice was devoted to debt collection).

376 See Jackson v. Sagal, 370 F. Supp. 3d 592, 598 (D. Md. Mar. 29, 2019) (affidavit listed multiple items for which plaintiff sought additional discovery; court declined to convert motion to dismiss to motion for summary judgment because discovery was necessary).

377 Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292 (2d Cir. 2003).

11.5.4.2 Areas of Inquiry Permitted

Courts have required debt collectors to provide a wide variety of types of information in discovery,[378] including information about the collector's internal procedures, business, and assets, such as:

- The collector's internal manuals;[379]
- The process by which a dunning letter was generated;[380]
- Written procedures and protocols the collector used or employed in complying with the FDCPA;[381]
- Internal procedures for accessing and/or reporting to the credit bureaus;[382]
- Codes used in the collector's collection records;[383]
- Liability insurance policies;[384]
- Tax returns,[385] financial documents,[386] and profit and loss statements[387] to determine net worth for class statutory damages;
- Where defendant's production of its balance sheets was incomplete as evidence of its net worth, production of a current audited financial statement with the underlying accountant's notes;[388] and
- Debt collection employees' personnel file,[389] job descriptions,[390] home addresses, and phone numbers.[391]

378 See generally Appx. E.3.9, infra.

379 Barnello v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5782346 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 2, 2015); Swelnis v. Universal Fid. L.P., 2014 WL 1571323 (N.D. Ind. Apr. 17, 2014) (training materials); Arboleya v. Firstsource Advantage, L.L.C., 2010 WL 11570727 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 1, 2010); Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 2010 WL 455476 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2010) (debt collector was to not redact any discrete segments of its policy and procedure manuals that were relevant to complaint); Hastings v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2007 WL 461477 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 7, 2007); Boutvis v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2002 WL 971666 (D. Conn. May 3, 2002); Artese v. Academy Collection Serv., 1997 WL 509404 (D. Conn. July 28, 1997) (limiting request for policy or training manuals regarding collection practices to any manual containing provisions about dealing directly with debtors who had retained counsel).

380 McWatters v. Cherry Creek Strategic Advisory, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2957739 (W.D. Mich. July 1, 2014); Kimbro v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1816820 (D. Conn. July 22, 2002); Yancey v. Hooten, 180 F.R.D. 203 (D. Conn. 1998).

381 See Barnello v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5782346 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 2, 2015); Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, 304 F.R.D. 165 (W.D.N.Y. 2015), aff'd, 2015 WL 4483959 (W.D.N.Y. July 22, 2015); Godson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 2014 WL 4627216 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 15, 2014); Drossin v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2008 WL 5381815 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 19, 2008); Hastings v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2007 WL 461477 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 6, 2007); Boutvis v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2002 WL 971666 (D. Conn. May 3, 2002).

382 Kimbro v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1816820 (D. Conn. July 22, 2002); Boutvis v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2002 WL 971666 (D. Conn. May 3, 2002).

383 McWatters v. Cherry Creek Strategic Advisory, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2957739 (W.D. Mich. July 1, 2014); Kimbro v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1816820 (D. Conn. July 22, 2002); Yancey v. Hooten, 180 F.R.D. 203 (D. Conn. 1998). But see Artese v. Academy Collection Serv., 1997 WL 509404 (D. Conn. July 28, 1997) (denying motion to compel production of "plain English transcript" of defendant debt collector's records).

384 E.g., Godson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 2014 WL 4627216 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 15, 2014); Tzanetis v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2009 WL 5128892 (D. Conn. Dec. 18, 2009) (all insurance documents); Yancey v. Hooten, 180 F.R.D. 203 (D. Conn. 1998). See also Hill v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3014945 (S.D. Cal. July 3, 2014).

385 Armamburu v. Healthcare Fin. Services, Inc., 2007 WL 2020181 (E.D.N.Y. July 6, 2007); Mailloux v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2002 WL 246771 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 21, 2002) (entitled to discover defendant's tax returns and other financial information); Hanks v. Zenner, 2000 WL 1281321 (W.D. La. June 30, 2000), rev'd without op., 244 F.3d 134 (5th Cir. 2000); Yancey v. Hooten, 180 F.R.D. 203 (D. Conn. 1998). But see Garcia v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 56147 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 11, 2006) (mag.; allowing consumer to depose individuals who had some financial interest in debt collector, but was not entitled to obtain their personal financial documents at early stage of litigation).

386 See Matthias v. Tate & Kirlin Assoc., Inc., 465 F. Supp. 3d. 878 (W.D. Wis. 2020); Vinas v. Credit Bur. of Napa Cty., Inc., 2015 WL 5009981 (D. Md. Aug. 21, 2015); Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, 304 F.R.D. 165 (W.D.N.Y. 2015), aff'd, 2015 WL 4483959 (W.D.N.Y. July 22, 2015); Green v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 997 F. Supp. 2d 932 (S.D. Ind. 2014); Godson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 2014 WL 4627216 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 15, 2014); Gold v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 3371012 (N.D. Cal. July 9, 2014); Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2013 WL 1156447 (D. Neb. Mar. 20, 2013). Cf. Swelnis v. Universal Fid. L.P., 2014 WL 1571323 (N.D. Ind. Apr. 17, 2014) (plaintiff's pre-class certification motion to compel production of net worth information taken under advisement pending court's ruling on summary judgment).

387 Wise v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1597450 (D. Conn. May 7, 2012) (financial documents sought could be relevant to issue of "net worth"); Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 2010 WL 455476 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2010) (compelling evidence on net worth prior to certification, in part because it was volunteered); Nicander v. Hecker, 2009 WL 5084087 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2009) (compelling debt collector to produce current tax return and prepared financial statements). See also Miller v. Abrams, Fensterman, Fensterman, Eisman, Greenberg, Formato & Einiger, L.L.P., 2011 WL 6105033 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 7, 2011) (entitled to defendant attorney's net worth as well as that of defendant law firm); Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 3458298 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 23, 2009) (ordered discovery into the individual defendants' personal net worth relevant to 1% class damages calculation; rejected bifurcation of liability and damages); Trevino v. ACB Am., Inc., 232 F.R.D. 612 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 27, 2006); Hanks v. Zenner, 2000 WL 1281321 (W.D. La. June 30, 2000) (by agreement, documents ordered subject to a confidentiality order; tax returns were relevant to punitive damages), rev'd without op., 244 F.3d 134 (5th Cir. 2000).

388 Matthias v. Tate & Kirlin Assoc., Inc., 465 F. Supp. 3d 878 (W.D. Wis. 2020).

389 See Arboleya v. Firstsource Advantage, L.L.C., 2010 WL 11570727 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 1, 2010). But see Mohr v. Sec. Credit Services, L.L.C., 141 F. Supp. 3d 179 (N.D.N.Y. 2015) (debt collector personnel files denied to consumer).

390 Davis v. Creditors Interchange Receivable Mgmt., L.L.C., 585 F. Supp. 2d 968 (N.D. Ohio 2008); Yancey v. Hooten, 180 F.R.D. 203 (D. Conn. 1998) (relevant to claim that attorney collector was in fact not acting as attorney, but as unlicensed collection agency). See also Hill v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3014945 (S.D. Cal. July 3, 2014) (ordered to produce all of its organizational charts).

391 CFPB v. Navient Corp., 2018 WL 3824367, at *3–4 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 10, 2018); Mohr v. Sec. Credit Services, L.L.C., 141 F. Supp. 3d 179

Consumers can also discover information about the collector's contacts with creditors, assignors, consumer reporting agencies, and other third parties, such as:

- The amount of money the debt collector paid to purchase the debt;[392]
- Billing records of the defendant's collection lawyer;[393]
- Business information conveyed to legal counsel;[394]
- Collection lawyer's retainer agreement and letter to client requesting information about the consumer's debt;[395]
- Information regarding the contractual relationship between the debt collector and a collection law firm,[396] the creditor,[397] or the entity it purchased the debt from;[398]
- All agreements the collector had with consumer reporting agencies;[399]
- All information provided by the collector to any credit reporting agencies;[400]
- Information conveyed between the debt collector and the creditor[401] or debt buyer, including emails;[402]
- Student loan contracts and loan payments from the collector's technical school client;[403] and
- Attorney collector's in-state client list and annual advertisements.[404]

Courts have allowed consumers to seek information about the consumer's account at the collector and the collector's contacts with the consumer, including:

- All collection records regarding the consumer's account;[405]
- An itemization of the debt;[406]
- Information about the ownership of the debt being collected;[407]
- Information about the telephone calls placed by the debt collector to the consumer;[408] and
- Information about any persons who drafted and/or approved the form and content of collection letter sent to the consumer.

(N.D.N.Y. 2015); Florida First Fin. Group, Inc. v. Castro, 815 So. 2d 789 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) (neither privacy laws nor FDCPA prevented discovery of home addresses and phone numbers of debt collection employees). See also Hardesty v. Anthony A. Petrocchi, P.C., 2012 WL 1744991 (W.D. Wash. May 16, 2012); Davis v. Creditors Interchange Receivable Mgmt., L.L.C., 585 F. Supp. 2d 968, 978 (N.D. Ohio 2008) (collection agency ordered "to provide the plaintiffs with a list of current and former employees, their last known contact information, and the position these employees held during the time period relevant to this case").

392 Boutvis v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2002 WL 971666 (D. Conn. May 3, 2002).

393 See Leasure v. Willmark Communities, Inc., 2012 WL 4361555 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 21, 2012) (records not privileged and relevant to whether defendant collected debts through its lawyer).

394 See Harris v. D. Scott Carruthers & Assoc., 2010 WL 610978 (D. Neb. Feb. 18, 2010). But see Baylor v. Mitchell Rubenstein & Assoc., 857 F.3d 939 (D.C. Cir. May 30, 2017) (attorney-client privilege attached to communications between collection attorney defendant and collection agency, barring discovery of student loan documents obtained by collection attorney).

395 See Torres v. Toback, Bernstein & Reiss L.L.P., 278 F.R.D. 321 (E.D.N.Y. 2012).

396 See Gomez v. Niemann & Heyer, L.L.P., 2016 WL 8673847 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 5, 2016) (documents identifying its employees, partners, and contractors involved in collections and their agreements, compensation, and time sheets); Barnello v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5782346 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 2, 2015); Avoletta v. Danforth, 2012 WL 3113151 (D. Conn. July 31, 2012) (rejecting collection lawyer's claims of attorney-client privilege, and ordered entire collection file be produced); Bianchi v. Bronson & Migliaccio, L.L.P., 2010 WL 940993 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 12, 2010).

397 See Hunsinger v. SKO Brenner Am., Inc., 2014 WL 114348 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 9, 2014); Torres v. Toback, Bernstein & Reiss L.L.P., 278 F.R.D. 321 (E.D.N.Y. 2012); Dickard v. Oklahoma Mgmt. Services for Physicians, L.L.C., 2007 WL 2460618 (W.D. Ark. Aug. 24, 2007). But see MacDermid v. Discover Fin. Services, 488 F.3d 721 (6th Cir. 2007) (consumer was not entitled to discovery on relationship between Discover and collection employees).

398 Barnello v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5782346 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 2, 2015) (materials to be produced included agreement to buy debt); Gold v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 3371012 (N.D. Cal. July 9, 2014); Kimbro v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1816820 (D. Conn. July 22, 2002); Boutvis v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2002 WL 971666 (D. Conn. May 3, 2002). See also Tzanetis v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2009 WL 5128892 (D. Conn. Dec. 18, 2009) (compelling debt collection law firm to state relationships among defendant, its principals, and others); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 2009 WL 44551 (D. Mont. Jan. 6, 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (compelling collection law firm to produce its retainer agreement with debt buyer it had represented, as agreement was not protected by attorney-client privilege, it is information preparatory to obtaining legal advice and not provided to obtain legal advice); Trevino v. ACB Am., Inc., 232 F.R.D. 612 (N.D. Cal. 2006) (providing redacted agreement between debt buyer and its collection agency was improper).

399 Boutvis v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2002 WL 971666 (D. Conn. May 3, 2002).

400 Witt v. GC Services L.P., 307 F.R.D. 554 (D. Colo. 2014); Miranda v. Integrity Solution Services, Inc., 2014 WL 519239 (D. Colo. Feb. 10, 2014).

401 Witt v. GC Services L.P., 307 F.R.D. 554 (D. Colo. 2014); McWatters v. Cherry Creek Strategic Advisory, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2957739 (W.D. Mich. July 1, 2014); Martin v. Client Services, Inc., 2010 WL 3702461 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 16, 2010).

402 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (emails introduced to rebut bona fide error defense).

403 See Annunziato v. Collecto, Inc., 304 F.R.D. 360 (E.D.N.Y. 2015).

404 Yancey v. Hooten, 180 F.R.D. 203 (D. Conn. 1998).

405 E.g., Barnello v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5782346 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 2, 2015); McWatters v. Cherry Creek Strategic Advisory, L.L.C., 2014 WL 2957739 (W.D. Mich. July 1, 2014); Tzanetis v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2009 WL 5128892 (D. Conn. Dec. 18, 2009) (date and nature of all documents and information defendant received about plaintiff's account, all documents reflecting purchase or ownership of plaintiff's account); Yancey v. Hooten, 180 F.R.D. 203 (D. Conn. 1998). See also Kimbro v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1816820 (D. Conn. July 22, 2002). But see Matthias v. Tate & Kirlin Assoc., Inc., 465 F. Supp. 3d 878, 880-881 (W.D. Wis. 2020) (denying motion to compel production of the class members' full account histories, because Plaintiff was already provided identity and phone numbers of class members).

406 Kimbro v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1816820 (D. Conn. July 22, 2002).

407 Hunsinger v. SKO Brenner Am., Inc., 2014 WL 114348 (N.D. Tex. Jan. 9, 2014); Padgett v. OneWest Bank, 2010 WL 3239350 (N.D. W. Va. Aug. 16, 2010) (ownership of underlying debt was relevant to whether defendant was FDCPA debt collector).

408 Martin v. Client Services, Inc., 2010 WL 3702461 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 16, 2010).

For class actions, additional discovery has been allowed, such as:

- A sample of consumer class members' credit card agreements;[409] and
- Discovery regarding the number of class members and the defendant's net worth.[410]

Consumers can also discover information about the collector's contacts with other consumers and information about past collection conduct, including:

- Information regarding lender's attorney fees and costs charged to consumers;[411]
- The number of cases in which the defendant had filed suit in the state,[412] or letters sent;[413] and
- Documents that the collectors had at the time of filing a state debt collection suit.[414]

Consumers can also discover information related directly to the defendant's defense to the FDCPA case, including:

- The defense counsel's time records in the case[415] and case notes;[416]
- The basis for the defendant's assertion of a bona fide error[417] and other defenses;[418]
- Information necessary to supplement debt buyer's responses found in collection files of debt buyer's debt collection counsel;[419]
- Information bearing on the FDCPA violations,[420] such as a witness who is competent to testify about the design, use, and efficacy of the collection letter and enclosed educational brochure; and
- Depositions of defendant's five fact witnesses where "reasonable and proportional in light of the issues at stake."[421]

On the other hand, a court found disproportionate the consumers' request in an individual action for information on complaints filed against a bank regarding its foreclosure practices in the last three years, since this would not help establish the bank's intent nearly as effectively as discovery related to the bank's specific treatment of the plaintiffs.[422] Another court found a consumer's request of "all written communication" was not proportional to the consumer's needs in obtaining evidence of frequency and persistence of noncompliance to determine statutory damages. The court instead allowed the 409 See Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, 304 F.R.D. 165 (W.D.N.Y. 2015).

410 Id. But see Tourgeman v. Nelson & Kennard, 900 F.3d 1105, 1108, 1113 (9th Cir. 2018) (consumer had burden at trial to produce evidence of debt collector's net worth to establish entitlement to class statutory damages under FDCPA and there was no showing that consumer could not obtain net worth evidence through discovery); Vandehey v. Client Services, Inc., 390 F. Supp. 3d 956, 964 (E.D. Wis. 2019) (defendant's net worth limitation on liability is affirmative defense on which defendant has burden of proof); Hill v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3014945 (S.D. Cal. July 3, 2014) (defendant's response that 1% of its net worth exceeds maximum recovery available to class is sufficient).

411 Holloway v. Pekay, 1996 WL 19580 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 18, 1996).

412 See Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 2010 WL 455476 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2010) (compelling defendant to state number of its collection accounts and number on which suit initiated); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 928 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Yancey v. Hooten, 180 F.R.D. 203 (D. Conn. 1998) (relevant to whether threat of suit was intended). See also Davis v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 3476523 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 15, 2007); Hastings v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2007 WL 461477 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 6, 2007) (compelled to provide files associated with collection suits in U.S. or a sample, or stipulated that more than fifty were filed after statute of limitations ran).

413 Gold v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 3371012 (N.D. Cal. July 9, 2014).

414 See Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, 304 F.R.D. 165 (W.D.N.Y. 2015) (cardholder agreements), aff'd, 2015 WL 4483959 (W.D.N.Y. July 22, 2015); Davis v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 3476523 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 15, 2007). See also Hill v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2014 WL 3014945 (S.D. Cal. July 3, 2014) (debt buyer's spreadsheet did not adequately respond to RFPs, because it did not provide requested documents; consumer entitled to review documents that support information in spreadsheet).

415 See Mohr v. Sec. Credit Serv., L.L.C., 141 F. Supp. 3d 179 (N.D.N.Y. 2015); Agan v. Katzman & Korr, P.A., 328 F. Supp. 2d 1363 (S.D. Fla. 2004) (denying collector's motion to strike pre-billing worksheets attached to complaint). See also Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 2010 WL 455476 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2010) (compelling collection law firm to state compensation formula); Tzanetis v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2009 WL 5128892 (D. Conn. Dec. 18, 2009) (compelling all retainer agreements); Heller v. Graf, 2004 WL 2057894 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 25, 2004) (compelling discovery related to the defendant attorney's practice of law; defendant denied that he qualified as "debt collector"); § 11.9.9, infra. But see Okyere v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 300 F.R.D. 149 (S.D.N.Y. 2014); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Services, Inc., 2004 WL 1503953 (D. Kan. June 9, 2004) (refusing to order defendant to disclose hourly rate and total paid to its out-of-state attorney).

416 See Mohr v. Sec. Credit Serv., L.L.C., 141 F. Supp. 3d 179 (N.D.N.Y. 2015).

417 See Barnello v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5782346 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 2, 2015); Arboleya v. Firstsource Advantage, L.L.C., 2010 WL 11570727 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 1, 2010); Anchondo v. Anderson, Crenshaw & Assoc., 256 F.R.D. 661 (D.N.M. 2009).

418 See Gold v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 3371012 (N.D. Cal. July 9, 2014).

419 See Gold v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 3371012 (N.D. Cal. July 9, 2014).

420 See Hardesty v. Anthony A. Petrocchi, P.C., 2012 WL 1744991 (W.D. Wash. May 16, 2012) (allowing plaintiff to conduct relevant discovery concerning whether client was vicariously liable for attorney's unlawful debt collection activities, whether attorney had meaningfully reviewed account before sending attorney dun, and whether defendants intended to immediately take legal action as stated in dun).

421 See Shabazz v. Pinnacle Credit Services L.L.C., 2016 WL 6892948, at *3 (D. Colo. Nov. 23, 2016).

422 See Rose v. Bank of Am., 2017 WL 1197822, at *6 (E.D. Wash. Mar. 30, 2017). See also Witt v. GC Services L.P., 307 F.R.D. 554, 569 (D. Colo. 2014) (granting in part consumer's motion to compel, but also indicating that information might be more efficiently obtained in 30(b)(6) deposition, given "principles of proportionality, reasonableness, convenience, and common sense").

consumer to determine the number of similar collection letters sent to other consumers.[423]

11.5.4.3 Record Retention

Pursuant to Regulation F (effective November 30, 2021), a debt collector must follow specific rules for retaining certain records. Regulation F 1006.100 can be used to help with the development of discovery requests because it provides the requirements collectors must follow for the maintenance and retention of certain records and call recordings.

Regulation F § 1006.100 states:

> (a) In general. Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, a debt collector must retain records that are evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the FDCPA and this part starting on the date that the debt collector begins collection activity on a debt until three years after the debt collector's last collection activity on the debt.
>
> (b) Special rule for telephone call recordings. If a debt collector records telephone calls made in connection with the collection of a debt, the debt collector must retain the recording of each such telephone call for three years after the date of the call.

Section 1006.100 requires debt collectors to retain evidence of compliance and noncompliance with Regulation F. This includes records that show both that a) the debt collector performed the actions and made the disclosures required by the FDCPA and Regulation F and b) refrained from conduct prohibited under the FCPA and Regulation F.[424] Examples of such documents include:

i. Telephone call logs as evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the prohibition against harassing telephone calls in § 1006.14(b)(1); and
ii. Copies of documents provided to consumers as evidence that the debt collector provided the information required by §§ 1006.34 and 1006.38 and met the delivery requirements of § 1006.42.[425]

Also, records substantiating a collector's claim that a consumer owes a debt are considered records that are evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the Act and should be retained pursuant to Regulation F.[426] Such records are necessary to avoid deceptive or unfair collection practices by a debt collector.[427]

Importantly, a debt collector is not required to create or maintain additional records to evidence compliance, but only has to retain applicable records that are already created in the ordinary course of its business.[428] For example, a debt collector does not need to create a call log solely for the purpose of evidencing compliance or noncompliance with the Act and Regulation F, but if the collector already keeps a call log as part of its regular business practice, it must retain that record for the period stated. Likewise, Regulation F does not require debt collectors to record calls with consumers, but if they do, they must retain the recording for each call for three years after the date of the call.[429]

A debt collector can retain records electronically or by any method that would allow the collector easy access to the records and ensures that they can be reproduced accurately, including having a legal right to access records possessed by another entity.[430]

The timeframe for retention of such records starts "on the date that the debt collector begins collection activity on a debt."[431] The term "collection activity" is not defined in the Act or Regulation F. Limited clarification in the discussion of Regulation F provides that the time period does not start at the time the debt collector obtains the debt, but rather "that a debt collector must begin to retain records on the date that collection activity begins on a debt."[432] With this broad directive, "collection activity" should include any action taken to prepare an account for collection, such as scrubbing portfolios for certain types of accounts as discussed in § 1.5.5, supra. It should also include any communication or attempt to communicate with the consumer as well as any attempts to obtain location information from third parties. It should include all credit reporting on the debt and all communications related to a debt, regardless of whether the collector seeks payment, perhaps even including limited content messages under 12 CFR § 1006.2(d) and (j).

Such records must be retained "until three years after the debt collector's last collection activity on a debt."[433] The regulation again provides minimal clarity. An example that would start the running of the three-year clock includes a debt collector transferring the debt for consideration to another party, as long as that transfer represents the last collection activity on the debt.[434] A discharge of a debt in bankruptcy, however, would not start the three-year record retention clock if the collector continues collection activity on the debt after that time, for example, on a secured debt that survives the bankruptcy or on a lien that remains after the discharge.[435]

A collector may maintain policies for retention of records for more than three years. Or a collector may decide to delete the account records three years after the final collection activity, as long as no further collection activity occurs.[436] If the collector

423 Klein v. Affiliated Group, Inc., 2019 WL 1307884 (D. Minn. Mar. 22, 2019).
424 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-1.
425 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-1.
426 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,857 (Nov. 30, 2020).
427 Id.
428 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-2.
429 Reg. F § 1006.100(b); Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(b)-1.
430 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-3.
431 Reg. F § 1006.100(a).
432 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,855 (Nov. 30, 2020) (Part 1 of the debt collection rulemaking).
433 Reg. F § 1006.100(a).
434 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 100(a)-4.
435 Id.
436 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,857 (Nov. 30, 2020) (Part 1 of the debt collection rulemaking).

restarts collection activity on that same debt, however, having deleted the prior records would violate Regulation F.[437]

This is different for call recordings where the retention period is not dependent on when the "collection activity" begins or ends, but only requires retention of the recordings for three years after the date of the call.[438] A debt collector who deletes a call recording after three years and continues collection activity on the debt would not violate the retention requirements of Regulation F.

Regulation F applies to all debt collectors as defined under the Act, regardless of their size. If a debt collector is also a furnisher under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), it must also comply with the recordkeeping requirements of the FCRA.[439]

Notably, because Regulation F § 1006.100 is finalized pursuant to title X of the Dodd-Frank Act that does not provide a private right of action, section 1006.100 does not provide a private right of action if a debt collector fails to comply.[440] The requirements of Reg. F § 1006.100 could be used in support of discovery requests, however, for a collector's policies and practices regarding the use and maintenance of certain records, including whether a collector keeps call logs, transaction histories, copies of communications to the consumer, call recordings, or other evidence of compliance or noncompliance with the Act and Reg. F.

11.5.4.4 Compelling Debt Collector to Respond to Discovery Requests

When the debt collector fails to answer or objects to an interrogatory or other discovery request, try to schedule a conference with the collector or its attorney to review in detail the items that are lacking. Before the conference, it is prudent to provide the collector a written list of the disputes. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37 requires the parties to confer or attempt to confer in good faith about the disputes before filing a motion to compel.[441] Many courts also have their own local rules and procedures for handling a discovery dispute.

If disputes remain after a good faith effort to confer, and all procedures have been followed per the court's local rules, counsel can file a motion to compel discovery pursuant to Rule 37.[442] In an extreme case, sanctions may be awarded for failure to respond to discovery appropriately.[443] The consumer may be entitled to attorney fees where the collector offered no legitimate excuse for its failure to timely respond to the plaintiff's discovery requests, nor did it adequately explain why it was unable to produce the call history reports requested by the consumer plaintiff.[444] Motions and briefs on compelling discovery accompany the digital version of this treatise at Companion Materials>Pleadings and Discovery.

11.5.4.5 Protective Orders

The parties may agree to a confidentiality or protective order at the beginning of discovery to eliminate objections based on confidentiality.[445] Some courts have a form confiden-

437 Id.

438 Reg. F § 1006.100(b).

439 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,857 (Nov. 30, 2020) (Part 1 of the debt collection rulemaking).

440 85 Fed. Reg. 76,734, 76,859 (Nov. 30, 2020) (Part 1 of the debt collection rulemaking).

441 See, e.g., Stiffler v. Frontline Asset Strategies, L.L.C., 2019 WL 2612726 (M.D. Pa. June 26, 2019) (granting attorney fees where collection agency provided requested discovery the day after motion to compel was filed); In re Trevino, 564 B.R. 890, 904 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2017) (certification, which must accompany motion to compel discovery, of parties' good faith attempts to resolve discovery dispute should indicate names of parties who conferred or attempted to confer, manner by which they communicated, dispute at issue, as well as dates, times, and results of their discussions, if any).

442 See also Read v. Amana Collection Services, 1993 WL 286132 (W.D.N.Y. July 21, 1993) (imposing sanctions pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. R. 37(b) including reasonable expenses and attorney fees due to collector's failure to produce documents and refusal to answer questions at court-ordered postjudgment examination). See generally Appx. E.3.9, infra.

443 See, e.g., In re Trevino, 564 B.R. 890, 907 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2017) (sanction must be "just" and specifically related to particular claim at issue in order providing discovery (citing Insurance Corp. of Ir., Ltd. v. Compagnie des Bauxites de Guinee, 456 U.S. 694, 707, 102 S. Ct. 2099, 72 L. Ed. 2d 492 (1982); "The Court also has the ability to sanction a party when that party 'impedes, delays, or frustrates the fair examination of the deponent' or when an incompetent witness is put forth by a party."); Witt v. GC Services L.P., 307 F.R.D. 554, 569 (D. Colo. 2014) (defense counsel required to pay consumer's counsel $500 to defray expenses, including reasonable attorney fees, related to motion to compel discovery responses); Jasper v. Windsor Equity Grp., Inc., 2012 WL 12830001 (D.N.M. July 11, 2012) (as sanction for collection agency's abuse of discovery that was designed to ascertain its status as "debt collector," court declared that agency "is, and hereby will be considered" a "debt collector"); Jones v. Regent Asset Mgmt. Solutions, Inc., 2011 WL 2037626 (D. Conn. May 24, 2011) (entering order holding in abeyance arrest warrant for defendant collection agency's CEO, who had not paid previous sanctions for his failure to participate in court-ordered postjudgment discovery in aid of execution to collect default judgment entered against defendant, pending hearing on CEO's motions for emergency relief); Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, Inc., 2007 WL 3306496 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 6, 2007) (resolution of highly contested discovery issues and baseless confidentiality claims, ordering discovery and sanctioning defendants over $10,000); Kapeluschnik v. LeSchack & Grodensky, P.C., 1998 WL 35248047 (E.D.N.Y. June 4, 1998) (consumer's attorney sanctioned). See also McGahey v. FNMA and PHH Mortg. Corp., 2018 WL 3521175 (D. Me. 2018) (in UDAP and RESPA case, ordering reopening of deposition of corporate representative, enlargement of discovery deadline, and costs and attorney fees for bringing motion to compel where representative failed to provide adequate answers to questions regarding specific guidelines, policies, and procedures that PHH followed in evaluating and denying his HAMP applications). Cf. Davis v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2007 WL 3476523 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 15, 2007) (denying sanctions).

444 See Diegert v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 370808, at *5 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 26, 2017). See also Fulton v. Livingston Fin. L.L.C., 2016 WL 3976558 (W.D. Wash. July 25, 2016) (following parties' settlement of merits, awarding consumer $41,370 in attorney fees and imposing discovery sanctions on defense counsel).

445 Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Services, Inc., 2013 WL 1156447 (D. Neb. Mar. 20, 2013) (with protective order in place, debt collectors' objection tiality order available on their website and specific guidelines about filing such orders.[446] A court may enter a protective order limiting the communication of the collector's trade secrets and proprietary data,[447] although there is a strong presumption of public access to litigation records and against protective orders.[448]

When the defendant is an attorney, certain evidence may not be discoverable based on the attorney-client privilege.[449] However, one court held that a collector who asserted the bona fide error of law defense (for its Foti violation)[450] waived the attorney-client privilege as to the relevant legal research and opinions that it had received and the identity of the attorneys who performed the work.[451] The court denied a collector's motion to strike, under Federal Rule of Evidence 408, pre-billing worksheets attached to the FDCPA complaint, since they showed that the law firm sought excessive fees in a state collection suit.[452] Recordings made upon the advice of counsel are not entitled to protection from discovery, according to a federal district court in New Jersey, even though the recording did not violate any applicable canons of ethics.[453]

Consumers may also seek protective orders from producing information sought by collectors that is not proportionate to the needs of the case.[454] Settlement agreements between the plaintiff and other defendants should not be discoverable. A remaining defendant may argue that a confidential settlement agreement is necessary to determine an offset of any amounts already paid to the plaintiff. However, under the Act, statutory damages are based on each defendant's liability, not on a lump sum recovery that would justify an offset.[455] Nor does the Act provide any provision for a right of contribution, indemnification, or equitable credit to justify an offset for causes of action under the Act.[456] Likewise, a settlement agreement is not necessary to determine any alleged double recovery of attorney fees, as the appropriate inquiry is the determination of reasonable attorney fees for work spent on pursuing claims against the remaining defendant.[457]

11.5.4.6 Additional Discovery Approaches and Issues

Counsel should be aware of impending discovery deadlines in the court's scheduling order. Most courts require that, absent some excusable circumstance, discovery initiatives must be undertaken so that the response of the opposing party is due prior to the discovery deadline. An extension of the discovery deadline may be necessary to properly follow up on discovery responses and deposition testimony,[458] or where the that net worth information was confidential was not proper basis upon which to oppose disclosing net worth information to plaintiffs).

446 See, e.g., U.S. District Courts of the Northern District of California, Hawaii, Kansas, Maine, the Northern District of Illinois, and the Eastern District of New York.

447 See Plascencia v. Collins Asset Group, L.L.C., 2019 WL 1163842 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 13, 2019) (consumer's motion to compel granted for production of certain documents provided that they be redacted or designated "Confidential"); Sokolski v. Trans Union Corp., 178 F.R.D. 393 (E.D.N.Y. 1998) (entering protective order limiting communication of trade secrets and proprietary data). See also Taylor v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 2009 WL 1708762 (S.D. Ill. June 17, 2009) (rejecting defendant's efforts to put its answer and counterclaim under seal lest it violate state privacy laws); Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, Inc., 2008 WL 4177916 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 8, 2008) (granting plaintiffs' motion challenging confidentiality designation of documents obtained through public records request); Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, Inc., 2007 WL 902568 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 22, 2007) (ordering removal of confidential designation regarding agreements between defendants revealing cost and scope of work performed and employment contracts with salary and benefits redacted, but denying removal of confidentiality with regard to weekly mailings reports); Navarro v. Eskanos & Adler, 2007 WL 4458306 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 22, 2007) (analyzing each section of collection law firm's employee manual for confidentiality or other protection from public disclosure).

448 See Miller v. Indiana Hosp., 16 F.3d 549 (3d Cir. 1994); Miller v. P.S.C., Inc., 2018 WL 6435708 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 7, 2018). See also www.publicjustice.net.

449 See Chaudhry v. Gallerizzo, 174 F.3d 394, 402 (4th Cir. 1999) (distinguishing general rule that attorney-client privilege did not apply to billing and expense records and holding that collection attorney's entries "reveal[ing] the motive of the client in seeking representation, litigation strategy, or the specific nature of the services provided, such as researching particular areas of the law, fall within the privilege"); Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, Inc., 2007 WL 4287335 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 5, 2007) (responses to discovery required of ACCS; did not have to provide correspondence with counsel, but did need to provide privilege logs if privilege limited its response about its collection law suits). But see Bolorin v. Borrino, 248 F.R.D. 93 (D. Conn. 2008) (privilege log insufficiently detailed to protect attorney-client communications in foreclosure).

450 Foti v. NCO Fin. Sys., 424 F. Supp. 2d 643 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (name of entity, "NCO Financial Systems," did not indicate it was collection company, and therefore debt collector did not identify itself as such in all communications with consumer).

451 Anchondo v. Anderson, Crenshaw & Assoc., 256 F.R.D. 661 (D.N.M. 2009).

452 Agan v. Katzman & Korr, P.A. 328 F. Supp. 2d 1363, 1373 (S.D. Fla. 2004) (worksheets were prepared for settlement in state condominium assessment action, but contained otherwise discoverable evidence as to federal FDCPA claim; "[A]ny collection agency or collection lawyer must comply with the requirements of federal law in collecting on a debt. If that means the agency or attorney must scrutinize her attorney time records more carefully, that is a price that federal law requires").

453 Ward v. Maritz Inc., 156 F.R.D. 592, 597–598 (D.N.J. 1994).

454 Barnello v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 11565523, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 11, 2016) (granting consumers protective order against mortgage servicer's attempt to take discovery from their marriage counselor, because while consumers waived psychotherapist-patient privilege by putting their mental condition in controversy, as result of claiming significant emotional distress damages, proposed deposition and document production were "disproportional to the needs of the case"). See § 11.5.4.3, supra.

455 Close v. Account Resolution Services, ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 3674066, at *2, 3 (D. Mass. 2021) (settlement agreements not relevant to offset or to determine attorney fees).

456 Id.

457 Id.

458 See, e.g., Scannell v. Gunnoe & Assoc., 1997 WL 1764768 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 28, 1997) (eight months was sufficient time to conduct discovery necessary to establish defendants were "debt collectors"). See also Burdett v. Harrah's Kansas Casino Corp., 2003 WL 124665 (D. Kan. Jan. 12, 2003) (granting extension of time to conduct discovery to rebut debt collector's affidavit in support of summary judgment). But see Hochroth v. Ally Bank, 461 F. Supp. 3d 986, 1002 (D. Haw.

defendant's motion for summary judgment raises a new factual issue.[459]

If a deposition is scheduled less than thirty days before the expiration of the discovery deadline, counsel should consider seeking an extension in the event follow-up discovery is needed as a result of information gathered in the deposition. Additionally, if new information or evidence is discovered after the deadline has expired, it may be necessary to reopen discovery for a very focused inquiry.[460] A court allowed a consumer additional time to respond to the debt collector's requests for admissions where the debt collector's requests would have had the consumer deny the core factual elements of her case.[461]

When an attorney debt collector filed an affidavit indicating he did not regularly collect debts and questioned the jurisdiction of the court, the consumer was afforded limited discovery on the sole issue of whether defendant was a "debt collector."[462] Where consumers alleged inadequate service of an underlying state court action, the court compelled discovery as to the defendants concerning their allegedly improper service in the underlying state collection litigation and the regularity of their debt collection activities.[463]

A court may grant consumers' requests for a subpoena to telephone service providers so as to identify the collection caller, in order to facilitate identification of, and service of process upon, the proper corporate defendant.[464] A court may allow the consumer in an FDCPA class action to subpoena the credit card records of the class member to establish the consumer purpose of the transactions involved.[465]

Depositions of the collection employees involved in collecting the consumer's account, their supervisors, a corporate representative, and the defendant's computer specialist may be needed, depending on the type of claims involved and anticipated defenses. Some consumer attorneys seek to inspect the debt collector premises while engaged in depositions of employees.[466]

The court may limit discovery of information about the consumer or the consumer's motivation to sue[467] in order to protect the consumer's privacy or to protect against unreasonable requests, such as a consumer's criminal history or prior debts.[468] Discovery of a consumer's immigration status has been blocked in some non-FDCPA cases.[469]

But a court found reasonable a request for a consumer's records of loss of work time and medical bills.[470] Where a consumer claimed emotional distress, the court allowed the debt collector's discovery of any treatment or a diagnosis for any mental, emotional, and psychological issues from any medical provider in the past ten years.[471]

11.6 Pleading and Proof

11.6.1 Specificity of Pleading

Two Supreme Court decisions have heightened the standards for pleading claims in federal court: Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly[472] in 2007 and then Ashcroft v. Iqbal[473] in 2009. Twombly diminished the fifty-year-old Supreme Court 2020) (extension of discovery denied where plaintiff was not diligent in bringing underlying discovery motion).

459 See, e.g., Black v. AFNI, Inc., 2016 WL 4249491 (D.N.J. Aug. 10, 2016).

460 Rhodes v. Marix Servicing, L.L.C., 302 F. Supp. 3d 656, 666 (D.N.J. 2018) (plaintiff should have supplemented discovery responses to include additional FDCPA claims to be raised at trial; allowing reopening of discovery for brief period of time), 461 Pittman v. Wakefield & Assoc., Inc., 2017 WL 5593287 (D. Colo. Nov. 21, 2017).

462 See Mikesell v. Hafeli Staran Hallahan & Christ, P.C., 2011 WL 1812749 (E.D. Mich. May 12, 2011).

463 Sayeed v. Cheatham Farms Master Homeowners Ass'n, 2018 WL 8053857 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 19, 2018) (compelling consumers to provide discovery regarding their damages, residence, and whether residence was rented out during relevant times).

464 See Catlin v. Global, 2014 WL 3955220 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 13, 2014).

465 See Jenkins v. Pech, 2015 WL 3872388 (D. Neb. June 23, 2015).

466 See Arboleya v. Firstsource Advantage, L.L.C., 2010 WL 11570727 (N.D. Ala. Sept. 1, 2010) (compelling Rule 34 inspection of physical layout of collection agency's various work areas). But see Bryant v. Allied Account Services, Inc., 2006 WL 2620376 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 13, 2006) (denying consumer's motion to compel inspection of defendant collection agency's premises in order to better understand defendant debt collectors' operations because it would be too disruptive, and to produce collector's tax returns, explaining that information is readily available through deposition testimony and other discovery without intrusion of producing actual tax returns).

467 See Lee v. Kucker & Bruh, L.L.P., 2013 WL 680929 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 25, 2013).

468 See, e.g., Vagenos v. LDG Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1608877 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 15, 2010); Wells v. GC Services L.P., 2007 WL 1068222, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 10, 2007) (quashing collector's subpoenas of consumer's creditors' records the collector claimed were material to show consumer's "credibility" and "motives," because credibility or motives were not relevant, since FDCPA "focus[es] on the conduct of debt collectors, not on the conduct or motives of the debtor"); Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, 2007 WL 470262 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 8, 2007) (denying check collection agency's request to produce ten years of consumer's bank records to determine criminality of her check writing).

469 See, e.g., Cabrera v. Schafer, 178 F. Supp. 3d 69, 75 (E.D.N.Y. 2016) (denying permission to raise immigration status at trial involving a wage claim: "[A]lthough the evidence that the Plaintiff may have given . . . forged immigration documents may be relevant to the Plaintiff's credibility, the evidence would also be highly prejudicial to the Plaintiff because of the likelihood that it will lead the jury to be improperly biased against the Plaintiff because of his status as an illegal immigrant. Moreover, the Court is also cognizant of the 'chilling effect' that disclosure of his immigration status may have on his own decision to testify and the decision of other employees to enforce their rights under the FLSA in future cases.").

470 Wright v. Best Recovery Services L.L.C., 2015 WL 1849405 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 22, 2015).

471 Pomije v. CLX Sys./Westwood Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 13233764 (D. Minn. Feb. 22, 2011). But see Barnello v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 11565523, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 11, 2016) (granting consumers protective order against mortgage servicer's attempt to take discovery from their marriage counselor, because proposed deposition and document production were "disproportional to the needs of the case").

472 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007). See also Appx. E.3.8, infra.

473 556 U.S. 662, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009).

Rule 8 that "a complaint should not be dis-to state a claim unless it appears beyond ntiff can prove no set of facts in support would entitle him to relief."[475] The Iqbal the Twombly standards apply to "all civil y to the antitrust and discrimination claims the two cases.[476] The Iqbal decision summa-standards:

tandard Rule 8 announces does not require l allegations," but it demands more than an -defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusa-ng that offers "labels and conclusions" or "a tion of the elements of a cause of action will does a complaint suffice if it tenders "naked void of "further factual enhancement. . . ."

notion to dismiss, a complaint must contain al matter, accepted as true, to "state a claim plausible on its face." . . . A claim has facial nen the plaintiff pleads factual content that rt to draw the reasonable inference that the able for the misconduct alleged. . . . The plau-rd is not akin to a "probability requirement," more than a sheer possibility that a defendant awfully. . . . Where a complaint pleads facts ely consistent with" a defendant's liability, it f the line between possibility and plausibility t to relief.'"

principles underlie our decision in Twombly.
et that a court must accept as true all of the ontained in a complaint is inapplicable to legal Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause pported by mere conclusory statements, do not Rule 8 marks a notable and generous departure complaint.[478] The consumer's problem with a pleading usually is in the failure to identify who, what, how, and where; sometimes plaintiffs are given an opportunity to amend the complaint to cure the deficiency.[479] In Douglass v. Convergent Outsourcing,[480] the Third Circuit gave the general outline of an FDCPA claim: "To prevail on an FDCPA claim, a plaintiff must prove that (1) she is a consumer, (2) the defendant is a debt collector, (3) the defendant's challenged practice involves an attempt to collect a 'debt' as the Act defines it, and (4) the defendant has violated a provision of the FDCPA in attempting to collect the debt."

Other courts have found varying degrees of specificity required:

- The complaint must set out the basic elements of an FDCPA violation;[481]

478 See, e.g., Humphreys v. McCabe Weisberg & Conway, P.C., 686 Fed. Appx. 95 (3d Cir. 2017) (affirming dismissal of pro se complaint that did not adequately plead facts showing that foreclosing entities made any materially false statement about ownership of mortgage in foreclosure); Toone v. Wells Fargo Bank, 716 F.3d 516 (10th Cir. 2013) (complaint failed to state basis to question authenticity or authority of endorsements on note; statement that endorsements were "robosigned," without more, did not state claim under Iqbal); In re Bernadin, 610 B.R. 787, 795 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (debtor's allegation that Ocwen assisted in preparation of POC satisfies "facial plausibility" standard stated in Iqbal and Twombly); Norton v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 396 F. Supp. 3d 901, 911 (N.D. Cal. 2019) ("Although Norton's allegations do not nail down the existence of a consumer debt, they create a plausible inference that the debt was incurred for personal, family, or household expenses, and therefore are sufficient to withstand a Rule 12 challenge;" citing Iqbal "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.") and Twombly "Asking for plausible grounds [for relief] does not impose a probability requirement at the pleading stage; it simply calls for enough fact[s] to raise a reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence [supporting the claim]."); Ruczek v. Setergus L.L.C., 2019 WL 4118649 (W.D.N.Y.

aint must allege facts that the FDCPA specifically he plaintiff and defendant, and was violated by nt;[482] ust contain more than a mere allegation that a a debt collector,[483] particularly if the complaint

- The complaint must allege that a law firm regularly collects or attempts to collect debts owed, due, or asserted to be owed or due to another is sufficient to alleged that the law firm is a "debt collector";[485]
- The complaint must state the type of consumer debt involved[486] and the amount and date of the debt;[487]
- The complaint must state a date of the violation that was within the FDCPA one-year statute of limitations;[488] or a public record referred to in the complaint indicates that the company was a creditor collecting a debt in its own name;[484] arrison v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 233 F. Supp. 3d Fla. 2017) (dismissing with permission to amend FDCPA lid not present FDCPA claims discretely and succinctly); ltman, Wienberg & Reis, Co., L.P.A., 2010 WL 2803975 ly 15, 2010) (allegation that, over a two-and-a-half-month ty-six messages were left on consumer's cell phone was strella v. G L Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2010 WL 679067 eb. 22, 2010); Puttner v. Debt Consultants of Am., 2009) (S.D. Cal. June 4, 2009) (stated claim by alleging that collectors called consumer without providing meaningful f their identity); Hernandez v. Downey Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 57406 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 13, 2009) (failed to state claim for violation of § 1692g(b) since complaint did "not allege any strating that Defendants continued their efforts to collect lowing receipt of the [verification request]"); O'Chaney & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2004 WL 635060 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, ation that collector's statement to call collector for further , appearing at end of letter containing 15 U.S.C. § 1692g confusing and overshadowed requirement to disclose that request must be in writing, stated claim for relief for vio- 2g, but not § 1692f); Ononuju v. Virginia Hous. Dev. Auth., . 228 (Va. Cir. Ct. 2019) (complaint did not state how, or closing entities violated FDCPA). umphreys v. McCabe Weisberg & Conway, P.C., 686 Fed. d Cir. 2017) (pro se complaint did not adequately plead facts t foreclosing entities made any materially false statement rship of mortgage in foreclosure); Barnhart v. Nationstar C., 2016 WL 11005038, at *2 (6th Cir. Oct. 28, 2016) ("The loes refer obliquely to purported 'misrepresentations,' but int to any specific statement or explain how it was false or Instead, the complaint simply recites conclusory allega- fers to various portions of the FDCPA."); Genova v. IC Sys., VL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (alleged that collection tanded 17% collection fee that had not been incurred and horized by contract or law); Aurandt v. Brown, 2017 WL .D. Pa. Mar. 31, 2017) (alleged that debt collector pretended (D.N.H. Nov. 9, 2011) (finding reasonable inference that individual was admitting to engaging in debt collection activities, so as to qualify as debt collector, when complaint included statement attributed to collector's attorney in abusive phone call that he was a debt collector). But see Nooruddin v. Comerica Inc., 2011 WL 5588806, at *3 (D. Kan. Nov. 16, 2011) (allegation that defendant bank was "debt collector" was sufficient to survive motion to dismiss; "Although Defendant categorizes itself as a creditor, and not as a 'debt collector,' on a motion to dismiss, the Court must consider only the allegations in the complaint itself.").

484 Garland v. Enter. Leasing Co., 1999 WL 1077075 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 24, 1999) (dismissing FDCPA complaint against car rental company); Scappaticci v. G.E. Capital Mortg. Services, Inc., 2000 WL 1868219 (Conn. Super. Ct. Nov. 27, 2000) (complaint omitting any allegation that defendant was acting to collect debt owed or due to another failed to state claim under FDCPA). See also Russell v. Standard Fed. Bank, 2002 WL 1480808 (E.D. Mich. June 19, 2002) (dismissing FDCPA claim when plaintiff failed to provide sufficient information as to whether defendant law firm collected debts regularly or how it violated the Act).

485 See Sheldon v. Clarfield, Okon, Salomone & Pincus, P.L., 2015 WL 4651320 (S.D. Fla. July 31, 2015). See also Ortega v. Collectors Training Inst. of Ill., Inc., 2010 WL 11505559 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 31, 2010)

486 See, e.g., Calogero v. Shows, Cali & Walsh, L.L.P., 970 F.3d 576 (5th Cir. 2020) (alleged overpayment qualified as debt under § 1692a(5) where obligation of repayment was transaction in which consumer received funds for "personal, family, or household" purposes); Johns v. Northland Group, Inc., 76 F. Supp. 3d 590 (E.D. Pa. 2014); Vaquero v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 2013 WL 5947011 (D.N.J., Nov. 6, 2013); Dunham v. Lombardo, Davis & Gold[illegible]

- Each alleged violation must be pleaded as a separate count in the complaint;[489]
- The consumer must plead the subsections of the FDCPA violated;[490]
- The complaint must include "factual particularity" such as "the dates and contents" of the telephone calls that allegedly violated the FDCPA;[491] and
- Legal conclusions in the complaint without supporting factual allegations may require an amended complaint.[492]

Absent a claim of fraud or mistake, however, an FDCPA complaint is subject only to the general pleading requirements of Rule 8, and not the heightened pleading requirements of Rule 9.[493]

Specificity of the allegations of emotional distress damages may not be required in order to withstand a motion to dismiss.[494] However, a court may require some specificity in order for the consumer to obtain significant emotional distress damages in a default judgment.[495] The plaintiff also has the burden of providing a pleading that is reasonably specific to enable the opposing party to know the nature and degree of the allegations, including a claim for emotional distress.[496] It may be to the consumer's advantage to specify the cause, type, and duration of actual damages without stating an amount sought, as the case may be resolved by an offer to settle for those damages and the rest of the relief sought, taking away the opportunity for a greater amount in a verdict.[497]

There needs to be a balance between meeting the specificity pleading standards of Twombly and Iqbal and pleading broadly enough to allow flexibility to amend the complaint with further allegations or to restructure the theory of the case.[498] Twombly did leave room for discovery to pin down facts— such as the regularity of a lawyer acting as a debt collector—that could not be established from the events or through informal investigation. Pleading broadly when the facts support it also allows amending to add new parties or more violations that relate back to the original filing date.[499]

One experienced consumer lawyer suing debt collectors has the plaintiff verify the complaint. While it is not required, it can serve several purposes. It involves the client directly in the case, allowing more specificity in the allegations. Doing so impresses on the debt collector and judge that this is not a form complaint. This can be done only if the complaint is actively written and edited with the client so that it accurately reflects the client's experience.

Other attorneys may think that verifying the complaint suggests the consumer's lawyer distrusts the client's story, and Bashore v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 452 Fed. Appx. 522 (5th Cir. 2011) (consumer failed to plead timing and content of her claim that debt collector violated FDCPA when she disputed debt); McLean-Laprade v. HSBC, 2013 WL 3930565 (N.D.N.Y. July 30, 2013).

489 See, e.g., Friends of St. Stephens Inc. v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2015 WL 12516200 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 23, 2015). Cf. Serra v. Mary Jane Elliott, P.C., 2014 WL 1608665 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 22, 2014) (section 1692e(a)(2) violation not raised in complaint cannot be considered on motion for summary judgment); Valek v. Stellar Recovery, Inc., 2014 WL 1028916 (W.D. Mich. Mar. 17, 2014) (where facts alleged supported FDCPA violation, not necessary to cite specific provision violated).

490 See Friends of St. Stephens Inc. v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2015 WL 12516200 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 23, 2015); Bernstein v. Noteworld, L.L.C., 2010 WL 3154518 (D. Nev. Aug. 9, 2010). See also Krasnor v. Spaulding Law Office, 675 F. Supp. 2d 208 (D. Mass. 2009) (tracking language of subsections sufficient).

491 See, e.g., Napolitano v. Green Tree Serv., L.L.C., 2016 WL 447451 (D. Me. Feb. 4, 2016); Cutler ex rel. Jay v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2014 WL 7745878 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2014); Lopez v. Prof'l Collection Consultants, 2011 WL 4964886 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 19, 2011); Blaxill v. Arrow Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1299350 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2011). See also Brown v. Account Control Tech., Inc., 2014 WL 11706429 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 28, 2014) (dismissing for failure to allege frequency or contents of alleged offending telephone calls). But see Huizar v. Mandarich Law Group, L.L.P., 2013 WL 4209050 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 14, 2013) (16-month time frame sufficed).

492 See, e.g., Morgan v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 2014 WL 4680694 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 19, 2014).

493 See, e.g., CFPB v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1342 (N.D. Ga. 2015); Cutler ex rel. Jay v. Sallie Mae, Inc., 2014 WL 7745878 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2014); Deeters v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 2013 WL 6524625 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 12, 2013); Allgood v. West Asset Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 6234691 (D. Nev. Dec. 2, 2013); Renteria v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2009 WL 2754988 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 27, 2009); Antoine v. U.S. Bank, 547 F. Supp. 2d 30 (D.D.C. 2008); Neild v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 453 F. Supp. 2d 918 (E.D. Va. 2006); Sullivan v. Equifax, Inc., 2002 WL 799856 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 19, 2002). But see Crittenden v. HomeQ Serv., 2009 WL 3162247 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 29, 2009) (erroneously applying "fraud" pleading standard to FDCPA claim). But cf. Townsend v. Chase Bank USA, 2009 WL 426393 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 15, 2009) (pro se case that included FDCPA and state claims applied Rule 9(b) requirements to allegations of fraud), aff'd on other grounds, 445 Fed. Appx. 920 (9th Cir. 2011).

494 See Ferrante v. Law Offices of Lewisohn & Lewisohn, 2016 WL 8711075 (E.D.N.Y. July 15, 2016) (consumer need not plead actual damages "in detail" at pleading stage); Smolinski v. Oppenheimer, 2012 WL 2885175 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2012); § 11.8.2, infra.

495 See Sleeper v. Rent Recover, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4455044 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 10, 2014); Slater v. PRA Recovery, 2012 WL 5269400 (D. Haw. Sept. 21, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 5269390 (D. Haw. Oct. 22, 2012); § 11.8.2, infra.

496 Carrier v. LJ Ross & Assoc., 2008 WL 544550 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 26, 2008).

497 See § 11.8, infra.

498 Littles v. Lieberman, 90 B.R. 700 (E.D. Pa. 1988) (when evidence showed defendant did not send dunning letter as alleged, but supplied form for letter, violating 15 U.S.C. § 1692j, complaint's claim under 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692 to 1692*o* was broad enough to cover 15 U.S.C. § 1692j claim). See Vitullo v. Mancini, 684 F. Supp. 2d 747 (E.D. Va. 2010) (claim of party added in amended complaint was timely, as it related back to date of filing of initial complain).

499 See Klemp v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 5324318 (D. Or. Oct. 17, 2014); Shula v. Lawent, 2002 WL 31870157 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 23, 2002) (pursuant to Rule 15(c)(3), amendment changing party or name of party against whom claim was asserted related back to date of original pleading), aff'd, 359 F.3d 489 (7th Cir. 2004); Byes v. Telecheck Recovery Services, Inc., 1996 WL 22686 (E.D. La. Jan. 19, 1996) (leave to amend complaint was proper; defendant was sufficiently on notice of subject matter and size of litigation, and it knew what letters it had sent to plaintiff and who else had received letters). See also Krupski v. Costa Crociere, 560 U.S. 538, 130 S. Ct. 2485, 177 L. Ed. 2d 48 (2010) (amendment to complaint substituting proper party permitted to relate to date of filing); Tate v. Bennett Law, P.L.L.C., 2013 WL 1751289 (D. Or. Apr. 22, 2013) (consumer was allowed to add his wife as plaintiff more than a year after collection calls, as he did not discover that his wife was alleged debtor until depositions).

thus do not have complaints verified. It also binds the consumer to certain statements which could cause problematic later if the consumer remembers any of the details differently through the litigation.

11.6.2 Proving an FDCPA Violation

As discussed at § 3.2.1, supra, courts most often apply a "least sophisticated" or "unsophisticated" consumer standard to analyze whether a debt collector has violated the FDCPA.[500] This means that the standard "pays no attention to the circumstances of the particular debtor in question, and asks only whether the hypothetical least sophisticated consumer could reasonably interpret the representation in a way that is inaccurate."[501] To prove the debt collector's conduct violates the FDCPA, consumers can look beyond their own personal interpretation of a particular conduct or communication and present evidence that the conduct would have been harassing, misleading, deceptive, or unfair to the hypothetical least sophisticated or unsophisticated consumer.[502] Particularly where a case involves statements that are not misleading or deceptive on their face, but might possibly be misleading or deceptive to an unsophisticated consumer, evidence such as consumer surveys, focus groups, and expert testimony can be probative as to whether unsophisticated consumers would be deceived or misled.[503]

Similarly, pattern and practice evidence can be used to prove abusive or harassing conduct by showing that the debt collector engaged in similar conduct with other consumers in addition to the current plaintiff. The burden of proof may shift to a debt collector to show that it fits into an exception of the FDCPA and that its conduct did not violate the Act.[504]

The FTC has used surveys, focus groups, market research and principles, and the opinions of expert witnesses in determining implied meanings of representations in deceptive advertising:

> If our initial review of evidence from the advertisement itself does not allow us to conclude with confidence that it is reasonable to read an advertisement as containing a particular implied message, we will not find the ad to make the implied claim unless extrinsic evidence allows us to conclude that such a reading of the ad is reasonable. . . .
>
> The extrinsic evidence we prefer to use and to which we give great weight is direct evidence of what consumers actually thought upon reading the advertisement in question. Such evidence will be in the form of consumer survey research for widely distributed ads, such as those involved in this proceeding. . . . Where we use surveys in lieu of individual testimony, the surveys are methodologically sound; they draw valid samples from the appropriate population, ask appropriate questions in ways that minimize bias, and analyze results correctly.
>
> Another type of evidence we will look at is evidence . . . showing how consumers might ordinarily be expected to perceive or understand representations like those contained in the ads we are reviewing. For example, we might look at the dictionary definition of a word to identify the word's common usages. Or we might look at principles derived from market research, as expressed by marketing experts, which show that consumers generally respond in a certain manner to ads that are presented in a particular way, and presume that consumer reactions to a particular ad before us would be consistent with the general response pattern . . .
>
> A third type of evidence we will consider if offered is the opinion of expert witnesses in the proceeding as to how an advertisement might reasonably be interpreted . . . Whether we are looking at evidence from the ad itself, extrinsic evidence, or both, we look at the overall, net impression made by an ad to determine what messages it reasonably can be interpreted as conveying to consumers.[505]

Whether a communication is deceptive, misleading, or an implicit threat may also be considered a legal decision or mixed finding of fact and law. There are hundreds of decisions dealing with the implications of such representations that can help build an FDCPA case.[506]

11.6.3 Surveys

While comprehensive surveys can provide strong evidence that a particular conduct or communication is deceptive, such surveys are a form of expert testimony,[507] so one of the biggest impediments to using survey evidence in FDCPA cases is the high cost of the expert designing and conducting the survey.[508]

500 Hopkins v. Collecto, Inc., 994 F.3d 117, 121 (3d Cir. 2021) ("sophisticated" consumer standard functionally equivalent to "unsophisticated" consumer standard).

501 Arias v. Gutman, Mintz, Baker & Sonnenfeldt L.L.P., 875 F.3d 128, 135 (2d Cir. 2017) (emphasis added).

502 See, e.g., Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818 (7th Cir. 2012); DeKoven v. Plaza Assoc., 599 F.3d 578 (7th Cir. 2010).

503 See Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 961 F.3d 975 (7th Cir. 2020) (letter stating that "[t]his letter serves as notification that your delinquent account may be reported to the national credit bureaus" required "producing evidence of confusion (beyond her own) using an objective measure such as 'a carefully designed and conducted consumer survey'"); Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818, 827 (7th Cir. 2012); Klein v. Affiliated Group, Inc., 2019 WL 1307884 (D. Minn. Mar. 22, 2019); Hale v. AFNI, Inc., 2010 WL 380906 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 26, 2010); § 7.3.8, supra.

504 See 11 U.S.C. § 1692k(c); § 11.6.3, infra.

505 In re Thompson Med. Co., 104 F.T.C. 648, 788 (F.T.C. 1984), aff'd, 791 F.2d 189 (D.C. Cir. 1986).

506 See Appx. E.2.4, infra.

507 Evory v. RJM Acquisitions Funding L.L.C., 505 F.3d 769, 776 (7th Cir. 2007); Klein v. Affiliated Group, Inc., 2019 WL 1307884 (D. Minn. Mar. 22, 2019).

508 See, e.g., Tonka Corp. v. Rose Art Industr., Inc., 836 F. Supp. 200, 210 n.10 (D.N.J. 1993) (stating cost of pilot study to be $7850; noting more extensive survey could increase cost of study by more than $29,000); Lon Tai Shing Co., Ltd. v. Koch & Lowy, 1991 WL 170734 (S.D.N.Y. June 20, 1991) (noting cost of conducting proper survey in trademark

It is not clear whether a consumer who conducts a survey to establish an FDCPA claim may recover the costs of the survey as part of the damages, the fee award, or costs.[509]

In addition to the hurdle created by the high cost of a survey, there is a risk that the expensive survey, once presented will not be accepted as meeting Daubert requirements[510] or, if accepted, will be considered of insufficient probative weight to sway the decision. For example, in a Seventh Circuit FDCPA case, Judge Posner threw out the consumer's survey as containing leading questions but suggested a formulation of the survey that would make it acceptable.[511] The court emphasized that the survey evidence must be of professional quality to be admissible finding:

> The respondents in the survey were shown a letter similar to the one the plaintiff had received. The key question they were asked was, "Let's say the person getting this letter does not accept the settlement offer by the deadline date. Do you think that person would feel it is a limited-time offer, or it is not a limited-time offer?" By referring to "deadline date," the questioner signaled that it was a limited-time offer. Leading questions in surveys are improper. E.g., Scott Fetzer Co. v. House of Vacuums Inc., supra, 381 F.3d at 488. And "limited-time offer" was not defined. Nor should the respondents have been asked what they thought some other recipient of the letter would "feel," especially since they were given no information about the hypothetical recipient. They should simply have been asked, "What do you think would happen if you didn't accept the offer? Do you think it would be renewed or extended? Or do you think this would be your last chance to get a discount off the amount owed?[512]

In Muha v. Encore Receivable Management, Inc.[513] Judge Posner affirmed the inadmissibility of a consumer's survey evidence, because the consumer's lawyer supplied the key question used in the survey, even though the lawyer had hired a "competent survey researcher to conduct it."[514] The question posed was also impermissibly leading and suggestive, and the multiple -choice answers supplied by the survey should have included the debt collector's interpretation of the statement but did not. Finally, there was no control group showing that the letter was not confusing when the challenged language was omitted.[515] Notably, however, the court reversed the court's summary judgment for the collection agency, holding that the debt collector had the burden of explaining the meaning and purpose of a confusing statement in its dunning letter and that consumer testimony about the deceptiveness of the debt collection letter could be sufficient without a survey.[516] This was a shift in the Seventh Circuit, which frequently had required expert evidence of deception in particular expert surveys.[517]

Another problem with consumer surveys in this area is that only about three percent of the population is a target of debt collectors at any point in time.[518] Many in the general population have no direct experience with debt collection. Debt collection experiences are likely to be quickly forgotten given their unpleasantness. This means that it is very difficult to locate a peer group to survey.

Pettit v. Retrieval Masters Creditors Bureau, Inc.[519] provides a good illustration of the difficulty of establishing a close case of deception. The collector was alleged to have used a name, Retrieval Masters Creditors Bureau, Inc., which violated the prohibition in 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(16) that the debt collector not falsely imply that it operated a consumer credit reporting agency. The words "credit bureau" at the time were synonymous with credit reporting agency.[520] The Fifth Circuit and the lower courts had found that the use of the words "credit and trade dress case could exceed $100,000). See also Irina D. Manta, In Search of Validity: A New Model for The Content and Procedural Treatment of Trademark Infringement Surveys, 24 Cardozo Arts & Ent. L.J. 1027 n.152 (2007) ("surveys can cost $30,000 to $150,000"); Robert H. Thornburg, Trademark Survey Evidence: Review of Current Trends in the Ninth Circuit, 21 Santa Clara Computer & High Tech. L.J. 715, 717 (2005) (the most basic trademark survey costs hundreds of thousands of dollars).

---

509 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.8.7.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

510 Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S. Ct. 2786, 2796, 125 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1993). For a detailed discussion on the Daubert elements, see National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Warranty Law § 13.8.4 (5th ed. 2015) updated at www.nclc.org/library. FDCPA cases addressing this issue include: Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2009) (consumer survey poorly designed and inadmissible under Daubert where questions were leading, drafted by lawyer, and there was no control group); Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007).

511 Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 769 (7th Cir. 2007). See also Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2009) (consumer survey inadequate when leading questions were drafted by lawyer and there was no control group).

512 Evory v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 505 F.3d 769, 778 (7th Cir. 2007). See also Jackon v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, 441 F. Supp. 2d 877 (N.D. Ill 2006) (phrase "limited-time offer," as used in survey without definition or explanation, was too ambiguous to provide insight whether participants were confused as to meaning of offer allegedly presented in letters).

513 558 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2009).

514 Id. at 625.

515 Id. at 626.

516 Id.

517 See Pettit v. Retrieval Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 211 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 2000); Johnson v. Revenue Mgmt. Corp., 169 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 1999); Walker v. Nat'l Recovery, Inc., 200 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 1999) (mentions evidence such as surveys to buttress case); Gammon v. GC Services L.P., 27 F.3d 1254, 1260 (7th Cir. 1994) (concurring opinion recommended survey evidence). But see Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222 (7th Cir. 1996) (no evidence of actual consumer confusion necessary when statement was literally false).

518 See Hannah Hassani & Signe-Mary McKernan, Urban Institute, 71 Million US Adults Have Debt in Collections (July 19, 2018), available at https://www.urban.org.

519 211 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 2000).

520 The American Heritage Dictionary of the English Language, "credit bureau" (5th ed. 2018) ("[a]n organization to which business firms apply for credit information on prospective customers"). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 1.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library (describing relation of local credit bureaus to large national credit reporting agencies).

bureau" in the name of a collection agency which was not a credit reporting agency violated the FDCPA.[521] The Seventh Circuit held that there was insufficient evidence to convince it that a careful,[522] unsophisticated consumer would infer that a company name including the words "creditors bureau" was a "credit bureau" providing consumer reports. The court suggested that survey evidence might have been useful to the consumer's case.

It is almost a certainty that the debt collector chose a name only three letters removed from the common words "credit bureau" because it believed that name would make it more effective in getting money from consumers. The collector was probably aware that most Americans are so bombarded with information in their everyday lives that they are not up to the standard of careful reading imposed by the Pettit court. Most Americans would look at the words "creditors bureau," which have no literal meaning, and not realize the company was not holding itself out as a "credit bureau." Survey evidence may have improved the odds of success before the Pettit court.

11.6.4 Experts

Experts can be used to show deception or confusion in a consumer case, short of a full survey of a sample of the collector's customers who received the same communication as the plaintiff.[523] For example, in the case discussed at § 11.6.3, supra, against a company using the name "Retrieval Masters Creditors Bureau, Inc.,"[524] an expert might have devised a number of simple tests to find out the extent to which consumers would believe the company was in the business of credit reporting. The test might be administered to a classroom of adult community education students, or several classrooms, to reduce its costs, if this would produce a sufficient sampling of "unsophisticated consumers."

An academic with a graduate degree in education, marketing, communications, sociology, or testing may be appropriate to design, administer, and interpret such a test. A linguist might provide expert insights using other techniques. Such experts may be willing to do such work on a pro bono basis for the court experience or because they may publish a scholarly article on the subject. The expert must be prepared to justify the validity of every aspect of their testimony.[525] Caution must be used because of the high costs of developing such evidence and the ability of courts to reject or discount an expert's evidence.

An expert may be used to establish other aspects of the case, for example, the reasonableness of the defendant's procedures to avoid mistake, intent, and industry practices compared to the defendant's noncompliance.[526] An expert may not generally provide legal opinions to the court.[527]

Evidence of emotional distress and suffering is best offered through the testimony of a physician,[528] mental health professional, or another third person—for example, a relative or adult child. If a physician treated the consumer for symptoms or injuries resulting from the collection abuse, they (or another physician) should be presented as an expert witness in order to avoid the inference by the trier of fact that the treating physician's testimony would not support the claim. An expert on the nature and willfulness of the debt collector's noncompliance may be useful.[529]

11.6.5 Pattern Evidence

While evidence of a pattern of noncompliance within a particular case may be used to determine whether that particular conduct is abusive or harassing,[530] evidence of similar wrongdoing by the defendant with other consumers, including other victims' testimony, may be introduced:

521 See McKenzie v. E.A. Uffman & Assoc., Inc., 119 F.3d 358, 361 (5th Cir. 1997) (use of name "Collections Department, Credit Bureau of Baton Rouge" misrepresented that collector operated credit reporting agency). See also § 7.2.16, infra.

522 A "careful" unsophisticated consumer standard is not the test usually used in the courts.

523 See also § 7.2.8, supra.

524 Pettit v. Retrieval Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 211 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 2000).

525 See New Federal Rules Limit Use of Expert Testimony, 19 NCLC REPORTS, Deceptive Practices and Warranties Ed. 7 (Sept./Oct. 2000).

526 E.g., McCabe v. Crawford & Co., 272 F. Supp. 2d 736 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (allowing Manuel H. Newburger to testify at trial regarding issue of practices and standards in debt collection industry, but excluding his expert report, finding it filled with legal conclusions and inappropriate opinions). But see Hamilton v. Am. Corrective Counseling Services, 2006 WL 2873622 (N.D. Ind. Oct. 4, 2006) (granting defendant's motion to exclude testimony of plaintiff's expert, Manuel Newburger, holding that his proffered testimony constituted inadmissible opinions of law presented on following three topics: whether defendants' conduct complies with industry standards of debt collection, nature and severity of alleged violations, and whether defendants are debt collectors within meaning of FDCPA).

527 See, e.g., Jones v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 616 F. Supp. 2d 224 (D. Conn. 2009).

528 See, e.g., 2 Stein on Personal Injury Damages §§ 8.18, 10.14 (3d ed. 1997). See also Wood v. GC Services, L.P., 2012 WL 987761 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2012) (concluding that record fell short of establishing that plaintiff was entitled to actual damages when plaintiff failed to offer any competent evidence, other than his own self-serving statements, that he had distress and anxiety, as well as lack of medical or other evidence on issue as to whether defendant's conduct caused plaintiff any further problems than those he was already experiencing), adopted, 2012 WL 995207 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2012).

529 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 928 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Tenuto v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17566 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 27, 2000) (Manuel H. Newburger not precluded from testifying). See also online companion material to this treatise, including Newburger's affidavit.

530 Merchant v. Nationwide Recovery Serv., Inc., 440 F. Supp. 3d 1396, 1374 (N.D. Ga. 2020); Kayyal v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2019 WL 4601743 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 23, 2019); Hollis v. LVNV Funding, 2019 WL 1091336 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 2, 2019) (pattern of frequently calling for more than a year after consumer requested that it stop was itself abusive).

- To show a pattern or practice of abusive conduct;[531]
- To show the debt collector's knowledge or intent;
- To demonstrate the malice required for punitive damages for common law causes of action;
- To establish circumstantial evidence to authenticate an anonymous phone call;[532] or
- To prove that a particular entity is a "debt collector" under the FDCPA.[533]

Other victims who have suffered similar debt collector abuses may be appropriate witnesses.[534] Other victims' testimony may show the intent, frequency, and persistence of the behavior in support of the statutory damage award under the FDCPA.[535] Time-barred FDCPA claims may be relevant to establish the abusiveness of the FDCPA claims that were not time-barred.[536] Even if the testimony of other victims is not admitted in the trial, the other victims' information is useful to a consumer's attorney in understanding the collector's method of operating, so that discovery and cross-examination are more effective.

Introduction of testimony of similar abuses may be opposed as an attempt to introduce character evidence that is not relevant under Federal Rule of Evidence 404(a), or the state counterpart to that rule. However, evidence of prior similar abuses may be admitted under both Federal Rules of Evidence 404(b) and 406. Rule 404(b) provides that evidence of other wrongs may be introduced to show "motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake." Rule 406 allows evidence of the routine practice of an organization to establish its conduct in a case that conformed to that routine practice.

Intent is an element of a tort action against a debt collector for egregious misconduct.[537] Intent or knowledge may also be an element of a claim under a state debt collection[538] or UDAP statute.[539] The frequency, persistence, and nature of noncompliance, and the extent to which such noncompliance by the debt collector was intentional, are all factors the court considers under section 1692k(b) in determining statutory damages.[540] Intent is also relevant to the FDCPA bona fide error defense.[541]

For example, in Burbach v. Investors Management Corp.,[542] the court offered the following factors for consideration of trial court in admitting prior bad acts:

> (a) The length of time between each of the past incidents, and the incident under consideration;
> (b) The degree of similarity between the facts of the previous incidences and the incident under consideration;
> (c) The degree of similarity between the conduct of the defendant in each of the incidents;
> (d) The degree of similarity between the advantage foreseeably obtained under the facts of each prior incident by the unfair conduct in each case;
> (e) The degree of similarity of harm to others in each incident; and
> (f) The number of prior incidents as compared with the relative number of prior opportunities to conduct the unfair conduct.[543]

In McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger,[544] the trial court affirmed the admissibility of evidence that the defendant debt collection law firm had filed several thousand lawsuits in the state in the prior eighteen months. The evidence of the prior suits was admissible to establish malice for a malicious prosecution claim and for punitive damages.[545]

Complaint-receiving agencies—for example, the Better Business Bureau—may cooperate by identifying other victims. Other sources that may identify victims are the consumer protection office of the state attorney general's office, local consumer protection offices, and state licensing and examination 531 See Allen v. P & B Capital Group, L.L.C., 2009 WL 2940206, at *1 (D. Colo. Sept. 9, 2009) (denying defendant's Rule 12(f) motion to strike allegations in complaint that defendant "violates the FDCPA as part of its business practice" because, inter alia, allegations may be "relevant and admissible 'to show that the Defendant has a history or plan of aggressive debt collecting'"). See also National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.8.1.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 10.8.1 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library. But cf. Fisher v. Am. Gen. Fin. Co., 52 Fed. Appx. 601 (4th Cir. 2002) (dissimilarity between alleged prior acts and defendant's incorrect description of property securing loan demonstrates that evidence of prior acts was inadmissible).

532 Colton v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 1986 WL 8538 (Ohio Ct. App. July 30, 1986) (circumstantial evidence authenticated one anonymous call, but not another).

533 James v. Wadas, 724 F.3d 1312 (10th Cir. 2013); Goldstein v. Hutton, Ingram, Yuzek, Gainen, Carroll & Bertolotti, 374 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 2004) (court adapted five-factor test to determine whether person's debt collection activities met regularity threshold of FDCPA, including whether any patterns of collection activity were discernible); Nelkenbaum v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2019 WL 3464507 (E.D.N.Y. July 31, 2019).

534 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg, & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011). See also Webster v. Nations Recovery Ctr., Inc., 2009 WL 2982649 (D. Colo. Sept. 15, 2009).

535 See § 11.9.3, infra. See also Miranda v. Integrity Solution Services, Inc., 2014 WL 519239, at *2 (D. Colo. Feb. 10, 2014) ("By virtue of the language of the FDCPA, the issue of the frequency and persistence of a defendant's noncompliance with the FDCPA is present in every FDCPA case."). But see Brownstein v. Shelton, 2014 WL 1057049 (D. Conn. Mar. 18, 2014) (overlooking "nature of the noncompliance" and intentionality prongs of § 1692k(b)).

536 See Pittman v. J.J. MacIntyre Co., 969 F. Supp. 609 (D. Nev. 1997).

537 See Ch. 15, infra.

538 See § 16.2, infra.

539 See § 16.3, infra.

540 See § 11.9, infra.

541 See §§ 12.2, 12.7.3, infra.

542 484 S.E.2d 119 (S.C. Ct. App. 1997).

543 Id. at 122. See also McCormick on Evidence § 197 (8th ed. 2020); National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 11.8.1.2 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 10.8.1 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

544 645 F. Supp. 2d 917 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (jury awarded $250,000 in compensatory damages, $60,000 in punitive damages under state tort law).

545 Id. at 923–927.

agencies. Websites posting consumer complaints are another place to look. If government agencies are not cooperative, the identity of other victims may be available under the state freedom of information act. A search of the Internet may also locate consumers complaining about similar behavior by the debt collector.[546] The identity of other victims may also be obtained in discovery from such agencies and from the collector.

Another resource is the CFPB consumer complaint database.[547] While the names of the consumers submitting complaints are not revealed, the names of the debt collection companies are, and a search for a particular debt collector could turn up hundreds or thousands of complaints. The website allows advanced search options to narrow down the results to find complaints similar in nature to the consumer's experience. Additional information regarding the complaints can then be sought in discovery. When the debt collector challenges such requests, the same arguments regarding pattern and practice evidence can be used.

11.6.6 Burden of Proof As to FDCPA Exceptions

While the burden of proof is on the consumer asserting that a collector violated an FDCPA provision, the burden switches to the collector seeking to assert that the FDCPA provision does not apply to the collector. The FDCPA explicitly provides that the collector must prove the bona fide error defense "by a preponderance of the evidence."[548]

In other situations, the courts must determine where the burden of proof lies. The Third Circuit in an FDCPA case sets out five criteria for shifting the burden of proof to the collector:

> (1) Whether the defense is framed as an exception to a statute's general prohibition or an element of a prima facie case;[549]
> (2) Whether the statute's general structure and scheme indicate where the burden should fall;
> (3) Whether a plaintiff will be unfairly surprised by the assertion of a defense;
> (4) Whether a party is in particular control of information necessary to prove or disprove the defense; and
> (5) Other policy or fairness considerations.[550]

The Third Circuit cited for support Supreme Court rulings in FTC v. Morton Salt Co.[551] and Meacham v. Knolls Atomic Power Lab.,[552] and an earlier Third Circuit decision in United States v. Taylor.[553]

The Third Circuit case dealt with a collector's third-party contacts. Section 1692c(b) prohibits such contact, except as provided in section 1692b. The collector was found to have the burden of proving compliance with section 1692b.

Similarly, section 1692f(1) prohibits a collector from seeking an amount unless authorized by contract or permitted by law. The Ninth Circuit has held that the collector has the burden of proof of establishing that the amount it seeks is so authorized or permitted.[554] Section 1692f(8) limits language or symbols on an envelope mailed to the consumer, except that a collector may use its business name if such name does not indicate that it is in the debt collection business. The collector bears the burden of proving this exception.[555]

The Sixth Circuit has found that a loan servicer has the burden of proof that the FDCPA does not apply because the loan was not in default when it acquired servicing rights.[556] The Ninth Circuit similarly finds that the collector has the burden of proving the in-house collector defense under section 1692a(6)(B).[557] Where the collector seeks to minimize its statutory damages liability based on its low net worth, it has the burden of establishing that net worth.[558]

The collector has the burden to prove its statute of limitations defense.[559] Where a collector argues that an arbitration agreement prevents the case from being heard in court, the Eleventh Circuit has found it is the collector's burden to prove the existence of an arbitration agreement and that the agreement is binding on the consumer.[560]

---

546 Searching for the debt collector's name in quotation marks using a search engine such as www.google.com may lead to consumer complaints posted on the web.

547 https://www.consumerfinance.gov.

548 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c). See Urbina v. Nat'l Bus. Factors, Inc., 979 F.3d 758, 763 (9th Cir. 2020); Abdollahzadeh v. Mandarich Law Group, L.L.P., 922 F.3d 810 (7th Cir. 2019); Engelen v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 544 Fed. Appx. 707 (9th Cir. 2013); Odsather v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6696688 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 20, 2018).

549 See also Flores v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2015 WL 4254032, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2015) ("The burden of proving a statutory exception falls on the party seeking to reap the benefit of the exception." (quoting Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 718 F. Supp. 2d 1116, 1133 (N.D. Cal. 2010)).

550 Evankavitch v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 793 F.3d 355, 361 (3d Cir. 2015).

551 334 U.S. 37, 44–45, 68 S. Ct. 822, 92 L. Ed. 1196 (1948).

552 554 U.S. 84, 91, 128 S. Ct. 2395, 171 L. Ed. 2d 283 (2008).

553 686 F.3d 182, 190 n.5 (3d Cir. 2012) (compiling numerous Supreme Court decisions for the proposition).

554 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 950 (9th Cir. 2011); See also Urbina v. Nat'l Bus. Factors, Inc., 979 F.3d 758, 763 (9th Cir. 2020) (collector who relied on contractually obligating creditors to provide accurate information could not avoid liability, because it did not prove that it maintained procedures reasonably adapted to avoid violation).

555 Davis v. Baron's Creditors Serv. Corp., 2001 WL 1491503 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 19, 2001).

556 Garner v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2017 WL 8294293 (6th Cir. Oct. 27, 2017).

557 Fox v. Citicorp Credit Services, Inc., 15 F.3d 1507, 1514–1515 (9th Cir. 1994).

558 Vandehey v. Client Services, Inc., 2019 WL 2403201 (E.D. Wis. June 7, 2019).

559 See Michalak v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 604 Fed. Appx. 492 (6th Cir. 2015).

560 Bazemore v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 827 F.3d 1325 (11th Cir. 2016). See also § 11.3.2, supra.

11.7 Offers of Judgment or Settlement

11.7.1 Offers of Judgment in General

Rule 68 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides that, at any time at least fourteen days before trial, the collector may make "an offer to allow judgment on specified terms, with the costs then accrued." An offer of judgment may be accepted within fourteen days by written notice. Then either party may file the offer and notice of acceptance together with proof of service, after which the clerk enters judgment.[561]

If the offer of judgment was not accepted and the judgment eventually obtained is less favorable than the offer, the plaintiff must pay the defendant's post-offer court costs.[562] These costs do not include the defendant's post-offer attorney fees, because the FDCPA considers "costs" as separate from attorney fees.[563] In addition, in this situation, a court may limit the consumer's award of attorney fees to fees earned before the offer of judgment.[564]

Offers of judgment are frequently used by debt collector defendants in FDCPA actions in an attempt to settle individual FDCPA suits, and often as an attempt to defeat FDCPA actual damage awards, consumer attorney fee awards, and class actions. The use of Rule 68 in class actions to settle the claim of the named FDCPA plaintiff and provide the foundation for the defendant to argue that the settlement moots the class action is addressed in § 11.11.4.2, infra.[565]

11.7.2 Offers of Incomplete Relief

Rule 68 may not apply where the collector's offer is not for a definite amount or where it does not address all of the consumer's sought relief. The Fourth Circuit held in Warren v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A.,[566] that a Rule 68 offer of judgment did not moot an individual's FDCPA claim for damages when the defendant debt collector offered $250 in actual damages or "an amount determined by the Court upon Plaintiff's submission of affidavits or other evidence of actual damage." The court found it significant that the plaintiff did not plead or state in discovery the amount of her claim for actual damages, and that she had requested the amount of her damages to be determined by a jury. The court held that the Rule 68 offer did not moot the case as it was contingent or not unequivocal,[567] and it required the consumer to give up the right to a jury. Likewise, the Seventh Circuit found that the collection agency's settlement offer of $1500 did not moot the FDCPA claim where the offer did not specify if it was for actual or statutory damages and the settlement amount did not satisfy the consumer's demand for actual damages.[568]

In Payne v. Progressive Financial Services, Inc.,[569] the Fifth Circuit found an offer of judgment that did not offer to compensate the consumer's FDCPA actual damages would not moot the consumer's case, as the offer did not offer complete relief.[570] The lower court determined that complete relief was offered as it considered the consumer's allegations of actual damages to be insufficiently supported by facts in the complaint. Relying on Supreme Court precedent, the Fifth Circuit found that the failure to adequately plead entitlement 561 Fed. R. Civ. P. 68. Cf. Ardito v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 2009 WL 449159 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 23, 2009) (unreported) (granting lawyer defendant relief from mistakenly entered offer of judgment, but not dismissing from reopened action).

562 Danow v. Law Office of David E. Borack, P.A., 367 Fed. Appx. 22 (11th Cir. 2010) (attorney fees ($62,895) plus costs ($715.60) properly awarded where offer of judgment was not more favorable than judgment). But see Bolton v. Pentagroup Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2009 WL 734038 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 17, 2009) (even though plaintiff failed to accept offer of judgment that provided all relief available, case would not be deemed moot, since court's instant ruling adopting Costa standard of emotional distress that eliminated plaintiff's claim for actual damages could not have been anticipated).

563 See Crossman v. Marcoccio, 806 F.2d 329 (1st Cir. 1986); Abby v. Paige, 2013 WL 12246348, at *4 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 2, 2013) (consumer was entitled to award of reasonable attorney fees, even though she rejected early Rule 68 offer of judgment that offered larger recovery than that ultimately received; "Because the FDCPA does not include attorney's fees as part of awardable costs, Rule 68 does not limit Plaintiff's recovery of attorneys fees."), adopted, 2013 WL 12246349 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 1, 2013); Valencia v. Affiliated Group, Inc., 674 F. Supp. 2d 1300 (S.D. Fla. 2009); Pietrowski v. Merchants & Med. Credit Corp., 256 F.R.D. 544 (E.D. Mich. 2008). See also Peck v. IMC Credit Services, 960 F.3d 972 (7th Cir. June 5, 2020) (damages such as plaintiff's time and mailing expenses incurred in successfully pursuing his claim are not part of costs "properly awardable under" § 1692k(a)); Hopper v. Eulid Manor Nursing Home, Inc., 867 F.2d 291, 296 (6th Cir. 1989).

564 See Fallen v. GREP Southwest, L.L.C., 247 F. Supp. 3d 1165, 1207 (D.N.M. Mar. 30, 2017) (citing supporting cases). See also Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 924 F.3d 949 (7th Cir. May 15, 2019) (considering plaintiff's rejection of Rule 68 offer and limited success at trial in limiting award of attorney fees); Lloyd v. Credit Services Int'l, Inc., 2019 WL 5311843 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 21, 2019); Deibert v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., 2019 WL 4933154 (E.D. Wis. Oct. 7, 2019).

565 See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 7.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

566 676 F.3d 365 (4th Cir. 2012).

567 See also Smith v. Greystone Alliance, L.L.C., 772 F.3d 448 (7th Cir. 2014) (collection agency's settlement offer of $1500 did not moot FDCPA claim for unspecified amount of actual and statutory damages); Payne v. Progressive Fin. Services, Inc. 748 F.3d 605 (5th Cir. 2014) (unaccepted offer of judgment that omitted compensation for claimed actual damages did not offer complete relief, and therefore did not moot plaintiff's FDCPA claim); McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 744 F.3d 1010, 1019 (7th Cir. 2014) (settlement proposal did not offer full resolution: "[I]t demanded that he refrain from appealing the denial of class certification; and, most importantly, it promised only to give any other "reasonable" relief that the court thought necessary. This indicated that [the debt buyer] LVNV was reserving the right to object to any additional relief that it deemed unreasonable."). But see Jackson v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2014 WL 517490 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 7, 2014) (granting the defendant summary judgment when the consumer failed to provide any evidence to support his alleged actual damages).

568 Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 772 F.3d 448 (7th Cir. 2014).

569 748 F.3d 605 (5th Cir. 2014). See also Wynne v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 124 F. Supp. 3d 734 (E.D. Va. 2015).

570 See also Webster v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 414 F. Supp. 3d 1198 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 21, 2019) (rejecting Rule 68 offer of judgment does not moot plaintiff's claims).

to actual damages would not go to the court's jurisdiction; the debt collector, at this stage of the case, could seek summary judgment.[571]

Similarly, in Hrivnak v. NCO Portfolio Management, Inc.,[572] the Sixth Circuit found that the debt collectors' Rule 68 offer of judgment did not moot the consumer's FDCPA and state claims when the offer did not offer to satisfy claims that the debt collectors deemed meritless. For example, the offer did not address the consumer's claims for declaratory and injunctive relief. Because the availability of those claims under the FDCPA had not been addressed by the Sixth Circuit or the Supreme Court, they should be determined by dispositive motion, rather than a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction because of mootness.[573] In Cabala v. Crowley,[574] the Second Circuit held that an oral settlement offer that offered full monetary relief, but did not consent to entry of judgment, did not offer full relief mooting the case, affirming the district court's conclusion that the parties continued to litigate because of a substantive dispute over the "nature and form" of the settlement. The Eleventh Circuit also held that a debt collector's mere offer of settlement for the full amount of statutory damages, costs, and attorney fees, without entry of judgment, did not moot the plaintiffs' FDCPA claims.[575]

The question of whether a rejected offer of judgment offered full relief also arises as to whether the relief obtained is less than that offered, entitling a losing defendant to recovery of its court costs. The Eleventh Circuit found an offer of judgment was not as favorable where it was as to monetary relief, but also contained a confidentiality provision.[576] The lack of a confidentiality agreement had some value: "this is exactly the kind of consumer protection case where there is added value to public exposure to a defendant's violations."[577]

Where an offer of judgement is accepted, tender by the collector and acceptance of a payment by the consumer of less than the full judgment amount does not amount to an accord and satisfaction of such judgment, particularly where no genuine compromise is reached that the payment would be considered full satisfaction of the judgment.[578]

11.7.3 Ambiguity in Defendant's Offer of Reasonable Attorney Fees

Some debt collectors file offers of judgment which provide for damages and "costs," but do not specifically mention the payment of the consumer's attorney fees. The debt collector then asserts that acceptance of the offer of judgment waived the consumer's right to recover attorney fees. The debt collector's position is based on litigation under the Civil Rights Act, in which the term "costs" includes the plaintiff's attorney fees for the purpose of an offer of judgment. The United States Supreme Court has reasoned: "Thus, absent congressional expressions to the contrary, where the underlying statute defines 'costs' to include attorney's fees, we are satisfied such fees are to be included as costs for purpose of Rule 68."[579]

However, many courts find the Civil Rights Act cases are not determinative in FDCPA cases because the FDCPA states that the successful litigant may obtain costs "together with a reasonable attorney's fee."[580] The Seventh, Eighth, and Ninth Circuits have approved awarding consumers attorney fees in FDCPA cases when the consumer accepts a Rule 68 offer of judgment that provides for damages and costs but is silent as to attorney fees.[581] The consumer is entitled under the FDCPA to an additional amount for fees, since the offer failed to exclude fees and since the defendant, if it had intended to exclude fees, should have done so explicitly.[582]

However, the Sixth Circuit admonished a consumer attorney for refusing to disclose to the debt collector the current consumer attorney fees accrued and rejecting an offer of judgment that included an offer for the consumer's previously disclosed fees, but not the current fees.[583] The Sixth Circuit

571 748 F.3d 605, 608 (5th Cir. 2014).

572 719 F.3d 564 (6th Cir. 2013).

573 See also Smith v. Specified Credit Ass'n, Inc., 2015 WL 468871 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 30, 2015) (where consumer proposed to amend class action complaint to seek injunctive and/or declaratory relief, collection agency's offer of solely monetary damages did not moot FDCPA claim).

574 736 F.3d 226 (2d Cir. 2013). See also Balthazor v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 2011 WL 3627701, at *2 (S.D. Fla. Aug. 18, 2011) (when there was no offer of judgment, but a mere settlement offer of full damages, lower court found that offer did not moot case or warrant dismissal: "Defendant in this action is expressly not seeking relief under Rule 68. This Court does not find that the action is moot as Plaintiff has not been afforded the relief of an enforceable judgment.").

575 Zinni v. ER Solutions, Inc., 692 F.3d 1162 (11th Cir. 2012). See also Fernandez v. Peter J. Craig & Assoc., 985 F. Supp. 2d 363 (E.D.N.Y. 2013).

576 Danow v. Law Office of David E. Borack, P.A., 367 Fed. Appx. 22 (11th Cir. 2010).

577 Danow v. Law Office of David E. Borack, P.A., 367 Fed. Appx. 22, 24 (11th Cir. 2010).

578 Afewekri v. Anaya Law Group, 843 Fed. Appx 847 (9th Cir. 2021) (consumer was awarded attorney fees and costs following his acceptance of debt collector's second offer of judgment; debt collector tendered payment for less than judgment amount and consumer accepted such payment; denying debt collector's appeal of judgment under theory of accord and satisfaction).

579 Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 9, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 3016, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985) (split decision with strong dissent arguing that attorney fees have not been considered costs under Rule 68).

580 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3).

581 See Afewerki v. Anaya Law Grp., 779 Fed. Appx. 449 (9th Cir. 2019); Hennessy v. Daniels Law Office, 270 F.3d 551 (8th Cir. 2001); Burrell v. G.M.F., Inc., 225 F.3d 661 (9th Cir. 2000); Webb v. James, 147 F.3d 617 (7th Cir. 1998); Nusom v. Comh Woodburn, Inc., 122 F.3d 830 (9th Cir. 1997); Van Echaute v. Law Office of Thomas Landis, Esq., 2011 WL 1302195 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2011); Tye v. Brock & Scott, P.L.L.C., 2010 WL 428964 (M.D.N.C. Feb. 1, 2010) (ambiguity from not mentioning attorney fees in Rule 68 offer construed against debt collection law firm). See also Ash v. Malacko, 2014 WL 4384475, at *2 (D. Minn. Sept. 4, 2014) (awarding consumer fees based on it being successful action (citing Fletcher v. City of Fort Wayne, 162 F.3d 975, 976–977 (7th Cir. 1998)).

582 See Hennessy v. Daniels Law Office, 270 F.3d 551 (8th Cir. 2001).

583 Lee v. Thomas & Thomas, 109 F.3d 302 (6th Cir. 1997) (awarding fees of $1106.85 when $12,759 were sought). See also Baylor v. Mitchell denied the consumer attorney fees that accrued after the offer of judgment.[584]

Unless the law in the applicable jurisdiction is clear that fees can be awarded, it is better to seek a revised offer that expressly permits the recovery of the consumer's attorney fees and specifies the procedure for determining those fees. A consumer who receives an offer of judgment should ask the defendant to clarify the offer's contents when it is unclear.[585]

When the debt collector makes an offer of judgment to resolve the matter of damages and costs, but agrees to leave the determination of attorney fees to the court, this should be spelled out in the offer of judgment.[586] When the offer of judgment includes an unspecified amount of attorney fees, the amount of fees or the method of calculations should be confirmed in writing.[587] If the offer consists only of "now accrued" attorney fees and provides for a determination by the court of the amount of fees, the consumer may not be able to obtain fees for the time spent preparing and arguing the fee petition.[588]

Clarifying the offer in the consumer's acceptance of the offer of judgment may be construed as a rejection of the offer[589] or as acceptance of the offer as originally stated.[590] It is advisable, before acceptance, to clarify what the offer of judgment includes and does not include.[591]

11.7.4 Other Issues in Settlements and Offers of Judgment

Parse the language in a proposed settlement agreement to prevent releasing claims against other parties or future claims. For example, when the consumer accepted an offer of judgment from the debt buyer's collection agency, a lower court dismissed his complaint against the debt buyer co-defendant as moot pursuant to agency principles, because the consumer's only claim against the debt buyer was based on its vicarious liability for the acts of its collection agency, which was satisfied by the offer of judgment.[592] The clear language of section 1692k provides that statutory damages are available from each defendant;[593] be leery of an offer of judgment by one of several defendants.

A prior settlement by a consumer of an FDCPA claim may attempt to bar a subsequent suit by that consumer against the debt collector.[594] One loan servicer argued that language in a prior settlement agreement that released the servicer from "any and all past and present claims up until the Effective Date

Rubenstein & Assoc., 857 F.3d 939 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (attorney fees significantly reduced in part because attorney spent more than 87 hours on opposition to motion dismiss after she should have known of offer of judgment that was eventually accepted); Miranda v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2014 WL 772959 (D. Colo. Jan. 30, 2014) (awarding attorney fees with 50% reduction for "unreasonable" time spent following plaintiff's rejection of offer of judgment, based on her belief that offer's wording would restrict her recovery of costs); Weber v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 2907306 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2007) (awarding fees and costs under Rule 68 only for time expended to first $1000 offer of judgment, which plaintiff declined). Cf. Williams v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 1791099 (E.D. Pa. May 11, 2011) (although party may be entitled to attorney fees accruing after date of service of offer of judgment for work done to prepare fee petition, offer is contract, and if party has agreed to earlier accrual date, agreed date will control); Mann v. Acclaim Fin. Services, Inc., 348 F. Supp. 2d 923 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (neither Rule 68 nor Sixth Circuit precedent precluded award of fees for time expended after inadequate offer of judgment was made; $2000 offer of judgment intended to compensate for $1200 in damages plus $800 in attorney fees and expenses fell well short when attorney fees expended at time of offer were $4600).

584 Lee v. Thomas & Thomas, 109 F.3d 302 (6th Cir. 1997).

585 Cf. Queen v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2010 WL 4006676 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 7, 2010) (debt collector's offer of judgment requiring "general release" rendered offer undefined, indefinite, and unenforceable).

586 See Rivera v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 540 F. Supp. 2d 329 (D. Conn. 2008). See also Skaer v. Nat'l Action Fin. Services, Inc., 2009 WL 724054 (D. Colo. Mar. 18, 2009).

587 See, e.g., Conway v. Specified Credit Ass'n I, Inc., 2014 WL 51024, at *3 (E.D. Mo. Jan. 7, 2014) ("Defendants' offer of judgment unambiguously included reasonable attorney's fees accrued in the federal court action. Plaintiff accepted that offer and cannot recover fees incurred in connection with the previous state court action."). See also Shaw v. Credit Collection Services, 2009 WL 4981620 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2009) (fees "incurred to date"); Tillman v. Calvary Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2009 WL 510921 (D. Ariz. Feb. 27, 2009) (finding plaintiff's motion to strike offer of judgment that was ambiguous about payment of consumer's attorney fees to be procedurally improper).

588 See Watson v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2015 WL 1959163 (D. Nev. Apr. 29, 2015); Navarro v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt. Inc., 2014 WL 2805244, at *1 n.1 (E.D. Pa. June 20, 2014) (because offer of judgment is contract, if parties have specified accrual date within offer of judgment, that date will govern); Bilazzo v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 876 F. Supp. 2d 452 (D.N.J. 2012); Lindenbaum v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 2848748, at *1 (E.D. Pa. July 19, 2011) (statement in accepted offer of judgment that allowed "an additional amount for plaintiff's reasonable costs and attorney fees accrued through the date of this Offer of Judgment" was an ambiguous term that must be construed against drafter of offer; "Accordingly . . . plaintiff may recover for work done through the date of filing of the acceptance of the Offer of Judgment" rather than date that offer was made); Pearson v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 5146805 (D. Ariz. Dec. 13, 2010).

589 See Boraci v. Law Offices of Michael R. Stillman, P.C., 2007 WL 485232 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 9, 2007). See also Henchen v. Renovo Services, L.L.C., 2013 WL 1152040 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 19, 2013) (offer of judgment that was silent as to attorney fees was not accepted when consumer accepted offer intending to seek his attorney fees).

590 Gomez v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2007 WL 2710390 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 13, 2007).

591 See Conway v. Specified Credit Ass'n I, Inc., 2014 WL 51024 (E.D. Mo. Jan. 7, 2014) (consumer cannot recover fees incurred in connection with previous state court action). See also Walker v. Rash Curtis & Assoc., 2010 WL 4157128 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 19, 2010) (awarding plaintiffs reasonable attorney fees of $4822.50 pursuant to terms of settlement agreement, but not costs, because nothing in settlement offer indicated that plaintiffs had in any way conducted "successful action to enforce" liability against defendant under FDCPA).

592 Nelson v. Cavalry Portfolio Services, L.L.C., 2010 WL 1258045 (D. Colo. Mar. 24, 2010); See also Deutsch v. Pressler, Felt & Warshaw, L.L.P., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 1619505 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 26, 2021) (claims against LVNV released in settlement agreement because of affiliate relationship between LVNV and Resurgent).

593 See § 11.9.8.2, infra.

594 See, e.g., Little v. Seterus, Inc., 2017 WL 606340 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 13, 2017) (homeowner's FDCPA claims against mortgage servicer were dismissed, because release by homeowner in his settlement of prior FDCPA suit against servicer had waived future claims against servicer).

of this Agreement . . . known or unknown or capable of being known" acted as a release and waiver of post-settlement claims of attempts to collect on inaccurate amounts due to the servicer's pre-settlement failure to properly calculate the escrow account.[595]

The Eleventh Circuit held that acceptance of the defendant's offer of judgment rendered the case moot despite the debt collector's reservation of its right to appeal. The reservation did not create a justiciable controversy in the absence of either party having a continuing financial stake in the litigation.[596]

Most debt collectors wish to avoid a public record of a judgment recorded against them and may make a higher offer than that extended by the offer of judgment when the consumer agrees that the offer and acceptance will not be filed. This higher offer will be appealing to the consumer, but, if the debt collector does not make a higher offer, the offer of judgment and acceptance should be recorded with the clerk of the court, thereby creating a permanent public record of judgment against the collector. That recorded judgment may provide a warning to other consumers and strengthen other consumers' claims for FDCPA statutory damages and punitive damages for other claims.

11.8 Actual Damages

11.8.1 Overview

11.8.1.1 Importance of Developing Actual Damages

A working knowledge of the law and practice of proving damages is crucial in both the negotiation and the trial stage of a debt collection abuse case. An attorney who has not developed the evidence of damages in a case has little idea of where to start and terminate negotiations.

As discussed in detail below, a case should always be assessed for actual damages resulting from emotional distress and even medical conditions, whether considering a statutory debt collection violation or a case sounding in tort. When a claim sounding in tort is added, punitive damages also may be appropriate.[597] All types of actual damages must be considered, including out-of-pocket expenses and "relational" injuries, in which the damage is to the debtor's relationships to family, employers, or the community, such as injury to reputation. Treatises exist that report amounts of court awards for "pain and suffering," "emotional distress," and other consumer injuries.[598]

Successful negotiation or trial of the damages issues in a debtor harassment case has important repercussions beyond the individual case: it sets a standard for future settlements in similar cases and educates opposing counsel and their client, mediators, and the judiciary of the harms consumers suffer in these cases. Favorable settlements or awards of damages that are publicized also may deter future misconduct by collectors throughout the affected community. Large settlements or awards increase the legal resources available to low-income consumers by increasing the financial incentive for more private lawyers to become involved in debtor harassment cases. A consumer attorney obtaining large awards will be sought by consumers seeking representation and by attorneys seeking co-counsel.

11.8.1.2 Actual Damages and Settlement of Consumer's Underlying Debt

A consumer's damages claim may be used to leverage a reduction of the collector's debt claim against the consumer. Canceling or reducing the underlying debt, if owed, can provide meaningful relief to the client, since the amount of the debt may well exceed the damages recoverable for debt collection abuse. Be mindful, however, as to whether a cancellation or reduction of a debt is taxable income to the consumer. Settlement of a disputed debt may not result in taxable income, while forgiveness of a debt may result in taxable income.[599] Consumer's counsel must also use some caution in exploring forgiveness of the debt in return for dismissal or reduction of the amount claimed in litigation of an FDCPA case, as some judges may disapprove of that strategy.

Since the consumer may be judgment proof or eligible for bankruptcy, this type of compensation may be appealing to the collector. However, a consumer who is filing bankruptcy or is judgment proof may have little interest in trading real dollars as damages for forgiveness of the debt in settlement negotiations. Retirement of the debt as settlement of FDCPA claims should be accepted only when it has real significance to the client.

Canceling the debt may later be claimed to be beyond the authority of a collection agency or attorney or not recorded in the creditor's records, so that it is imperative to confirm the agreement in writing. When the consumer settles and dismisses their suit, they should file the settlement with the court and request that it reserve jurisdiction to enforce the settlement agreement.[600]

The consumer's counsel should also rectify with the collector, to the extent possible, any harmful information in the consumer's credit reports.[601] This will make it easier for the 595 Bowen v. Ditech Fin. L.L.C., 2017 WL 4183081, at *14, 15 (D. Me. Sept. 20, 2017).

596 See Yunker v. Allianceone Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 701 F.3d 369 (11th Cir. 2012).

597 See § 11.10, infra.

598 See, e.g., Jury Verdict Research Inc., Personal Injury Valuation Handbooks (1989) (available from Jury Research, Inc., Solon, Ohio). Lawyers specializing in personal injury cases may also be helpful.

599 See § 11.14.2, infra.

600 See Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 511 U.S. 375, 380–382, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994); Kelly v. Bird, 2006 WL 2193709 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 2, 2006).

601 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

consumer to get credit or a mortgage in the future at a lower cost.[602]

A defendant may seek to require that settlement terms remain confidential. Confidentiality in this context may be contrary to the public interest when it allows the defendant to continue to perpetrate an abusive practice. Several factors should be evaluated when deciding whether a consumer should accept a confidentiality clause in a settlement agreement.[603] Some clients, however, may prefer to keep a settlement agreement confidential, particularly when it results in a large recovery.

11.8.1.3 General Standards for FDCPA Actual Damages

The standards for establishing actual damages vary by type of claim and for state claims by state. Chapter 15, infra, focuses on tort claims, and Chapter 16, infra, on state consumer protection claims.

For an FDCPA claim, the statute provides:

> (a) Except as otherwise provided by this section, any debt collector who fails to comply with any provision of this subchapter with respect to any person is liable to such person in an amount equal to the sum of—
>
> (1) any actual damage sustained by such person as a result of such failure; . . .[604]

Neither the FDCPA, nor any other part of the Consumer Credit Protection Act,[605] defines "actual damage." Black's Law Dictionary defines actual damages as: "an amount awarded to a complainant to compensate for a proven injury or loss; damages that repay actual losses—Also termed compensatory damages."[606]

Congress left it to the courts to apply the term "actual damage" to particular cases in accordance with the purposes of the FDCPA and with developing principles of federal common law. Actual damages commonly include pecuniary losses such as lost wages, attorney fees to defend a state collection action brought in violation of the FDCPA,[607] or the cost of obtaining an unlisted telephone number,[608] and physical injuries such as heart attacks, ulcers, vomiting, and insomnia.[609] A payment made by a debtor in response to an act that violated the FDCPA may be considered actual damages, without regard to whether the debt was in fact owed.[610] The equitable remedy of disgorgement may be appropriate to return the debt collector's revenues obtained by violations of the FDCPA to a class of consumers targeted by the illegal conduct.[611] In addition, the courts commonly allow recovery of damages for emotional distress[612] and relational injuries under the FDCPA.[613]

11.8.2 Emotional Distress Damages

11.8.2.1 Importance of Emotional Distress Damages

Depending on the severity of the harm, damage awards for emotional distress can be substantial.[614] For example, in McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C.,[615] the Ninth Circuit held that the testimony of the plaintiff consumer and a clinical psychologist supported the jury's award of $250,000 for emotional distress. Generally, a consumer does not have to meet the higher tort standards of intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress under the FDCPA,[616] and such claims can be supported by objective evidence, arguments of counsel, and the consumer's own experience.[617] Large damage awards for emotional distress may be easier to recover and retain on appeal than a large punitive damages award.[618]

602 Id.
603 See National Consumer Law Center, Mortgage Lending § 12.11.3 (3d ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.
604 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(1).
605 15 U.S.C. §§ 1601 to 1693.
606 Black's Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019).
607 See § 11.8.4, infra.
608 Id.
609 See § 11.8.2.5, infra.
610 See § 118.4, infra.
611 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 17.4.4 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Credit Discrimination § 11.8.5.2 (7th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Appx. E.3.1.1, infra.
612 See § 11.8.2, infra.
613 See § 11.8.5, infra.
614 See, e.g., McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) ($250,000); Goodin v. Bank of Am., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1197 (M.D. Fla. 2015) ($50,000 to each spouse); Burrows v. Hunt, 2012 WL 414295 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 9, 2012) (default judgment of $25,000); Hunter v. Oasis Fin. Solutions, L.L.C. 2010 WL 6210035 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 21, 2010) ($73,000 as default judgment), adopted, 2011 WL 997375 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 2011).
615 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011).
616 Id. Lee v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.C., 2008 WL 1886178 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 25, 2008) (emotional distress damages for FDCPA violation do not require proof of elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress), rev'd on other grounds, 601 F.3d 654 (6th Cir. 2010). But see Costa v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., 634 F. Supp. 2d 1069 (E.D. Cal. 2007) (to recover emotional distress damages for violation of FDCPA or Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Act, must prove elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress; severe distress not shown when consumer suffered anxiety and loss of sleep, but never consulted healthcare professional; disagreed with by Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group L.L.C., 962 F. Supp. 2d 1188, 1200 (Aug. 2, 2013)).
617 See § 11.8.6.3, infra.
618 See, e.g., Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Serv., Inc., 722 Fed. Appx. 864 (11th Cir. 2018) (affirming district court's award of $7000 for emotional distress without hearing where consumer's emotional distress damages affidavit was factually unopposed on summary judgment and collection agency did not request hearing); Lee v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone L.L.C., 2008 WL 1886178 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 25, 2008) (upholding jury' award of emotional distress damages; emotional distress damages fo FDCPA violation do not require proof of elements of intentional inflic tion of emotional distress), rev'd on other grounds, 601 F.3d 654 (6t Cir. 2010); Wenrich v. Robert E. Cole, P.C., 2001 WL 4994 (E.D. P Dec. 22, 2000).

11.8.2.2 Supreme Court Case Law on Recovery of Emotional Distress Damages

The development of the law supports that emotional distress damages can be recovered as actual damages. In Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc.,[619] a defamation case predating the FDCPA raising First Amendment issues, the Supreme Court did not define actual injury, but held that it was not limited to out-of-pocket loss. The Court noted that the more common types of harm inflicted by defamatory falsehoods include loss of reputation and standing in the community, personal humiliation, and mental anguish and suffering.[620]

In Carey v. Piphus,[621] a procedural due process case brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the Court stated that "[d]istress is a personal injury familiar to the law,"[622] and that "[w]e use the term 'distress' to include mental suffering or emotional anguish."[623] The Court thus defined actual injury to include a variety of psychological harms, as well as pecuniary loss and physical injury.

11.8.2.3 Older State Law Tort Standards for Recovery of Emotional Distress Damages

Courts in the past were reluctant to permit compensation for mental anguish or distress unless the mental distress resulted from a physical injury or impact, known as the "impact rule." Some courts restricted the availability of compensation for stress-related injuries to situations in which they are likely to exist (for example, when the defendant's conduct is "outrageous," "malicious," or "reckless").[624] Some courts wanted to see utterly despicable debt abuses and "blood" before they would compensate a tort victim.[625]

A change in judicial attitude toward awarding stress-related damages is reflected by the increased number of jurisdictions recognizing the tort of intentional infliction of mental distress and liberalizing that tort by expressly doing away with the "impact rule," or by ignoring contrary precedent and awarding damages for purely stress-related injuries.

When claims are based on state law, the stage of development of the state law for awarding damages related to emotional stress must be carefully determined. Federal cases, particularly Supreme Court decisions, may be persuasive to local courts in the process of expanding their laws of damages.[626]

11.8.2.4 The FDCPA Standard for Emotional Distress Damages

Courts now generally agree that emotional distress damages can be awarded under the FDCPA without having to meet state tort requirements for recovery of such damages when the plaintiff provides specific testimony to show mental pain and distress and not just generalized testimony or conclusory statements.[627]

Congress passed the FDCPA because of the inadequacy of state tort law. The FDCPA's Findings and Declaration of Purpose states: "[e]xisting laws and procedures for redressing these injuries are inadequate to protect consumers."[628] Representative Annunzio, the primary House FDCPA sponsor, stated that "[p]assage of the Debt Collection Practices Act is important if consumers throughout this country are to be protected from the mental anguish and intimidation that are consequences of abusive debt collection practices."[629] As one lower court noted: "by their very nature, abusive, deceptive or unfair debt collection practices are those kinds of actions which may be expected to cause emotional distress and, therefore, the availability of damages for such distress is of paramount importance."[630] "[A] reading of § 1692k(a)(1), that looks to state tort law, would afford plaintiffs no protection from the very conduct the FDCPA is intended to curb. This would appear to be contrary to Congress' intentions."[631] "The imposition of actual damages should be interpreted as a message to all debt collectors that such conduct is inappropriate. To not award actual damages would encourage 'a race to the bottom'

619 418 U.S. 323, 94 S. Ct. 2997, 41 L. Ed. 2d 789 (1974).

620 Id., 418 U.S. at 350.

621 435 U.S. 247, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1978).

622 Id., 435 U.S. at 263.

623 Id., 435 U.S. at 263 n.20.

624 For example, the standard in Maine for intentional infliction of emotional distress includes that the conduct was so "extreme and outrageous as to exceed all possible bounds of decency and must be regarded as atrocious, utterly intolerable in a civilized community." Curtis v. Porter, 784 A.2d 18, 24 (Me. 2001).

625 See § 15.2.3, infra.

626 See § 11.8.2.2, supra (analysis of United States Supreme Court's position on the awarding of damages for stress-related injuries, and review of federal court decisions based on Supreme Court's guidance in this area).

627 See Lodge v. Kondaur Capital Corp., 750 F.3d 1263, 1272 (11th Cir. May 8, 2014); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606 (D. Md. Mar. 30, 2020) (mortgagor testified in deposition that he suffered inability to sleep, vomiting, and headaches as result of receiving threatening letters from law firm and failure of law firm to respond to documents, and that he had not seen physician and mental health care provider but had taken over-the-counter medications for symptoms of his emotional distress); In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 31, 2020); Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171 (D. Utah Feb. 5, 2019); § 11.8.6.3, infra. See also Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, P.A., 946 F.3d 855, 864 (6th Cir. Jan. 3, 2020) (allegation of anxiety alone with no corroborating allegations not considered emotional distress or cognizable injury). But see Russell v. GC Services L.P., 476 F. Supp. 3d 1097 (E.D. Wash. Aug. 4, 2020) (consumer did not establish that debt collector's communications would cause reasonable person to suffer significant emotional harm). Whether emotional distress damages are considered concrete harm for Article III standing is discussed in § 11.15, infra.

628 15 U.S.C. § 1692(b).

629 123 Cong. Rec. H2923 (daily ed. Apr. 1, 1977).

630 Deeters v. Phelan Hallinan & Schmieg, L.L.P., 2013 WL 6524625, at *4 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 12, 2013).

631 Smith v. Law Offices of Mitchell N. Kay, 124 B.R. 182, 189 n.6 (D. Del. 1991) (looking at case law interpreting 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681 to 1681t). Cf. Greene v. Rash, Curtis & Assoc., 89 F.R.D. 314, 316 (E.D. Tenn. 1980).

as debt collectors could operate in an inappropriate manner with little consequence."[632]

At the time the FDCPA was enacted, case law under other titles of the Consumer Credit Protection Act (CCPA), such as the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA)[633] and the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (ECOA),[634] had awarded damages for injury to the sensibilities or psyche, without proof of the state tort elements for emotional distress. When Congress enacted the term "actual damages" in the FDCPA, it was aware of how the term was used in other preexisting CCPA titles. "Where Congress borrows terms of art in which are accumulated . . . legal tradition and meaning . . . it presumably knows and adopts the cluster of ideas that were attached . . . and the meaning its use will convey to the judicial mind."[635] For example, the availability of FCRA emotional distress damages without reference to state tort law requirements indicates a Congressional intent to allow the same under the FDCPA.[636]

11.8.2.5 Injuries and Symptoms Related to Stress

The consumer's attorney should ask about the stress the consumer suffered and how long the distress continued. Actual damages from stress may involve several different injuries, such as nausea, sleeplessness, headaches, body pain, and loss of concentration. Multiple symptoms from stress can add credibility to the consumer's claim, as well as increase actual damages. It can be helpful to obtain medical or mental health treatment records if the consumer discussed the distress with a professional. Other support can come in the form of affidavits from partners, friends, clergy, or anyone close to the consumer with whom the consumer discussed the abuse. When the abuse is egregious and the resulting distress lasts many days, damages may be valued in five or even six figures, or more.[637]

The following injuries and symptoms are among those that courts have recognized are related to stress[638]:

- Anxiety, paranoia, difficulty relating to others, stress, anger, "down time," severe headaches, increased temper, adrenaline, conflict with a spouse;[639]
- Shock;[640]
- Crying;[641]
- Loss of sleep, insomnia, nightmares, night sweats;[642]
- Anxiety, nervousness, fear of foreclosure of their home,[643] worry, loss of happiness;[644]

632 Becker v. Montgomery, Lynch, 2003 WL 23335929, at *2 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 26, 2003).

633 Rasor v. Retail Credit Co., 554 P.2d 1041 (Wash. 1976). See also Millstone v. O'Hanlon Reports, Inc., 528 F.2d 829 (8th Cir. 1976).

634 Shuman v. Standard Oil Co. of Cal., 453 F. Supp. 1150 (N.D. Cal. 1978).

635 Morissette v. United States, 342 U.S. 246, 263, 72 S. Ct. 240, 96 L. Ed. 288 (1952). See also United States v. Freed, 401 U.S. 601, 607–608, 91 S. Ct. 1112, 28 L. Ed. 2d 356 (1971); United States v. Merriam, 263 U.S. 179, 187, 44 S. Ct. 69, 68 L. Ed. 240 (1923); United States v. Fid. Trust Co., 222 U.S. 158, 160, 32 S. Ct. 59, 56 L. Ed. 137 (1911).

636 Smith v. Law Offices of Mitchell N. Kay, 124 B.R. 182 (D. Del. 1991) (looking at case law interpreting 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681 to 1681t).

637 See Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (award of $5 million); Southwestern Bell Tel. Co. v. Wilson, 768 S.W.2d 755 (Tex. App. 1988) (upheld $2,457,789.24 award on appeal).

638 See also Appx. E.3.1.1, infra.

639 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011). See also Grimm v. GPG Processing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4508921 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 19, 2019) (awarding $15,000 in emotional distress damages where plaintiff's constant anticipation of additional calls from debt collector caused, inter alia, stress in her relationship with her husband); Bentson v. Chyma, 2017 WL 7513317, at *3 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 11, 2017) (summary judgment for consumer, $2000 in actual damages for emotional distress; "Here, Plaintiff, a single mother with very limited financial resources, worried (and continues to worry) that she would be unable to provide for her children if her assets were frozen pending resolution of Defendant's debt collection efforts; this anxiety and stress manifested itself physically whereby Plaintiff experienced panic attacks, headaches, loss of appetite and sleep, and a rash that caused her to visit a dermatologist."), adopted, 2018 WL 780587 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 8, 2018); Green v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 2015 WL 4599480 (S.D. Ind. July 29, 2015) (consumer's testimony that she had suffered fatigue, argued with her husband, and experienced stomach pain following receipt of collection letter went beyond mere conclusory statements (though barely), entitling her to jury trial).

640 Moorehead v. J.C. Penney Co., 555 S.W.2d 713, 718 (Tenn. 1977).

641 See Bahena v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 363 F. Supp. 3d 914 (W.D. Wis. 2019); Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171 (D. Utah 2019); Mendoza v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 2019 WL 5616961, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 22, 2019) (consumer's statements that he suffered from lack of sleep and stress and was unable to answer calls from prospective clients on his cell phone were "more than conclusory and enough to establish emotional distress"); Grimm v. GPG Processing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4508921 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 19, 2019); Latimore v. Gateway Retrieval, L.L.C., 2013 WL 791258 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 2013); Baiocchetti v. Smith, Dean & Assoc., Inc., 2012 WL 3728146 (D. Conn. Jan. 25, 2012); Hartung v. J.D. Byrider, Inc., 2009 WL 1876690 (E.D. Cal. June 26, 2009); Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000).

642 See Blevins v. MSV Recovery L.L.C., 2020 WL 4365634, at *4–5 (S.D. Ohio July 30, 2020) (awarding $5000 for emotional distress consisting of panic, difficulty falling asleep, trouble focusing at work, and 'flashbacks' to past instances of verbal/physical abuse"); Best v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606 (D. Md. Mar. 30, 2020); Bahena v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 363 F. Supp. 3d 914 (W.D. Wis. 2019); Reyelts v. Cross, 2013 WL 3870285 (N.D. Tex. July 26, 2013); Latimore v. Gateway Retrieval, L.L.C., 2013 WL 791258 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 2013); Roots v. Am. Marine Liquidators, Inc., 2012 WL 3136462 (D.S.C. Aug. 1, 2012); Rankins v. Nat'l Credit Works II, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5222601 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 2, 2011); Hartung v. J.D. Byrider, Inc., 2009 WL 1876690 (E.D. Cal. June 26, 2009); Baruch v. Healthcare Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 3232090 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 30, 2007); Crossley v. Lieberman, 90 B.R. 682 (E.D. Pa. 1988), aff'd, 868 F.2d 566 (3d Cir. 1989); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (awarding compensatory damages of $5 million under Texas Debt Collection Act when plaintiff suffered very painful skin eruptions and numerous other symptoms, including sleeplessness, due to defendant's abusive collection tactics). But see Braden v. JH Portfolio Debt Equities, L.L.C., 2019 WL 6895544, at *2 (D. Md. Dec. 18, 2019) (testimony regarding lack of "restful" sleep did not warrant damages for emotional distress).

643 See Goodin v. Bank of Am., 114 F. Supp. 3d (M.D. Fla. 2015) (awarding $50,000 to each spouse, noting that their very real fear of losing their home created "a very stressful situation"). But see Aitken v. Debt Mgmt. Partners, L.L.C., 2015 WL 1810345 (C.D. Ill. Apr. 17, 2015) (fear of felony prosecution not credible after the consumer's lawyer advised consumer it was not possible).

644 See Selig v. Niagara Recovery Solutions Mgmt. Group, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4283926, at *6 (E.D. Va. July 27, 2020) (on default judgment, awarding emotional distress damages where consumer alleged that he

- Severe distress,[645] hypertension;[646]
- Loss of concentration, instability;[647]
- Hysteria,[648] trembling;[649]
- Irritability;[650]
- Embarrassment, humiliation, intimidation;[651]
- Loss of the tranquility of old age;[652]
- Indignation;[653]
- Future anxiety, pain, or suffering;[654]
- Emotional or mental distress.[655]

"worried that the defendants had taken legal action against him, and that the caller would call or come to his work, jeopardizing his current and future employment" and "also worried that the defendants would show up at his home"); Latimore v. Gateway Retrieval, L.L.C., 2013 WL 791258 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 2013) (awarding $10,000 for emotional distress resulting from threats of arrest and jail); Baiocchetti v. Smith, Dean & Assoc., Inc., 2012 WL 3728146, at *3 (D. Conn. Jan. 25, 2012) (awarding $2500 in actual damages for emotional distress that plaintiff suffered as result of defendant's "egregious collection efforts"); Rankins v. Nat'l Credit Works II, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5222601 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 2, 2011) (felt panicked); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 928 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) ("[doctor] felt that the lawsuit caused stress which worsened [plaintiff's] symptoms, such as headaches, anxiety, paranoia, and difficulty relating to others"; jury awarded $250,000 in compensatory damages, $60,000 in punitive damages under state tort law); Hartung v. J.D. Byrider, Inc., 2009 WL 1876690 (E.D. Cal. June 26, 2009); Baruch v. Healthcare Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 3232090 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 30, 2007) (consumer's allegation of anxiety and depression credible considering duration and persistence of harassment); Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing, L.P., 2007 WL 7020413 (S.D. Ohio June 5, 2007) (awarding consumer $25,000 for mental anguish after bench trial for anxiety she suffered dealing with mistakes by mortgage servicing company and their repeated calls after being informed that she was represented). But see In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108, 147 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2020) (while plaintiffs testified generally to damages, mental distress, anxiety, and worry, such generalized testimony was not specific or substantial enough to establish disruption in their daily routine).

645 Chavez v. Diverse Fin. Enterprises Inc., 2015 WL 13662798 (D.N.M. June 10, 2015) (default judgment on allegations of multiple FDCPA violations; damages of $15,000 for severe emotional distress to restore amount extorted from consumer); Reyelts v. Cross, 2013 WL 3870285 (N.D. Tex. July 26, 2013) (awarding damages for mental anguish of $30,000); Brablec v. Paul Coleman & Assoc., 2010 WL 235062 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2010) (awarding $25,000 FDCPA actual damages following debt collection law firm's default on consumer's claim alleging harassing telephone calls and threats of legal action resulting in severe emotional distress); Bullock v. Abbott & Ross Credit Serv., L.L.C., 2009 WL 4598330 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 3, 2009) (recommending default judgment award of $2000 actual FDCPA damages for mental anguish); Hartung v. J.D. Byrider, Inc., 2009 WL 1876690 (E.D. Cal. June 26, 2009); Rodriguez v. Florida First Fin. Group, Inc., 2009 WL 535980 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 3, 2009) (awarding $1000 FDCPA actual damages in default judgment for several panic attacks over several weeks as a result of debt collection abuses); Myers v. LHR, Inc., 543 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (S.D. Cal. 2008) (affirming $90,000 damages for emotional distress and damage to credit caused by outrageous harassment for debt not owed; consumer presented evidence of medical treatment for physical effects of stress). See also Leonard v. John Doe Corp., 2020 WL 3642562, at *2 (S.D. Ohio July 6, 2020) (on default judgment, awarding $5000 in actual damages for "extreme stress, depression, anxiety and sleeplessness" resulting from debt collector's degrading conduct).

646 See Decker v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1112256, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 11, 2019); Itri v. Equibank, 464 A.2d 1336, 1339 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1983).

647 Cady v. Marcella, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (Mass. App. Ct. 2000) (hysterical crying and inability to concentrate on work); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002). See also Hartung v. J.D. Byrider, Inc., 2009 WL 1876690 (E.D. Cal. June 26, 2009) (recommending entry of default judgment for consumer for $25,000 in FDCPA actual damages for tenseness, headaches, nervousness, fear, worry, unhappiness, loss of sleep, nightmares, crying jags, loss of appetite, loss of concentration, loss of enjoyment of life, shortness of breath, humiliation, and extreme emotional distress; also, debt collector's actions aggravated plaintiff's anxiety disorder, post-traumatic stress disorder, back injury, and asthma forcing her to obtain medication from her psychiatrist); Myers v. LHR, Inc., 543 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (S.D. Cal. 2008) (default judgment was entered against collector for $92,000 in damages; plaintiff did not owe debt, suffered repeated and abusive collection efforts, and suffered sleeplessness, upset, and embarrassment).

648 Urban v. Hartford Gas Co., 93 A.2d 292 (Conn. 1952) (repossession of buyer's home heater and attendant, apparently false assertion that buyer was in default, causing humiliation, hysteria, and flare-up of arrested diabetic condition, were cognizable basis for tort cause of action).

649 See Browne v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., Inc., 2013 WL 871966 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 7, 2013).

650 See Browne v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., Inc., 2013 WL 871966 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 7, 2013); Rankins v. Nat'l Credit Works II, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5222601 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 2, 2011); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002).

651 Rannels v. S.E. Nichols, Inc., 591 F.2d 242 (3d Cir. 1979) (allegations of loss of respect, pain and embarrassment, handicap in returning to profession, and loss of consortium were sufficient to plead special damages and to withstand motion to dismiss); Croft v. L.C. Maxwell & Assoc., Inc., 2019 WL 117334, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 5, 2019) (on default judgment, awarding $25,000 in actual damages under FDCPA and state law where collector's repeated calls and threats caused consumer to take "the undoubtedly embarrassing and stressful step of notifying his employer that a debt collector might be contacting them" and caused other consumer concern that "that if other employees overheard the calls, they might question her competence as a manager"), aff'd, 2019 WL 275933 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 22, 2019); Roots v. Am. Marine Liquidators, Inc., 2012 WL 3136462 (D.S.C. Aug. 1, 2012) (awarding actual damages of $16,660, representing $12,500 in emotional distress damages, including loss of sleep and personal humiliation in this default matter); Harding v. Check Processing, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1097642, at *3 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 22, 2011) (contacting adult plaintiff's mother and disclosing debt was in some small degree "inherently degrading" to plaintiff; $5000 in emotional distress damages).

652 Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (compensatory damage award of $5 million under Texas Debt Collection Act for seventy-three-year-old identity theft victim).

653 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 928 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (plaintiff thought that lawsuit was "frivolous" and "an insult," and he was "being shoved around;" lawsuit "was the straw that broke the camel's back. I got mad. I'm still mad"; jury awarded $250,000 in compensatory damages, $60,000 in punitive damages under state tort law); DeGeorge v. LTD Fin. Serv., L.P., 2008 WL 905913 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2008) (consumer's testimony that he was "pretty aggravated" and embarrassed by revelation of debt, corroborated by family testimony that he was stressed, frustrated, depressed, and anxious is barely sufficient to raise fact issue of emotional distress damages).

654 See Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (compensatory damage award of $5 million; $2 million was for future suffering).

655 See § 11.8.6.3, infra; Lepski v. Bayside Capital Serv., L.L.C., 2020 WL 4192245, at *3 (W.D.N.Y. July 21, 2020) (awarding $2000 in emotional distress damages for "frustration, anxiety, and stress resulting from

Keep in mind that certain symptoms related to stress or distress may not be considered a concrete injury for purposes of Article III standing. As discussed in § 11.15, infra, advocates should rely on emotional distress to establish Article III standing only where the plaintiff's distress was significant, and the conduct was of a nature that would cause many people to feel distress.[656]

11.8.3 Medical Conditions Arising from Debt Collection Abuses

Debt collection abuse can result in medical conditions for the consumer, which can be recovered as actual damages. Examples include:

- Loss of appetite, nausea, vomiting, sensitive stomach, loss of weight;[657]
- Tooth pain where debt collector took funds saved for dental work;[658]
- Ulcers, diabetic flare-ups;[659]
- Miscarriage;[660]
- Heart attack, heart palpitations, angina, chest constrictions;[661]
- Becoming bedridden;[662]
- Pain and suffering;[663]
- Shortness of breath;[664]

---

the calls both to [the plaintiff] and to his family members"); Mendes v. JH Portfolio Debt Equities, 2019 WL 4860660, at *3 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 2, 2019) (awarding $1000 in emotional distress damages where debt collector's provision of false information, failure to communicate, and continued misrepresentations affected consumer's "ability to secure future loans and enjoy an error-free credit report, thereby causing her to feel 'stuck' and unable to move forward in life"); Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751586, at *8 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019) (denying motion to dismiss claim for actual damages where consumer alleged that he became frustrated and agitated and suffered mental anguish after learning that debt collector continued to represent his debt was still owing when it was not); Weinstein & Mandarich Law Group, L.L.P., 2019 WL 290578, at *1 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 23, 2019) (awarding $30,000 in emotional distress damages based on testimony of plaintiff and his wife that law firm's actions "repeatedly harmed Plaintiff by causing stress, anxiety, feelings of helplessness and hopelessness, and other forms of general emotional distress"), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 798 Fed. Appx. 88 (9th Cir. 2019); Esget v. TCM Fin. Serv. L.L.C., 2014 WL 258837 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 23, 2014); Roots v. Am. Marine Liquidators, Inc., 2012 WL 3136462 (D.S.C. Aug. 1, 2012) (actual damages of $16,660 for mental anguish); Miller v. Midpoint Resolution Group, L.L.C., 608 F. Supp. 2d 389 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 9, 2009) (bench trial resulted in $500 for emotional distress in FDCPA case); DeGeorge v. LTD Fin. Serv., L.P., 2008 WL 905913 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2008) (consumer's testimony that he was aggravated and embarrassed by revelation of debt, corroborated by family testimony that he was stressed, frustrated, depressed, and anxious is barely sufficient to raise fact issue of emotional distress damages); Lee v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.C., 2008 WL 1886178 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 25, 2008) (upholding jury's award of emotional distress damages for wrongful freezing of account containing only exempt SSI funds), rev'd on other grounds, 601 F.3d 654 (6th Cir. 2010); McNally v. Client Serv., Inc., 2008 WL 2397489 (W.D. Pa. June 11, 2008) (discussing standard of proof for emotional distress damages for FDCPA violation), adopted, 2008 WL 2987199 (W.D. Pa. July 31, 2008).

656 See §§ 11.15.3.4, 11.15.5.6, infra.

657 See Latimore v. Gateway Retrieval, L.L.C., 2013 WL 791258 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 2013) (awarding $10,000 for emotional distress resulting from threats of arrest and jail); Rankins v. Nat'l Credit Works II, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5222601 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 2, 2011). See also Boerner v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 358 F. Supp. 3d 767, 781 (E.D. Wis. 2019) (plaintiff met his burden of explaining the physical and mental effects of the LVNV lawsuit where he testified that he suffered "a loss of appetite that resulted in him shedding ten pounds from an already frail frame"). But cf. Baker v. Lincoln First Bank, 18 B.R. 243 (Bankr. W.D.N.Y. 1982) (100 phone calls, letters, personal intimidating visits at work, threats of calling police and suit not outrageous over two-year period when instability and diarrhea could have been the result of other troubles).

658 Christensen v. Fin. Credit Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 10538187, at *1 (D.N.M. Apr. 29, 2016) ("Here, the jury awarded plaintiff $200,000 for actual damages, including damages for loss of money; out-of-pocket expenses, pain and suffering, and personal humiliation, embarrassment, mental anguish, emotional distress, aggravation, or frustration. Plaintiff established that defendant withdrew $2,875.75—80% of plaintiff's net worth—from his bank account for a time barred debt.").

659 Latimore v. Gateway Retrieval, L.L.C., 2013 WL 791258 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 2013) (awarding $10,000 for emotional distress resulting from threats of arrest and jail).

660 See Hearings on S. 656, S. 918, S. 1130, and H.R. 5294 (Bills to Amend the Consumer Credit Protection Act to Prohibit Abusive Practices by Debt Collectors) Before the Subcomm. on Consumer Affairs of the S. Comm. on Banking, Housing & Urban Affairs, 95th Congr. 183 (1977).

661 See Gilmore v. Account Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 2848278 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 27, 2009) (damages for mental distress of $10,000 as a result of stress caused by dunning for disputed debt when consumer was having heart problems, trebled to $30,000 under state statute); George v. Jordan Marsh Co., 268 N.E.2d 915 (Mass. 1971) (tort action stated for heart attacks allegedly caused by creditor's repeated dunning letters, etc., despite dispute about the debt and creditor's knowledge of consumer's illness). But cf. Francisco v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 498936, at *7 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 8, 2019) (where consumer did not produced any medical records to support her claim that stress caused her heart attack, or even that she had a heart attack, jury could not award actual damages based on record); Greene v. Rash, Curtis & Assoc., 89 F.R.D. 314 (E.D. Tenn. 1980) (undisputed medical evidence showed no causal link between plaintiff's aggravated heart problems and defendant's conduct); Greene v. Rash, Curtis & Assoc., 89 F.R.D. 314 (E.D. Tenn. 1980) (undisputed medical evidence showed no causal link between plaintiff's aggravated heart problems and defendant's conduct).

662 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 928 (D. Mont. 2009) ("lawsuit caused him to spend more time 'down' in bed with severe headaches"; jury awarded $250,000 in compensatory damages, $60,000 in punitive damages under state tort law), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (compensatory damage award of $5 million under Texas Debt Collection Act when plaintiff suffered fear, embarrassment, very painful sores, panic attacks, and reclusiveness due to defendant's abusive collection tactics).

663 Christensen v. Fin. Credit Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 10538187, at *1 (D.N.M. Apr. 29, 2016) ("Here, the jury awarded plaintiff $200,000 for actual damages, including damages for loss of money; out-of-pocket expenses, pain and suffering, and personal humiliation, embarrassment, mental anguish, emotional distress, aggravation, or frustration."; loss of this money caused plaintiff pain and suffering for additional two years because he was unable to pay for required dental work); Rankins v. Nat'l Credit Works II, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5222601 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 2, 2011) (could not sleep at night and experienced headaches, nausea, and pain in neck, shoulder, and back; went to a doctor for physical pain and to psychiatrist for stress and anxiety).

664 Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002).

- Headaches;[665]
- Dizziness, fainting, blacking out;[666]
- Skin eruptions and great pain from shingles;[667]
- Aggravated existing illness;[668] and
- Extended illness.[669]

11.8.4 Out-of-Pocket Losses

Recoverable out-of-pocket losses in debt collection harassment cases include:

- Loss of job, income, work time, or leave from a job;[670]
- Impairment of job advancement;[671]
- Medical or counseling expenses;[672]
- Medication or special diet;
- Telephone toll charges;[673]
- Telephone charges for an unlisted number;[674]
- Payments on an invalid claim;[675]
- Payment of a debt barred by a statute of limitations;[676]
- Transportation expenses;[677]
- Conversion of consumer's property;
- The amount of a tax refund intercepted to pay a student loan that had been discharged in bankruptcy, and accountant fees for filing for the return of the intercepted funds;[678]
- Bank overdraft charges;[679]
- Reduced credit rating;[680]
- Attorney fees incurred defending a prior suit;[681]

665 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 928 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (jury awarded $250,000 in compensatory damages, $60,000 in punitive damages under state tort law).

666 Duty v. Gen. Fin. Co., 273 S.W.2d 64 (Tex. 1954) (fainting, blackouts, severe headaches, nausea, diminished housework capacity alleged); United Fin. & Thrift Corp. v. Bain, 393 S.W.2d 419 (Tex. App. 1965) (severe headaches, nausea, blackouts, fainting, numbness, diminished capacity to do housework alleged).

667 Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002). See also Stagikas v. Saxon Mortg. Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 5373275, at *7 (D. Mass. Sept. 24, 2013) (plaintiff suffered embarrassment, anger, and stress that had physical manifestations such as weight loss, racing heart, restlessness, muscle tensions, and shingles).

668 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (time-barred collection suit aggravated conditions from plaintiff's prior head injury; $250,000 for emotional distress and $60,000 in punitive damages); Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6843597 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2013) (lupus flared). But see Baruch v. Healthcare Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 3232090 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 30, 2007) (consumer's allegation that emotional distress caused or aggravated physical illness not sufficient; no evidence of doctor visits or prescriptions, nor expert testimony as to causation).

669 Bowden v. Spiegel, Inc., 26 P.2d 571 (Cal. Ct. App. 1950) (buyer's allegation that seller placed threatening phone call concerning disputed debt to house of buyer's neighbor at 11:00 p.m., resulting in buyer's being called to that house and humiliated before others and causing extended illness, stated cause of action).

670 Rannels v. S.E. Nichols, Inc., 591 F.2d 242 (3d Cir. 1979) (allegations of loss of respect, pain, and embarrassment, handicap in returning to profession, and loss of consortium were sufficient to plead special damages and to withstand motion to dismiss); Esget v. TCM Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 258837 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 23, 2014); Roots v. Am. Marine Liquidators, Inc., 2012 WL 3136462 (D.S.C. Aug. 1, 2012) (awarding $16,660 in actual damages, $4160 in lost wages in this default matter); In re Orman, 2006 WL 4470839 (Bankr. E.D. Okla. Sept. 18, 2006) (actual damages for violation of automatic stay included time off from work); In re Lisenby, 2006 WL 802392 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. Feb. 22, 2006) (actual damages for violation of automatic stay included bank's overdraft charges and consumer's lost wages to prevent further withdrawals from her checking account).

671 See Esget v. TCM Fin. Serv. L.L.C., 2014 WL 258837 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 23, 2014).

672 See id.

673 See Schubach v. Household Fin. Corp., 376 N.E.2d 140 (Mass. 1976).

674 See Moller v. New England Tel. & Tel. Co., 44 F.C.C.2d 614 (F.C.C. 1973).

675 See O'Brien v. Valley Forge Specialized Educ. Serv., 2004 WL 2580773 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 10, 2004) (considering in dicta restitution of wrongfully taken funds as FDCPA actual damages); Gervais v. O'Connell, Harris & Assoc., Inc., 297 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Conn. 2003) (awarding to consumer in a default judgment $2500 actual damages for the $2500 withdrawn by the collector from his bank account after the collector falsely stated that the debt was not time-barred debt and must be paid immediately; also awarding $1500 as emotional distress damages, $8000 punitive damages, and $5720 as costs and attorney fees for violations of the FDCPA and Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act); § 8.3, supra.

676 See Kimber v. Fed. Fin. Corp., 668 F. Supp. 1480 (M.D. Ala. 1987). See also Rawson v. Source Receivables Mgmt., L.L.C., 235 F. Supp. 3d 1014 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (including payments made on time-barred debts in the settlement that could have otherwise added huge amounts of actual damages to this recovery); §§ 7.4.9.3, 8.3, supra.

677 In re Orman, 2006 WL 4470839 (Bankr. E.D. Okla. Sept. 18, 2006) (actual damages for violation of automatic stay included mileage for travel to lawyer's office). But cf. Baker v. G.C. Serv. Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982) ($1.25 in parking and gasoline expenses to visit attorney's office was not proper element of general damages).

678 Miele v. Sid Bailey, Inc., 192 B.R. 611 (S.D.N.Y. 1996).

679 Villanueva v. Account Discovery Sys., L.L.C., 77 F. Supp. 3d 1058, 1079 (D. Colo. 2015); In re Lisenby, 2006 WL 802392 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. Feb. 22, 2006).

680 Nelson v. Equifax Info. Serv., L.L.C., 522 F. Supp. 2d 1222 (C.D. Cal. 2007). See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 12.5.2.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

681 See Beard v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4271765 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 15, 2016) (attorney fees that consumer incurred in successfully defending foreclosure action were recoverable as FDCPA actual damages); Hancock v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, Inc., 2015 WL 12532470 (S.D. Cal. June 23, 2015) (attorney fees incurred in defending state collection suit are recoverable as actual damages in FDCPA action); Monroe v. Steinfeld, 2012 WL 1496204 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 22, 2012) (awarding consumer actual damages on his § 1692*i* claim of $2300, amount of attorney fees and costs paid to consumer's lawyer to have underlying state collection case that was filed in violation of § 1692*i* transferred to county of proper venue in this default matter), adopted, 2012 WL 1497519 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 27, 2012); Shepherd v. Law Offices of Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 668 F. Supp. 2d 579 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (attorney fees incurred by consumer to vacate improperly obtained default judgment in underlying state collection action, "additional fees to right her credit rating," were among recited actual damages that Rule 68 offer would have to satisfy in order to moot case); Lowe v. Elite Recovery Solutions L.P., 2008 WL 324777 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2008) (awarding as actual damages ($2560) amount of attorney fees incurred by consumer in defending the underlying state collection action in which FDCPA violations at issue occurred (action was barred by statute of limitations and sought incorrect principal balance, unauthorized amount of interest, and unauthorized attorney fees)); Owens v. Howe, 365 F. Supp. 2d. 942, 948 (N.D. Ind. 2005) (attorney fees

- Bank fees;[682]
- Bankruptcy consultation fees;[683]
- A filing fee to answer a time-barred debt collection complaint against the consumer and the mailing fees for mailing that answer to the debt collector by certified mail;[684] and
- A payment made by a debtor in response to an act that violated the FDCPA may be considered actual damages, without regard to whether the debt was in fact owed.[685]

11.8.5 Injuries to Personal Relations

Debt collection abuse can lead to actual damages based on injury to the consumer's relationship with others, including:

- Injury to reputation;[686]
- Harm to credit rating, loss of access to credit and to employment;[687]
- Loss of privacy;[688]
- Loss of consortium;[689]
- Strain to marriage;[690] defending state court action compensable as "actual damages" under FDCPA) See also McGahey v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 266 F. Supp. 3d 421 (D. Me. 2017) ($100 in attorney fees to pay for second QWR after inadequate response to first QWR was actual damage, and citing cases holding attorney fees are recoverable as actual damages under RESPA if they are not incurred in connection with bringing suit under statute). But cf. Moore v. Wells Fargo Bank, 908 F.3d 1050 (7th Cir. 2018) (attorney fees can be actual damages if caused by violation, but not when, as here, fees were incurred to investigate and pursue (RESPA) claim); Bratton v. Thomas Law Firm, P.C., 943 F. Supp. 2d 897 (N.D. Ind. 2013) (consumer could not recover as part of FDCPA attorney fee award for time spent defending underlying collection suit).

682 Shepherd v. Law Offices of Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 668 F. Supp. 2d 579 (S.D.N.Y. 2009) (charges plaintiff paid to her bank in connection with defendant's allegedly wrongful attachment of her bank account were among recited actual damages that Rule 68 offer would have to satisfy in order to moot case).

683 Blevins v. MSV Recovery L.L.C., 2020 WL 4365634, at *4 (S.D. Ohio July 30, 2020) ($100 bankruptcy consultation fee incurred as a direct result of defendants' unlawful collection practices deemed "just the type" of out-of-pocket expenses contemplated by FDCPA).

684 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 926 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (fees established loss of money for UDAP claim).

685 See, e.g., Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Grp. L.L.C., 2013 WL 6843597 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2013); Hamid v. Stock & Grimes, L.L.P., 876 F. Supp. 2d 500, 503 (E.D. Pa. 2012) ("If her payment was not a proper element of actual damages under the FDCPA, a debt collector could harass a debtor in violation of the FDCPA, as a result of that harassment collect the debt, and thereafter retain what it collected. We do not believe that Congress intended this result."). Accord Gustafson v. Recovery Serv., 2015 WL 5009108 (D.N.H. Aug. 21, 2015) (consumer's payment of $300 constituted actual damages where she was never advised of right to dispute validity of debt, and to take other measures to contest debt buyer's actions, prior to making any payments); Abby v. Paige, 553 Fed. Appx. 970 (S.D. Fla. 2013). See also Hammitt v. Northeast Collection Bur., Inc., 2014 WL 3577605 (D. Ariz. July 21, 2014) (court would consider payment to be actual damages where it was made by consumer's mother to debt collector to prevent son's threatened arrest, with reimbursement of mother by her son when better evidence of transactions was offered to court); In re Lord, 270 B.R. 787, 799 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1998); Jacobson v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 371 P.3d 397 (Mont. 2016) (trial court correctly found that homeowners suffered financial detriment because their loan liability was wrongfully increased in the amount of interest ($172,615.20) and late charges ($1,792.94) and defendant servicer would pay that amount to homeowner as damages).

686 Rannels v. S.E. Nichols, Inc., 591 F.2d 242 (3d Cir. 1979) (allegations of loss of respect, pain, embarrassment, handicap in returning to profession, and loss of consortium were sufficient to plead special damages and to withstand motion to dismiss); Holt v. Boyle Bros., 217 F.2d 16 (D.C. Cir. 1954) (cause of action found when single dunning letter, alleged to be false, had been placed in employee's personnel records); Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751486, at *8 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019) (denying motion to dismiss actual damages where consumer alleged that Midland's continued reporting of delinquency caused his credit reputation to suffer); Walton v. Pereira, 995 F. Supp. 3d 437, 441 (W.D. Pa. 2014) (allegations of "harm to her reputation, emotional distress, mental anguish, and humiliation" that consumer suffered sufficiently and plausibly pleaded that she incurred actual damages under FDCPA); Hupp v. N. Hills Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 610 S.W.2d 349 (Mo. Ct. App. 1980) ($25,000 actual and $50,000 punitive damages upheld for bad check charges when consumer had told dealer not to deposit check until myriad of defects had been corrected on new car purchased); Duty v. Gen. Fin. Co., 273 S.W.2d 64 (Tex. 1954) (headaches, loss of sleep, and loss of work, credit rating, and employment alleged). But cf. Palmer Ford, Inc. v. Wood, 471 A.2d 297 (Md. 1984) (summary judgment in malicious prosecution action was properly granted for defendant car repairer when there was evidence of probable cause for arrest; action for abuse of process properly permitted; reversing and remanding jury verdict of $100,000 compensatory and $400,000 punitive damages).

687 In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013) ($10,000 damages for emotional distress). See also Jiang v. Millennium Concepts Inc., 2016 WL 3682474, at *5 (N.D. Cal. July 11, 2016) (on default judgment, awarding $5000 in actual damages for distress stemming, in part, from allegations of damages to credit score due to reporting "fake debt").

688 See K-Mart Corp. v. Weston, 530 So. 2d 736 (Ala. 1988) (jury verdict of $5000 compensatory and $15,000 punitive damages upheld for invasion of privacy when employee of store communicated to customer in front of several other customers that his check would not be accepted because of prior bad check, when, in fact, store had already acknowledged that it was not fault of customer's wife that prior check had been dishonored); Summit Loans, Inc. v. Pecola, 288 A.2d 114 (Md. 1972) (award of $1500 compensatory and $7500 punitive damages for invasion of privacy involving 200 telephone calls and persistent, "vicious," and "vile" language). See also § 15.3, infra.

689 See Rannels v. S.E. Nichols, Inc., 591 F.2d 242 (3d Cir. 1979) (allegations of loss of respect, pain and embarrassment, handicap in returning to profession, and loss of consortium were sufficient to plead special damages and to withstand motion to dismiss); Bingham v. Collection Bur., Inc., 505 F. Supp. 864 (D.N.D. 1981) (awarding husband $100 actual damages for loss of consortium).

690 Grimm v. GPG Processing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4508921 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 19, 2019) (awarding $15,000 in emotional distress damages where plaintiff's constant anticipation of additional calls from debt collector caused, inter alia, stress in her relationship with her husband); Reyelts v. Cross, 2013 WL 3870285 (N.D. Tex. July 26, 2013) (awarding damages for mental anguish of $30,000); Roots v. Am. Marine Liquidators, Inc., 2012 WL 3136462 (D.S.C. Aug. 1, 2012) (emotional distress damages of $12,500 for marital discord); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 928 (D. Mont. 2009), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) ("[Plaintiff] thought that the lawsuit was 'frivolous' and 'an insult,' and he was 'being shoved around' . . . [doctor] felt that the lawsuit caused stress which worsened [plaintiff's] symptoms, such as headaches, anxiety, paranoia, and difficulty relating to others"; jury awarded $250,000 in compensatory damages, $60,000 in punitive damages under state tort law); Rogers v. Capital Credit Corp., 47 Wash. Fin. Rep. (BNA) 377 (M.D.N.C. 1986)

- Strain with family;[691]
- Demotion by employer;[692] and
- Humiliation.[693]

11.8.6 Proof of Actual Damages

11.8.6.1 When to Introduce Proof of Damages

Often in FDCPA cases, proof of actual damages is introduced into evidence only after the consumer has prevailed on a partial summary judgment motion on liability. By resolving liability issues first through a partial summary judgment motion, judicial and litigation resources are conserved because proof of actual damages can be focused on those claims on which the consumer prevailed at summary judgment and not on the consumer's other claims.[694]

11.8.6.2 Proof of Out-of-Pocket Damages

For most forms of out-of-pocket injury, documentation is often the best evidence. For example, medical expenses might be proved by billing statements or a receipt for medication. A pay check can show the victim's wages. An employer's personnel file can show the employer's view of a change in work habits. A court may even reject the consumer's testimony about such out-of-pocket expense without supporting documents.[695]

11.8.6.3 Proof of Existence and Extent of Emotional Distress Injury

Emotional distress damages will typically not rely on documents, but on testimony as to the nature of the distress. Nevertheless, emotional distress damages must be based on competent evidence.[696] It is not enough for the consumer to offer brief, conclusory testimony that they experienced emotional distress—there must be something more, such as a more detailed statement from the consumer as to the specifics, symptoms, and duration of the emotional stress, medical testimony, or corroborating witnesses.[697]

On the other hand, emotional distress injury can be proven by the consumer's own testimony, as long as it is specific and explains the nature of the stress, any symptoms, and the duration of the stress.[698] Rather than give opinions, the victim (attempting to cause friction in consumers' marriage by driving wedge of destruction between spouses and undermining their confidence in each other).

691 See Rankins v. Nat'l Credit Works II, L.L.C., 2011 WL 5222601 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 2, 2011) (plaintiff became irritable and isolated herself from friends and family); In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013) ($10,000 damages for emotional distress). Cf. Croft v. L.C. Maxwell & Assoc., Inc., 2019 WL 117334, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 5, 2019) (on default judgment, awarding $25,000 in actual damages under FDCPA and state law where debt collector's repeated phone calls and threats to contact plaintiff's employer and garnish his wages caused him "clear concern for the financial welfare of his family").

692 See Wojtasik v. Nat'l Credit Adjusters, L.L.C., 2014 WL 6879312 (D. Kan. Dec. 4, 2014) (awarding $5000 in actual damages in default judgment where collection agency was both persistent and intentional, causing consumer anxiety and stress, and where its calls to her resulted in demotion at work).

693 Smith v. Law Office of Mitchell N. Kay, 124 B.R. 182 (D. Del. 1991) (after default judgment was entered, jury awarded $15,000 for emotional distress as FDCPA actual damages; granting debt collector's motion for new trial on damages unless consumers filed remittitur reducing actual damages to $3000); In re Humes, 496 B.R. 557 (Bankr. E.D. Ark. 2013) ($10,000 damages for emotional distress); Jordan v. Scala, 14 Clearinghouse Rev. 1096 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1980) (default judgment; awarding consumer $4000 for retailer's collection actions causing humiliation, emotional distress, injury to reputation and character, and extreme nervousness); Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002). See also § 11.8.2.5, supra.

694 See, e.g., Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); Graziano v. Harrison, 763 F. Supp. 1269 (D.N.J. 1991), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 950 F.2d 107 (3d Cir. 1991); Clayson v. Rubin & Rothman, L.L.C., 2011 WL 13209935 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2011) (in case involving antagonism between parties, explaining very limited testimony necessary to allow jury to award FDCPA statutory and actual damages where collection law firm's strict liability had been determined by summary judgment).

695 See Fooks v. Heritage Payment Recovery, 2015 WL 4393903 (M.D. Pa. July 16, 2015), citing Blair v. Scott Specialty Gases, 283 F.3d 595, 608 (3d Cir. 2002).

696 See Beasley v. Red Rock Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 583 Fed. Appx. 138, 142 (4th Cir. 2014); Sloane v. Equifax Info. Serv., L.L.C., 510 F.3d 495, 503 (4th Cir. 2007); Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108, 147 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2020); Bassett v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 715 F. Supp. 2d 803 (N.D. Ill. 2010); Crass v. Marval & Assoc. L.L.C., 2010 WL 2104174 (E.D. Wis. May 25, 2010); Molina v. Creditors Specialty Serv. Inc., 2010 WL 235042 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2010).

697 See Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, P.A., 946 F.3d 855, 864 (6th Cir. Jan. 3, 2020) (allegation of anxiety alone with no corroborating allegations not considered emotional distress or a cognizable injury); Gustafson v. Recovery Serv., 2015 WL 5009108 (D.N.H. Aug. 21, 2015); Cabral v. Capitol Mgmt. Serv., L.P., 2014 WL 257878 (D. Nev. Jan. 22, 2014); Guthrie v. JD Enter. & Fin. Serv., 2013 WL 2244337 (S.D. Cal. May 21, 2013); Slater v. PRA Recovery, 2012 WL 5269400 (D. Haw. Sept. 21, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 5269390 (D. Haw. Oct. 22, 2012); Wood v. GC Serv., L.P., 2012 WL 987761 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 26, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 995207 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2012); Thompson v. Gateway Fin. Servs., Inc., 2012 WL 5989240 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 29, 2012); Mayes v. Credit Solutions Corp., 2011 WL 855634 (D. Ariz. Mar. 9, 2011); Hett v. Bryant Lafayette & Assoc., 2011 WL 740460 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 24, 2011); Kittle v. Accredited Collection Agency Inc., 2010 WL 2650479 (D. Colo. June 30, 2010); Suszka v. Capital Collections, L.L.C., 2009 WL 959798 (E.D. Wis. Apr. 8, 2009); Read v. Amana Collection Serv., 1991 WL 165033 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 15, 1991). See also Ruffin-Thompkins v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 422 F.3d 603, 609 (7th Cir. 2005) (FCRA case); Crafton v. Law Firm of Jonathan B. Levine, 2014 WL 907423 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 7, 2014); §§ 11.8.2.5, 11.15.2.1, infra (reliance on emotional distress as concrete injury for Article III standing).

698 See, e.g., Best v. Fed. National Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606 (D. Md. Mar. 30, 2020); Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Serv., Inc., 722 Fed. Appx. 864 (11th Cir. 2018) (affirming district court's award of $7000 on default judgment for emotional distress based on consumer's emotional distress damages affidavit); Sloane v. Equifax Info. Serv., L.L.C., 510 F.3d 495, 503 (4th Cir. 2007); Young v. NPAS, Inc., 361 F. Supp. 3d 1171(D. Utah 2019); Best v. Fed. National Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606 (D. Md. Mar. 30, 2020); Grimm v. GPG Processing, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3821788, at *5 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 5, 2019) (on default judgment, awarded $1,116.88 in out of pocket expenses plus $15,000 in damages for emotional distress where consumer alleged that "[f]or over two should simply state the observable manifestations of the injury. The severity and duration of each symptom of each injury should be detailed in order to maximize the recovery.[699]

Corroborating testimony from other witnesses can be helpful[700] and some courts may even require it.[701] Perhaps the best corroboration is from the consumer's physician— either a physician who treated the victim or later became familiar with the victim's medical records.[702] This is particularly relevant if the consumer sought medical treatment for the emotional distress or had a preexisting medical condition that was aggravated by the distress. While it is always a good idea to obtain the corroboration of a physician, courts generally do not require medical testimony in cases in which the plaintiff did not receive medical treatment for the stress caused by the defendant.[703]

Corroboration can also be provided by family members, clergy, or friends.[704] Where two plaintiffs are complaining of the same debt collector, that can even corroborate each other's testimony.[705] Having these corroborating witnesses is particularly helpful because some jurors may view a consumer complaining about their own emotional injury as just being a chronic complainer.

Although it is the province of the jury to determine the causal link between the violation and the injury, evidence of causation should be introduced.[706]

11.8.6.4 No Proof Required for Dollar Value of Mental Suffering

While testimony regarding the value of some types of claimed injuries, such as lost wages, is essential, evidence of the value of pain or mental suffering is not required; the jury is guided in its determination by its own experience, testimony of witnesses on the existence, cause, and extent of the injury, the arguments of counsel, and the instruction of the judge.[707] Again, conclusory, general testimony is not sufficient to establish an amount of damages for claimed emotional distress.[708] A number of courts have held that expert testimony is not necessary to prove emotional distress damages.[709] years," she had "been beaten down by the fear caused by the constant threats" against her over her debts), adopted, 2019 WL 4220903 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 5, 2019); Browne v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., Inc., 2013 WL 871966 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 7, 2013); Ploch v. FirstSource Advantage L.L.C., 2012 WL 5384876 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 1, 2012); Santacruz v. Standley & Assoc., 2011 WL 1043338 (D. Colo. Mar. 17, 2011); McIntosh v. Check Resolution Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 1595150 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 27, 2011); Bynum v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2006 WL 1047035 (N.D. Okla. Apr. 13, 2006). See also Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Serv., Inc., 722 Fed. Appx. 864 (11th Cir. Jan. 2, 2018); Clayson v. Rubin & Rothman, L.L.C., 2010 WL 547476 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 11, 2010).

---

699 See, e.g., In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108, 147 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2020); Clanton v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4750015 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2019) (summary judgment for collection agency where consumer did not describe her emotional injuries in any significant detail); Elliott v. GC Serv., L.P., 2011 WL 5975671 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 28, 2015); Reyelts v. Cross, 968 F. Supp. 2d 835, 846 (N.D. Tex. 2013); Taylor v. Law Offices of Vincent Peter Cignarale, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6102020 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 5, 2011).

700 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 957 (9th Cir. 2011). See also Guajardo v. GC Serv., L.P., 498 Fed. Appx. 379 (5th Cir. 2012); Jestes v. Saxon Mortg. Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 1847806 (M.D. Tenn. May 8, 2014); Obenauf v. Frontier Fin. Group, Inc., 785 F. Supp. 2d 1188 (D.N.M. 2011).

701 See, e.g., In re Steed, 2020 WL 1562526 (N.D. Ga. Apr. 1, 2020); Smith v. Greystone Alliance, Inc., 2014 WL 1097701 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 20, 2014), rev. on other grounds, 772 F.3d 448 (7th Cir. 2014); Montgomery v. Florida First Fin. Group, 2008 WL 3540374 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 12, 2008) (denying actual damages when consumer testified to fear and insomnia, but never sought medical help, took over-the-counter medications, or lost time from work); Lowe v. Elite Recovery Solutions L.P., 2008 WL 324777 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2008).

In the context of Fair Credit Reporting Act violations, some courts require only sufficient detail from the plaintiff, without corroboration, while others demand the latter. See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 12.5.2.3 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

702 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 957 (9th Cir. 2011).

703 See, e.g., Best v. Fed. National Mortg. Ass'n, 450 F. Supp. 3d 606 (D. Md. Mar. 30, 2020); Dorris v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2013 WL 1209629, at *8 (D. Md. Mar. 22, 2013); Browne v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., Inc., 2013 WL 871966 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 7, 2013); Ortega v. Collectors Training Inst. of Ill., Inc., 2011 WL 241948 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 24, 2011).

704 DeGeorge v. LTD Fin. Serv., L.P., 2008 WL 905913 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2008).

705 See Basile v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2011 WL 4368510 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 19, 2011).

706 See § 11.8.7, infra.

707 See Braden v. JH Portfolio Debt Equities, L.L.C., 2019 WL 68995544) (D. Md. Dec. 18, 2019). See also Knussman v. Maryland, 272 F.3d 625, 640 (4th Cir. 2001) (civil rights claim with emotional distress damages). Cf. Smith v. Law Office of Mitchell N. Kay, 124 B.R. 182 (D. Del. 1991) (jury award was excessive). See generally Grassley v. Debt Collectors, Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22782 (D. Or. Dec. 14, 1992); Carrigan v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 502 F. Supp. 468 (N.D. Ga. 1980); Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980 (N.D. Ill. 1979); 2 Stein on Personal Injury Damages §§ 1.5, 1.7, and Chs. 8 and 10 (3d ed. 1997, updated 2020); D. Dobbs, 1 The Law of Remedies §§ 3.1, 8.1(4) (2d ed. 1993); Fritz, Action for Harassment of Debtor, 16 Am. Jur. Trials 619, §§ 78, 99 (1969); § 11.8.2.1, supra (more detailed discussion of proving actual damages including emotional distress).

708 See § 11.8.6.3, supra; Dill v. City of Edmond, Okla., 155 F.3d 1193, 1209 (10th Cir. 1998) (plaintiff's statement that transfer was "very upsetting," that everything he worked for "was taken away," and some people would not associate with him because of transfer, not sufficient to prove emotional distress).

709 See, e.g., Lodge v. Kondaur Capital Corp., 750 F.3d1263 (11th Cir. May 8, 2014) (non-expert testimony may be sufficient to satisfy one prong of emotional distress analysis); McNally v. Client Serv., Inc., 2008 WL 2397489 (W.D. Pa. June 11, 2008) (consumer's testimony sufficient), adopted, 2008 WL 2987199 (W.D. Pa. July 31, 2008); DeGeorge v. LTD Fin. Serv., L.P., 2008 WL 905913 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2008) (family members' testimony sufficient); Nelson v. Equifax Info. Serv., L.L.C., 522 F. Supp. 2d 1222, 1235, 1239 (C.D. Cal. 2007) (medical testimony unnecessary); McCammon v. Bibler, Newman & Reynolds, P.A., 493 F. Supp. 2d 1166 (D. Kan. 2007). Cf. Baruch v. Healthcare Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 3232090 (E.D.N.Y. Oct. 30, 2007) (consumer testimony sufficient for emotional distress damages but more required as to physical injury damages).

For example, the Ninth Circuit quoted the following jury instruction approvingly:

> The law does not set a definite standard by which to calculate compensation for mental and emotional suffering and distress. Neither is there any requirement that any witness express an opinion about the amount of compensation that is appropriate for the kind of law.
>
> The law does require, however, that when making an award for mental and emotional suffering and distress you should exercise calm and reasonable judgment. The compensation must be just and reasonable.[710]

A jury's award of actual damages for mental distress injuries may be overruled only if the court can "say that the jury's emotional distress damages award is grossly excessive or monstrous, shocking to the conscience, clearly not supported by the evidence, or could only have been based on speculation or guesswork. When the jury's verdict is supported by substantial evidence, the Court 'may not weigh the evidence and impose a result [it] finds to be more preferable.'" "Substantial emotional distress damages need not be supported by 'objective' evidence; the plaintiff's subjective testimony, corroborated by others, may be sufficient."[711]

11.8.7 Standards of Causation

The FDCPA's language "sustained . . . as a result of" in § 1692k(a)(1) implies that causation in fact (a showing that the injury suffered was in fact caused by the violation proved) must be established by direct connection to the violation.[712] One issue is that families having difficulties paying their bills may be experiencing emotional stress related to other debt collectors, the inability to pay for needed goods or services, or for other unrelated causes such as illness, marital problems, or loss of employment.

Some clients also will be particularly susceptible to stress-related injuries and may benefit from the rule that a tortfeasor must take the victim as they are and must compensate the victim for their full measure of suffering.[713] A likely issue in a case involving such a client is whether the client's suffering was actually exacerbated or triggered by the collection contact or by the condition which made them particularly susceptible in the first place.[714]

To overcome all these problems, establish the proximity in time between a collection contact and any suffering.[715] For example, evidence of a high volume of repeated phone calls with repeated requests by the consumer that the calls stop and a recitation of loss of sleep, stress, and anxiety, for "months and months" was sufficient to show cause and effect.[716] If stress related to other collection contacts cannot be distinguished from the defendant's contacts, another approach is to join the collectors as joint tortfeasors.[717]

11.8.8 Relation Between FDCPA Actual Damages and Other Awards

Because actual damages are compensatory, the consumer cannot recover actual damages more than once for the same injury, even if there were multiple violations and recovery can be had under multiple causes of action.[718] Actual damages can, however, be awarded in addition to statutory damages under 710 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 957 (9th Cir. 2011).

711 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 645 F. Supp. 2d 917, 928–929 (D. Mont. 2009) (citations omitted), aff'd, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011).

712 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 957 (9th Cir. 2011); Thomas v. Law Firm of Simpson & Cybak, 2007 WL 2126270 (7th Cir. July 25, 2007); Bartlett v. Herbl, 128 F.3d 497 (7th Cir. 1997); Sharm v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Serv., L.L.C., ___F. Supp. 3d ___, 2020 WL 1323007, at *16 (S.D. Md. Mar. 20, 2020); De Amaral v. Goldsmith & Hull, 2014 WL 572268 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 11, 2014) (attorney fees for defense in state court action were not considered damages where consumers hired a lawyer to defend collection suit, but not as result of FDCPA violation). Cf. Marchisio v. Carrington Mortg. Serv., L.L.C., 919 F.3d 1288 (11th Cir. Mar. 25, 2019) (causal connection necessary for FCRA); McNally v. Client Serv., Inc., 2008 WL 2397489 (W.D. Pa. June 11, 2008) (must show "reasonable probability" not just "mere possibility" that emotional distress damages incurred), adopted, 2008 WL 2987199 (W.D. Pa. July 31, 2008).

713 See also In re Vanamann, 561 B.R. 106, 127 (D. Nev. 2016) (in bankruptcy discharge injunction case, court found that fact that "Debtor had emotional challenges prior to obtaining her discharge did not make her fair game for her creditors after she obtained her discharge."). See generally McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011).

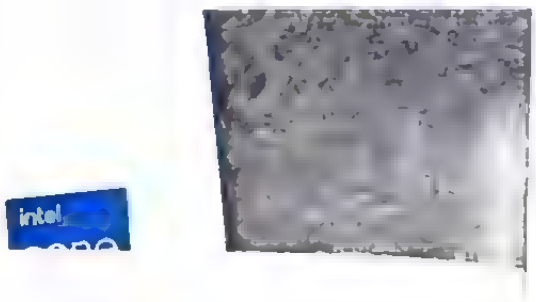
714 Dobbs, 1 The Law of Torts § 188, at 465 (2001).

715 Fritz, Action for Harassment of Debtor, Am Jur. Trials 619, § 4 (1969). See Evanauskas v. Strumpf, 2001 WL 777477 (D. Conn. June 27, 2001) (denying actual damages for emotional distress when consumer did not meet her burden to show that any distress she suffered was result of defendants' FDCPA violations as opposed to the stress of having judgment issued against her for debt she owed). See also Fouché v. Shapiro & Massey, L.L.P., 575 F. Supp. 2d 776 (S.D. Miss. 2008) (negligence; causation not shown when consumer had disabling injury, major financial problems, and hard-fought home foreclosure during relevant period); Campbell v. Triad Fin. Corp., 2007 WL 2973598 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 9, 2007) (intentional infliction of emotional distress; depression shown, but not causation, when consumer had other problems, including home foreclosure, at time of dispute over car repossession).

716 See Ramsour v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 2012 WL 6004230 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2012).

717 See Industr. Fin. Serv. Co. v. Riley, 302 S.W.2d 652 (Tex. App. 1957) (fifteen loan companies joined; where two or more wrongdoers join to produce indivisible injury, all jointly and severally liable to person wronged for entire damage suffered).

718 See Portalatin v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker, & Moore, L.L.C., 900 F.3d 377, 385 (7th Cir. Aug. 13, 2018) (once a plaintiff settles with one defendant for full relief available for single, indivisible injury, plaintiff generally cannot pursue claim for same injury against different defendant; settlement renders such a claim moot; "Generally, a plaintiff is only entitled to a single recovery for a single injury, regardless of how many defendants could be liable for that single injury, or how many different theories of recovery could apply to that single injury."); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 957 (9th Cir. 2011); Grassley v. Debt Collectors, Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22782 (D. Or. Dec. 14, 1992).



n addition to statutory or punitive damages

ɒry Damages in Individual ıS

'iew

herwise provided by this section, any debt 'ails to comply with any provision of this ı respect to any person is liable to such per- nt equal to the sum—

* * *

ıe case of any action by an individual, such tional damages as the court may allow, but :xceeding $1,000; . . .[721]

n permits courts to award statutory damages n addition to any actual damages to any per- noncompliance. It was modeled in part after :nding Act's statutory damages provision,[722] ıed under that Act may be helpful in construc- sions of the FDCPA that are parallel. However, ıl differences between a largely disclosure law, :h in Lending Act (TILA), and a statute regulat- conduct, such as the FDCPA, support construc- ı civil liability provisions more forcefully than _A provisions.

deral court that only allege statutory damages actual injury in fact will not pass Article III rements. Section 11.15, infra provides a detailed ticle III standing requirements.[723]

Two principles should guide courts in resolving statutory damages issues:

- Congress intended private actions to be the primary enforcement mechanism of the Act;[724] and
- Congress viewed existing remedies for debt collection abuses as inadequate.[725]

Courts should resolve any ambiguities or gaps in the FDCPA in favor of fostering private enforcement and in a manner calculated to avoid the remedial inadequacies of existing laws restricting debt collection abuse. Nearly a century ago, the Supreme Court considered and upheld the validity of statutory damages in a railroad ticket overcharge case.[726] The FDCPA is a strict liability statute.[727] "One purpose of statutory damages is to create an incentive to obey the law."[728] While recovery of actual damages is not a prerequisite to an award of statutory damages,[729] consumers must have suffered a concrete injury caused by the alleged violation when suing in federal court to meet Article III standing.[730] The determination of whether to award statutory damages and the amount of any such award is at the court's discretion.[731] A court may decide, however, that contested FDCPA statutory damages are a matter for a jury.[732]

11.9.2 Factors for Determining Amount of Statutory Damages Award in Individual Actions

Section 1692k(b)(1) sets out the factors to consider in the award of individual statutory damages as provided by § 1692k(a)(2)(A):

> (b) In determining the amount of liability in any action under subsection (a) of this section, the court shall consider, among other relevant factors—
>
> (1) in any individual action under subsection (a)(2)(A) requires courts to consider four factors in ount of statutory damages in an individual

id
collector's noncompliance.

o permits the courts to consider "other rele-he court need not base its award of FDCPA on more than one of these factors.[738] four required factors were borrowed from tatutory damages provisions of the Truth in LA)[739] and the punitive damages provisions dit Opportunity Act (ECOA).[740] However, the noncompliance"[741] is a factor unique to the ave held that the "frequency and persistence e" pertains only to the debt collector's non-h respect to the plaintiff—activities relating ers are not relevant in an individual action.[742]

Because the purpose of private FDCPA actions is to deter activities violating the Act, the better view adopted by a number of courts is that statutory damages should be higher where the activity is a common or regular part of the collector's policy or practices regarding other consumers.[743]

Three factors included in the TILA class action statutory damages provision and in the ECOA provision for punitive damage awards were not included in the FDCPA criteria for individual actions:

- The amount of actual damages;
- The resources of the defendant; and
- The number of persons adversely affected.

The latter two factors are included in the FDCPA only in connection with class actions. Because the amount of actual damages was omitted as a factor in the FDCPA provisions for determining the amount of statutory damages in an individual and also a class action, it is clear that Congress did not consider the existence or amount of an award of actual damages as relevant to the amount of statutory damages to be awarded. While an allegation of concrete harm is necessary for Article III standing,[744] recovery of actual damages is not necessary in order to obtain statutory damages.[745]

To the extent that the FDCPA factors a court considers in a particular case are the same as those of the TILA and the ECOA, cases decided under those acts will be helpful in construing the FDCPA's identical language. However, the distinctiveness of the FDCPA factors indicates that Congress carefully considered the factors to use in an FDCPA case and that courts should apply those factors. In interpreting the statutory damages provisions, courts should keep in mind that Congress found existing remedies inadequate and intended the FDCPA remedies to eliminate abusive debt collection practices.[746]

Appellate courts generally defer to trial courts' determination of the amount of statutory damages. In Clomon v.

---

v. NFS, Inc., 781 F. Supp. 188 (W.D.N.Y. 1991); Clark's lumble, 823 P.2d 818 (Kan. Ct. App. 1991).

rcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 401 F. Supp. onn. 2019) (court awarded only $500 in statutory damages imer received only one non-threatening letter containing onal mistake); Carter v. Credit Bur. of Carbon Cty., 2015 8 (D. Colo. July 20, 2015) (following bench trial, awardim statutory damages for collection agency's violation of pon finding that agency's noncompliance had been "intena matter of policy" and both frequent and persistent); In re 5 B.R. 108, 147–148 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 31, 2020) (court l $1000 in damages where collector acted in bad faith when withdraw, seek leave to withdraw, or modify 3002.1 notice me it serviced consumer's loan).

rgrast v. First Choice Assets, L.L.C., 317 F. Supp. 3d 1018, . Ill. May 14, 2018) (court awarded full $1000 where collector court."[747] For example, lower courts are often given discretion in the Second Circuit when setting the amount of additional damages.[748]

11.9.3 Are Statutory Damages Mandatory?

The FDCPA's legislative history suggests Congress intended a statutory damages award to be mandatory in almost all cases. The majority of proposed bills consistently provided a nondiscretionary award of statutory damages of between $100 and $1000, depending on the extent of proof of the criteria currently set forth in § 1692k(b)(1) required.[749] The formula in these bills was a hybrid modeled after the provisions for individual and class statutory damages in the Truth in Lending Act.[750] While the Senate minority bill provided for actual damages and "such amounts of punitive damages as the court may allow"[751] for willful violations only, that provision was ultimately dropped in the Senate Banking Committee mark-up in favor of the present approach.[752]

The final bill removed the $100 minimum statutory damages award found in earlier bills to deal with "nuisance"[753] suits when none of the criteria for statutory damages was satisfied. The legislative history suggests that Congress did not intend statutory damages to be discretionary in other situations. If a violation is established and proof of at least one of the § 1692k(b)(1) criteria is met (e.g., frequency, persistence, nature of violation, and intent), the statutory damages award should be mandatory. Only where none of the statutory factors are demonstrated may statutory damages be denied.[754] Even in the rare case where no actual or statutory damages are awarded, attorney fees and costs are mandatory if the plaintiff has proven an FDCPA violation.[755]

11.9.4 Actual Damages Not a Prerequisite

FDCPA statutory damages are awarded in addition to actual damages, but an award of actual damages is not a prerequisite to the recovery of FDCPA statutory damages.[756] The FDCPA's civil liability provisions in individual cases were modeled on similar provisions in the Truth in Lending Act (TILA),[757] and courts at the time (and also since then) refused to make actual damages a precondition for statutory awards in TILA cases.[758] (Actual damages are a factor to consider when awarding TILA statutory damages in a class action only.)

"Where Congress borrows terms of art in which are accumulated . . . legal tradition and meaning . . . it presumably knows and adopts the cluster of ideas that were attached . . . and the meaning its use will convey to the judicial mind."[759] Thus Congress intended that the FDCPA provision would be interpreted the same way as the TILA provision.[760] While the civil liability provisions of other titles of the Consumer Credit Protection Act mention actual damages as a factor to be considered in computing statutory damages,[761] neither TILA (for individual statutory damages) nor the FDCPA do so. Similarly, numerous courts have held that actual damages are not a 747 Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314 (2d Cir. 1993). See Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Serv., Inc., 722 Fed. Appx. 864 (11th Cir. 2018) (statutory damages of $1000 in default judgment upheld where consumer disputed debt multiple times, collector failed to report disputes to consumer reporting agencies, and credit reports could have significantly damaged consumer's credit); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81, 85 (2d Cir. 1998); King v. Int'l Data Serv., 100 Fed. Appx. 681 (9th Cir. 2004) (district court did not abuse its discretion in awarding maximum statutory damages); Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 401 F. Supp. 3d 241, 256 (D. Conn. 2019). Cf. Crossley v. Lieberman, 90 B.R. 682 (E.D. Pa. 1988) (increasing bankruptcy court's $100 statutory damage award to $1000), aff'd, 868 F.2d 566 (3d Cir. 1989).

748 See Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81, 86 (2d Cir. 1998); Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 1314, 1322 (2d Cir. 1993); Pipiles v. Credit Bur. of Lockport, Inc., 886 F.2d 22, 25–26 (2d Cir. 1989); Emanuel v. Am. Credit Exch., 870 F.2d 805, 809 (2d Cir. 1989).

749 See, e.g., H.R. 11969, 94th Cong. § 812(a)(2)(A) (1976); H.R. 29, 95th Cong. § 812(a)(2)(A) (1977); S. 918, 95th Cong. § 813(a)(2)(A) (1977).

However H.R. 10191, 94th Cong. § 811(2)(A) (1975), provided for statutory damages of no less than $100 and no more than $2500.

750 15 U.S.C. §§ 1640(a)(2)(A), 1640(a)(3); 122 Cong. Rec. H7789 (daily ed. July 27, 1976) (remarks of Rep. Wylie) ("a civil liability section similar to this one is standard for all titles of the Consumer Credit Protection Act").

751 S. 1130, 95th Cong. § 805(a)(1) (1977).

752 Washington Credit Letter 8 (Aug. 8, 1977). Compare Senate Comm. Print No. 1, 95th Cong. § 813(a)(2) (1977), with H.R. 5294, 95th Cong. § 813(a)(2) (1977) (Senate version).

753 See S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 10 (1977), reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 and at Appx. A.3, infra (additional views of minority members).

754 See Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); Emanuel v. Am. Credit Exch., 870 F.2d 805 (2d Cir. 1989); Monroe v. Steinfeld, 2012 WL 1496204 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 22, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 1497519 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 27, 2012).

755 See § 11.13.2, infra.

756 Phillips v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 736 F.3d 1076, 1083 (7th Cir. 2013) (proof of injury is not required when only damages sought are statutory); Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055, 1067 (9th Cir. 2011) ("Statutory damages under the FDCPA are intended to 'deter violations by imposing a cost on the defendant even if his misconduct imposed no cost on the plaintiff,'" (quoting Crabill v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 259 F.3d 662, 666 (7th Cir. 2001); Miller v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 321 F.3d 292, 307 (2d Cir. 2003); Gambardella v. G. Fox & Co., 716 F.2d 104, 108 n.4 (2d Cir. 1983)). See also Robey v. Shapiro, Marianos & Cejda, L.L.C., 434 F.3d 1208 (10th Cir. 2006). Cf. Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016); § 11.15, infra. But see McNeill v. Graham, Bright & Smith, P.C., 2006 WL 1489502 (N.D. Tex. May 26, 2006).

757 See § 11.9.3, supra.

758 See Dzadaovsky v. Lyonds Ford Sales, Inc., 593 F.2d 538 (2d Cir. 1979); Redhouse v. Quality Ford Sales, Inc., 523 F.2d 1 (10th Cir. 1975).

759 Morissette v. United States, 342 U.S. 246, 263, 72 S. Ct. 240, 96 L. Ed. 288 (1952). See also Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010); United States v. Freed, 401 U.S. 601, 607–608, 91 S. Ct. 1112, 28 L. Ed. 2d 356 (1971); United States v. Merriam, 263 U.S. 179, 187, 44 S. Ct. 69, 68 L. Ed. 240 (1923); United States v. Fid. Trust Co., 222 U.S. 158, 160, 32 S. Ct. 59, 56 L. Ed. 137 (1911).

760 See Letter from Senator William Proxmire to Robert J. Hobbs (Aug. 17, 1978) (on file at National Consumer Law Center).

761 See, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 1691e(b).

prerequisite to the award of statutory damages under the Fair Credit Reporting Act.[762]

A distinct, but closely related issue is whether the consumer has alleged a sufficiently concrete "injury in fact" that is required for constitutional standing in federal courts. Section 11.15, infra, discusses Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins,[763] and TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez,[764] the Supreme Court's decisions on this issue in the context of FCRA litigation, as well as numerous post-Spokeo and Ramirez lower court decisions in FDCPA litigation.[765]

11.9.5 Enhancing Statutory Damages

Courts in early FDCPA cases awarded higher amounts when they viewed the violation as aggravated or egregious[766] and lower amounts when the violation was considered less serious.[767] As the real value of the maximum $1000 statutory damage award has declined with inflation,[768] awards of $1000 have become the norm.[769] Thus, in those early cases statutory damages were often only $100 or $200 where the violation was the failure to provide statutorily required notices and no consumer injury was alleged.[770] However, as early as 1988, the collector's placement of a verification notice on the back of a dunning letter resulted in a $1000 statutory damages award.[771]

This increase in the size of statutory damages awards recognizes that the maximum award is not to be limited solely to egregious violations. The maximum award is particularly beneficial in cases involving less than egregious violations because such cases generally do not produce large awards of actual damages, and private enforcement of the FDCPA would otherwise be discouraged.

Factors which courts have mentioned, or which appear to play a role in larger statutory damages awards are:

- The collector's intent to do the act which violated the FDCPA[772] or to evade the FDCPA's protections;[773]
- The collector's intent that its illegal action injure the consumer;[774]
- The collector's sophistication, giving it reason to know the FDCPA's requirements;[775]
- The clarity of the requirements the collector violated;[776]
- The collector's persistent denial of its proscribed act;[777]
- Failure to timely correct violations;[778]

762 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 12.5.4.1.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

763 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

764 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2207–2208, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

765 See also Appx. E.1.4.1, infra.

766 See Appx. E.3.1.2, infra.

767 See Appx. E.3.1.2, infra.

768 It would cost approximately $3427 in 2011 to buy what could be bought for $1000 in 1978, when the FDCPA was enacted. $1000 in 2011 dollars would only buy about $292 in 1978 dollars. See www.bls.gov (click on Data Tools, then CPI Inflation Calculator).

769 See Appx. E.3.1.2, infra.

770 See, e.g., Siler v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 1992 WL 32333 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 18, 1992); Read v. Amana Collection Serv., 1991 WL 165033 (W.D.N.Y. Jan. 15, 1991); Zurcher v. Credit Bur., Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20366 (D. Or. Nov. 8, 1983); Griswold v. J&R Anderson Bus. Serv., Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20365 (D. Or. Oct. 21, 1983).

771 See, e.g., Riveria v. MAB Collections, Inc., 682 F. Supp. 174 (W.D.N.Y. 1988). See also Chauncey v. JDR Recovery Corp., 118 F.3d 516 (7th Cir. 1997); Sakuma v. First Nat'l Credit Bur., 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19120 (D. Haw. Nov. 15, 1989).

772 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Selig v. Niagara Recovery Solutions Mgmt. Group, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4283926 (E.D. Va. July 27, 2020) (defendants intentionally violated multiple FDCPA provisions by calling consumer three times over a period of six months and sending him two letters); Jara v. P.N. Fin., Inc., 2014 WL 4388515 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 4, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 5100222 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 10, 2014); Mills v. Lieberman, Michaels & Kelly, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6012980 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 1, 2011); Appx. E.3.1.2, infra. Cf. Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 401 F. Supp. 3d 241 (D. Conn. 2019) (no evidence that violation was intentional); Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 22, 1989) (collector's lack of intent factor favoring lower damages).

773 See Blick v. Shapiro & Brown, L.L.P., 748 Fed. Appx. 562 (4th Cir. 2019) (failure to verify debt); Campbell v. MBI Assoc., Inc., 98 F. Supp. 3d 568 (E.D.N.Y. 2015) (whether sending collection letter to represented consumer was unintentional was relevant to damages, not to liability); Hagen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 85 F. Supp. 3d (D. Minn. 2015); Thomas v. Nat'l Bus. Assistants, Inc., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24876 (D. Conn. Oct. 5, 1984).

774 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Hollback v. Rothman Mediation Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 3547392 (S.D. Ohio July 17, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 3889473 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 7, 2014); Thomas v. Nat'l Bus. Assistants, Inc., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24876 (D. Conn. Oct. 5, 1984). Cf. Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989) (collector's lack of intent to deceive or harass a factor favoring lower damages); Zurcher v. Credit Bur., Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20366 (D. Or. Nov. 8, 1983) (only $200 where collector lacked intent to injure consumer); Carrigan v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 502 F. Supp. 468 (N.D. Ga. 1980) (considering the absence of specific intent to injure).

775 See Cacace v. Lucas, 775 F. Supp. 502 (D. Conn. 1990).

776 See Chapman v. ACB Bus. Serv., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23743 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 13, 1997); Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 22, 1989).

777 Walter v. HSM Receivables, 2015 WL 2019104 (D. Colo. Apr. 30, 2015) (defendant was dismissive of claim); Nelson v. Select Fin. Serv., Inc., 2006 WL 1672889 (E.D. Pa. June 9, 2006); Crossley v. Lieberman, 90 B.R. 682 (E.D. Pa. 1988), aff'd, 868 F.2d 566 (3d Cir. 1989); In re Belile, 209 B.R. 658 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997).

778 See Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Serv., Inc., 722 Fed. Appx. 864 (11th Cir. 2018) (collector failed to report disputed debt to consumer reporting agencies despite multiple disputes by consumer); Gustafson v. Recovery Serv., 2015 WL 5009108 (D.N.H. Aug. 21, 2015); Cacace v. Lucas, 775 F. Supp. 502 (D. Conn. 1990); Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984); In re Scrimpsher, 17 B.R. 999, 1017 (Bankr. N.D.N.Y. 1982). Cf. Carrigan v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 502 F. Supp. 468 (N.D. Ga. 1980). See also In re Trevino, 615 B.R. 108, 147–148 (S.D. Tex. 2020) (awarding maximum amount of statutory damages where servicer's failure to diligently correct improper notice caused needless expense and amounted to bad faith).

- Prior violations and liability of the collector for the same illegal act;[779]
- Multiple violations;[780]
- Multiple consumers affected by the same type of violations;[781]
- Multiple debts whose collection involved the same violation;[782]
- Multiple debt collectors responsible for the violation;[783]
- Repetition of the illegal act;[784]
- The importance attached to deterrence by the court;[785]
- Publicity or potential publicity connected with the violation;[786]
- The consumer's injury;[787]
- The existence of collector's liability insurance; and
- Egregiousness of the violation.[788]

While the egregiousness of the violation is certainly a factor, the cases reflect a wide spectrum of judicial perception as to what is egregious, which is likely to depend on the judge's attitude toward abusive collection behavior. Any court is likely to view an abusive act that causes the consumer distress as more egregious than the failure to notify the consumer of FDCPA rights, for example. But some courts view any noncompliance as serious, while others view some violations as technical and not very serious.[789] In the latter instance, it is important to point out the policy underlying the prohibition or requirement that was violated.

Consumer attorneys sometimes feel that some judges award low statutory damages as a way of discouraging others from filing cases in their district, because they do not appreciate a federal court hearing small monetary value consumer cases. Of course, a court could take the opposite view, that substantial statutory damages awards will deter collectors from violating the FDCPA, which then reduces federal court FDCPA litigation in the long run.

779 See Jones v. Vest, 2000 WL 33907601 (E.D. Va. Dec. 27, 2000); Furth v. United Adjusters, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20368 (D. Or. Nov. 17, 1983).

780 See Selig v. Niagara Recovery Solutions Mgmt. Group, L.L.C., 2020 WL 4283926 (E.D. Va. July 27, 2020) (defendants intentionally violated multiple FDCPA provisions by calling consumer three times over period of six months and sending him two letters); Magbanua v. Evans, 2020 WL 2332168, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 20, 2020) ("multiple, repeated FDCPA violations"); Waddell v. Capital Accounts, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5792865 (S.D. W. Va. Nov. 5, 2019); Georgopulous v. PPM Capital, Inc., 2019 WL 6065617 (D. Colo. Oct. 21, 2019) (defendant violated twelve provisions of FDCPA), adopted, 2019 WL 6053333 (D. Colo. Nov. 15, 2019); Hollback v. Rothman Mediation Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 3547392 (S.D. Ohio July 17, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 3889473 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 7, 2014); Finney v. MIG Capital Mgmt., Inc., 2014 WL 1276159 (S.D. W. Va. Mar. 27, 2014); Hanks v. Reg'l Arbitration Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 717165 (D. Colo. Feb. 25, 2014); Woods v. Sieger, Ross & Aguire, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1811628 (S.D.N.Y. May 18, 2012); Frazier v. Absolute Collection Serv., Inc., 767 F. Supp. 2d 1354 (N.D. Ga. 2011); Mills v. Lieberman, Michaels & Kelly, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6012980 (M.D. Pa. Dec. 1, 2011); Bretana v. Int'l Collection Corp., 2010 WL 1221925 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 24, 2010); Shields v. Receivable Mgmt. Serv., 2009 WL 2497400 (D. Ariz. Aug. 14, 2009); See also Beeders v. Gulf Coast Collection Bur., 632 F. Supp. 2d 1125 (M.D. Fla. 2009).

781 See Berry v. Nat'l Fin. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 2843260 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 27, 2009); Morgan v. Credit Adjustment Bd., Inc., 999 F. Supp. 803 (E.D. Va. 1998); In re Belile, 209 B.R. 658 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1997); Venes v. Prof'l Serv. Bur., Inc., 353 N.W.2d 671 (Minn. Ct. App. 1984). But see Grubbs v. Andrews & Cox, P.C., 2015 WL 5613325 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 22, 2015) (frequency of noncompliance pertained only to consumer himself and not all consumers).

782 See Hollis v. Roberts, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21813 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 13, 1991).

783 See Overcash v. United Abstract Group, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 2d 193 (N.D.N.Y. 2008).

784 Magbanua v. Evans, 2020 WL 2332168, at *7 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 20, 2020) ("multiple, repeated FDCPA violations"); Waddell v. Capital Accounts, L.L.C., 2019 WL 5792865 (S.D. W. Va. Nov. 5, 2019) (defendant threatened to tell plaintiff's employer about debt and repeatedly called plaintiff, even after he told them he was not allowed to take calls at work); Murphy v. Ability Recover Serv., L.L.C., 2019 WL 7708592 (W.D. Pa. Aug. 7, 2019); Miele v. Sid Bailey, Inc., 192 B.R. 611 (S.D.N.Y. 1996); Cacace v. Lucas, 775 F. Supp. 502 (D. Conn. 1990); Thomas v. Nat'l Bus. Assistants, Inc., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24876 (D. Conn. Oct. 5, 1984). See also Copper v. Global Check & Credit Serv., L.L.C., 2010 WL 5463338 (W.D.N.Y. Dec. 29, 2010) (not found to violate FDCPA persistently); Hartman v. Meridian Fin. Serv., Inc., 191 F. Supp. 2d 1031 (W.D. Wis. 2002) (the number of separate violations was factor in determining statutory damages). But cf. Byes v. Credit Bur. Enter., Inc., 1995 WL 540235 (E.D. La. Sept. 11, 1995) (discovery of debt collector's practices regarding persons other than plaintiff was not relevant to issue of statutory damages).

785 Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011); Cobb v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 2011 WL 4433579 (M.D. La. Sept. 21, 2011). See also Kaylor-Trent v. John C. Bonewicz, P.C., 910 F. Supp. 2d 1112, 1116 (C.D. Ill. 2012) (awarding $1000 because of the nature of the violations "and to encourage future compliance with the FDCPA"); Dunn v. Derrick E. McGavic, P.C., 653 F. Supp. 2d 1109 (D. Or. 2009); Withers v. Eveland, 988 F. Supp. 942 (E.D. Va. 1997); Strange v. Wexler, 796 F. Supp. 1117 (N.D. Ill. 1992); Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984); Thomas v. Nat'l Bus. Assistants, Inc., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24876 (D. Conn. Oct. 5, 1984); Scott v. Universal Fid. Corp., 42 F. Supp. 2d 837 (N.D. Ill. 1999).

786 See, e.g., Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984); Florence v. Nat'l Sys., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20344 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 14, 1983).

787 See Brablec v. Paul Coleman & Assoc. P.C., 2010 WL 235062 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 21, 2010); McHugh v. Check Investors, Inc., 2003 WL 21283288 (W.D. Va. May 21, 2003); Venes v. Prof'l Serv. Bur., Inc., 353 N.W.2d 671 (Minn. Ct. App. 1984). Cf. Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 22, 1989) (lack of actual injury factor favoring lower statutory damages).

788 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Becker v. Montgomery, Lynch, 2003 WL 23335929 (N.D. Ohio Feb. 26, 2003); Boyce v. Attorney's Dispatch Serv., 1999 WL 33495605 (W.D. Ohio Apr. 27, 1999); Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984); Thomas v. Nat'l Bus. Assistants, Inc., 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24876 (D. Conn. Oct. 5, 1984); Florence v. Nat'l Sys., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20344 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 14, 1983). See also Copper v. Global Check & Credit Serv., L.L.C., 2010 WL 5463338 (W.D.N.Y. Dec. 29, 2010) (violation not egregious); Raimondi v. McAllister & Assoc., Inc., 50 F. Supp. 2d 825 (N.D. Ill. 1999); Zoeckler v. Credit Claims & Collections, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20363 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 1983); Harvey v. United Adjusters, 509 F. Supp. 1218 (D. Or. 1981). Cf. Smart v. Emerald City Recovery, L.L.C., 2019 WL 366205, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 30, 2019) (act of wrongful possession itself was egregious, but defendant's conduct was not "anything more than an isolated unintentional violation of the statute").

789 See § 12.1, infra.

11.9.6 Factors Reducing Statutory Damages Awards

Factors mentioned by the courts as reducing the amount of statutory damages awards include:

- A single violation;[790]
- The technical[791] or nonabusive[792] nature of the violation, or that it involved a mistake of law;[793]
- Cessation of the violation when first brought to the collector's attention;[794]
- A collector's seeking to comply by obtaining legal advice;[795]
- Lack of persistent, frequent violations;[796]
- The lack of consumer injury;[797]
- The absence of intent to deceive or harass the consumer;[798]
- The recent passage of the statutory requirement or recent employment of the offending employee;[799] and
- Seeking less than maximum statutory damages.[800]

11.9.7 Relation Between FDCPA Statutory Damages and Other Awards

The FDCPA states explicitly that statutory damages are to be awarded in addition to FDCPA actual damages.[801] A

790 See Braden v. JH Portfolio Debt Equities, L.L.C., 2019 WL 6895544 (D. Md. Dec. 18, 2019) (where plaintiff alleged only one nonintentional violation and did not allege that defendant acted in aggressive or threatening manner, award of $50 in statutory damages was appropriate); Seeger v. Ross & Assoc., 2019 WL 5695944 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 6, 2019); Datiz v. Int'l Recovery Assoc., 2019 WL 1900472, at *4 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 29, 2019) (granting defendant's motion to reconsider, finding that court's award of maximum statutory damages was excessive: "The Court awarded summary judgment based on a singular technical violation of the FDCPA, not a pattern of egregious, intentional, or harmful misconduct. As a result, the Court views a $500 statutory award more appropriate for the claims at issue."); Razilova v. Halstead Fin. Serv. L.L.C., 2019 WL 1370695 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 1, 2019); Garcia v. Creditors Specialty Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 6778681 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2016); Nicaisse v. Stephens & Michaels Assoc., Inc., 2015 WL 9462106 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 28, 2015); Forkum v. Co-Operative Adjustment Bur., Inc., 2014 WL 3101784 (N.D. Cal. July 3, 2014); Richardson v. Check Sys. Recovery, L.L.C., 2012 WL 6049703 (N.D. Ind. Dec. 5, 2012) (single, overtly deceptive and non-technical violation; $750 award appropriate); Warren v. Specified Credit Ass'n Inc., 2012 WL 1067728 (D.N.J. Mar. 28, 2012); McCammon v. Bibler, Newman & Reynolds, P.A., 493 F. Supp. 2d 1166 (D. Kan. 2007; Griswold v. J&R Anderson Bus. Serv., Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20365 (D. Or. Oct. 21, 1983) ($200); Zoeckler v. Credit Claims & Collections, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20363 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 1983). See also Drolet v. Phillips Reinhard & Assoc., 2016 WL 638667 (W.D.N.Y. Feb. 18, 2016) (awarding $500 in statutory damages given relative infrequency of instances of noncompliance).

791 See Caldera v. RMA Recovery Group L.L.C., 2020 WL 3883257 (W.D. Tex. July 9, 2020) (technical FDCPA violation warranted $250 in statutory damages); Datiz v. Int'l Recovery Assoc., 2019 WL 1900472, at *4 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 29, 2019) (granting defendant's motion to reconsider, award of maximum statutory damages was excessive: "The Court awarded summary judgment based on a singular technical violation of the FDCPA, not a pattern of egregious, intentional, or harmful misconduct. As a result, the Court views a $ 500 statutory award more appropriate for the claims at issue."); Razilova v. Halstead Fin. Serv. L.L.C., 2019 WL 1370695 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 1, 2019); Crumel v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc., 2015 WL 1565432 (E.D.N.C. Apr. 8, 2015); Branco v. Credit Collection Serv. Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011); Fasten v. Zager, 49 F. Supp. 2d 144 (E.D.N.Y. 1999); O'Connor v. Check Rite, 973 F. Supp. 1010 (D. Colo. 1997); Young v. Credit Bur., Inc., 729 F. Supp. 1421 (W.D.N.Y. 1989). Cf. Sterling v. Am. Credit & Collections, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3553757 (D. Colo. Aug. 16, 2012) (violation was more than de minimis or technical, $250 awarded).

792 See Braden v. JH Portfolio Debt Equities, L.L.C., 2019 WL 6895544 (D. Md. Dec. 18, 2019) (where plaintiff alleged only one nonintentional violation and did not allege that defendant acted in aggressive or threatening manner, award of $50 in statutory damages was appropriate); Welther v. Schlottman & Wagner, P.C., 2017 WL 82975 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 10, 2017).

93 See Hooks v. Forman Holt Eliades & Ravin L.L.C., 2015 WL 5333513 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 14, 2015); Collins v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2013 WL 9805805 (E.D. Tenn. June 7, 2013).

794 See McCafferty v. Schwartzkopf Law Office, 2012 WL 1660819 (E.D. Mo. May 11, 2012); Simmons v. Miller & Steeno, P.C., 2002 WL 31898324 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 30, 2002) ($50), vacated due to settlement, 2003 WL 255238 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 4, 2003); Zoeckler v. Credit Claims & Collections, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20363 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 1983). But cf. Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984) ($1000 statutory damages to each of two plaintiffs not mitigated by collector's discontinuance).

795 See Lambert v. Nat'l Credit Bur., Inc., 16 Clearinghouse Rev. 442 (D. Or. 1981).

796 See Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); Muldowney v. Merit Recovery Sys., Inc., 2019 WL 2024760, at *5 (N.D.N.Y. May 8, 2019) ("two confusing letters sent a little over three weeks apart with no other identified communications or conduct certainly do not demonstrate persistent or frequent noncompliance with the FDCPA"); Powers v. Am. Credit Resolution, Inc., 2014 WL 1572391 (W.D.N.Y. Apr. 18, 2014); Laster v. Cole, 2000 WL 306848 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 20, 2000); Zoeckler v. Credit Claims & Collections, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20363 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 1983); Bingham v. Collection Bur., Inc., 505 F. Supp. 864 (D.N.D. 1981); Carrigan v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 502 F. Supp. 468 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

797 See Campbell v. MBI Assoc., Inc., 98 F. Supp. 3d 568 (E.D.N.Y. 2015) (whether sending collection letter to represented consumer was de minimis was relevant to damages, not to liability); Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 22, 1989); Furth v. United Adjusters, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20368 (D. Or. Nov. 17, 1983); Griswold v. J&R Anderson Bus. Serv., Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20365 (D. Or. Oct. 21, 1983); Zoeckler v. Credit Claims & Collections, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20363 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 1983); Harvey v. United Adjusters, 509 F. Supp. 1218 (D. Or. 1981). See also Simmons v. Miller & Steeno, P.C., 2002 WL 31898324 (E.D. Mo. Dec. 30, 2002), vacated due to settlement, 2003 WL 255238 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 4, 2003).

798 See Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); Branco v. Credit Collection Serv. Inc., 2011 WL 3684503 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2011); Weiss v. Zwicker & Assoc. P.C., 664 F. Supp. 2d 214 (E.D.N.Y 2009); Richard v. Oak Tree Group Inc., 2009 WL 3234159 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 30, 2009); Boyce v. Attorney's Dispatch Serv., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1124 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 2, 1999); Altergott v. Modern Collection Techniques, 1994 WL 319229 (N.D. Ill. June 23, 1994); Kaschak v. Raritan Valley Collection Agency, 1989 WL 255498 (D.N.J. May 22, 1989). See also Page v. Checkrite, Ltd., 1984 WL 1052036 (D. Neb. Apr. 2, 1984) (no evidence of specific intent to injure consumers).

799 Carrigan v. Cent. Adjustment Bur., Inc., 502 F. Supp. 468 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

800 See Furth v. United Adjusters, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20368 (D. Or. Nov. 17, 1983).

801 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(2).

number of courts have also awarded state statutory damages[802] or punitive damages[803] on a parallel state claim in addition to FDCPA statutory damages. A consumer may also recover both treble damages on a UDAP claim and statutory damages under the FDCPA.[804]

11.9.8 Multiple Statutory Damages Awards

11.9.8.1 Where There Are Multiple Plaintiffs

The FDCPA provides that "any debt collector who fails to comply with any provision of this subchapter is liable to such person in an amount equal to . . . in the case of any action by an individual, such additional damages as the court may allow, but not exceeding $1000."[805] The $1000 cap is part of the liability "to such person . . . in the case of an action by an individual." Thus, the Act's plain language states that each plaintiff can recover $1000, and courts have awarded $1000 to each of multiple plaintiffs.[806]

Moreover, the FDCPA explicitly provides that the maximum $1000 statutory damages can be awarded to each named plaintiff in a class action.[807] It would be odd if named plaintiffs in a class action could each recover $1000, but several joined plaintiffs in an individual action could not.

11.9.8.2 Where There Are Multiple Defendants

The FDCPA provides that "any debt collector who fails to comply with any provision of this subchapter is liable to such person in an amount equal to . . . such additional damages as the court may allow, but not exceeding $1000."[808] As this applies to "any debt collector," where multiple debt collectors violate the FDCPA, each is liable for a maximum of $1000 statutory damages.[809] However, other courts hold that the maximum of $1000 applies "to any action."[810]

---

802 See, e.g., Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011) (class plaintiffs could recover statutory damages under both FDCPA and parallel state law; FDCPA explicitly does not preempt state laws that provide greater protection; declining to decide if total statutory damages under FDCPA and state law may exceed FDCPA's $500,000 cap for class action damages); Anderson v. MFP, Inc., 2015 WL 509960 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 6, 2015); Alonso v. Blackstone Fin. Group, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6843597 (E.D. Cal. Dec. 20, 2013) (awarding $1000 in statutory damages under FDCPA, $1000 under Rosenthal Act, plus $100 actual damages and $2700 for pain and suffering); Barnett v. Creditors Specialty Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 1629090 (W.D.N.C. Apr. 16, 2013) (awarding statutory damages under both state and federal law given frequency of defendant's telephone calls, virulent nature of those calls, and clearly intentional noncompliance with FDCPA); Smith v. Royal Oak Fin. Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 3290153 (M.D. Fla. June 18, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 3290151 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 13, 2012); Elmore v. Northeast Fla. Credit Bur., Inc., 2011 WL 4480419 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 27, 2011) (awarding $100 for FDCPA violation and $100 for parallel state violation); Burrell v. Imperial Recovery Partners, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2682694 (E.D. Mich. July 11, 2011) ($1000 in FDCPA statutory damages, as well as $150 in statutory damages under state law); Morisaki v. Davenport, Allen & Malone, Inc., 2010 WL 3341566 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 23, 2010); Francis v. J.C. Penney Corp., Inc., 2010 WL 715535 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 24, 2010) ($1000 FDCPA, $500 state, $1000 FCRA statutory damages, $1000 FCRA punitive damages as well as treble damages against both debt collectors); Jones v. Morgan Stone Assoc., 2010 WL 55884 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 4, 2010); Dabu v. Becks Creek Industr., 2009 WL 517826 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 22, 2009); Chapman v. ACB Bus. Serv., 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23743 (S.D. W. Va. Feb. 13, 1997); Appx. E.3.1.2, E.3.7.3, infra. But cf. Bentkowsky v. Benchmark Recovery, Inc., 2015 WL 502948 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2015) (refusing to stack state statutory damages onto award of $1000 FDCPA statutory damages against both defendants as $2000 award was sufficient); Carrero v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 6433214 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 27, 2014) (rejecting class restitution claim because there was no private remedy under state licensing law, and class members had adequate FDCPA statutory remedy).

803 See § 11.10, infra.

804 Baiocchetti v. Smith, Dean & Assoc., Inc., 2012 WL 3728146, at *2 (D. Conn. Jan. 25, 2012) (default judgment; awarding $2500 in actual damages for emotional distress under the FDCPA, as well as $25,000 in punitive damages under state UDAP law where plaintiff, who was "extremely tearful during the hearing," was afraid to answer her phone, was constantly looking over her shoulder, was afraid she was going to be arrested, was humiliated and embarrassed by multiple third-party contacts); Francis v. J.C. Penney Corp., Inc., 2010 WL 715535 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 24, 2010) ($1000 FDCPA, $500 state, $1000 FCRA statutory damages and $1000 FCRA punitive damages as well as treble damages against both debt collectors); Malone v. Hecker, 2007 WL 4200951 (D. Mass. Nov. 27, 2007).

805 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(2)(A).

806 See Armbruster v. Hecker, 2010 WL 1643599 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 22, 2010); Robertson v. Horton Bros. Recovery, Inc., 2007 WL 2009703 (D. Del. July 3, 2007); Dowling v. Kucker Kraus & Bruh, L.L.P., 2005 WL 1337442 (S.D.N.Y. June 6, 2005); Yelvington v. Buckner, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24890 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 7, 1984); Boyce v. Attorney's Dispatch Serv., 1999 WL 33495605 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 2, 1999); In re Cambron, 2007 WL 1076685 (Bankr. M.D. Ala. Apr. 5, 2007), adopted, 2007 WL 4287376 (M.D. Ala. Dec. 5, 2007). See also Crafton v. Law Firm of Jonathan B. Levine, 2014 WL 907423 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 7, 2014) (case not mooted by offer of $1000 statutory damages where each consumer sought statutory damages).

807 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(2)(B).

808 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(2)(A).

809 See Bentkowsky v. Benchmark Recovery, Inc., 2015 WL 502948 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2015); Hollback v. Rothman Mediation Serv., L.L.C., 2014 WL 3547392 (S.D. Ohio July 17, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 3889477 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 7, 2014); Jones v. Inv. Retrievers, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1565851 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 25, 2011) (awarding a total of $2000 in statutory damages against two defendants); Mayes v. Credit Solutions Corp., 2011 WL 855634 (D. Ariz. Mar. 9, 2011); Overcash v. United Abstract Group, Inc., 549 F. Supp. 2d 193, 196 (N.D. NY Mar. 10, 2008); Gans v. Checkrite, Ltd., 1997 WL 33810208 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 6, 1997). See also Gomez v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 77 F. Supp. 3d 750 (N.D. Ill. 2014) (Rule 68 offer of $1001 did not moot a case seeking only statutory damages where there were two defendants, debt buyer and collection agency, and each could be liable if each independently violated FDCPA). But see Martinez v. Scott, 2011 WL 3566970 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 12, 2011) (while individual plaintiffs can each recover $1000 statutory damages for FDCPA violations, they cannot recover more amount from each defendant).

810 See, e.g., Goodman v. People's Bank, 209 Fed. Appx. 111, 114 (3d Cir. 2006) (plaintiff limited to $1000 per successful court action against multiple collectors, not $1000 per violation).

11.9.8.3 Where There Are Multiple Wrongful Acts

The vast majority of courts provide that each collector's liability to each consumer for statutory damages is capped at $1000, no matter how many violations are established in the FDCPA lawsuit.[811] If the debt collector violates the FDCPA again after an FDCPA suit was filed, there is precedent allowing a follow-up suit for a new statutory damage award without regard to the amount awarded in the prior suit.[812] However, one court held that a violation occurring before the first FDCPA suit could not be the basis for a second FDCPA suit.[813]

Where there are multiple violations, consideration should be given to stacking state statutory and tort damages and, for egregious or malicious violations, punitive damages. State claims and remedies are discussed at Chapters 15 and 16, infra. The possibility of punitive damages for an FDCPA claim is discussed § 11.10, infra.

While the policy of capping the $1000 dollar maximum statutory damages for each plaintiff against each defendant regardless of the number of violations committed by the collector is followed by nearly every recent decision, it ignores that the policy rewards a collector engaging in multiple violations and thwarts the purposes and goals of the FDCPA:

> [T]he majority's holding in the instant case invites an even greater harm. The majority's refusal to apply the $1000 limit to each violation illogically rewards unscrupulous collectors who, having engaged in an initial violation during attempts to collect on a particular debt, continue with their abusive practices. Applying a flat $1000 ceiling to any one proceeding, regardless of the number of violations involved, means that as the number of violations increases the cost per violation to the collector decreases. I cannot agree that this is a correct result; accordingly, I respectfully dissent."[814]

11.9.9 Prejudgment Interest on Statutory Damage Award

Some courts add prejudgment interest to an FDCPA statutory damage award,[815] calculated from the date of the FDCPA violation's first alleged injury to the plaintiff, as set forth in the complaint. In doing so, one court granted such interest although it "was unable to find a case or provision specifically addressing the award of prejudgment interest in an FDCPA or TCPA case." The court nevertheless concluded, based on the rule under other federal statutes, "that the prime rate, compounded annually, is reasonable in calculating the award of prejudgment interest in this case" and that "the prejudgment interest awarded herein should be compounded by the post-judgment interest rate."[816]

811 Goodmann v. People's Bank, 209 Fed. Appx. 111 (3d Cir. 2006); Wright v. Fin. Serv. Inc., 22 F.3d 647 (6th Cir. 1994); Harper v. Better Bus. Serv., Inc., 961 F.2d 1561 (11th Cir. 1992); Irvine v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 198 F. Supp. 3d 1232 (D. Colo. 2016); Martinez v. Scott, 2011 WL 3566970 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 12, 2011); Marseglia v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 750 F. Supp. 2d 1171 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (Rosenthal Act); Armbruster v. Hecker, 2010 WL 1643599, at *3 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 22, 2010); Beeders v. Gulf Coast Collection Bur., 632 F. Supp. 2d 1125 (M.D. Fla. 2009); Sears v. Fed. Credit Corp., 2009 WL 2601378 (W.D. Va. Aug. 18, 2009); Robertson v. Horton Bros. Recovery, Inc., 2007 WL 2009703 (D. Del. July 3, 2007); Evanauskas v. Strumpf, 2001 WL 777477 (D. Conn. June 27, 2001); Boyce v. Attorney's Dispatch Serv., 1999 WL 33495605 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 2, 1999); Barber v. Nat'l Revenue Corp., 932 F. Supp. 1153 (W.D. Wis. 1996); Dewey v. Associated Collectors, Inc., 927 F. Supp. 1172 (W.D. Wis. 1996); McDaniel v. Asset Retrieval, Inc., 1996 WL 7001 (E.D. La. Jan. 5, 1996); Donahue v. NFS, Inc., 781 F. Supp. 188 (W.D.N.Y. 1991); Beattie v. D.M. Collections, Inc., 764 F. Supp. 925 (D. Del. 1991); Lauderback v. Master Collectors, Inc., 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21817 (D. Or. Oct. 22, 1991); Harvey v. United Adjusters, 509 F. Supp. 1218 (D. Or. 1981). But see Trunzo v. Citi Mortg., 2018 WL 741422 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 7, 2018) (court could not resolve the per action vs. per defendant question); Younger v. Michael & Assoc., P.C., 2014 WL 1760827 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 30, 2014) (where collector sent same letter revealing debt through window envelope on two different debts, consumer brought separate FDCPA suit on each debt and both suits were settled with $1001 statutory damages). See generally Appx. E.3.1.2, infra.

812 Goins v. JBC & Assoc., 352 F. Supp. 2d 262 (D. Conn. 2005). See also Synder v. CACH, L.L.C., 2016 WL 9461793 (D. Haw. June 29, 2016) (mag.; denying debt collector's motion to consolidate consumer's two FDCPA suits against it filed a few months apart; first FDCPA suit involved overstating amount owed and second involved claims of egregious state court collection litigation misconduct by two collector employees who were not defendants in first suit; noting that different arbitration clauses were involved in suits, and they were at different stages of development); Lassiter v. Integrity Solutions Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 1977216, at n.1 (D. Colo. May 15, 2014) (following Goins). Cf. Merrill v. Dyck-O'Neal, Inc., 2015 WL 4496101 (M.D. Fla. July 23, 2015). But cf. Beeders v. Gulf Coast Collection Bur., 632 F. Supp. 2d 1125, 1129 (M.D. Fla. 2009) (each of plaintiff's ten cases for calls (all of which occurred before first suit was filed) would bar the others under claim preclusion doctrine and are duplicative).

813 See Palmer v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2017 WL 550054 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 9, 2017).

814 Wright v. Fin. Serv. of Norwalk, Inc., 22 F.3d 647, 653 (6th Cir. 1994) (J. Nathaniel R. Jones, dissenting).

815 See Ellis v. Alessi Tr. Corp., 2015 WL 3938436, at *2 (D. Nev. June 26, 2015) (awarding prevailing consumer prejudgment interest from date of service: "The purpose of an award of prejudgment interest is to fully compensate the plaintiff for an injury and is especially appropriate in actions under consumer protection statutes, like the FDCPA.").

816 See Jones v. Lockhart, Morris & Montgomery, Inc., 2012 WL 1580759 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 3, 2012), adopted, 2012 WL 1580636 (E.D. Tex. May 4, 2012); Reyelts v. Cross, 968 F. Supp. 2d 835, 851 (N.D. Tex. 2013). See also Gen. Motors, Corp. v. Devex Corp., 461 U.S. 648, 655–656, 103 S. Ct. 2058, 76 L. Ed. 2d 211 (1983) (prejudgment interest should be awarded in patent infringement cases); RK Co. v. See, 622 F.3d 846, 853–854 (7th Cir. 2010) ("prejudgment interest is presumptively available to victims of federal law violations"); Corpus Christi Oil & Gas Co. v. Zapata Gulf Marine Corp., 71 F.3d 198, 204 (5th Cir. 1995) ("in maritime cases the award of prejudgment interest is the rule, rather than the exception, and the trial court has discretion to deny prejudgment interest only where peculiar circumstances would much such an award inequitable"); Reeves v. Int'l Tel. & Tel. Corp., 705 F.2d 750, 752 (5th Cir. 1983) (discussing recovery of prejudgment interest in Fair Labor Standards Act cases); Michael S. Knoll, A Primer on Prejudgment Interest, Tex. L. Rev. (Dec. 1996).

mages

itive Damages May Be eject the availability of punitive

,[817] and no reported decision has The Act itself is silent about the ages, although there is no evidence of an intent to prohibit punitive that the FDCPA does allow puni-are in fact the FDCPA statutory ped at $1000, and therefore puniamount are explicitly prohibited can describe statutory damages as do so—in two sister statutes, the [8] and the Equal Credit Opportunity y labeled the quantum of damamages as "punitive damage." On PA legislative history never refers y provided damages as "punitive istence of statutory damages up to nitive damages, and is not a reason arding punitive damages.

ence of specific federal statutory nay determine that it is within their ve damages in appropriate cases,[821]

although they may decide that punitive damages should not be awarded under certain statutes.[822] The congressional purpose in enacting the FDCPA would certainly be served by the availability of punitive damages. Congress expressly recognized that existing laws and procedures were "inadequate" to redress injuries suffered as a result of abusive collection methods.[823] In order to remedy this inadequacy, Congress, among other things, left intact state laws more protective than the Act.[824] Congress intended that the FDCPA eliminate abusive collection practices.[825] Awards of punitive damages in egregious cases further this purpose by making an example of violators, thus deterring emulation of their practices by other collectors.

Another reason for allowing punitive damages under the FDCPA is that the factors the FDCPA lists as supporting statutory damages awards do not include several of the factors that are commonly used when assessing punitive damages.[826] These common law prerequisites not adopted by the FDCPA[827] include:

- A showing of malice or recklessness on the wrongdoer's part;
- Receipt of an award of actual or nominal damages by the wrongdoer's victim; and
- Consideration of the wrongdoer's resources.[828]

As a result, FDCPA statutory damages, even if they were not capped, would not fully address the wrongfulness of the collector's conduct.

11.10.2 Fair Credit Reporting Act Punitive Damages Claims Against Debt Collectors

Simpson & Cybak, 244 Fed. Appx. 741 (7th
MRS, Inc., 368 F.3d 726, 728 (7th Cir. 2004); reporting agency. A jury awarded $623,180 in punitive damages for the debt buyer's failure to meet its FCRA reinvestigation obligations.

For more on the application of the FCRA to debt collectors and debt buyers, see § 14.6, infra. For more detail on the award of punitive damages for willful FCRA violations and for practices that violate the FCRA, see NCLC's Fair Credit Reporting.[831]

11.10.3 Punitive Damages in Supplemental State Claims

In many states, punitive damages are available under a tort or state statutory claim that is brought supplemental to the FDCPA claim or in a separate action.[832] Some state statutory claims also permit recovery of multiples of actual damages.[833] State tort claims for debt collection abuses are discussed at Chapter 15, infra, and state statutory claims are discussed at Chapter 16, infra.

Punitive damages are not available at all in some jurisdictions and available only for certain causes of action in others, but they are generally available for tortious conduct once the defendant's actual malice or wanton or willful conduct is established.[834] Although not the general rule, some state deceptive practices statutes or other state statutes also allow for punitive damages.[835] Evidence of intent is seldom established by a direct admission by the defendant; usually it must be inferred from the nature and circumstances of the misconduct. To obtain punitive damages against a corporate principal for the acts of its agents, the consumer may have to show the corporation's involvement or ratification of the acts of its agent.[836] A detailed discussion of the availability of punitive damages for tort and related claims and constitutional and other limits on their award is found in NCLC's Automobile Fraud § 8.10 (6th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

11.11 FDCPA Class Actions

11.11.1 Practical Considerations

Class actions are frequently the best method to enforce compliance with consumer protection laws because the awards in an individual case are usually too small to encourage an individual consumer to file suit.[837] Where the FDCPA action arises from the collector's standardized forms or practices, class action treatment may be appropriate.[838] numerous memoranda of law and jury instructions from several similar cases for NCLC's Consumer Law Pleadings (online with index guide).

831 Punitive damages for willful violations are discussed in National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 12.5.3.2 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

832 See, e.g., Saccameno v. U.S. Bank, 943 F.3d 1071 (7th Cir. 2019) (finding sufficient evidence of loan servicer's conscious and deliberate disregard for borrower's rights to support jury award punitive of damages for deceptive debt collection practices under Illinois Consumer Fraud Act; reducing $3 million punitive damages award to $582,000); Johnson v. McCollough, 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (upholding $60,000 in punitive damages); Stark v. Sandberg, Phoenix & von Gontard, P.C., 381 F.3d 793 (8th Cir. 2004) (upholding $6 million punitive damages awarded by arbitrator); Bahena v. Jefferson Capital Sys., L.L.C., 363 F. Supp. 3d 914 (W.D. Wis. 2019) (to recover punitive damages under Wisconsin Consumer Act, debtor need not show intent to cause injury; wanton, willful, or reckless disregard of rights of others suffices); Galle v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2018 WL 3390235 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 5, 2018) (mortgage servicers repeated falsely representations of "character, amount, or legal status" of her debt sufficient to permit award of punitive damages); Christensen v. Fin. Credit Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 9819536 (D.N.M. Aug. 10, 2016) ($10 million in punitive damages); Goodin v. Bank of Am., 114 F. Supp. 3d 1197 (M.D. Fla. 2015) ($100,000 in punitive damages); Fausto v. Credigy Serv. Corp., No. C 07-05658 JW (N.D. Cal. Apr. 3, 2009), available at www.nclc.org/unreported ($400,000 in punitive damages) (intrusion-upon-seclusion claim); Adams v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 2206936 (D. Conn. July 30, 2007); Boyce v. Attorney's Dispatch Serv., 1999 WL 33495605 (S.D. Ohio Apr. 27, 1999); Miele v. Sid Bailey, Inc., 192 B.R. 611 (S.D.N.Y. 1996); Kuhn v. Account Control Tech., Inc., 865 F. Supp. 1443 (D. Nev. 1994); Grassley v. Debt Collectors, Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22782 (D. Or. Dec. 14, 1992); Fennell v. G.A.C. Fin. Corp., 218 A.2d 492 (Md. 1966) ($35,000 punitive damages); Ellis County State Bank v. Keever, 1992 WL 379450 (Tex. App. Dec. 16, 1992) (upholding $1,535,000 punitive damages). But see Barefield v. HSBC Holdings P.L.C., 356 F. Supp. 3d 977 (E.D. Cal. 2018) (punitive damages unavailable under the Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, Cal. Civ. Code § 1788 et seq.).

833 See, e.g., Carlisle v. Nat'l Commercial Serv., Inc., 722 Fed. Appx. 864 (11th Cir. 2018).

834 Conversion is one example of such tortious conduct. See, e.g., Morales v. Kavulich & Assoc., 294 F. Supp. 3d 193 (S.D.N.Y. 2018) (where debt collection law firm attempted to collect on non-existent judgment against consumer by signing and later issuing restraining notice to consumer's bank, as well as execution with notice to garnishee, evidence presented genuine issues of material fact as to whether conduct qualified as wanton and reckless or malicious). See 2 Stein on Personal Injury Damages §§ 4.8 to 4.11 (3d ed. 1997, updated 2020).

835 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices Appx. A (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

836 Compare Household Credit Serv., Inc. v. Driscol, 989 S.W.2d 72 (Tex. App. Nov. 8, 2001) ($1,250,000 punitive damages against corporate principal), with Greenpoint Credit Corp. v. Perez, 75 S.W.3d 40 (Tex. App. 2002) (reversing jury award of $10 million punitive damages where inadequate evidence of corporate involvement).

837 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.6.2.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

838 See Phillips v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 736 F.3d 1076, 1080 (7th Cir. 2013) (filing time-barred collection suits); Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338 (7th Cir. 1997); Cox v. Sherman Capital L.L.C., 295 F.R.D. 207, 215–216 (S.D. Ind. 2013) (implicit misrepresentation that debt collectors were licensed to collect debts in Indiana); Johnson v. Midland Credit Mgmt. Inc., 2012 WL 5996391 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 29, 2012) (dunning letters); Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Brent, 2010 WL 4628593 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 4, 2010) (false affidavits of personal knowledge); Mund v. EMCC, Inc., 259 F.R.D. 180 (D. Minn. 2009); Gaalswijk-Knetzke v. Receivables Mgmt. Serv. Corp., 2008 WL 3850657 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 14, 2008); Kalish v. Karp & Kalamotousakis, L.L.P., 246 F.R.D. 461 (S.D.N.Y. 2007); Lau v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 245 F.R.D. 620 (N.D. Ill. 2007); Blarek v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 244 F.R.D. 525 (E.D. Wis. 2007); Wahl v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 243 F.R.D. 291 (N.D. Ill. 2007); Day v. Check Brokerage Corp., 240 F.R.D. 414 (N.D. Ill. 2007); Drinkman v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 4458307 (W.D. Wis. Dec. 7, 2007); Balogun v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2934886 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 5, 2007); Tedrow v. Cowles, 2007 WL 2688276 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 12, 2007); Hunt

Class actions seeking damages often require a commitment of substantial resources by the attorney (unless the class is quite small).[839] The representative party in a class action for damages in a federal court usually bears the costs of notice to the class members that a class has been certified.[840] These costs may outweigh the benefits of bringing suit if a collection agency is lightly capitalized. Care should be taken to avoid committing substantial resources to a class action for damages that ultimately cannot be recovered,[841] or that would be de minimis due to the cap on class action statutory damages (the lower of $500,000 or one percent of net worth).[842]

Low net worth should not be an issue when the defendant is a large national or regional collection agency but is likely to be a problem with small debt collection agencies because they commonly have few assets. Low net worth results in a small class action statutory damages award with proportionately smaller sums to the individual class members. A few courts may view such small recoveries as fatal to a class action and deny class action certification for lack of "superiority," while others have disagreed.[843] Limiting class size by restricting the class definition, for example including only consumers in a particular locality, or those involved in a certain type of transaction, may enhance damages per class member, thus avoiding this issue. This is discussed further at § 11.11.3.3, infra.

FDCPA class actions for actual damages are far less frequent than ones seeking statutory damages but are sometimes certified.[844] These have the advantage of not being subject to any statutory cap on total damages for the class, although collectability may still be a concern. Class actions seeking declaratory or injunctive relief have been certified as well.[845]

In order to be found adequate to represent the class, counsel inexperienced in class action litigation often should co-counsel with an experienced attorney. Co-counseling is often advisable in any event to aggregate the legal and financial resources necessary for the prosecution of a class action.[846]

When filing an FDCPA class action, consideration should be given to including claims under state law, such as an unfair and deceptive practices act or state debt collection statute. When doing so, care should be taken to comply with any applicable state statutory prefiling requirements to such suits.[847]

The FDCPA encourages private attorneys to pursue consumers' claims, but consumer attorneys may be faced with a court that only sees an FDCPA class action as lawyer-driven. A Ninth Circuit decision provides a welcome response to this view. The court found that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying certification of a small class action and in greatly reducing the hours in the consumer's lodestar attorney fee calculation. Most helpful was the court's rejection of the lower court's dim view of the class action as "attorney-driven." The court stated:

> The FDCPA is a consumer protection statute and was intended to permit, even encourage, attorneys like Lemberg to act as private attorney generals to pursue FDCPA claims. Moreover, plaintiffs have already benefitted and will continue to benefit from this case. [Defendant] Mickell admits that he has ceased his practice of sending letters to debtor's workplaces, a benefit to all class members. Furthermore, certifying the class will serve a "deterrent" component to other debt collectors who are engaging, or consider engaging in this type of debt collection tactic.[848]

11.11.2 Rule 23 Requirements for Class Certification

11.11.2.1 Generally

Most FDCPA class litigation takes place in federal court and thus class certification will be governed by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23. Even if the consumer brings the FDCPA class action in state court, the defendant is likely to remove the case to federal court because the FDCPA claim provides a basis for federal court jurisdiction.[849] But if the consumer brings a class counterclaim to a state court collection case,

v. Check Recovery Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 2220972 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 1, 2007); Jancik v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2007 WL 1994026 (D. Minn. July 3, 2007); Jones v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2003 WL 21654365 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2003); In re Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 208 F.R.D. 493 (S.D.N.Y. 2002); Ballard v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 186 F.R.D. 589 (E.D. Cal. 1999) (service charge); Harrison v. Great Springwaters of Am., Inc., 1997 WL 469996 (E.D.N.Y. June 18, 1997); Avila v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 1995 WL 55255 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 8, 1995), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222 (7th Cir. 1996). See generally § 11.11.2.2.4, Appx. E.3.2, infra.

839 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 1.3.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

840 See Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974). Cf. Hunt v. Imperial Merchant Serv., Inc., 560 F.3d 1137 (9th Cir. 2009) (shifting cost of notice in class action to defendant after consumer obtained summary judgment was not abuse of discretion). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 1.3.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

841 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 1.8 (10th ed. 2020).

For example, if survey evidence is required in the applicable jurisdiction, its high cost and the probability of success may counsel against pursuing the litigation. See Evory v. RJM Acquisitions Funding, L.L.C., 2008 WL 4890591 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 12, 2008).

842 See § 11.11.3.1, infra.

843 This subject is covered in depth at § 11.11.2.3.4, infra.

844 See § 11.11.2.3.5, infra.

845 See § 11.11.2.3.3, infra.

846 See the directory of attorneys at www.consumeradvocates.org for leads on potential co-counsel.

847 See Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 1995 WL 549088 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 11, 1995) (failure to give defendant prefiling notice of proposed UDAP class action for damages barred class certification under the Wisconsin Consumer Act), rev'd, 109 F.3d 338 (7th Cir. 1997) (notice requirement of the Wisconsin Consumer Act was procedural, not substantive; therefore Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23, which has no notice provision, applied to supplemental state class claim, which was allowed to proceed). But see Shady Grove Orthopedic Assoc. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 559 U.S. 393, 130 S. Ct. 1431, 176 L. Ed. 2d 311 (2010).

848 Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 688 F.3d 1015 (9th Cir. 2012).

849 See § 11.2.1, infra.

the action cannot be removed to federal court.[850] In any event, state court class action rules typically are similar to the federal rules. A state by state analysis of such state rules can be found in NCLC's Consumer Class Actions.[851]

More detail on certification of consumer class actions generally is found in another treatise in this series.[852] Other excellent, detailed treatises on class certifications are also available.[853]

As in any class action, the definition of the class should be carefully considered so that the class is ascertainable, not broader than necessary, and not fail-safe. A fail-safe class is one where the definition of who is included in the class is based on a conclusion that defendant acted illegally as to such class member.[854]

Although not specifically mentioned in the text of Rule 23, the class must be ascertainable through a manageable process that does not require substantial individualized analysis.[855] For example, in Johnson v. Midland Credit Management, Inc.,[856] the class was defined as all persons whose section 1692g notices were returned as undeliverable by the post office, but to whom no new or other notices were sent, notwithstanding that the defendants had obtained a current address and knew that those consumers had not received the required disclosures initially. The court was initially concerned that there was not an ascertainable class if the debt buyer's database would not identify the class members. Upon conducting a hearing and receiving expert testimony, the court determined there was in fact a feasible method to identify class members by using the information in the defendants' database to ascertain the class members.[857] In general, courts are reluctant to allow a defendant's poor record keeping to prevent certification because doing so would "undoubtedly invite[] other debt collectors to adopt similarly lax procedures as an easy end run around class action lawsuits."[858]

Moreover, it may be that all those receiving a letter are properly within a class without further analysis of the defendant's records. In Pollak v. Portfolio Recovery Associates, L.L.C.,[859] for example, the court rejected the defendant's contention that the class was overbroad or unascertainable because "mini-trials" would supposedly be necessary to determine defendant's subjective intent to proceed with litigation, as threatened in its letters sent to class members. Discovery had revealed that at the time all the letters were sent, there had as yet been no determination by an attorney that any of the accounts was ready for litigation.[860]

The most frequent challenge to the ascertainability of a proposed FDCPA class is that determining whether the debt whose collection had been sought was a consumer debt, and not a business debt, would be impossible or impracticable. The vast majority of courts have rejected this contention.[861]

850 See National Consumer Law Center, Collection Actions § 5.7.3 (4th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

851 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Appx. C (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

852 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

853 See, e.g., William Rubinstein, Alba Conte & Herbert B. Newberg, Newberg on Class Actions (5th ed. 2013).

854 See, e.g., Richards v. NewRez L.L.C., 2021 WL 1060286 (D. Md. Mar. 18, 2021) (allegations that defendant did not provide legally required notice; striking classes but permitting amendment of complaint); Usry v. Equity Experts.org L.L.C., 2018 WL 934897, at *3 (S.D. Ga. Feb. 16, 2018) (rejecting class definition that depended upon legal conclusions that, for example, illegal interest was sought), later opinion at 2020 WL 1080394 (S.D. Ga. Mar. 5, 2020) (granting class certification).

855 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 4.3 (10th ed. 2020).

856 2012 WL 5996391 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 29, 2012).

857 See also Koepplinger v. Seterus, Inc., 2020 WL 2063416, at *29 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 29, 2020) (in suit against mortgage servicer, defendant can identify which loans remained defaulted as of time of Defendant's acquisition by querying its database).

858 Rhodes v. Nat'l Collection Sys., Inc., 317 F.R.D. 579, 583 (D. Colo. 2016) ("[I]t is clear defendant has made no real effort to ascertain whether it in fact can identify any potential class members. Its suggestion that doing so would be difficult or impossible therefore rings hollow."). See also Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 2010 WL 2680147, at *3 (N.D. Ill. June 30, 2010) (class defined as all natural persons in Illinois with whom Greystone left messages that do not disclose that calls are made by debt collector was ascertainable, even though defendant did not record calls; its standard scripts did not specify inclusion of such information); Drossin v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 255 F.R.D. 608, 614–615 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (defendant's inadequate record keeping is not ground to defeat class certification for lack of numerosity). But see Hatcher v. Collecto, Inc., 2021 WL 765759 (D. Del. Feb. 26, 2021) (in suit seeking certification of class of debtors who were dunned by defendant on time-barred debt, denying certification because plaintiff failed to provide mechanism to identify which debts, in the more than 1000 identified by defendant as possibly in the class, were in fact time-barred; noting that plaintiff did not claim that defendant had or should have relevant information in its records); Ferris v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 701285, at *5 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2018) (class of consumers receiving letters that were allegedly initial communications lacking notice required by § 1692g failed commonality, because testimony from each putative class member about their communication history with defendant would likely be required).

859 285 F. Supp. 3d 812 (D.N.J. 2018).

860 Id. at 842.

861 See, e.g., Rodriguez v. Cascade Collections L.L.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d. ___, 2021 WL 1222147, at *16 (D. Utah, Mar. 31, 2021) (proving practicability of identifying members of class who had consumer debt and who therefore may share in any recovery is not required at class certification stage); Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Associates, Inc., 334 F.R.D. 326, 332–333 (S.D. Fla. 2020) (certifying class despite defendant's contention that it lacked records which would allow it to show that some class members' debts did not arise from consumer transactions); Ocampo v. GC Serv. L.P., 2018 WL 6198464, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 28, 2018) ("even though some inquiry will be necessary to determine whether a letter recipient's debt was a 'consumer debt' for the purposes of the FDCPA, this does not mean that the class is not clearly defined by objective criteria"); Qureshi v. OPS 9, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6434345 (D.N.J. Oct. 28, 2016) (ascertainability of consumer nature of debt was not bar to class certification where certain details (i.e., name of account holder, nature of check, and identity of entity receiving check) provided "objective criteria" from which class members could be ascertained, and created at least rebuttable presumption that each prospective class member's debt was consumer in nature); Luther v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2016 WL 7235509 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 28, 2016) (following Butto); Roundtree v. Bush Ross, P.A., 304 F.R.D. 644 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (whether condominium debt sought to be collected was incurred for "personal, family or household purposes" could be

If problems with the class definition are noted during the court's consideration of a motion for class certification, the court has authority to modify the definition to overcome them.[862]

The party seeking class certification also has the burden of demonstrating that all of the criteria of Rule 23(a), and also those of at least one subsection of Rule 23(b), are met, and most courts now routinely apply a "rigorous analysis" to the certification motion.[863] While subdivisions (1) and (2) of Rule 23(b) may sometimes be applicable, FDCPA class actions that predominantly seek damages must comply with Rule 23(b)(3). Sections 11.11.2.2.1 to 11.11.2.2.5, infra, discuss the Rule 23(a) requirements in detail and § 11.11.2.3.3, infra, summarizes the Rule 23(b) requirements.

11.11.2.2 Rule 23(a) Requirements

11.11.2.2.1 Introduction

No class may be certified unless it meets all four requirements of Rule 23(a): numerosity, commonality, typicality, and adequacy. These are discussed in turn below in the context of FDCPA class actions.[864] Plaintiff has the burden of establishing these elements by a preponderance of the evidence,[865] as well as showing that one of the three criteria required under Rule 23(b) is also met.

11.11.2.2.2 Numerosity

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(a)(1) requires that "the class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable." Something over one hundred members is preferable, but there is no set minimum.[866] A "[c]ourt does not need evidence of exact class size or identity of class . . . and may make common sense assumptions without the need for precise quantification of the class."[867] determined from "publicly-available homestead records, claims forms and affidavits of class members"); Gold v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 306 F.R.D. 623 (N.D. Cal. 2014) (class members may be required to submit "documentary proof of the nature of the financial obligation"; the fact that a few persons might inappropriately have been included in class does not affect how much defendant in case seeking only statutory damages must pay, so for purposes of class certification, there is no need to examine business/personal nature of each class member's debt, particularly because res judicata is not a concern with respect to individuals whose financial transactions were not incurred primarily for personal, family, or household purposes); Muzuco v. ReSubmitIt, L.L.C., 297 F.R.D. 504 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (whether transaction involved consumer item apparently could be determined by looking at face of returned check that had been dishonored, following which defendant collection agency had submitted electronic checks for bank's NSF fees, thereby allegedly violating § 1692f by imposing unlawful NSF fee and § 1692c(b) by conducting unauthorized communications with class members' banks); Butto v. Collecto Inc. 290 F.R.D. 372, 382–383 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) ("The Court does not find it particularly arduous to ask potential class members the simple question of whether the individual's debt at issue qualifies as a consumer debt . . . any disputes regarding whether a particular class member's debt is consumer or commercial can be remedied through proper drafting of the claim form, and at the damages phase of this case"); Kinder v. United Bancorp, Inc., 2012 WL 4490874, at *5 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 28, 2012) (finding that "this concern can easily be addressed when class members are identified by asking them to disclose the primary purpose of their account"); Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 1327824, at *8 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 17, 2012) (loan agreements as to which collection was sought were titled "consumer credit contract"); Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, Inc., 203 F.R.D. 271, 277 (W.D. Mich. 2001) ("While the determination of whether each check was written for personal or business purposes may take some effort, the Court does not believe that the task would be extraordinarily difficult because the nature of the check, i.e., personal or business, should indicate the type of debt."); Wilkerson v. Bowman, 200 F.R.D. 605 (N.D. Ill. 2001) ("the need to show that the transactions involved in a particular case are consumer transactions is inherent in every FDCPA class action. If that need alone precluded certification, there would be no class actions under the FDCPA"); Macarz v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 193 F.R.D. 46, 57 (D. Conn. 2000) (any disputes regarding whether particular class member's debt is commercial or consumer can be remedied through claims process). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.6.2.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

862 See, e.g., Jammeh v. HNN Assoc., 2020 WL 5407864 *9 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 9, 2020) (permitting "modest modifications to the class definition so long as the proposed modifications are minor, require no additional discovery, and cause no prejudice to defendants," even though doing so somewhat enlarged scope of class pleaded in complaint); Schultz v. Midland Credit Mgt., Inc., 2020 WL 3026531 *4 (D.N.J. June 5, 2020) ("plaintiff may amend the proposed class definition at the class certification stage"); La Caria v. Northstar Location Services, L.L.C., 2020 WL 2771185 (D. Nev., May 28, 2020) (granting certification of class with somewhat different definition than in complaint, without requiring filing of amended complaint); Ocampo v. GC Serv. L.P., 2018 WL 6198464, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 28, 2018). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Ch. 4 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

863 See Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. 338, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 2551, 180 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2011).

864 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

865 See, e.g., Reyes v. NetDeposit, L.L.C., 802 F.3d 469 (3d Cir. 2015); Levitt v. J.P. Morgan Securities, Inc., 710 F.3d 454, 465 (2d Cir. 2013).

866 See Muse v. Holloway Credit Solutions, L.L.C., 337 F.R.D. 80 (E.D. Pa. 2020) (32 members found sufficient, specifically referencing context of FDCPA action); Ocampo v. GC Serv. L.P., 2018 WL 6198464 *4 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 28, 2018) (40 is generally considered enough; good faith estimates may suffice); Lau v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 245 F.R.D. 620 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (26 members of subclass was sufficient); Binder v. Atl. Credit & Fin., Inc., 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11483 (S.D. Ind. Feb. 16, 2007) (50 similar letters); Robles v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 220 F.R.D. 306 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (102 consumers who received two collection letters); Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 216 F.R.D. 325 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (148 individuals who paid attorney fees to collector); Seidat v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2003 WL 21468625 (N.D. Ill. June 19, 2003) (statistical estimate of 50 sufficient); Parker v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 206 F.R.D. 211 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (between 39 and 97 members); Sanders v Osi Educ. Serv., 2001 WL 883608 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 3, 2001) (91 persons) Fuller v. Becker & Poliakoff, P.A., 197 F.R.D. 697 (M.D. Fla. 2000) (20 families); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 173 F.R.D. 346 (E.D.N.Y 1997) (numerosity satisfied at 40 members); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.3.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated www.nclc.org/library; William Rubinstein, Alba Conte & Herbert I Newberg, Newberg on Class Actions (5th ed. 2013). But see Cook v. Alessi & Koenig, L.L.C., 2012 WL 693036 (D. Nev. Feb. 29, 201 (denying class certification of claims based on a form collection let because no evidence of number of class members was provided).

867 Annunziato v. Collecto, Inc., 293 F.R.D. 329, (E.D.N.Y. 2013). Acc Zirogiannis v. Nat'l Recovery Agency, Inc., 2016 WL 7410 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 22, 2016).

Where a debt collection form letter is involved it is likely that it will have been distributed sufficiently broadly to meet the numerosity requirement,[868] except in an unusual case where, for example, the out-of-state collector's efforts were not usually targeted at consumers in the plaintiff's state.[869] Although numerosity may be inferred from the defendant's large annual revenues and use of a bulk mailing indicating a minimum of 200 pieces mailed,[870] some courts may find this type of showing insufficient.[871]

For this reason, it is important to try to obtain evidence of numerosity through informal discovery, such as checking court files, and then, as soon as permissible, through discovery directed to defendant.[872] Defendants sometimes contend that numerosity (as well as ascertainability or commonality) is not established because a portion of the collection efforts may have involved business debt. This issue is discussed in the context of ascertainability at § 11.11.2.1, supra, and predominance at § 11.11.2.3.4, infra.

11.11.2.2.3 Commonality

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(a)(2) requires that issues of law or fact be common to the class.[873] Defense challenges to commonality are often, in fact, arguments about whether the case has merit, and therefore are inappropriate.[874] However, the Supreme Court, in both Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes,[875] and Amgen, Inc. v. Connecticut Retirement Plans & Trust Funds,[876] has now established that courts should not simply accept the plaintiffs' allegations as true for purposes of the class certification decision; they may inquire preliminarily into the merits of plaintiff's claims as they affect any of the criteria for class certification,[877] but only insofar as the merits affect the class certification analysis.[878]

Nevertheless, in some circumstances, the overlap between consideration of the merits for class certification purposes and the ultimate disposition of the case can be substantial. For example, in Phillips v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C.,[879] plaintiff alleged that the defendant had filed time-barred suits in violation of the FDCPA. Plaintiff asserted the relevant limitations period was four years, while defendant contended it was five. The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals held that the trial court properly could have decided the applicable period because doing so would have determined the composition of the class. This in turn might have affected its evaluation of the representative's adequacy and also whether the class was sufficiently numerous to make joinder impracticable.[880] An important corollary to the view that the merits may be considered insofar as they effect the trial court's rigorous analysis of whether class certification is appropriate is that plaintiff must be permitted an adequate opportunity to conduct relevant discovery.[881]

868 See Kalkstein v. Collecto, Inc., 304 F.R.D. 114 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2015) (certifying statewide class where collection agency's letters were sent to 360 students, even though some of them might not have suffered alleged violations, because significant portion likely did so); Henderson v. Eaton, 2002 WL 10464 (E.D. La. Jan. 2, 2002); Bigalke v. Creditrust Corp., 2001 WL 1098047 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 14, 2001) (debt collector could not admit or deny request for admissions asking whether it sent 500 similar letters); Smith v. Short Term Loans, 2001 WL 127303 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 14, 2001); Swanson v. Mid Am, Inc., 186 F.R.D. 665 (M.D. Fla. 1999); Borcherding-Dittloff v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 185 F.R.D. 558 (W.D. Wis. 1999); Blair v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 1999 WL 116225 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 26, 1999), aff'd on other grounds, 181 F.3d 832 (7th Cir. 1999); Ditty v. Check Rite, Ltd., 182 F.R.D. 639 (D. Utah 1998); Sledge v. Sands, 182 F.R.D. 255 (N.D. Ill. 1998); Davis v. Suran, 1998 WL 474105 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 3, 1998); Stewart v. Slaughter, 165 F.R.D. 696 (M.D. Ga. 1996); Hall v. Nat'l Recovery Sys., 1996 WL 467512 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 1996); Keele v. Wexler, 1996 WL 124452 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 19, 1996), aff'd, 149 F.3d 589 (7th Cir. 1998) (5000 form letters). But see Jones v. Roy, 202 F.R.D. 658 (M.D. Ala. 2001) (denying class certification because most potential class members received collection letter slightly different from one plaintiff received; only about twenty people received identical letter); Deflumer v. Overton, 176 F.R.D. 55 (N.D.N.Y. 1997) (consumers failed to obtain timely discovery); Narwick v. Wexler, 901 F. Supp. 1275 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (seven percent sampling of defendants' court filings to collect debt was inadequate).

869 E.g., Kuehn v. Cadle Co., 245 F.R.D. 545 (M.D. Fla. 2007); Leyse v. Corporate Collection Serv., Inc., 2006 WL 2708451 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 18, 2006) (class involving collector making 22,000 prerecorded calls to New York not certified for failure to show number involving RCN accounts in relevant time period); Case v. Whetstone, 1998 WL 276088 (W.D. Mich. May 7, 1998); Byes v. Accelerated Cash Flow, 1997 WL 285004 (E.D. La. May 27, 1997).

870 Chapman v. Worldwide Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2005 WL 2171168 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 2005); Ingram v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 2003 WL 21982152 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 19, 2003).

871 Huntley v. Law Office of Richard Clark, P.L.L.C., 262 F.R.D. 203 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (speculation inadequate to show others received threatening calls); Fahey v. Encore Fin., 2005 WL 2739323 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 24, 2005) (general information about debt collector's volume of business was insufficient); Weiss v. Fein, Such, Kahn & Shepard, P.C., 2002 WL 449653 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 22, 2002) (speculation not enough); Edge v. C. Tech Collections, Inc., 203 F.R.D. 85 (E.D.N.Y. 2001); Wilner v. OSI Collection Serv., 198 F.R.D. 393 (S.D.N.Y. 2001).

872 See, e.g., Barnes v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2020 WL 6778013 (N.D. Ohio Nov. 17, 2020) (granting plaintiff's motion to compel answers to interrogatories asking number of recipients of allegedly illegal letter and number broken down by state); Spuhler v. STTE Collection Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 3723603 (E.D. Wis. May 1, 2017) (where plaintiff sought to compel defendant to search 152,734 letters for ones sent on behalf of three of 50–100 creditors in order to show numerosity, motion granted even though the search might take many days; plaintiff had offered to share in costs, and was ordered to do so).

873 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions §§ 10.3.2 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

874 Id.

875 564 U.S. 338, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 2551, 180 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2011).

876 568 U.S. 455, 133 S. Ct. 1184, 185 L. Ed. 2d 308 (2013).

877 568 U.S. 455, 133 S. Ct. 1184, 1194, 185 L. Ed. 2d 308 (2013). Accord Comcast v. Behrend, 569 U.S. 27, 133 S. Ct. 1426, 1432, 185 L. Ed. 2d 515 (2013) (trial court is permitted to "probe behind the pleadings before coming to rest on the certification question").

878 568 U.S. 455, 133 S. Ct. 1184, 1194–1195, 185 L. Ed. 2d 308 (2013).

879 736 F.3d 1076 (7th Cir. 2013).

880 Id., 736 F.3d at 1081 (7th Cir. 2013). Accord Rose v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2012 WL 603263 (Cal. Ct. App. 2012) (upholding denial of class certification, finding district court properly had determined the applicable statute of limitations for purposes of evaluating numerosity).

881 See, e.g., Landsman & Funk PC v. Skinder-Strauss Assoc., 640 F.3d 72, 93–94 (3d Cir. 2011) (vacating district court's orders of dismissal of consolidated TCPA class actions because "it is difficult to resolve without discovery whether there are factual issues regarding class members' business relationships with defendants or whether they consented

The Supreme Court's decision in Wal-Mart Stores Inc. v. Dukes[882] also confirmed the existing standard for evaluating commonality, but honed the analysis in a way that practitioners must take into account. While holding that "for purposes of Rule 23(a)(2) even a single common question will do,"[883] the Court also cautioned that "any competently crafted class complaint literally raises common 'questions,'" but not necessarily of the type that satisfies the rule.[884] What the Court is seeking is "a common contention . . . of such a nature that it is capable of class wide resolution—which means that determination of its truth or falsity will resolve an issue that is central to the validity of each one of the claims in one stroke."[885]

In FDCPA cases, commonality may be shown by evidence that the named plaintiff's injury resulted from the collector's routine business policy, pattern, or practice. A collector with many employees may have training materials or instructions for new employees. A collector that has many branch offices may have an operations manual or instructions for its local managers.

The names of former employees should be sought. Former employees of the collector, having little reason to protect the collector from liability, may provide evidence of its business practices.[886] At least one current collection employee should be deposed to determine the collector's business policies.

Commonality has often been satisfied in FDCPA cases by virtue of all the class members receiving the same or similar debt collection form letter.[887] Defendants typically argue that each class member must prove that they actually received the offensive letter that was mailed to them, but most courts have not accepted this argument.[888] Similarly, the fact that the class members did, or did not, pay the unlawful fee or did, or did not, owe the debt sought in the form debt collection letter does not undermine the commonality of the claim.[889] Differences in the relief sought by plaintiff and other class members is rarely problematic.[890] Commonality may be found even if not every element of the violation can be shown by resolving the common issues.[891]

Courts likewise generally reject the defense argument that there must be a determination in each case of whether the transaction was for a consumer or business purpose.[892] to the receipt of faxes"; also noting that "Discovery is necessary for the district court to conduct the 'rigorous analysis' it is tasked with at this stage, and more than speculation and supposition is needed to say that any vehicle is really superior.'" Id. at 95).

---

882 564 U.S. 338, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 180 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2011).

883 Id., 564 U.S. at 359 (internal quotations and brackets omitted).

884 Id. at 359 (internal quotations omitted).

885 Id.

886 Before any informal interviews of former employees are conducted, ethical restrictions on communications with unrepresented parties should be considered, as well as the implications of any confidentiality agreement the employee may have signed.

887 Ferris v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 701285 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2018) (certifying § 1692c class of individuals who were sent letter by debt collector seeking to collect student loan which disclosed wrong current creditor for claims, but denying for lack of commonality certification of subclass under § 1692g of individuals who received these letters as first communication, because this would require extensive analysis of individual account histories); Vincent v. Money Store, 304 F.R.D. 446 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (certifying class of 88,937 borrowers of loans owned or serviced by Money Store defendants, who received one of five or six variations of letters from law firm, prepared pursuant to firm's breach letter program); Durham v. Cont'l Cent. Credit, 2010 WL 2776088 (S.D. Cal. July 14, 2010); Harris v. D. Scott Carruthers & Assoc., 270 F.R.D. 446 (D. Neb. 2010); Stair ex rel. Smith v. Thomas & Cook, 254 F.R.D. 191 (D.N.J. 2008); Santoro v. Aargon Agency, Inc., 252 F.R.D. 675 (D. Nev. 2008); Acik v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 251 F.R.D. 332 (N.D. Ill. 2008); Gaalswijk-Knetzke v. Receivables Mgmt. Serv. Corp., 2008 WL 3850657 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 14, 2008); Fainbrun v. Southwest Credit Sys., L.P., 246 F.R.D. 128 (E.D.N.Y. 2007), decertified, 2008 WL 750550 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 18, 2008)); Vega v. Credit Bur. Enter., 2005 WL 711657 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2005); Tyrell v. Robert Kaye & Assoc., P.A., 223 F.R.D. 686 (S.D. Fla. 2004); Mendez v. M.R.S. Assoc., 2004 WL 1745779 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 3, 2004); Pleasant v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2003 WL 22175390 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 19, 2003); Weiss v. Coldata, Inc., 2003 WL 22118936 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 11, 2003); Jones v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2003 WL 21654365 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2003); Parks v. Portnoff Law Assoc., Ltd., 210 F.R.D. 146 (E.D. Pa. 2002); Oslan v. Collection Bur., 206 F.R.D. 109 (E.D. Pa. 2002); Swanson v. Mid Am, Inc., 186 F.R.D. 665 (M.D. Fla. 1999); Ballard v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 186 F.R.D. 589 (E.D. Cal. 1999); Borcherding-Dittloff v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 185 F.R.D. 558 (W.D. Wis. 1999); Ditty v. Check Rite, Ltd., 182 F.R.D. 639 (D. Utah 1998); Byes v. Telecheck Recovery Serv., Inc., 173 F.R.D. 421 (E.D. La. 1997); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 173 F.R.D. 346 (E.D.N.Y. 1997); Harrison v. Great Springwaters of Am., Inc., 1997 WL 469996 (E.D.N.Y. June 18, 1997). But cf. Agostino v. Quest Diagnostics Inc., 2010 WL 5392688 (D.N.J. Dec. 22, 2010) (commonality defeated where letters not the same).

888 See, e.g., Swanson v. Mid Am, Inc., 186 F.R.D. 665 (M.D. Fla. 1999); § 4.3.1, supra. But see Flecha v. Medicredit, Inc., 946 F.3d 762, 768 (5th Cir. 2020) (in dicta, noting concern that class members who received allegedly deceptive letter "but ignored it as junk mail or otherwise gave it no meaningful attention . . . lack a cognizable injury under Article III").

889 See Keele v. Wexler, 149 F.3d 589 (7th Cir. 1998); Kalkstein v. Collecto, Inc., 304 F.R.D. 114, 120 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2015) (even though some portion of 360-member statewide class may have entered into agreements that authorized allegedly illegal additional fees and costs sought by defendant, "somewhat time-consuming" individualized review of defendant's records was not bar to finding of commonality); Ditty v. Check Rite, Ltd., 182 F.R.D. 639 (D. Utah 1998). But see Tyrell v. Robert Kaye & Assoc., P.A., 223 F.R.D. 686 (S.D. Fla. 2004) (where claim was that defendant improperly charged attorney fees and expenses to these consumers but underlying condominium contracts differed among hundred-plus condominium associations involved, individual issues pertinent to terms of each association contract made class certification inappropriate).

890 See, e.g., Madden v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 237 F. Supp. 3d 130, 156 (S.D.N.Y. 2017).

891 Sykes v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 780 F.3d 70 (2d Cir. 2015) (allegation of fraudulently obtained state court judgments that uniformly depended on filing of false affidavits of merit satisfied commonality requirement, even though resolution of question of their falsity would not address each element of claimed violations of federal and state law; likewise for plaintiffs' allegations that defendants regularly engaged in sewer service).

892 See, e.g., Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 325 F.R.D. 608, 614 (N.D. Ind. 2018) (rejecting defendant's contention that commonality was not met because it will be necessary to determine whether each allegedly improper dunning letter sent to 39,000 class members concerned consumer debt, noting that "the need to show that the transactions involved in a particular case are consumer transactions is inherent in every FDCPA class action" and "[i]f that alone precluded

Commonality is shown where all class members had collection fees improperly added to the amount owed.[893] Federal courts also will generally deny supplemental jurisdiction over any counterclaims based on the debt against each member of the class, thus short circuiting the potential defense argument that while there may be commonality, these counterclaims raise individual issues that predominate, thus defeating certification pursuant to Rule 23(b)(3).[894]

On the other hand, commonality may not be satisfied to the extent the claim of liability is based on individual, unscripted conversations[895] or depends on individual payment histories,[896] or where there are other individualized circumstances that affect liability.[897] For example, the use of telephone obscenity by a collector may be an isolated occurrence, the routine practice of one employee (with or without employer approval), or the general policy (secret or stated) of the collector. In such a case, the commonality and typicality of the telephone calls, as opposed to the isolated receipt of obscene calls, may be resolved only through discovery.

Where the plaintiff alleges that a debt collector threatened legal action it did not intend to take but fails to show that the collector had a policy of not suing, individualized determinations have been held to defeat commonality and typicality. In this situation, "the question . . . is not only whether a consumer would perceive a particular statement as threatening legal action, but also whether such a statement is in fact true—that is, whether the creditor does indeed intend to bring suit against the debtor."[898]

Affirmative defenses raised by the defendant may create individual issues for some class members, but these generally do not defeat commonality.[899] Depending on the extent of such issues, they may or may not defeat predominance.[900]

11.11.2.2.4 Typicality

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(a)(3) requires that named plaintiffs' claims be typical of the claims of the class. Typicality is satisfied where the named plaintiff's claims arise from the same event or pattern or practices and are based on the same legal theory as the claims of the class, even if there are some differences in the claims.[901] In FDCPA class actions, the receipt of the same offensive form collection letter should certification, there would be no class actions under the FDCPA," quoting Wilkerson v. Bowman, 200 F.R.D. 605, 609 (N.D. Ill. 2001)). See also § 11.11.2.1, supra (discussing ascertainability and consumer debt), § 11.11.2.3.4, infra (discussing superiority and predominance and consumer debt).

893 Mund v. EMCC, Inc., 259 F.R.D. 180 (D. Minn. 2009).

894 See Ballard v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 186 F.R.D. 589 (E.D. Cal. 1999); Berrios v. Sprint Corp., 1998 WL 199842 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 1998). See generally § 11.11.2.3.4, infra (discussing predominance).

895 See Wesley v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 2006 WL 2794065 (E.D. Pa. Sept. 27, 2006) (refusing to certify class of consumers who had disputed their debt and debt buyer failed to inform credit reporting agencies of any disputes that did not involve fraud or true identity theft; individual issues of fact involving oral communications between debt buyer and credit reporting agencies also undermined commonality and typicality requirements).

896 Parkis v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2008 WL 94798 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2008) (denying class certification based on lack of commonality, where plaintiff alleged that debt buyer's state court lawsuits were filed against consumers beyond statute of limitations for the underlying debt, question of fact as to whether, given each specific debtor's payment history, debt was, in fact, beyond statute of limitations).

897 Drossin v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 255 F.R.D. 608, 619 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (individualized inquiries into whether collector knew debt was asserted that did not exist); Kondratick v. Beneficial Consumer Discount Co., 2006 WL 305399 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 8, 2006) (mini-trials may have been required to determine whether Beneficial failed to stop its foreclosure when it entered into mortgage reinstatement agreements with borrowers). See also Sadler v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 901479, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009) (granting amended motion for class certification where potential manual review to weed out false positives "might prove administratively burdensome, but a review for such straightforward objective criteria nevertheless remains ministerial in nature"); Rosales v. Unifund CCR Partners, 2008 WL 4976223 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 19, 2008) (would require individual inquiries to establish each affidavit false); Jenkins v. Gen. Collection Co., 2008 WL 4104677 (D. Neb. Aug. 28, 2008) (would require individual inquiries to determine whether there was written contract); Sadler v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2008 WL 2692274 (N.D. Ill. July 3, 2008) (putative class action challenging filing of time-barred collection actions; each of 12,000 accounts would have to be reviewed as to last payment date as defendant was unable to devise filters to determine this information from its records); Lee v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 522 F. Supp. 2d 945 (S.D. Ohio 2007) (whether funds in debtors' bank accounts were non-exempt is individualized question); Harrell v. Checkagain, L.L.C., 248 F.R.D. 199 (S.D. Miss. 2006) (bounced check fees involved individualized issues such as whether there was point of sale notice or an express agreement permitting such charges); Asset Acceptance, L.L.C. v. Hanson, 2009 WL 840047 (Cal. Ct. App. Apr. 1, 2009).

898 Flecha v. Medicredit, Inc., 946 F.3d 762, 766 (5th Cir. 2020).

899 See, e.g., Rizzo v. Kohn Law Firm, S.C., 2018 WL 3466935 (W.D. Wis. July 18, 2018) (speculative possibility that some class members may be judicially estopped to pursue their FDCPA claim for failure to disclose it as asset of bankruptcy estate, and then getting discharge, not ground to deny certification); Roundtree v. Bush Ross, P.A., 304 F.R.D. 644 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (certifying three classes of condominium debtors despite defenses of bankruptcy, release, and estoppel); Kalkstein v. Collecto, Inc., 304 F.R.D. 114, 2015 WL 59246 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2015). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Section § 10.6.3.7 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. But see Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 776 F.3d 567 (8th Cir. 2015) (commonality defeated by individualized issue of claim preclusion for class members who had litigated issue in state court).

900 See § 11.11.2.3.4, infra.

901 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.3.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See, e.g., Simpson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2014 WL 4652336 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 17, 2014) (despite possible minor differences in the plaintiff's status compared to other class members, certifying class with § 1692g notice and deception claims against mortgage field services company that inspects and maintains defaulted and foreclosed properties); Randolph v. Crown Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 254 F.R.D. 513 (N.D. Ill. 2008) (business-related expense charged on credit card did not destroy typicality required to certify proposed classes); Evans v. Am. Credit Sys., Inc., 222 F.R.D. 388, 394 (D. Neb. 2004); Asch v. Teller, Levit & Silvertrust, P.C., 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13160 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 27, 2001); Sanders v. Osi Educ. Serv., 2001 WL 883608 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 3, 2001); Lang v. Winston & Winston, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7480 (N.D. Ill. May 31, 2001). See also Palmer v. Stassinos, 233 F.R.D. 546 (N.D. Cal. 2006); Thomas v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2003 WL 22416169 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 21, 2003).

establish typicality.[902] That the named plaintiff did not read the letter[903] or did or did not pay the unlawful charge demanded in the letter[904] does not undermine typicality. By the same token, that some class members may not have intended to pay the underlying debt when they incurred it does not make the named plaintiff's claim atypical.[905] Nor does it matter if the named plaintiffs were not misled.[906]

Similarly, typicality is not defeated where the class representative lives in a different state from most of the class—federal rather than state law applies.[907] Nor is it defeated because plaintiff seeks to represent a class of people who may be entitled to actual damages but is himself not entitled to such damages.[908] Defenses that are unique to the class representative will not render them atypical so long as they "do not threaten to become the focus of the litigation."[909]

However, where a class action alleged the filing of time-barred debts, a class representative was found not typical where that representative's debt is not time-barred because of the tolling of the limitations period.[910] Similarly, where the plaintiff consented to the collector's written communication with his father, he may be found not typical of the class of people who did not consent to written communications.[911]

11.11.2.2.5 Adequacy of representation

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(a)(4) requires that the class representative have no interests antagonistic to the other members of the class.[912] The named plaintiff must be both interested in the case and reasonably conscientious,[913] and the class attorney must be qualified, experienced, and generally able to conduct the litigation vigorously. To show antagonistic interests, the defendant must show actual antagonism 902 See Rawson v. Source Receivables Mgmt., L.L.C., 289 F.R.D. 267 (N.D. Ill. 2013); Keele v. Wexler, 149 F.3d 589 (7th Cir. 1998); Oslan v. Collection Bur., 206 F.R.D. 109 (E.D. Pa. 2002); Vines v. Sands, 188 F.R.D. 302 (N.D. Ill. 1999); Kane v. Shapiro, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12679 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 16, 1999); Blair v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 1999 WL 116225 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 26, 1999); Wilborn v. Dun & Bradstreet Corp., 180 F.R.D. 347 (N.D. Ill. 1998); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 173 F.R.D. 346 (E.D.N.Y. 1997); Harrison v. Great Springwaters of Am., Inc., 1997 WL 469996 (E.D.N.Y. June 18, 1997); Stewart v. Slaughter, 165 F.R.D. 696 (M.D. Ga. 1996); Appx. E.3.2, infra. But see Richard v. Oak Tree Group, Inc., 2007 WL 1238899 (W.D. Mich. Apr. 27, 2007); Palmer v. Stassinos, 233 F.R.D 546 (N.D. Cal. 2006); Brider v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 1998 WL 729747 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 1998); Villari v. Performance Capital Mgmt., Inc., 1998 WL 414932 (S.D.N.Y. July 22, 1998); Case v. Whetstone, 1998 WL 276088 (W.D. Mich. May 7, 1998); Byes v. Telecheck Recovery Serv., Inc., 173 F.R.D. 421 (E.D. La. 1997); Byes v. Kelly & Kano, Inc., 1997 WL 276096 (E.D. La. May 22, 1997); Hall v. Nat'l Recovery Sys., 1996 WL 467512 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 1996); Dalton v. FMA Enter., Inc., 1996 WL 379105 (M.D. Fla. July 1, 1996); Appx. E.3.2, infra.

903 See Solberg v. Victim Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 6567072 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2018) (noting that the FDCPA requires an objective inquiry into whether the least sophisticated consumer would be misled); Passeggio v. Cosmetique, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7607 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 30, 1999). See also Talbott v. GC Serv. L.P., 191 F.R.D. 99 (W.D. Va. 2000); Nielsen v. Dickerson, 1999 WL 350649 (N.D. Ill. May 20, 1999), aff'd, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002); Harrison v. Great Springwaters of Am., Inc., 1997 WL 469996 (E.D.N.Y. June 18, 1997).

904 See Kalkstein v. Collecto, Inc., 304 F.R.D. 114, 120–121 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 5, 2015); Macarz v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 193 F.R.D. 46 (D. Conn. 2000); Irwin v. Mascott, 186 F.R.D. 567 (N.D. Cal. 1999); Clark v. Retrieval Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 185 F.R.D. 247 (N.D. Ill. 1999); Ditty v. Check Rite, Ltd., 182 F.R.D. 639 (D. Utah 1998). See also Brink v. First Credit Res., 185 F.R.D. 567 (D. Ariz. 1999); Blair v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 1999 WL 116225 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 26, 1999); Wells v. McDonough, 1998 WL 160876 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 1998). But see Whaley v. Shapiro & Kreisman, L.L.C., 2003 WL 22232911 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 16, 2003); Sandlin v. Shapiro & Fishman, 168 F.R.D. 662 (M.D. Fla. 1996) (failed to differentiate between class members who actually paid the payoff fees and those who did not).

905 See Keele v. Wexler, 149 F.3d 589 (7th Cir. 1998); Miller v. Wexler & Wexler, 1998 WL 60798 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 6, 1998).

906 See Keele v. Wexler, 149 F.3d 589 (7th Cir. 1998); Smith v. Short Term Loans, 2001 WL 127303 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 14, 2001).

907 See Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols & Clark, L.L.C., 198 F.R.D. 503 (N.D. Ill. 2001).

908 Madden v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 237 F. Supp. 3d 130, 156 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) (plaintiff who sought only statutory damages for himself adequate even though 1% of class would be entitled to actual damages); Kalkstein v. Collecto, Inc., 304 F.R.D. 114, 121 (E.D.N.Y. 2015) (plaintiff can adequately represent class members with claims for compensatory damages despite claiming only statutory damages for himself); Magee v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 535859, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2015) (rejecting argument that "Plaintiffs' claims are not typical for actual damages claims because Plaintiffs did not make any payments to PRA"); Herrera v. LCS Fin. Serv. Corp., 274 F.R.D. 666 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (plaintiff not entitled to seek actual damages may still represent class of individuals who might be entitled to receive them); Wyatt v. Creditcare, Inc., 2005 WL 2780684, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 25, 2005) (fact that class members, but not plaintiff, may be entitled to actual damages does not render his legal claims atypical of those of class); Irwin v. Mascott, 96 F. Supp. 2d 968 (N.D. Cal. 1999) (same). See Keele v. Wexler 149 F.3d 589, 593 (7th Cir. 1998) (noting that "damages recoverable for the class members' injuries may differ—some may be eligible for both actual and statutory damages, others actual damages only, and still others just statutory relief—but the fact remains that their injuries are the same.").

909 Vincent v. Money Store, 304 F.R.D. 446 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (possible waiver or estoppel arguments).

910 Richburg v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 247 F.R.D. 457 (E.D. Pa. 2008).

911 Freid v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 1547257 (D.N.J. Apr. 20, 2011).

912 See Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.3.4 (10th ed. 2020). See also Diaz v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 297 F.R.D. 42, 52 (E.D.N.Y. 2014); Acik v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 251 F.R.D. 332 (N.D. Ill. 2008) (adequate representative even where confused collection letter); Campion v. Credit Bur. Serv., Inc., 206 F.R.D. 663 (E.D. Wash. 2001); Nielsen v. Dickerson, 1999 WL 350649 (N.D. Ill. May 20, 1999) (adequate representative even though defects in named plaintiff's bankruptcy schedule), aff'd, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002). But see Richburg v. Palisades Collection L.L.C., 247 F.R.D. 457 (E.D. Pa. 2008) (in case alleging filing of time-barred debts, named plaintiff's debts were not time-barred); Perovich v. Humphrey, 1997 WL 674975 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 28, 1997) (named plaintiffs showed no monetary injury or desire to obtain monetary relief).

913 Ocampo v. GC Serv. L.P., 2018 WL 6198464, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 28, 2018) (finding class representative inadequate due to lack of interest and/or ability to prosecute the action on behalf of a class). See also Diaz v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 297 F.R.D. 42 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (class representative must submit evidence to show she has basic knowledge of lawsuit and is capable of making intelligent decisions based on her lawyer's advice).

between the name plaintiff's claims and those of the class or some other serious deficiency in the named plaintiff's ability to protect the class's interests.[914] To be an adequate representative, the named plaintiff need not: fully understand the details of the litigation,[915] have failed to bounce checks,[916] be able to pay a legal fee or advance costs,[917] have suffered actual damages from the violation even if some class members have such claims,[918] have no relationship with class

914 Grandalski v. Quest Diagnostics Inc., 767 F.3d 175 (3d Cir. 2014) (plaintiff whose rights under FDCPA have been violated by illegal dunning calls inadequate to represent class of individuals who received written demands that contained same impropriety); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81 (2d Cir. 1998) (representative inadequate where conflict between complaint and named plaintiff's deposition); Pawelczak v. Fin. Recovery Serv., Inc., 286 F.R.D. 381 (N.D. Ill. 2012) (debtor's failure to read debt collection letter is analogous to situation of debtor failing to listen to entirety of voice recording and will not bar certification of class action in FDCPA case); Dotson v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2009 WL 1559813 (E.D. Pa. June 3, 2009) (representative inadequate where not credible witness and cognitive disabilities impaired comprehension of allegedly deceptive collection letter); Mccall v. Drive Fin. Serv., L.P., 236 F.R.D. 246 (E.D. Pa. 2006) (plaintiff's fifteen-year-old armed robbery conviction did not disqualify him as adequate representative); Wanty v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2006 WL 2691076 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 19, 2006) (named plaintiff's bankruptcy had no effect on adequacy of representation); Buzoiu v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2004 WL 1505061 (E.D. Pa. June 14, 2004) (not adequate representative where not credible witness); Smith v. Short Term Loans, 2001 WL 127303 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 14, 2001) (representatives adequate despite defendant's allegation that they never intended to repay the debt); Kaczor v. TRSI, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4251 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 1999) (no evidence that representative not adequate). See also Evans v. Am. Credit Sys., Inc., 222 F.R.D. 388 (D. Neb. 2004) (representative adequate); Littledove v. JBC & Assoc., 2001 WL 42199 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2001) (refusal to accept offers of judgments for individual claims did not make the representatives inadequate); Goetsch v. Shell Oil Co., 197 F.R.D. 574 (W.D.N.C. 2000) (not adequate where repeatedly failed to properly move for class certification); Weber v. Goodman, 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22832 (E.D.N.Y. May 26, 1998) (representative adequate even where litigation strategy questioned); Hall v. Nat'l Recovery Sys., 1996 WL 467512 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 9, 1996) (representative inadequate because of low credibility). But see Wilner v. OSI Collection Serv., Inc., 201 F.R.D. 321 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (denying class certification pending additional information about the representative's qualifications).

915 Surowitz v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 383 U.S. 363, 366, 86 S. Ct. 845, 15 L. Ed. 2d 807 (1966); Rodriguez v. Cascade Collections L.L.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d. ___, 2021 WL 1222147 (D. Utah, Mar. 31, 2021) (ten chapter 13 bankruptcy filings in ten years did not render plaintiff inadequate); Schafer v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 2020 WL 4457922 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 2, 2020) (plaintiff who suffers from disability that affects her ability to think, remember, learn, and make rational decisions, but who sufficiently articulated basic understanding of her claim and had no potential conflicts of interest, found adequate); Mack v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 2020 WL 549635 *5 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 2020) (proposed representative adequate, even though she had ceded much of control of litigation to her counsel and admitted that she (1) did not receive or review any documents produced in the case, (2) did not know potential damages class could recover or whether class members had similar claims, and (3) would leave decision of whether to accept settlement offer to her attorneys, where she testified that she has reviewed complaint, letters at issue, and discovery responses with counsel, with counsel keeping her informed about progression of case; noting that under Seventh Circuit precedent, role of class representative had been recognized as nominal); Alderman v. GC Serv. L.P., 2018 WL 542455 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 19, 2018); Pawelczak v. Fin. Recovery Serv., Inc., 286 F.R.D. 381 (N.D. Ill. 2012); In re Vivendi Universal, S.A., 242 F.R.D. 76, 88 (S.D.N.Y. 2007); Bigalke v. Creditrust Corp., 2001 WL 1098047 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 14, 2001) (general knowledge and participation in discovery are sufficient to meet representativeness standard); Woodard v. Online Info. Serv., 191 F.R.D. 502 (E.D.N.C. 2000) (named plaintiff's representation by guardian did not render him inadequate); Brink v. First Credit Res., 185 F.R.D. 567 (D. Ariz. 1999); Nielsen v. Dickerson, 1999 WL 350649 (N.D. Ill. May 20, 1999), aff'd, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002); Passeggio v. Cosmetique, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7607 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 30, 1999); Blair v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 1999 WL 116225 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 26, 1999); Ditty v. Check Rite, Ltd., 182 F.R.D. 639 (D. Utah 1998); Randle v. GC Serv. L.P., 181 F.R.D. 602 (N.D. Ill. 1998); Arellano v. Etan Industr., 1998 WL 417599 (N.D. Ill. July 20, 1998); Arango v. GC Serv., L.P., 1998 WL 325257 (N.D. Ill. June 11, 1998); Weber v. Goodman, 1998 WL 1807355 (E.D.N.Y. June 1, 1998); Wells v. McDonough, 1998 WL 160876 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 1998); Harrison v. Great Springwaters of Am., Inc., 1997 WL 469996 (E.D.N.Y. June 18, 1997). But see Russell v. Forster & Garbus, L.L.P., 2020 WL 1244804, at *4–5 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 2020) (plaintiff who was litigating through his behind-the-scenes wife inadequate; plaintiff had virtually no familiarity with action and no understanding of his role as class representative); Dotson v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2009 WL 1559813 (E.D. Pa. June 3, 2009) (representative inadequate where not credible witness and cognitive disabilities impaired comprehension of allegedly deceptive collection letter); Sonmore v. CheckRite Recovery Serv., 206 F.R.D. 257(D. Minn. 2001) (in a poorly reasoned decision, finding representatives inadequate where they had already received summary judgment on their individual claims and had allegedly passed bad checks for small amounts of money); Brider v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 1998 WL 729747 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 1998) (not adequate where contradictions in deposition testimony raised); Byes v. Telecheck Recovery Serv., Inc., 173 F.R.D. 421 (E.D. La. 1997) (not adequate due to conflicts in deposition and where unaware of duties as representative); Dalton v. FMA Enter., Inc., 1996 WL 379105 (M.D. Fla. July 1, 1996) (not adequate where did not understand what claims were filed).

916 Vincent v. Money Store, 304 F.R.D. 446 (S.D.N.Y. 2015).

917 See Transworld Sys., Inc., 185 F.R.D. 558 (W.D. Wis. 1999); Blair v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 1999 WL 116225 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 26, 1999); Weber v. Goodman, 1998 WL 1807355 (E.D.N.Y. June 1, 1998) (client must advance $1); National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.3.4.4 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Kupfer v. Goodman, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7951 (E.D.N.Y. May 17, 2000) (retainer made representative responsible for pro rata share of costs); Berrios v. Sprint Corp., 1998 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22833 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 10, 1998) (contributed $1 toward litigation); Berrios v. Sprint Corp., 1998 WL 199842 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 1998) (not adequate where did not agree to bear pro rata share of expenses, estimated at $0.40); Sandlin v. Shapiro & Fishman, 168 F.R.D. 662 (M.D. Fla. 1996) (representative not adequate where lacked funds to finance class action); Dalton v. FMA Enter., Inc., 1996 WL 379105 (M.D. Fla. July 1, 1996) (not adequate where not able to pay for class notice).

918 See, e.g., Dickens v. GC Serv. L.P., 706 Fed. Appx. 529 (11th Cir. 2017) (district court abused its discretion in concluding that proposed class representative who sought only statutory damages was inadequate; any conflict was especially minimal given that class members could opt out of class); Ferris v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 701285, at *4 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2018) (plaintiff who sought only statutory damages for class not inadequate); Alderman v. GC Serv. L.P., 2018 WL 542455, at *5 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 19, 2018) (granting class certification, requiring that class notice inform putative class members that plaintiff is seeking only statutory damages and of right to opt out and pursue actual damages on their own); Manno v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Grp., counsel,[919] or have never have been a class representative in other litigation.[920] Agreeing to an individual settlement of other class claims in the case may possibly indicate inadequacy.[921]

A proposed class representative need not seek every remedy that possibly—as opposed to probably—would be sought by absent class members; minor conflicts alone are insufficient to deem a representative inadequate, particularly since "in the rare circumstance in which a class member suffered actual damages, the class member could simply opt out of the class and pursue litigation on his own."[922] They do, however, have to have standing to bring the claim.[923] On the other hand, so long as at least one named plaintiff has standing, the class may be certified regardless of whether it contains members who might themselves lack standing.[924]

To be adequate, class counsel should be competent and zealous, and have some prior class action experience[925] or associate experienced counsel on the case.[926] Rule 23(g) provides that in appointing class counsel, the court must "consider" certain criteria, including the work counsel has done in identifying or investigating potential claims in the action, their knowledge of the applicable law and the resources they can commit to representing the class. Although Rule 23(g) also permits a court to direct potential class counsel to provide information on such matters as "propose[d] terms for fees and costs,"[927] several courts have denied discovery regarding the class counsel's fee arrangement allegedly sought for evidence of the counsel's inadequacy.[928]

If a representative is found inadequate, courts usually permit substitution of another class representative.[929]

11.11.2.3 Rule 23(b) Requirements

11.11.2.3.1 Introduction

Rule 23(a) criteria for certification are prerequisites for all class actions. In addition, the class must satisfy at least one subsection of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b).

11.11.2.3.2 Rule 23(b)(1)

Consumer class actions of any kind are rarely certified under Rule 23(b)(1). Nevertheless, at least one FDCPA action has been certified under this subsection, where the court found that the prosecution of separate actions based upon the same conduct by the defendant could lead to inconsistent legal adjudications.[930]

11.11.2.3.3 Rule 23(b)(2)

Actions for declaratory or injunctive relief must meet the requirements of Rule 23(b)(2), including the requirement that any money damages must be merely incidental to the injunctive relief.[931]

Declaratory or injunctive remedies for class relief are desirable when the collector's violations are part of a pattern or practice affecting a large number of people. Requirements for certification of class actions seeking declaratory or injunctive relief are considerably less strict than those for actions primarily seeking damages. In a class action for statutory or actual damages, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(c)(2) requires notice of pendency of the action to class members, with the class bearing that cost.[932] Notice to the class of the L.L.C., 289 F.R.D. 674, 696 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (plaintiff who sought only statutory damages for the class not atypical or inadequate).

919 Foley v. Student Assistance Corp., 336 F.R.D. 445, 449–450 (E.D. Wis. 2020) (former roommate and longtime friend of proposed class counsel's wife was not so closely related to counsel as to render her unable to adequately represent class's interests).

920 Nichols v. Northland Groups, Inc., 2006 WL 897867 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2006); Murray v. Sunrise Chevrolet, Inc., 2006 WL 862886 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2006).

921 Trunzo v. Citi Mortg., 2018 WL 741422 (W.D. Pa. Feb. 7, 2018) (denying motion to dismiss FDCPA class claims, even though class representative had entered into individual settlements with two other defendants).

922 Dickens v. GC Serv. L.P., 706 Fed. Appx. 529, 536 (11th Cir. 2017) (reversing denial of class certification predicated on failure to meet adequacy and superiority requirements).

923 See, e.g., Brunett v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 982 F.3d 1067 (7th Cir. 2020) (consumer who did not have standing could not represent class members who might have standing); Wheeler v. Am. Profit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 44585 (E.D. Mo. Jan. 3, 2017) (denying certification of proposed class of persons who received collection letters falsely indicating that flat rate company was collecting debt for creditor; plaintiff lacked injury-in-fact Article III standing because, unlike some people who might be in class, he did not attempt to contact company or creditor or otherwise attempt to dispute or pay debt, nor allege that he was misled or deceived).

924 See, e.g., Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412 (D. Or. July 18, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017). Additional cases are collected in NCLC's Consumer Class Actions § 10.3.3.2.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

925 Cf. Pawelczak v. Fin. Recovery Serv., Inc., 286 F.R.D. 381 (N.D. Ill. 2012) (refusing to consider debt collector's argument that the named plaintiff's filing of eleven other lawsuits, and dismissal of class claims in seven of those suits was indicative of her inadequacy).

926 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.3.4.2 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

927 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(C)(iii).

928 See Piazza v. First Am. Title Ins. Co., 2007 WL 4287469, at *1 (D. Conn. Dec. 5, 2007); Abels v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 233 F.R.D. 645 (N.D. Cal. 2006).

929 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.3.4.8 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

930 Klewinowski v. MFP, Inc., 2013 WL 5177865, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 12, 2013) (finding requirements of Rule 23(b)(1)(A) satisfied, noting that class certification allows issue of whether "YOUR CREDITORS" letter violates FDCPA to be fully and conclusively determined and will allow defendant to concretely determine course of future conduct). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.4 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

931 Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. 338, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 2551, 180 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2011). See Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 254 F.R.D. 585 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (certifying classes for injunctive and declaratory relief); Swanson v. Mid Am, Inc., 186 F.R.D. 665 (M.D. Fla. 1999) (granting certification where monetary damages incidental to injunctive relief requested); Borcherding-Dittloff v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 185 F.R.D. 558 (W.D. Wis. 1999) (certifying class pursuant to Rule 23(b)(2)). Cf. Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, Inc., 203 F.R.D. 271 (W.D. Mich. 2001) (case not certified under Rule 23(b)(2) where certified under Rule 23(b)(3)).

932 Eisen v. Carlisle & Jacquelin, 417 U.S. 156, 94 S. Ct. 2140, 40 L. Ed. 2d 732 (1974).

pendency of a declaratory or injunctive action is not ordinarily required. The problems encountered in proving and distributing damages or identifying class members are not raised by class actions seeking declaratory or injunctive relief.[933]

The named plaintiff must be subject to the same substantial, immediate threat of irreparable injury as the class seeking the injunction. A collector's discontinuance of practices violating the FDCPA does not preclude the issuance of an injunction.[934]

The main impediment to an FDCPA class action under Rule 23(b)(2) is the uncertainty as to the availability of declaratory and, particularly, injunctive relief under the FDCPA.[935] This issue is examined at § 11.12.2, infra. Nevertheless, injunctive relief may be available under state law, particularly pursuant to state unfair and deceptive trade practices statutes.[936]

11.11.2.3.4 Rule 23(b)(3)

Rule 23(b)(3) sets out requirements for superiority, manageability, and predominance. While this section considers those requirements in the context of the FDCPA, much of the jurisprudence under other federal consumer protection statutes, such as the Fair Credit Reporting Act and the Truth in Lending Act, applies with equal force to FDCPA class actions.[937] In considering the analogous case law, care must be exercised to consider whether the variations in available statutory remedies among these several statutory schemes affects the applicability of the holding to the FDCPA context.

Superiority is not defeated because some members of the class may lack standing.[938] Where individual recoveries are too small to be pursued economically on an individual basis, an FDCPA class action will generally be superior to individual cases.[939] The absence of any other suits weighs in favor of a finding of superiority.[940] The potential for an attorney fee award in an individual action does not make individual actions superior.[941] Neither the FDCPA nor Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23 requires that the recovery per class member be significant for the class suit to go forward, and the majority of courts hold that the defendant's low net worth (with resulting low cap on statutory damages) does not defeat superiority.[942]

---

933 See Wilson v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1379246 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 29, 2002) (while class seeking damages not practical, injunctive class certified).

934 Chavez v. Northwest Collectors, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14979 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 10, 1985); Smith v. Mikell, 17 Clearinghouse Rev. 585 (N.D. Ill. 1982). But see Grassley v. Debt Collectors, Inc., 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22782 (D. Or. Dec. 14, 1992) (absent proof that collector poses ongoing threat of continued unlawful debt collection practices, denying injunctive relief pursuant to state statute).

935 See, e.g., Harris v. D. Scott Carruthers & Assoc., 270 F.R.D. 446 (D. Neb. 2010) (injunctive relief not available to class under FDCPA); Appx. E.3.4, infra.

936 See §§ 16.2.5.2.5, 16.3.8, infra.

937 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Ch. 10 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

938 Dickens v. GC Serv. L.P., 336 F. Supp. 3d 1369, 1379 (M.D. Fla. 2018) (where suit seeks statutory damages for allegedly improper debt dispute and validation letters, fact that some class members may not have opened letters was irrelevant; plaintiff's standing is sufficient).

939 Dickens v. GC Serv., L.P., 706 Fed. Appx. 529, 538 (11th Cir. 2017) ("the high likelihood of a low per-class-member recovery militates in favor of class adjudication"); Rhodes v. Enhanced Recovery Co., L.L.C., 328 F.R.D. 225, 231 (S.D. Ind. 2018) (finding superiority, noting that "given the relatively small recovery likely at issue for each consumer's claim, we are not persuaded that, even with the potential to recover attorney's fees in addition to damages, individual plaintiffs would be sufficiently incentivized to bring solo actions"); Simpson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2014 WL 4652336 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 17, 2014) (despite possible minor differences in plaintiff's status compared to other class members, certifying class with notice and deception claims against mortgage field services company that inspects and maintains defaulted and foreclosed properties); Selburg v. Virtuoso Sourcing Group, L.L.C., 2012 WL 4514152 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 29, 2012); Randolph v. Crown Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 254 F.R.D. 513, 520 (N.D. Ill. 2008); Gaalswijk-Knetzke v. Receivables Mgmt. Serv. Corp., 2008 WL 3850657, at *4–5 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 14, 2008); In re Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 208 F.R.D. 493 (S.D.N.Y. 2002). See also Aramburu v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., 361 F. Supp. 2d 21 (D. Conn. 2005). But see Thompson v. Spinelli, 2005 WL 2483376 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 5, 2005) (class not superior where court required to examine almost 5000 agreements to determine if $8 credit card processing fee was authorized).

940 See, e.g., Al v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 2018 WL 4603284, at *5 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 25, 2018).

941 Stillmock v. Weis Mkts., Inc., 385 Fed. Appx. 267 (4th Cir. 2010) (FCRA claims); Brent v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3862363 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 2011); In re Farmers Ins. Co., FCRA Litig., 2006 WL 1042450, at *11 (W.D. Okla. Apr. 13, 2006) (interpreting analogous provisions under FCRA).

942 See Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338 (7th Cir. 1997); Quinn v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 331 F.R.D. 126, 134 (N.D. Ill. 2019) (FDCPA "explicitly contemplates class actions for statutory damages, 'without regard to a minimum individual recovery'"); O'Dell v. Nat'l Recovery Agency, 291 F. Supp. 3d 687, 704 (E.D. Pa. 2018) (weighing several factors to find superiority despite defendant's purported low net worth, noting that "[c]ourts facing this issue typically hold that unless the defendant's net worth is negative, superiority is not destroyed"); Spice v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Liebsker & Moore L.L.C., 2018 WL 525723 (N.D. Ind. Jan. 24, 2018) (noting that "[t]he plain language of the FDCPA supports class certification even where individual class member recovery is likely de minimis. The statutory language provides that class damages are to be awarded 'without regard to a minimum individual recovery . . .' 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(2)(B)(ii)," citing Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338, 344 (7th Cir. 1997); Marquez v. Weinstein, Pinson & Riley, P.S., 2017 WL 4164170 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 20, 2017) (proceeding as class would further FDCPA's purpose of curbing debt collection abuses and judicial efficiency, even if class members ended up with little recovery); Spiegel v. Ashwood Fin., Inc., 2017 WL 443168, at *3 (S.D. Ind. Feb. 2, 2017) ("Even where recovery is de minimis, there is value in certifying a class to address potentially unlawful behavior that would not otherwise be addressed because the barriers to bringing suit are too high."); Tripp v. Berman & Rabin, P.A., 310 F.R.D. 499, 507 (D. Kan. 2015) ("Defendants concede, as they must, that other federal courts have held that a FDCPA class action is a superior method for adjudication, even where class members stand to recover a de minimis amount"); Magee v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 535859 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2015); Brent v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3862363(N.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 2011); Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich, 271 F.R.D. 572 (N.D. Ohio 2010) (class action superior even where each class member could recover only $3.10); Nicholas v. CMRE Fin. Servs, Inc., 2010 WL 1049935 (D.N.J. Mar. 16, 2010); Hicks v. Client Serv., Inc., 257 F.R.D. 699 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (class superior even where recovery in the range of $1 to $5 per class member); Gaalswijk-Knetzke v. Receivables Mgmt. Serv. Corp., 2008 WL 3850657 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 14, 2008) (class superior where members would receive $3.20 each); Kalish v. Karp

Similarly, the fact that a class member might receive a larger recovery in an individual action is generally held to be an insufficient reason to deny class certification.[943] Courts recognize that few class members are likely to sue for a maximum of $1000 in statutory damages, and while a class member may receive less than if they had brought an individual action, the ability to opt out of the class action and pursue an individual claim protects the individual's rights.[944]

In some circumstances, however, other factors may, weigh against a finding of superiority when the defendant has low net worth (taking into account the class size). One factor is if significant state law remedies are available in individual actions.[945] A second is if summary judgment has already been granted in favor of the plaintiff as to liability on the claim. In this situation, "the difficulty for a class member to pursue a claim individually is significantly reduced."[946]

In opposing class certification on based on the small amount of statutory damages available to a class member pursuant to the cap, the burden is on the defendants to show their limited financial ability.[947] At trial, however, the plaintiff has the & Kalamotousakis, L.L.P., 246 F.R.D. 461 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (class superior even where members would receive $2.50 each); Jancik v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2007 WL 1994026, at *11 (D. Minn. July 3, 2007) ("If it is ultimately determined that Defendant violated the FDCPA, Defendant should not be allowed to avoid paying damages simply because each individual plaintiff will receive only a small recovery."); Jordan v. Commonwealth Fin. Sys., Inc., 237 F.R.D. 132 (E.D. Pa. 2006); Abels v. JBC Legal Grp., P.C., 227 F.R.D. 541, 546–547 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (finding superiority prong met even though class members would likely receive only $0.25 per person); Macarz v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 193 F.R.D. 46, 55 (D. Conn. 2000) ("Although class members may recover smaller damages amounts than would have been the case in individual actions, the Court finds that the class action vehicle is nonetheless superior, given the remote likelihood that such individual actions actually would be brought."). See also Powers v. Credit Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 776 F.3d 567 (8th Cir. 2015) (noting low net worth and remanding for further proceedings); Scott v. Universal Fid. Corp., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13425 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 1999); Passeggio v. Cosmetique, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7607 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 30, 1999); Berrios v. Sprint Corp., 1998 WL 199842 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 1998); Duran v. Credit Bur., Inc., 93 F.R.D. 607 (D. Ariz. 1982). Cf. Campion v. Credit Bur. Serv., Inc., 206 F.R.D. 663 (E.D. Wash. 2001) (net-worth information was useful, but not determinative, in considering motion for class certification). But see Gallego v. Northland Group, Inc., 814 F.3d 123 (2d Cir. 2016) (upholding district court denial of class certification and proposed settlement on grounds of lack of superiority due to de minimis recovery—$17,500 for a class of 100,000; also noting questionable adequacy of representation where a general release of class members was agreed to even though they would recover little or no money); Gonzalez v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2015 WL 738329 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 23, 2015) (granting final approval of national injunctive relief class action settlement of some 180,000 members, but declining to certify 23(b)(3) class, noting that statutory cap on damages would have resulted in de minimis recovery); Versteeg v. Bennett, Deloney & Noyes, P.C., 271 F.R.D. 668 (D. Wyo. 2011) (class action was not superior to other means of handling FDCPA claims, where defendant debt collector had limited financial ability to pay recovery, there was little chance for recovery by individual class members if class was certified, and individual litigants would be more likely to recover under individual actions); Sonmore v. CheckRite Recovery Serv., Inc., 206 F.R.D. 257 (D. Minn. 2001) (denying class certification because class members would be entitled to recover no more than $25 per member, and the total amount of recovery may have been as low as $0.15 per class member); Kohnlenberger v. Dickinson, 1996 WL 131736, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 15, 1996) (noting that class action is not superior where defendant's net worth is "zero or less").

943 See Dickens v. GC Serv., L.P., 706 Fed. Appx. 529, 537 (11th Cir. 2017) (reversing denial of class certification predicated on adequacy and superiority grounds); Rigney v. Livingston Fin., L.L.C., 2014 WL 12625790 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 6, 2014), adopted, 2014 WL 12633494 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 6, 2014); Brent v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3862363 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 2011); Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 2011 WL 2160886 (N.D. Ill. May 27, 2011); Randolph v. Crown Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 254 F.R.D. 513 (N.D. Ill. 2008); Kalish v. Karp & Kalamotousakis, L.L.P., 246 F.R.D. 461, 464 (S.D.N.Y. 2007); Petrolito v. Arrow Fin. Serv., 221 F.R.D. 303 (D. Conn. 2004); Woolley v. Krisor & Assoc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7069 (S.D. Ind. May 15, 2000) ("include an explanation of the right to bring an individual action in the notice to the class . . . [m]oreover, class members were free to opt out of the class to pursue an individual action"); Gammon v. GC Serv. L.P., 162 F.R.D. 313, 322 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (noting "the practical reality that few individuals will pursue the filing of a federal lawsuit, with its attendant costs, when their statutory damage recovery is capped at $1,000"). But see Sonmore v. CheckRite Recovery Serv., 206 F.R.D. 257 (D. Minn. 2001) (class action was not superior, because class treatment would be detrimental to absent class members, as it would substantially limit their recovery from $1000 each in individual action to between 15 cents and $25 per class member, depending on defendant's net worth).

944 See Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338 (7th Cir. 1997); Quinn v. Specialized Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 331 F.R.D. 126, 134 (N.D. Ill. 2019); Zimmerman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 1245552, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 2013); O'Connor v. AR Res., Inc., 2012 WL 12743, at *1 (D. Conn. Jan. 4, 2012); Garland v. Cohen & Krassner, 2011 WL 6010211, at *15 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 29, 2011); Brent v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3862363 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 2011); Kalish v. Karp & Kalamotousakis, L.L.P., 246 F.R.D. 461 (S.D.N.Y. 2007); Woolley v. Krisor & Assoc., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7069 (S.D. Ind. May 15, 2000); Wilborn v. Dun & Bradstreet Corp., 180 F.R.D. 347 (N.D. Ill. 1998); Avila v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 1995 WL 55255 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 8, 1995), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222 (7th Cir. 1996). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.6.2.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

945 Vassalle v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 708 F.3d 747 (6th Cir. 2013). But see Vassalle v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2014 WL 5162380 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 14, 2014) (on remand; finding potential recoveries available to class members not so great as to render individual lawsuits superior), aff'd sub nom. Pelzer v. Vassalle, 655 Fed. Appx. 352 (6th Cir. 2016).

946 Boucher v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 2019 WL 1543988, at *5 (E.D. Wis. Apr. 9, 2019) (also noting that, in these circumstances, granting class certification would likely increase number of individual lawsuits, thus multiplying proceedings and defeating superiority).

947 Vandehey v. Client Serv., Inc., 390 F. Supp. 3d 956, 964 (E.D. Wis. 2019) (finding superiority where defendant did not submit any evidence in support of its claim of low net worth, observing that "[i]t makes sense to hold that a defendant's net worth limitation on liability in an FDCPA action is an affirmative defense on which the defendant has the burden of proof, not only because such a limitation is a matter of avoidance, but also because the defendant is in the best position to present evidence of its own net worth"); Lemire v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 256 F.R.D. 321, 331 (D. Conn. 2009) (even if Wolpoff's net worth turned out to be negative, class action was still superior to individual litigation); Harris v. D. Scott Carruthers & Assoc., 270 F.R.D. 446, 454 (D. Neb. 2010) (certifying class, finding unpersuasive defendant's evidence of negative net worth). See also Prindle v. Carrington burden of producing evidence of the debt collector's net worth to establish entitlement to class statutory damages.[948]

Courts have held that a cy pres distribution[949] could be used to make the class adjudication superior to individual cases but should be reserved for those unusual situations where victims are not identifiable, or where disbursement would be impossible or inappropriate.[950] Superiority has been found even in the context of a cy pres–only settlement, where class members will not receive any direct compensation, so long as individual litigation would otherwise be economically infeasible.[951]

The allocation of the class recovery as a cy pres award has been approved where the costs of distribution to class members would exceed the statutory damages.[952] However, in Koby v. ARS National Services, Inc.,[953] the Ninth Circuit overturned the approval of a nationwide class settlement, in part because it did not appear that the designated cy pres recipient—a San Diego veterans organization—would provide any relevant benefit to absent class members.

For the benefit of the class and because some courts express concern when the size of the recovery per class member is very small,[954] consider ways to increase the per class member statutory damages recovery—thus decreasing the likelihood that a court will find a class action inferior to individual actions. Some of these approaches are discussed at § 11.11.3.3, infra.

For a Rule 23(b)(3) class to be certified, the class action must not only be superior and manageable,[955] but common issues must predominate.[956] Prior to the Supreme Courts' 2016 and 2021 decisions restricting standing,[957] when the class claim was that the debt collector's uniform communication was misleading, predominance was usually easily established, because the same objective test—the least sophisticated consumer or an unsophisticated consumer, depending on the circuit—applied to all class members.[958] These recent Supreme Court decisions

Mortg. Serv., L.L.C., 2016 WL 4466838 M.D. Fla. Aug. 24, 2016) (finding superiority, declining to speculate as to defendant's net worth).

948 Tourgeman v. Nelson & Kennard, 900 F.3d 1105 (9th Cir. 2018) (observing that defendant had been ordered to produce, and had produced, its financial information pursuant to protective order).

949 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 14.9 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

See also the pleadings from an FDCPA class action involving a cy pres remedy, available online as companion material to this treatise.

950 See Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338 (7th Cir. 1997).

951 In re Google Referrer Header Privacy Litig., 869 F.3d 737, 742–743 (9th Cir. 2017), vacated on other grounds and remanded by Frank v. Gaos, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1041, 203 L. Ed. 2d 404 (2019).

952 Drennan v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 1997 WL 305298 (N.D. Ill. June 2, 1997).

953 Koby v. ARS Nat'l Serv., Inc., 846 F.3d 1071 (9th Cir. 2017).

954 See In re Hotel Tel. Charges, 500 F.2d 86 (9th Cir. 1974); Mund v. EMCC, Inc., 259 F.R.D. 180 (D. Minn. 2009); Fainbrun v. Southwest Credit Sys., L.P., 2008 WL 750550 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 18, 2008); Barnett v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 236 F.R.D. 307 (E.D. Tex. 2006); Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, Inc., 209 F.R.D. 392 (W.D. Mich. 2002); Sonmore v. CheckRite Recovery Serv., 206 F.R.D. 257(D. Minn. 2001).

955 The concern that the class be manageable is largely obviated when a class settlement is proposed. See Amchem Prods., Inc. v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591, 620, 117 S. Ct. 2231, 138 L. Ed 2d 689 (1997).

956 Herrera v. LCS Fin. Serv. Corp., 274 F.R.D. 666 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (common questions regarding mailing of letters to debtors with allegedly misleading information predominated); Kimball v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 2011 WL 3610129 (D. Minn. Aug. 15, 2011) (finding predominant issue of whether defendant's voicemail messages violated §§ 1692e(11) and 1692d(6)); Garo v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2011 WL 251450 (D. Ariz. Jan. 26, 2011) (common questions predominant); Bogner v. Masari Inv., L.L.C., 257 F.R.D. 529 (D. Ariz. 2009) (finding common issues predominant where collector's section 1692g(a) notice stated that any dispute must be made in writing); Castro v. Collecto, Inc., 256 F.R.D. 534 (W.D. Tex. 2009) (finding common issues predominant where dunning after limitations period had expired); Drossin v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 255 F.R.D. 608, 617 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (finding common issues predominant due to telephone messages left by collector); Sadler v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2009 WL 901479, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2009) (finding common issues predominant in part because "individuals whose debts arose from the same creditor are likely to be subject to substantially similar, if not identical, agreements"); del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 254 F.R.D. 585 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (finding superiority and common issues predominant for class of hundreds of thousands, defined as those who were mailed at least one demand letter falsely purporting to be from district attorney's office, and due to small amounts of actual damages and desirability of consistent judgments); Wahl v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 243 F.R.D. 291 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (class certified as to misrepresentations in collector's form correspondence, but subclass of those cases where collector continued to try to collect after receiving written disputes not certified, because the individual circumstances of the consumers' individual disputes would predominate). But see O'Donovan v. CashCall, Inc., 278 F.R.D. 479 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (individual issues predominated where § 1692d claim was predicated on defendant's auto dialer call volume that varied among class members); Freid v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 1547257 (D.N.J. Apr. 20, 2011) (finding lack of predominance for false sense of urgency claim where NAFS gave its employees six similar scripts to use when leaving messages, but finding question of what was actually communicated was a highly individualized matter); Lee v. Javitch, Block & Rathbone, L.L.P., 522 F. Supp. 2d 945 (S.D. Ohio 2007) (common issues not predominant where must determine if collector's attorney had reasonable basis for belief that non-exempt funds existed in debtor's bank account); Foreman v. PRA III, L.L.C., 2007 WL 704478 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 5, 2007) (common issues not predominant where plaintiff would have to prove debt buyer's practice of filing collection actions without the means to prove a particular debtor's indebtedness). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.6.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

957 TransUnion v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021); Spokeo v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

958 See, e.g., Bordeaux v. LTD Fin. Serv., L.P., 2017 WL 6619226 (D.N.J. Dec. 28, 2017) (certifying class of recipients of letter from debt collector stating that "[w]henever $600.00 or more of a debt is forgiven as a result of settling a debt for less than the balance owing, the creditor may be required to report the amount of the debt forgiven to the Internal Revenue Service on a 1099C form"); Long v. Fenton & McGarvey Law Firm, 2016 WL 7235509 (S.D. Ind. Dec. 14, 2016); Lewis v. ARS Nat'l Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 3903092 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 6, 2011) (where defendant's routine collection letters contained privacy notice that allegedly violated FDCPA, predominance requirement was clearly satisfied as least sophisticated consumer test was uniformly applicable). But see Landeros v. Pinnacle Recovery, Inc., 692 Fed. Appx. 608, 612 (11th Cir. 2017) (affirming denial of class certification of FDCPA claim that debt collector's letters misrepresented potential tax consequences of debt forgiveness; whether content was misleading as to a particular recipient depended on individual's indebtedness and intention of collector).

have, however, upended existing jurisprudence regarding letter violations, because courts now generally hold that, regardless of whether there was a violation, class members lack standing to seek redress unless they relied to their detriment on the inadequate, misleading, or false representation.[959] As one court has noted, "while some class members may be able to testify that they relied to their detriment on the contents of letters falsely threatening suit, which may be adequate to establish standing, others will not."[960] Even in those jurisdictions where consumer confusion or anxiety caused by such letters is recognized as sufficient to support standing, the same problem with individualized issues for class members would be presented.

The existence of some individual issues does not necessarily defeat predominance.[961] For example, the question of whether the debt whose collection had been sought was a consumer debt and not a business debt generally has not prevented a finding of predominance.[962] Similarly, that affirmative defenses may exist as to some class members does not necessarily defeat certification.[963] Where collection letters containing allegedly confusing language about leased equipment were sent to over 4000 Dish Network subscribers, the fact that some consumers may not have leased equipment did not prevent certification because "letter recipients simply could be asked whether they leased Dish Network equipment."[964]

In McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C.,[965] the Seventh Circuit reversed the district court's refusal to certify an FDCPA class alleging that a debt buyer's letters offering settlements on time-barred debts violated the FDCPA because of individualized issues of causation and damages. The court found the lower court's reasoning on predominance of common issues was internally inconsistent[966] and that it failed to consider bifurcation to deal with any individual causation and damages issues. Similarly, in Wheeler v. Midland Funding L.L.C.,[967] the court denied defendants' motion for summary judgment on damages for the class of consumers to whom defendants conveyed offers to settle debts without informing them that the debts were time-barred. Although consumers could have paid their debts for any number of reasons other than lack of knowledge of the statute of limitations, causation was an issue for the jury. In other putative class actions arising 959 Article III standing for FDCPA violations is discussed in § 11.15, infra.

960 Kwasniewski v. Medicredit, Inc., 2021 WL 248442 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 25, 2021) (decertifying class for lack of predominance).

961 Sykes v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 780 F.3d 70 (2d Cir. 2015) (no abuse of discretion in determination that at least five common issues predominated over concern that some damages would have to be determined on an individual basis); Dickens v. GC Serv. L.P., 336 F. Supp. 3d 1369, 1379 (M.D. Fla. 2018) (in case seeking statutory damages for allegedly improper debt dispute and validation letters, finding possibility of individualized damages not enough to defeat predominance); Madden v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 237 F. Supp. 3d 130 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) (predominance found in action claiming debt collector that purchased defaulted debts charged and attempted to collect interest higher than permitted under New York law, where most, if not all, class members' credit card agreements pointed to state with no usury cap, statutory damages under New York law were capped at $50 per person, generally applicable formula applied to class action damages under FDCPA, and only about 1% of class (485 members) would seek actual damages based on paying usurious interest, as would require individualized review); Mayfield v. Asta Funding, Inc., 95 F. Supp. 3d 685 (S.D.N.Y. 2015); Simpson v. Safeguard Props., L.L.C., 2014 WL 4652336 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 17, 2014); Muzuco v. ReSubmitIt, L.L.C., 297 F.R.D. 504 (S.D. Fla. 2013) (certifying class of consumers whose checks had been dishonored and then defendant collection agency had submitted electronic checks for bank's NSF fees, thereby allegedly violating § 1692f by imposing an unlawful NSF fee and § 1692c(b) by conducting unauthorized communications with class members' banks: "The Court does not believe that it will need to engage in significant individual inquiries about the Notice received by each class member. And, while there may be individualized evidence concerning whether Defendants in fact contacted each class members' bank, the Court does not believe that this defeats predominance. As the Court has already explained, there are numerous common questions of law, and the resolution of these questions will have a direct impact on every class member's effort to establish liability"). But see Landeros v. Pinnacle Recovery, Inc., 692 Fed. Appx. 608, 612 (11th Cir. 2017) (affirming denial of class certification of FDCPA claim that debt collector's letters misrepresented potential tax consequences of debt forgiveness; whether content was misleading as to particular recipient depended on individual's indebtedness and intention of collector); Gaisser v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2009 WL 10666810 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 2, 2009) (denying motion for class certification for filing suit on time-barred credit card debt on numerosity and variety of predominance grounds).

962 See, e.g., Viernes vs. DNF Assoc., 2020 WL 6938010 *10 (D. Haw. Nov. 23, 2020) (eventual need to determine nature of debts sought to be collected by debt buyer did not prevent finding of predominance), adopted, 2021 WL 225327 (D. Haw. Jan. 22, 2021); Norton v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 5910077 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 6, 2020) (same); Usry v. Equity Experts.org L.L.C., 2020 WL 1080394 (S.D. Ga. Mar. 5, 2020) (same); Rhodes v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 328 F.R.D. 225, 230 (S.D. Ind. 2018) (rejecting contention that determining whether debts of each of 509 putative class members arose from transactions primarily for personal, family, or household purposes would defeat predominance, noting that, "in general, commercial purchases will "frequently be readily identified by the listing of the name of the business as the purchaser," citing Haynes v. Logan Furniture Mart, Inc., 503 F.2d 1161, 1165 n.4 (7th Cir. 1974)). See also DeNicolo vs. Hertz Corp., 2021 WL 1176534, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 29, 2021) (referring to question of consumer versus business debt as more question of manageability than predominance); § 11.11.2.1, supra, discussing in the context of ascertainability ways of determining whether class members' debts arose from consumer transactions.

963 See, e.g., Vincent v. Money Store, 304 F.R.D. 446 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (affirmative defenses of waiver and estoppel); Kalkstein v. Collecto, Inc., 304 F.R.D. 114 (E.D.N.Y. 2015) (certifying 360-member statewide class where collection agency attempted to collect tuition debt that included allegedly unauthorized additional fees, even though some members may have agreed to such fees); Roundtree v. Bush Ross, P.A., 304 F.R.D. 644 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (certifying three classes of condominium debtors despite defenses of bankruptcy, release, and estoppel). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.6.3.7 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

964 Ocampo v. GC Serv. L.P., 2018 WL 6198464, at *7 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 28, 2018).

965 807 F.3d 872 (7th Cir. 2015).

966 Id. at 876 ("If, as the district court indicated, actual damages in this case are capable of ministerial determination, causation must likewise be capable of ministerial determination" since members had to prove causation to establish actual damages).

967 2020 WL 1469449 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 26, 2020).

from collection letters seeking to collect on time-barred debt, courts have split on whether determining which debts were in fact time-barred would precluded predominance.[968]

Concerns about the predominance of common issues and manageability may lead a court to deny certification of a nationwide class under some circumstances. For example, in Johnson v. Riddle, the court denied certification of a nationwide class action because certification would require the court and/or the trier of fact to examine whether the challenged conduct in imposing excessive fees on dishonored checks was permitted by the various statutory schemes of the thirty to forty states in which class members resided.[969] Moreover, where the prerequisites of predominance and superiority for Rule 23(b)(3) certification have been satisfied, the court may nevertheless deny certification unless adequate notice, as required by Rule 23(c)(2)(B), can be given.[970]

11.11.2.3.5 Special Rule 23(b)(3) considerations where class action seeks actual damages

Predominance and manageability issues may be particularly challenging when the goal is an award of actual damages, where there may need to be individual proof of actual damages to class members caused by a common violation. Many FDCPA violations produce different kinds and amounts of actual damages, depending upon the circumstances and susceptibility of each victim. Nevertheless, often the nature of the class's actual damages may be common to the class and the amounts readily determined from the collector's records, for example, where there is an illegal collection fee, or an overcharge, or legal fees incurred to defend against a time-barred action.[971]

If individual damages need be proven, the associated administrative difficulties do not necessarily preclude a class action for actual damages.[972] Solutions to such difficulties include:

- Reference to a special master or magistrate judge;[973]
- Submission of uncontested cases by affidavits to the class administrator;

968 Compare Holzman v. Malcolm S. Gerald & Assoc., Inc., 334 F.R.D. 326, 332–333 (S.D. Fla. 2020) (certifying class; noting that evidence indicated that defendants knew, or, at minimum, believed, debts were time-barred and were treating them as time-barred); Baez v. LTD Fin. Services, L.P., 2016 WL 3189133, at *5 (M.D. Fla. 2016) (granting class certification where dunning letter explicitly acknowledged that debt was time-barred, although not in legal terms, at time letter was mailed), with Riffle v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 311 F.R.D. 677, 682-84 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (plaintiff could not satisfy predominance because determining whether each class member's debt was time-barred was individualized inquiry, which would involve reviewing applicable cardholder agreements to determine when limitations period began to accrue and when it expired). See also, Hatcher v. Collecto, Inc., 2021 WL 765759 (D. Del. Feb. 26, 2021) (in suit seeking certification of class of debtors who were dunned by defendant on time-barred debt, denying certification for lack of ascertainability because plaintiff failed to provide mechanism to identify which debts in more than 1000 identified by defendant as possibly in class were in fact time-barred; noting that plaintiff did not claim that defendant had or should have relevant information in its records).

969 Johnson v. Riddle, 2007 WL 528719 (D. Utah Feb. 15, 2007).

970 Thomas v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2004 WL 727071 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 31, 2004) (approving, on resubmission following its earlier rejection, settlement class a debt buyer reporting obsolete debts to credit reporting agencies, finding that notice to class through publication including USA Today was superior method of notice than individualized mailings, recognizing that median time living at a particular residence by adults was only 4.7 years). See also Thomas v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2003 WL 22416169 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 21, 2003).

971 See Keele v. Wexler, 149 F.3d 589 (7th Cir. 1998) (illegal collection fee); Solberg v. Victim Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 6567072 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2018) (certifying FDCPA statutory damages class of California residents to whom defendants sent collection demands in connection with returned check and UCL restitution subclass for members who paid fees to defendants after receiving demands); McDonald v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 296 F.R.D. 513 (E.D. Mich. 2013) (granting class certification in § 1692e(2)(A) and § 1692f(1) challenge to defendant debt buyer's practice of unlawfully adding to its purchased accounts interest that original creditors had waived); Hamilton v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., 2007 WL 541817 (N.D. Ind. Feb. 14, 2007) (improper fees could be determined from collector's own records); Hansen v. Ticket Track, Inc., 213 F.R.D. 412 (W.D. Wash. 2003) (parking lot collection fee). See also Lowe v. Elite Recovery Solutions L.P., 2008 WL 324777 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2008) (individual action where attorney fees were incurred by consumer in defending underlying state collection action).

972 Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. 338, 362, 131 S. Ct. 2541, 180 L. Ed. 2d 374 (2011) ("individualized monetary claims belong in Rule 23(b)(3)"). See, e.g., Herrera v. JFK Med. Ctr. L.P., 648 Fed. Appx. 930 (11th Cir. 2016); Butler v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 727 F.3d 796, 801 (7th Cir. 2013) ("damages of individual class members can be readily determined in individual hearings, in settlement negotiations, or by creation of subclasses"); In re Whirlpool Corp. Front-Loading Washer Products Liab. Litig., 678 F.3d 409, 421 (6th Cir. 2012), judgment vacated, sub nom. Whirlpool Corp. v. Glazer, 569 U.S. 901, 133 S. Ct. 1722, 185 L. Ed. 2d 782 (2013), on remand, 722 F.3d 838 (6th Cir. 2013) (reaffirming earlier holding); Messner v. Northshore Univ. HealthSystem, 669 F.3d 802 (7th Cir. 2012) (collecting cases); Stillmock v. Weis Markets, Inc., 385 Fed. Appx. 267 (4th Cir. 2010) (finding common issues predominated even though statutory damages available to each class member for violations of FACTA truncation requirement would vary from $100 to $1000); Keele v. Wexler, 149 F.3d 589 (7th Cir. 1998) (illegal $12.50 collection fee); Roundtree v. Bush Ross, P.A., 304 F.R.D. 644 (M.D. Fla. 2015) (granting class certification of three classes of condominium debtors); Magee v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2015 WL 535859 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 5, 2015); Herrera v. LCS Fin. Serv. Corp., 274 F.R.D. 666, 680–681 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (granting class certification); Mund v. EMCC, Inc., 259 F.R.D. 180, 186 (D. Minn. 2009) (differences in damages suffered by individual class members did not defeat predominance); Hazelwood v. Bruck Law Offices S.C., 244 F.R.D. 523, 525 (E.D. Wis. 2007); Hunt v. Check Recovery Sys., Inc., 241 F.R.D. 505 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (Rule 23(b)(2) and (b)(3) class of all persons to whom the defendant mailed collection demand for both interest and statutory service charge on dishonored check); Brink v. First Credit Res., 185 F.R.D. 567 (D. Ariz. 1999) (statewide class approved); Peoples v. Wendover Funding, Inc., 179 F.R.D. 492 (D. Md. 1998).

973 See, e.g., Vaquero v. Ashley Furniture Industr., Inc., 824 F.3d 1150, 1155 (9th Cir. 2016) (noting that with class of about 600 members in wage and hour claim, district court could appoint special master who could hear defendant's defenses to individual claims); Beattie v. Century Tel, Inc., 511 F.3d 554 (6th Cir. 2007) (if necessary, court can bifurcate liability and damages or appoint magistrate judge or special master to preside over individual damage proceedings).

- Use of statistical estimation formulas;
- Devising subclasses; and
- Limiting the class proceeding to liability issues.[974]

Nearly all these management tools require the commitment of substantial resources by the class attorney. If the court believes that it, not counsel, is expected to shoulder the class action management burdens, it is unlikely to permit the action to proceed on behalf of a class. If there are manageability or resource problems with a class action for actual damages, counsel might consider a class action limited to statutory damages[975] or one for equitable relief, possibly with incidental monetary relief as well.[976]

11.11.3 FDCPA Class Actions for Statutory Damages

11.11.3.1 Generally

The FDCPA provides for statutory damages in class actions, in addition to actual damages, as follows:

> (a) Except as otherwise provided by this section, any debt collector who fails to comply with any provision of this subchapter with respect to any person is liable to such person in an amount equal to the sum of—
>
> * * *
>
> (2)(B) in the case of a class action, (i) such amount for each named plaintiff as could be recovered under subparagraph (A), and (ii) such amount as the court may allow for all other class members without regard to a minimum individual recovery, not to exceed the lesser of $500,000 or 1 per centum of the net worth of the debt collector;
>
> * * *
>
> (b) In determining the amount of liability in any action under subsection (a) of this section, the court shall consider, among other relevant factors—
>
> * * *
>
> (2) in any class action under subsection (a)(2)(B) of this section, the frequency and persistence of noncompliance by the debt collector, the nature of such noncompliance, the resources of the debt collector, the number of persons adversely affected, and the extent to which the debt collector's noncompliance was intentional.[977]

The maximum recovery for the class as a whole is thus the lesser of $500,000 or one percent of the net worth of the debt collector.[978] However, this limitation does not affect or include the consumer's right to also recover their attorney's out-of-pocket expenses or attorney fees.

The named FDCPA plaintiffs (the parties initiating the class action and any intervening plaintiffs) are entitled to a statutory damages award equal to the amount they would have received as individuals in an FDCPA action.[979] The individual award is not included in calculating the maximum award for the other members of the class.

The $500,000 or one percent of net worth is a maximum statutory damages award for the class. If the class consists of fewer than 500 members, the recovery per class member could exceed $1000,[980] although the court may consider the number of affected persons in deciding the appropriate size of the award.

Indeed, the court must consider various factors, quoted above from section 1692k(b)(2), in determining the exact amount of statutory damages. These factors also are patterned after TILA, but the listing of FDCPA factors omits one of the factors found in TILA: "the amount of any actual damages awarded."[981] Reference to actual damages may have been dropped because it was foreseeable that plaintiffs in many 974 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(c)(4).

975 See § 11.11.3, infra.

976 See § 11.12, infra.

977 15 U.S.C. § 1692k.

978 See Blandina v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 456704 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 2, 2015) (statutory recovery in class action limited to $500,000 per action, not per defendant); Miller v. McCalla, Raymer, Padrick, Cobb, Nichols & Clark, L.L.C., 198 F.R.D. 503 (N.D. Ill. 2001) (awarding maximum allowable statutory damages of $1000 for plaintiff and either $500,000 or 1% of collector's net worth, whichever was less, for absent class members). See also Cope v. Duggins, 203 F. Supp. 2d 650 (E.D. La. 2002) (approving class settlement requiring payment to class members of 60% of maximum net worth calculation that he defendant could be assessed).

The limitation on the amount of statutory damages the class may recover is modeled after the class action provisions of the Truth in Lending Act (TILA), although the cap in TILA actions has been increased substantially; 15 U.S.C. §§ 1640(a)(1)(B), 1640(a)(3) (TILA) (as of January 13, 2013, TILA has a $1,000,000 cap on class action statutory damage awards).

979 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(1)(B)(i).

In addition to this statutory damages award, most courts allow class representatives to receive an "incentive" payment. See, e.g., Barenbaum v. Hayt, Hayt & Landau, L.L.C., 2021 WL 120925, at *7 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 13, 2021) (approving $7800 incentive award to named plaintiff who was deposed, lost hours from work when he provided substantial assistance to counsel, and "endured the reputational risks of publicly pursuing this action about his experience with debt collection—a personal financial matter that most would prefer to keep private"); Kopchak v. United Res. Sys., 2016 WL 4138633 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 4, 2016) (in statutory damages class settlement where class members received $10.44 each, awarding named plaintiff $1000 in statutory damages plus incentive award of $1500); Alexander v. Coast Prof'l Inc., 2016 WL 972793 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 7, 2016) (awarding named plaintiff $1000 in statutory damages plus $1000 for service as class representative where class received just $9000, maximum available in light of statutory cap); Reade-Alvarez v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 237 F.R.D. 26 (E.D.N.Y. 2006) ($1000 incentive award); Gross v. Washington Mut. Bank, 2006 WL 318814 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 9, 2006) (approving $5000 incentive award). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 14.7.7 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

980 McCall v. Drive Fin. Serv., L.P., 440 F. Supp. 2d 388, 391 (E.D. Pa. 2006) ("§ 1692k(a) does not limit the share of the class award that any class member, including [plaintiff] McCall, may receive").

981 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a).

FDCPA class actions would not pursue actual damages for the class.

Yet another distinction between the TILA and the FDCPA is that TILA applies its class action statutory damages cap across a series of actions for the same violation against the same creditor.[982] That is, if three TILA class actions are brought against the same creditor for the same violation, then the statutorily capped recovery must be shared across the three class actions. The FDCPA has no such provision—the statutory damages cap applies to each separate class action.[983]

11.11.3.2 Computing One Percent of Net Worth

The FDCPA does not define "net worth" so there is some uncertainty in computing one percent of the debt collector's net worth as a cap on statutory damages.[984] Nevertheless, it is important to determine a defendant's net worth as soon as possible. Failure to obtain information regarding the defendant's net worth may eventually result in dismissal of the class claims.[985]

If the debt collector's company is publicly traded, some indication of the collector's net worth may be gleaned from financial reports prepared for investors[986] and from Edgar on the Internet.[987] In some states, financial information on a particular debt collector may be available from a state regulator or licensing agency.

If the collector is a local debt collection agency, it is likely to be either a business too small to be publicly traded or a corporate subsidiary without any publicly traded stock. In either case, the net worth may be determinable only through discovery. Discovery regarding net worth is permissible even before a class is certified as it affects the superiority factor under Rule 23(b)(3).[988]

Audited financial statements are generally the best evidence of net worth, but in their absence, profit and loss statements, income statements, balance sheet, asset valuations, and tax returns should be requested.[989] In seeking financial information about a defendant, also seek out financial reports in which the collector is likely to have stated its net worth or profits maximally (for example, reports of financial condition to a lender or investor) rather than reports tending to minimize worth and profits (for example, tax filings).[990] If the defendant seeks to settle because of allegedly low net worth, counsel should insist on confirmatory discovery, including at least documentary evidence and preferably the deposition of a corporate representative.[991]

The Seventh Circuit in Sanders v. Jackson held that "net worth," as used in the FDCPA, means the difference between assets and liabilities as determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, rather than the debt collector's fair market value.[992] This unfortunate decision 982 15 U.S.C. § 1640(a)(2)(B).

---

983 Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338, 342 (7th Cir. 1997). See also Hubbard v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 2008 WL 5384294 (S.D. Ind. Dec. 19, 2008); Nichols v. Northland Groups, Inc., 2006 WL 897867 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2006); Liles v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 231 F.R.D. 565 (S.D. Iowa 2005); Avila v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 1995 WL 55255 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 8, 1995), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222 (7th Cir. 1996).

984 See Black's Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019) ("measure of one's wealth is calculated as the excess of total assets over total liabilities"). Cf. Scott v. Universal Fid. Corp., 42 F. Supp. 2d 837 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (defendant's argument that appropriate measure of defendant's net worth was its book value was rejected because book value results in low estimations of businesses; proper measure of defendant's value was its fair market value).

985 Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Serv., Inc., 197 F. Supp. 3d 1222, 1226 (S.D. Cal. 2016) (upon hearing on motion in limine, dismissing class claims prior to trial because "Plaintiff is now without competent evidence of the Defendant's net worth and can only speculate as to this element of his claim for class statutory damages"), aff'd, Tourgeman v. Nelson & Kennard, 900 F.3d 1105 (9th Cir. 2018) (observing that defendant had been ordered to produce its financial information pursuant to protective order).

986 E.g., Standard & Poor's Corp., Standard Corp. Descriptions; Standard & Poor's Corp., Stock Reports; Moody, Bank & Finance Manual.

987 https://www.sec.gov/edgar.

988 See, e.g., Perez v. McCreary, Veselka, Bragg & Allen, P.C., 2021 WL 352433 (W.D. Tex. Feb. 2, 2021) (granting motion to compel answer to interrogatory seeking information on defendant's net worth and how it was calculated); Smith v. GC Serv., L.P., 295 F. Supp. 3d 908 (S.D. Ind. 2017) (granting motion to compel production of current audited financial statement, or, in absence of current audited statement, current profit and loss statements, income statements, balance sheet, asset valuations, and tax returns); Pavlovich v. Account Discovery Sys., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5903354 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 28, 2017) (compelling defendant to respond to discovery regarding three years of financial net worth information); Green v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc., 997 F. Supp. 2d 932 (S.D. Ind. 2014) (also noting that discovery of net worth information is necessary for meaningful settlement discussions of a putative statutory damages class action); Godson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 2013 WL 4832715, at *2 (W.D.N.Y. Sept. 11, 2013) (compelling production of tax returns and audited financial statements but not underlying materials, credit applications, etc.). See § 11.11.2.3.4, supra, regarding net worth as it affects superiority.

989 Smith v. GC Serv., L.P., 295 F. Supp. 3d 908 (S.D. Ind. 2017) (granting motion to compel production of current audited financial statement, or, in absence of current audited statement, current profit and loss statements, income statements, balance sheet, asset valuations, and tax returns). Accord Matthias v. Tate & Kirlin Associates, Inc., 465 F. Supp. 3d 878, 880 (W.D. Wis. 2020) (same, finding production of balance sheets insufficient, noting that audited financial statements are incomplete without the underlying account notes, but denying request for three years' worth of financial information).

990 See Wise v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2012 WL 1597450 (D. Conn. May 7, 2012) (granting motion to compel Consolidated Financial Statements of entities related to defendant); Mailloux v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2002 WL 246771 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 21, 2002) (plaintiff in class action was entitled to discover defendant's tax returns and other financial information relevant to statutory damage determination of defendant's net worth, notwithstanding defendant's offer to provide an affidavit of net worth, because plaintiff was entitled to examine underlying data to test defendant's calculations; granting motion to compel). See also Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 236 F.R.D. 429 (E.D. Wis. 2006) (granting motion to compel); Scott v. Universal Fid. Corp., 42 F. Supp. 2d 837 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (defendants ordered to answer discovery requests related to their net worth). But see Marshall v. Bonded Adjustment Co., 2011 WL 3882284 (E.D. Wash. Sept. 2, 2011) (granting protective order precluding discovery of information regarding collector's net worth unless and until class is certified).

991 See, e.g., Beneli v. BCA Fin. Serv., Inc., 324 F.R.D. 89 (D.N.J. 2018).

992 Sanders v. Jackson, 209 F.3d 998 (7th Cir. 2000) (goodwill is not asset to be listed on balance sheets, is not available to pay debts, and overruled a prior lower court's cogent reasoning that the sounder policy was to measure net worth based on fair market value. The book value may be meaningless and manipulated, while the fair market value is more likely to accurately value the collector's worth and result in a sufficient award to deter abusive collection activities, as intended by Congress.[993] Apart from the issue of goodwill, however, it is important to note that the Seventh Circuit in Sanders referred to "generally accepted accounting principles." For this reason, lower courts have required that underlying account notes be included in the production of audited financial statements.[994] In Annunziato v. Collecto, Inc.,[995] a district court distinguished the Seventh Circuit's decision on the ground that the defendant debt buyer in Annunziato reported "goodwill" on its balance sheet as an asset, and admitted that the "goodwill" was the result of a "series of business combinations," and therefore was properly reported as an "asset" in accordance with the principles of GAAP. Another court has stated: "I do not believe that Congress intended to allow a company to avoid a class action litigation arising under the FDCPA by presenting a balance sheet which shows that assets equal liabilities; such a demonstration is the nature of a balance sheet. I would include equity, capital stock, and goodwill into the calculation of a company's net worth for these purposes."[996]

The statute also does not specify whether the defendant's net worth is to be evaluated at the time of the violation, at the time there is a finding of liability, or at some intermediate point. In the absence of a siphoning of assets or fraudulent transfers, the evaluation may take place at the time liability is established.[997]

11.11.3.3 Increasing Each Class Member's Recovery of Statutory Damages

The consequences of the class action statutory damages cap on each class member's recovery can be diminished by limiting the size of the class, for example by defining it to include only those residing in a particular state. The FDCPA does not require the widest possible class by virtue of its cap on class statutory damages, and denial of a request to certify a statewide FDCPA class action on the ground that the class should have been nationwide has been found to be in error.[998] Defining the class as including only those residing in a particular zip code has passed muster,[999] as has limiting the class to certain telephone area codes,[1000] therefore is not factor in calculating net worth). Accord Stolicker v. Muller, Muller, Richmond, Harms, Myers & Sgroi, P.C., 2006 WL 1547274 (W.D. Mich. June 2, 2006) (following Sanders; "net worth" is limited to book value or balance sheet net worth and does not include goodwill). See also Roe v. Publishers Clearing House, Inc., 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16249 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 4, 1999).

993 Scott v. Universal Fid. Corp., 42 F. Supp. 2d 837 (N.D. Ill. 1999) (assessing class statutory damages using debt collection agency's fair market value ($1,800,000), rather than its book value ($101,353), to determine net worth was more consistent with FDCPA's purpose of deterring abusive debt collection practices without harming ethical debt collectors).

994 Matthias v. Tate & Kirlin Assoc., Inc., 465 F. Supp. 3d 878, 880 (W.D. Wis. 2020) (citing cases).

995 207 F. Supp. 3d 249, 267 (E.D.N.Y. 2016).

996 Wisneski v. Nationwide Collections, Inc., 227 F.R.D. 259, 261 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (certifying FDCPA class; rejecting debt collector's argument that superiority requirement of Rule 23(b)(3) had not been satisfied because it had net worth of zero).

997 See Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 11613279, at *4 (S.D. Cal. May 12, 2015) (holding that defendant's net worth is calculated at resolution of case, not at time of violation); Seawell v. Universal Fid. Corp., 2007 WL 1030544, at *3 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 2, 2007) (same, citing as its only authority for this proposition Bonett v. Educ. Debt Serv., 2003 WL 21658267, at *7 n.4 (E.D. Pa. 2003), where time at which net worth is determined was not contested issue).

998 Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338 (7th Cir. 1997). See Diaz v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 297 F.R.D. 42 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (nationwide certification not required); LaRocque ex rel. Spang v. TRS Recovery Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 30055 (D. Me. Jan. 2, 2013) (denying defendants' motion to expand Maine class to national class); Nichols v. Northland Groups, Inc., 2006 WL 897867 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2006) (neither FDCPA nor Rule 23 require larger class than plaintiff proposed to certify, which consisted of Illinois residents who received collection letter during three-month period after collector was previously sued for deceptive letter and when it stopped using letter); Liles v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 231 F.R.D. 565 (S.D. Iowa 2005) (certifying class consisting of persons in ten states; case alleges violations of FDCPA by check collection agency); Pleasant v. Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 2003 WL 22175390 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 19, 2003); Talbott v. GC Serv. L.P., 191 F.R.D. 99 (W.D. Va. 2000) (Rule 23(b)(3) class action limited to Virginia consumers was certified in an overshadowing case); Randle v. GC Serv. L.P., 181 F.R.D. 602 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (Rule 23(b)(3) class was limited to Illinois residents); Harrison v. Great Springwaters of Am., Inc., 1997 WL 469996 (E.D.N.Y. June 18, 1997) (classes composed of New York residents); Drennan v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 1997 WL 305298 (N.D. Ill. June 2, 1997) (limited to Minnesota); Avila v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 1995 WL 41425 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 1995) (FDCPA class consisted of certain consumers in Connecticut), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. Avila v. Rubin, 84 F.3d 222 (7th Cir. 1996); Carr v. Trans Union Corp., 1995 WL 20865 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 12, 1995) (FDCPA class of certain Pennsylvania consumers); Colbert v. Trans Union Corp., 1995 WL 20821 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 12, 1995) (FDCPA class of certain Pennsylvania residents). See also Dinaples v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5593471, at *4 (W.D. Pa. Nov. 21, 2017) (granting certification of countywide class of 264 consumers, rejecting collection agency's contention that class had been drawn to include only residents of one county, as opposed to state, was bar to class certification; "Counsel's motive to enhance the chance of some noticeable recovery by the actual injured parties is laudable, and the court will leave the proposed class definition as it stands," but noting that because statute of limitations had already expired, "Defendant's risk of being pummeled by class actions drawn from each of Pennsylvania's sixty-seven counties is nonexistent"); Beattie v. Capital One, 2006 WL 1519087 (E.D. Wis. May 30, 2006) (certifying Rule 23(b)(3) statewide class on alleged sections 1692e and 1692g letter violations); Keele v. Wexler, 1996 WL 124452 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 19, 1996) (granting motion for class certification of Colorado class).

999 O'Dell v. Nat'l Recovery Agency, 291 F. Supp. 3d 687, 705 (E.D. Pa. 2018) (FDCPA "does not cabin the number of class actions that can be pursued or prohibit the use of geographical limitations in the definition of the class").

1000 Pawelczak v. Fin. Recovery Serv., Inc., 286 F.R.D. 381 (N.D. Ill. 2012) (certifying class defined as all persons with telephone numbers in two specified area codes to whom company placed prerecorded telephone messages).

a particular municipality,[1001] or the jurisdiction of a particular Circuit Court.[1002] However, a truly artificial geographic division may cause the court to deny class certification.[1003]

FDCPA classes have also been limited in size by using other than geographic factors. For example, two separate actions were pursued against the same debt collector based on the same allegedly improper form collection letter in the same geographic area, but one class was defined as cases in which the debt collector was acting to collect on debts allegedly owed to "Creditor A," while the other class was defined as cases in which the collector was acting to collect on debts allegedly.[1004]

Another factor that can be used is the nature of the underlying debt. For example, the class can be limited just to those where the debt only involved an automobile deficiency claim or where the debt related to an automobile lease.[1005]

Time is another possible factor, such as limiting the class to those victimized during certain months of a given year as opposed to the whole year or multiple years.[1006] Similarly, it may be advisable to define the class cutoff date as sometime soon after filing of the lawsuit. This reduces the potential class size and also provides defendant a reasonable opportunity "to correct its practices while, at the same time, preventing the Defendant from paying one-percent of its net worth and obtaining a legal license to continue its allegedly unlawful conduct."[1007]

Where the defendant's net worth limits the amount of the statutory damages award to less than $500,000, the effect of this limitation sometimes can be alleviated by increasing the number of defendants.[1008] Adding defendants increases the total net worth of the defendants and thus the statutory damages recovery. Even if other defendants are only vicariously liable, the principal may be required to pay more than its agent is required to pay.[1009] Individual owner-operators are likely to be the collection employees with the most net worth and may be liable under a theory of joint venture, conspiracy, or ratification even if they did not commit the violation themselves and are shielded from respondeat superior by a corporate veil.[1010] In some instances, the corporate veil may be pierced.[1011] The parent corporation of a subsidiary collector might be joined to increase the net worth available for class recovery.[1012]

Supplemental state claims for class statutory damages under a state debt collection act or a state consumer protection act generally are not be subject to a net worth limitation. Such claims thus may provide a method for expanding the monetary relief to the consumer class.[1013]

1001 Hassine v. Simon's Agency, Inc., 2021 WL 2646990 (D.N.J. Apr. 29, 2021) (collecting cases).

1002 Bitzko v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2020 WL 8620130 (N.D.N.Y. Nov. 4, 2020) (granting joint motion to modify previously certified nationwide class to just members within Second Circuit Court of Appeals, in light of likelihood that individual payments for nationwide class would not be practical due to size of class and defendant's net worth).

1003 Wenig v. Messerli & Kramer P.A., 2013 WL 1176062 (D. Minn. Mar. 21, 2013) (proposed FDCPA class limited to one county where small fraction of alleged violations occurred deemed inefficient and not superior, and therefore certification denied); Campos v. W. Dental Serv., Inc., 404 F. Supp. 2d 1164 (N.D. Cal. 2005) (denying class certification without prejudice, countywide class was not "superior").

1004 Guevarra v. Progressive Fin. Serv., Inc., 497 F. Supp. 2d 1090, 1092 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (noting that FDCPA class action liability provision creates "mis-incentives" to class counsel to file multiple sub-class actions to skirt one percent of net worth recovery cap applicable per action, but concluding that "any remedy to this situation lies with Congress," and therefore declining to refer class counsel's "ethically questionable behavior" to state bar or court standing committee on professional conduct). But see Abels v. JBC Legal Group, P.C., 2005 WL 3839309 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2005) (refusing consumer's request to further limit certified class of California consumers to consumers who had written check to two particular merchants in order to greatly reduce size of class making it more manageable); Nance v. Lawrence Friedman, P.C., 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2721 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 22, 2000) (denying consumer's motion to redefine class more narrowly to encompass only the members which had originally dealt with two of the creditors for which collection firm collected, so that class members would number fewer than 2500 rather than 25,000; difference between a $1 recovery and a $10 recovery was not too little to be material; individual class members could opt out after reading class notice if they preferred to pursue their individual claim).

1005 E.g., Vaughn v. CSC Credit Serv., Inc., 1995 WL 51402 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 3, 1995) (limited class to consumers who received collection letter concerning deficiency claims on automobile contracts); Beasley v. Blatt, 1994 WL 362185 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 1994) (persons who received form documents in connection with automobile leases).

1006 McCurdy v. Prof'l Credit Serv., 2016 WL 5853721 (D. Or. Oct. 3, 2016) (approving class limited to one month where one-year class would have included 234,000 individuals).

1007 Diaz v. Residential Credit Solutions, Inc., 297 F.R.D. 42, 53 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (denying certification due to insufficient showing of proposed class representative's adequacy).

1008 See § 11.4.4, supra. See, e.g., Janetos v. Fulton Friedman & Gullace, L.L.P., 2016 WL 7240750, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 15, 2016) (in class action against debt buyer and its attorneys based on actions of attorney, FDCPA applies to "any" debt collector, so net worth of multiple collectors is properly considered notwithstanding "the nature of their respective roles in the offense"; "if Asset Acceptance were permitted to hide behind Fulton's insolvency, it would be encouraged to outsource unethical debt collection practices to judgment-proof debt collectors like Fulton"). See also Palmer v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2016 WL 2348704, at *8 (M.D. Fla. May 4, 2016) (denying preliminary approval of proposed class settlement in part because settlement allowed debt buyer to avoid liability equal to that of collection agency: "Allowing [the debt buyer] to not pay anything despite its equal exposure would be patently unfair to the class, who should benefit from [the debt buyer's] substantially higher net worth.").

1009 Green v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt., Inc. 997 F. Supp. 2d 932, 937 (S.D. Ind. 2014) (compelling class action defendants, including those whose exposure might be based only upon vicarious liability, to respond to discovery establishing their net worth, noting that it is "appropriate to apply the FDCPA's damages cap individually to each relevant Defendant").

1010 See also Brujis v. Shaw, 876 F. Supp. 975 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (fiduciary shield doctrine did not apply where employee had power to decide what was to be done and chose to commit acts that subjected him to long-arm jurisdiction).

1011 See § 11.4.4.2, supra.

1012 See § 11.4.4.2, supra.

1013 See Mace v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 109 F.3d 338 (7th Cir. 1997) (supplementary state class claim allowed to proceed); § 11.2.4, supra; §§ 16.2, 16.3, infra.

11.11.3.4 Factors Affecting Amount of Class Statutory Damages Award

Once a court considers the debt collector's net worth and determines the maximum amount of class statutory damages, it must consider the six factors listed in the FDCPA to decide whether the maximum recovery or some lesser amount is appropriate. The statutory factors are:

- The frequency of the debt collector's noncompliance;[1014]
- The persistence of its noncompliance;
- The nature of its noncompliance;
- The debt collector's resources;
- The number of persons adversely affected; and
- The extent to which the debt collector's noncompliance was intentional.[1015]

The trier of fact determining these issues may be either a judge or a jury, and may also consider other factors in arriving at a suitable award, but is not required to do so.

11.11.4 Defense Tactics in Class Actions

11.11.4.1 Generally

While new defense tactics continually arise, two long-standing and frequent strategies to attempt to derail class actions are: (1) to make offers of settlement or judgment to the class representatives individually prior to certification of the class in the hope of mooting their claim and (2) to file counterclaims. These topics, as well as the less frequent maneuver of seeking a ruling on the merits prior to class certification, are discussed immediately below. Offers of judgment or settlement in the context of individual actions are discussed at § 11.7, supra.

11.11.4.2 Offers of Judgment or Settlement

Prior to a 2016 Supreme Court decision, debt collectors used to make what is known as a "pickoff" attempt by submitting an offer of judgment to the named individual plaintiff pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 68, or by making an offer of settlement, and then move to dismiss the individual and class action as moot even if the offer was not accepted.[1016] At least when the offer is not accepted, this tactic was completely undermined by Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, a Telephone Consumer Protection Act case where the Supreme Court held that "an unaccepted settlement offer has no force. Like other unaccepted contract offers, it creates no lasting right or obligation. With the offer off the table, and the defendant's continuing denial of liability, adversity between the parties persists."[1017]

There remains uncertainty as to how Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez will affect class action mootness doctrine. On the one hand, the Court seems to have left a door open to a possible defense strategy to avoid class action remedies:

> We need not, and do not, now decide whether the result would be different if a defendant deposits the full amount of the plaintiff's individual claim in an account payable to the plaintiff, and the court then enters judgment for the plaintiff in that amount. That question is appropriately reserved for a case in which it is not hypothetical.[1018]

In Conway v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc.,[1019] the Sixth Circuit came close to addressing this hypothetical when it concluded that the defendant's unaccepted offer of judgment—unaccompanied by payment—does not moot the case, despite the fact that the lower court erroneously entered judgment for the plaintiff who rejected the offer.

On the other hand, while the Supreme Court in Campbell-Ewald did not explicitly invoke the purposes of Rule 23 or the idea of "relation back" and claims evading review, it did express similar concerns about the power that allowing the pick-off strategy would give defendants to cut off class wide liability, referring to the offer of individual relief to proposed class representatives as a "strategy" and a "gambit" and observing that "Campbell sought to avoid a potential adverse decision, one that could expose it to damages a thousand-fold larger than the bid Gomez declined to accept."[1020] The majority decried such efforts as an effort to "place the defendant in the driver's seat."[1021]

In the aftermath of Campbell-Ewald, several district courts have looked to the majority's statement—that "a would-be class representative with a live claim of her own must be accorded a fair opportunity to show that certification is warranted"[1022]—to reject the contention that unaccepted tenders 1014 A single mass mailing of a letter that violated § 1692g falls within the scope of "frequency"; repetition of the conduct is not required. Hernandez v. Guglielmo, 977 F. Supp. 2d 1054 (D. Nev. 2013).

1015 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(b)(2).

As to the last factor, see, e.g., Zimmerman v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 1245552 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 2013) ($350,000 in statutory damages for class awarded and deemed to be sufficient to deter large debt collection company from future abusive practices; amount also reflected egregious nature of what court concluded was intentional misconduct).

1016 See Mavris v. RSI Enter. Inc., 303 F.R.D. 561 (D. Ariz. 2014) (granting motion to declare offer of judgment ineffective, noting that "picking off" class representatives with paltry sums, thereby leaving other putative class members in the lurch, is abuse of Federal Rules that is designed to do nothing more than frustrate class actions).

1017 577 U.S. 153, 156, 136 S. Ct. 663 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016).

1018 Id., 577 U.S. at 165.

1019 840 F.3d 333 (6th Cir. 2016). See Thompson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 11612284 (E.D. Ky. May 22, 2017) (declining to dismiss as moot FDCPA claims based on offer to deposit in court complete amount of individual relief where plaintiff did not yet have fair opportunity to pursue class certification).

1020 Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, 577 U.S. 153, 165, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016).

1021 Id. 577 U.S. at 165. See also Macy v. GC Serv. L.P., 2016 WL 5661525 (W.D. Ky. Sept. 29, 2016) (where picking off named plaintiff is suspected, court may declare offer of judgment ineffective; plaintiffs should not be forced to choose between accepting offer of judgment and abandoning interests of class on the one hand, and rejecting offer and bearing risk of substantial litigation costs on the other).

1022 Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, 577 U.S. 153, 165, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016).

of payment or judgment prevent the plaintiff from proceeding to class certification.[1023] This subject is addressed in National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 7.3.2.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at library.nclc.org.

Where an offer of judgment is accepted by a putative class representative, the case does not become moot prior to entry of judgment.[1024] The plaintiff should therefore have an opportunity to move to substitute a new plaintiff with the same claim.[1025] However, if the individual settlement allows judgment to be entered in the plaintiff's favor as to all counts of his complaint, and plaintiff does not reserve any right to pursue class claims on appeal, plaintiff has waived any further interest in the class claims and they are moot.[1026]

11.11.4.3 Counterclaims by Defendants

Another defense tactic is to file counterclaims for the balance of the underlying debt against the named plaintiffs and the other members of the class.[1027] This tactic generally fails to defeat class certification as it conflicts with the purposes of the FDCPA.[1028] The court may also reject supplementary jurisdiction over the state law cause of action.[1029]

11.11.4.4 Defense Requests to Consider Merits First

It is generally accepted that the best practice is for the court to decide class certification before considering the merits.[1030] Nevertheless, defendants have sometimes convinced courts to exercise their discretion to consider the merits of the case prior to determining whether to certify a class. These courts have stayed a ruling on the class certification until resolution of liability, despite plaintiffs' pleas that bifurcation would cause some inefficiencies in discovery and require them to develop expensive expert testimony earlier than planned.[1031]

However, by requesting such sequencing, the defendant has voluntarily assumed the risk of what is known as "one way intervention." If it loses on the merits, that ruling will be binding when the class is certified. But if the defendant wins on the merits prior to class certification, this ruling will be binding only on the class representative, and not on others who might wish to bring a similar action.

11.11.5 Discovery

Defendant may be required to spend an extensive amount of time responding to a request for documents, so long as the burden of doing so does not exceed the benefit of production of the data.[1032] Pre-certification discovery seeking evidence necessary to meet the prerequisites of Rule 23, such as numerosity, is generally permissible.[1033] If defendant would have to review an extensive set of documents to comply with the production request, sampling may be ordered.[1034]

11.11.6 Class Settlements

If a class has not yet been certified on contested motion, but a class wide settlement is presented to the court for approval, the court must first determine whether the prerequisites for certification have been met, even though defendant has agreed that certification will not be contested. The requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23 are discussed at § 11.11.2, supra; the only Rule 23 requirement not applicable in the settlement context is manageability, for the proposal is that there be no trial.

The procedures to gain court approval of proposed settlements are set forth in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(e).[1035] An injunction may be issued against other FDCPA and similar actions relating to the same claims against the same debt 1023 See, e.g., Ung v. Universal Acceptance Corp., 190 F. Supp. 3d 855 (D. Minn. 2016). See also Webster v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 414 F. Supp. 3d 1198 (S.D. IN Oct. 21, 2019) (rejecting Rule 68 Offer of Judgment does not moot plaintiff's claims).

1024 Sanders v. Houslanger & Assoc., 2018 WL 6444922 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 5, 2018) (denying certification for interlocutory appeal of order granting leave to amend complaint to add party after original plaintiffs accepted offer of judgment).

1025 See, e.g., Timlick v. Nat'l Enter. Sys., Inc., 247 Cal. Rptr. 3d 575 (Cal. Ct. App. 2019) (after involuntary receipt of relief by named plaintiff in putative class action that cured Rosenthal Act violation, trial court should have allowed opportunity to amend complaint to redefine class or to add additional representatives, and if these failed, should not dismiss without giving notice to members of the putative class), as modified (June 21, 2019).

1026 McClain v. Hanna, 949 F.3d 266 (6th Cir. 2020).

1027 See Jones v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 358 F.3d 205 (2d Cir. 2004). See also § 12.8, infra.

1028 See § 12.8, infra.

1029 See § 11.2.4, supra.

1030 See, e.g., Al v. Van Ru Credit Corp., 2018 WL 4603284, at *5 (E.D. Wis. Sept. 25, 2018).

1031 Stavroff v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2005 WL 6329149 (N.D. Ind. June 8, 2005); Sheets v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8439 (N.D. Ind. May 9, 2005). See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 11.1.5 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (sequencing liability motions and class certification).

1032 Spuhler v. STTE Collection Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 3723603 (E.D. Wis. May 1, 2017) (where plaintiff sought to compel defendant to search 152,734 letters for ones sent on behalf of three of 50–100 creditors in order to show numerosity, motion granted even though the search might take many days; plaintiff had offered to share in costs, and was ordered to do so).

1033 See, e.g., Dupres v. Houslanger & Assoc., 2021 WL 2373737, at *2 (E.D.N.Y. June 9, 2021) (citing cases).

1034 See, e.g., Dupres v. Houslanger & Assoc., 2021 WL 2373737, at *3 (E.D.N.Y. June 9, 2021) (ordering 10% sample of one set of documents and 5% sample of another, because defendant would be required to engage in time-consuming privilege review).

1035 See generally National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Ch. 14 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

If certification of the class has been denied, Rule 23(e) is inapplicable and the case may be dismissed or settled without court approval. However, acceptance of a settlement offer following denial of certification may negate the named plaintiffs' ability to appeal that denial, while acceptance of a Rule 68 offer of judgment following such denial will not. See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 12.4 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

collector to ensure the adequacy and enforceability of the proposed class action settlement.[1036]

The touchstone for approval of a class action settlement is a determination that it is fair, adequate, and reasonable. In evaluating a class action settlement for approval, the court determines whether the proposed settlement discloses grounds to doubt its fairness or other deficiencies, such as unduly preferential treatment of the class representatives or segments of the class, or excessive compensation of attorneys, and whether the class recovery appears to fall within the range of reasonableness, given the merits of the claim and potential damages.[1037]

This range of reasonableness though can be quite wide. On the one hand, relief could include forgiving all of the class members' debts which were the subject of an allegedly offensive collection letter and clearing their credit reports.[1038] On the other hand, the recovery may be modest; settlement distributions of less than $10 per class member have been approved.[1039]

One hallmark of a settlement that is unfair to class members is a release that goes beyond the issues certified or releases class damages or rights without payment of adequate compensation.[1040] For example, in Vassalle v. Midland Funding L.L.C.,[1041] the Sixth Circuit reversed as inadequate the district court's approval of a nationwide FDCPA settlement affecting 1.44 million victims of Midland's "predatory practices" in using robo-signed affidavits to obtain state court collection judgments. The court did so for four reasons, each of which was an independent ground to overturn the settlement.[1042]

The first was unfairness, that the named plaintiffs received "preferential treatment," while the relief provided to the unnamed class members was "perfunctory at best." The named plaintiffs were exonerated of debts owed to Midland. In contrast, the settlement prevented the unnamed class members from invoking Midland's use of false affidavits against Midland in any other lawsuit, "virtually assuring that Midland will be able to collect on these debts" which are generally for hundreds to thousands of dollars, yet class members who 1036 See Liles v. Del Campo v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., Inc., 350 F.3d 742 (8th Cir. 2003) (injunction stopping all related proceedings in other federal courts was upheld on appeal brought pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1292 to prevent further draining of the limited settlement fund); Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Brent, 2011 WL 1882507, at *2 (N.D. Ohio May 17, 2011) (denying motion to dissolve preliminary injunction).

1037 See, e.g., Godson v. Eltman, Eltman, & Cooper, P.C., 328 F.R.D. 35 (W.D.N.Y. 2018) (final approval granted to settlement of $688 to each of 247 class members who were sent allegedly unlawful letter, with remaining funds to cy pres recipient, and award of $350,000 in attorney fees, including 1.58 multiplier); Rhodes v. Nat'l Collection Sys., Inc., 2018 WL 2214649 (D. Colo. May 11, 2018) (in case alleging improper voicemail messages, granting final approval to claims-made class settlement providing fund of $8000 for approximately 4000 class members; rejecting defendant's contention that recovery of otherwise reasonable and proper attorney fees is prohibited simply because billing attorney did not appear of record); Babcock v. C. Tech Collections, Inc., 2017 WL 1155767 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 27, 2017) (granting final approval to $90,726 settlement of claims-made actual and statutory damages classes alleging violations predicated on defendant's imposition of unauthorized fee for credit card payments; separately negotiated attorney fees and costs also awarded); Palmer v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2016 WL 2348704 (M.D. Fla. May 4, 2016) (denying preliminary approval of proposed class settlement in FDCPA case as unfair for two reasons: (1) parties severely discounted consumer's likelihood of success on merits and (2) settlement allowed debt buyer to avoid liability equal to that of collection agency); Rawson v. Source Receivables Mgmt., L.L.C., 235 F. Supp. 3d 1014, 1021, 1022 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (denying proposed class settlement of three separate, unconsolidated cases due to number of ways in which "class members seem to get the short end of the stick in this proposed settlement," such as drastically reduced potential statutory damage award to smallest of three classes, also noting that while proposed class release did not cover actual damages, this was "Pyrrhic victory"); Aramburu v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 1086938 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 22, 2009); Ayzelman v. Statewide Credit Serv. Corp., 242 F.R.D. 23 (E.D.N.Y. 2007); Beattie v. The Westmoreland Agency, 2007 WL 2436817 (E.D. Wis. Aug. 22, 2007) (granting final approval of FDCPA class action settlement with class receiving $140,000, $110,000 for attorney fees and expenses, and any undistributed monies to go to Milwaukee Legal Aid Soc'y as cy pres remedy); Orloff v. Syndicated Office Sys., Inc., 2004 WL 870691 (E.D. Pa. Apr. 22, 2004); Parks v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 243 F. Supp. 2d 244 (E.D. Pa. 2003) ($75,000 settlement fund was fair and reasonable; $1000 was distributed to each of the named plaintiffs, at least $250 to each of fifty-two class claimants, and $13,500 to consumer's counsel); Purdie v. Ace Cash Express, Inc., 2003 WL 22976611 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 11, 2003) (approving settlement including $2.1 million in attorney fees); Tenuto v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2002 188569 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 31, 2002); Tenuto v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2001 WL 1347235 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 31, 2001); Fry v. Hayt, Hayt, & Landau, 198 F.R.D. 461 (E.D. Pa. 2000) ($500,000 and injunctive relief, including $150,000 for attorney fees and $80,000 for notice, was fair and reasonable). Cf. Ybarrondo v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2008 WL 183714 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 18, 2008); Greer v. Shapiro & Kreisman, 152 F. Supp. 2d 679 (E.D. Pa. 2001).

1038 Fabiani v. Oreck Corp., 2006 WL 1390458 (N.D. Cal. May 19, 2006). See also Ybarrondo v. NCO Fin. Sys. Inc., 2009 WL 3612864 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 28, 2009) (cash payment to class members, stipulation that each class member's debt forgiven, and no 1099 forms would be sent to Internal Revenue Service).

1039 See, e.g., Beneli v. BCA Fin. Serv., Inc., 324 F.R.D. 89 (D.N.J. 2018) ($3.82 per class member); Berther v. TSYS Total Debt Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 1795472 (E.D. Wis. June 19, 2007). See also Hicks v. Client Serv., Inc., 257 F.R.D. 699, 700–701 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (collecting cases and certifying class, even though statutory damages per class member would be between $1 and $5); Gaalswijk-Knetzke v. Receivables Mgmt. Serv. Corp., 2008 WL 3850657 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 14, 2008) (rejecting argument that class should not be certified because class members would receive only $3.20 each).

1040 See Nat'l Ass'n of Consumer Advocates, Standards and Guidelines for Litigating and Settling Consumer Class Actions (2d ed. 2006), reproduced in National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Appx. D (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Koby v. ARS Nat'l Serv., Inc., 846 F.3d 1071 (9th Cir. 2017) (disapproving FDCPA settlement which included class members' waiver of right to participate in any class action, where class members got essentially nothing in return); Gallego v. Northland Group, Inc., 814 F.3d 123 (2d Cir. 2016) (upholding denial of proposed settlement class, in part due to disparity between broad release required in return for trivial payment). But see Mirfasihi v. Fleet Mortg. Corp., 551 F.3d 682 (7th Cir. 2008); Zimmerman v. Zwicker & Assoc., P.C., 2011 WL 65912 (D.N.J. Jan. 10, 2011) (overly broad release factor in rejection of class settlement).

1041 708 F.3d 747 (6th Cir. 2013). See also Gallego v. Northland Group, Inc., 814 F.3d 123 (2d Cir. 2016) (noting questionable adequacy of representation where class members would be bound by broad general release in return for little or no money).

1042 A revised settlement was later approved over objection. Pelzer v. Vassalle, 655 Fed. Appx. 352 (6th Cir. 2016).

responded to the notice by filing a claim would receive merely a "de minimis" payment of $17.38.[1043]

Second, the Sixth Circuit found the class representatives were inadequate because, since their debts would be forgiven under the settlement, they themselves had no incentive to vigorously prosecute the unnamed class members' most important interest—the ability to use the false affidavits against Midland to contest their debts in state court. Third, superiority was found lacking because unnamed class members had a significant interest in individually controlling the defense of Midland's state court judgments against them, and because the class members could have collected damages under state law claims that would exceed the value of monetary relief in this settlement.[1044]

Fourth, the notice of the settlement to class members was held to violate due process because, as to the principal ground a consumer might object, it was "insufficient to notify a non-attorney class member that by not objecting, he or she loses the right to use Midland's false affidavits against Midland in their debt-collection actions."[1045] A settlement may be found unfair and unreasonable when it requires submission of a claim form even though the identity of all class members is known and where the amount available for each class member is so low that it would be economically unreasonable for any class member to submit a claim.[1046]

Class counsel has a fiduciary duty to the class to ensure not just adequacy of the settlement, but adequate notice as well.[1047] Defendants too may have an incentive to ensure adequacy because inadequate notice can result in the settlement not being accorded res judicata effect in a subsequent case. Thus where the one legal notice published in USA Today did not provide adequate notice to absent class members or the opportunity to opt out that comported with due process, the Second Circuit held that res judicata did not bar a later action against the same defendant by the plaintiff, an absent class member.[1048]

11.12 Declaratory or Injunctive Relief

11.12.1 Declaratory Relief

The FDCPA is silent as to the availability of declaratory relief. While the Third Circuit and a number of federal district courts find that declaratory relief is not available under the FDCPA,[1049] other federal courts permit declaratory relief.[1050] Finding declaratory relief available is consistent with the general power of federal courts under the Declaratory Judgment Act.[1051] Some courts have certified FDCPA classes based on a request for declaratory relief or ordered such relief without directly addressing its availability under the FDCPA.[1052]

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b)(2) provides for class certification where injunctive or "corresponding" declaratory relief is available. An FDCPA class action for declaratory relief must seek relief that "corresponds to" injunctive relief. Courts have said that "corresponds to an injunction" means having the practical effect of an injunction, and at least one case has found that declaratory relief in an FDCPA case would not have the same practical effect as an injunction.[1053] On the other hand, injunctive and corresponding declaratory relief may be appropriate for class members from whom a debt collector has sought illegal interest in the past when they also are at risk of continuing collection attempts.[1054]

1043 The Sixth Circuit also noted that the unnamed class members were probably not benefitted by a prospective injunction requiring Midland to improve its policies on affidavit creation, which, in any event, lasted only a year. 708 F.3d 747, 756 (6th Cir. 2013).

1044 Id. at 757.

1045 Id. at 760.

1046 Brown v. Jonathan Neil & Assoc., Inc., 2018 WL 2734866, at *4 (E.D. Cal. June 5, 2018) (denying preliminary approval, noting that: "The agreement extinguishes the rights of all individuals who do not opt out regardless of whether they received compensation or filed a claim form for any alleged violation . . . given that each class member could potentially only receive $0.25, the cost of postage is more than the class member would receive in the settlement.").

1047 In cases where class members may be difficult to locate, professional "skip" tracing techniques or a "skip" tracer to find current addresses for class members may be invaluable. It is important to try and negotiate the settlement so that the skip tracing fees are paid by the defendant. However, some defendants may not be convinced to bear that cost. In a class where the recovery for class members is substantial, another possibility is convinced to bear that cost. In a class where the recovery for class members is substantial, another possibility is to provide that the skip tracing fee be deducted from the award of each class member who is found using that technique. Because most skip tracers will take their work on a contingent fee basis, the only deductions would be from the recovery of persons who are found and not from the class fund or any other class member's recovery.

1048 Hecht v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 691 F.3d 218 (2d Cir. 2012). See also Appx. E.3.4.3, infra.

1049 Weiss v. Regal Collections, 385 F.3d 337 (3d Cir. 2004); Altenburg v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc., 2017 WL 2733803 (D. Md. June 26, 2017); Appx. E.3.4, infra. Cf. Johnson v. Midland Credit Mgmt. Inc., 2006 WL 2473004 (N.D. Ohio Aug. 24, 2006) (finding declaratory relief unavailable to individual plaintiffs, but reserving possibility that it is available on a class-wide basis).

1050 See Mann v. Acclaim Fin. Serv., Inc., 232 F.R.D. 278 (S.D. Ohio 2003); Woodard v. Online Info. Serv., 191 F.R.D. 502 (E.D.N.C. 2000); Gammon v. GC Serv. L.P., 162 F.R.D. 313 (N.D. Ill. 1995); Appx. E.3.4, infra. See also Carter v. Am. Note Servicing, 2014 WL 2002829 (W.D. Va. May 15, 2014) (in FDCPA suit, consumer stated claim under Federal Declaratory Judgment Act, 22 U.S.C. § 2201(a), by alleging that collector initiated foreclosure proceedings on voided home equity line of credit that it cancelled only when sued).

1051 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201, 2202.

1052 Smith v. Specified Credit Ass'n, Inc., 2015 WL 468871 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 30, 2015); Seawell v. Universal Fid. Corp., 235 F.R.D. 64 (E.D. Pa. 2006); Ballard v. Equifax Check Serv., Inc., 158 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. 2001); Woodard v. Online Info. Serv., 191 F.R.D. 502 (E.D.N.C. 2000); Borcherding-Dittloff v. Transworld Sys., Inc. 185 F.R.D. 558 (W.D. Wis. 1999); Young v. Meyer & Njus, P.A., 183 F.R.D. 231 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

1053 Petrolito v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 221 F.R.D. 303 (D. Conn. 2004).

1054 Madden v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 237 F. Supp. 3d 130, 159–160 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) (claim under N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349).

11.12.2 Injunctive Relief

The FDCPA is silent as to the availability of injunctive relief. Courts discussing the availability of FDCPA private injunctive relief generally find it to be unavailable.[1055] The Eleventh and Third Circuits have held so directly,[1056] and the Second and Seventh Circuits have assumed the correctness of this approach, in dicta.[1057] Numerous district courts have also held that the silence of Congress regarding private FDCPA injunctive relief is fatal to an action seeking such relief.[1058]

The holding that injunctions are not available in FDCPA private actions is contrary to the general rule that "[a]bsent the clearest command to the contrary from Congress, federal courts retain their equitable power to issue injunctions in suits over which they have jurisdiction."[1059] Courts not allowing FDCPA injunctive relief reject arguments that federal courts have inherent and statutory jurisdiction to award injunctive relief where they have subject matter jurisdiction,[1060] and find that private damage actions are to be the primary FDCPA enforcement vehicle.[1061]

The Sixth Circuit declined to foreclose the possibility of declaratory and injunctive relief under the FDCPA.[1062] Similarly, in holding that the trial court had abused its discretion in approving a class action settlement that included worthless injunctive relief, the Ninth Circuit did not foreclose the availability of injunctive relief in a suit under the FDCPA.[1063]

A number of federal district courts have granted injunctive relief in FDCPA cases, but usually under a state law authorizing injunctions or pursuant to settlement of a class action.[1064] Other courts have granted or assumed the availability of injunctive relief without directly addressing the issue.[1065]

1055 See Appx. E.3.4.2, infra.

1056 McWeay v. Citibank, 521 Fed. Appx. 784 (11th Cir. 2013); Weiss v. Regal Collections, 385 F.3d 337 (3d Cir. 2004). Accord Franklin v. GMAC Mortg., 523 Fed. Appx. 172 (3d Cir. 2013); Sibley v. Fulton DeKalb Collection Serv., 677 F.2d 830, 834 (11th Cir. 1982).

1057 Hecht v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 691 F.3d 218 (2d Cir. 2012) (declining to rule on this issue, but noting "every federal appeals court to have considered the question has held that it does not"); Crawford v. Equifax Payment Serv., Inc., 201 F.3d 877, 882 (7th Cir. 2000) (dicta, citing Sibley for proposition that "all private actions under the [FDCPA] are for damages").

1058 See Rodriguez v. Cascade Collections L.L.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 1222147 (D. Utah 2021); House v. Wilmington Sav. Fund Soc'y, 2019 WL 2743792, at *1 (D.N.J. 2019); Merriam v. GC Serv., 2018 WL 3068857 (N.D. Ind. June 21, 2018); Hines v. HSBC Bank, 2016 WL 5716749 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2016); Castellanos v. Countrywide Bank, 2015 WL 1906074 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 27, 2015); Reyes v. Julia Place Condo. Homeowners Ass'n, Inc., 2014 WL 7330602 (E.D. La. Dec. 18, 2014); Terrazas v. Wells Fargo Bank, 2013 WL 5774120 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 24, 2013); Ajib v. Fin. Assistance, Inc., 2013 WL 5553249 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 8, 2013), adopted, 2013 WL 5797105 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 28, 2013); Young v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 5508407 (E.D. Mo. Nov. 14, 2012); Waitkus v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2012 WL 686025 (D.N.J. Mar. 2, 2012);; Martinez v. Scott, 2011 WL 3566970 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 12, 2011); Hauk v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 749 F. Supp. 2d 358 (D. Md. 2010); Harris v. D. Scott Carruthers & Assoc., 270 F.R.D. 446 (D. Neb. 2010); Hampton v. Countrywide Home Loans, 2009 WL 1813648 (D. Neb. June 24, 2009); Taylor v. Quall, 471 F. Supp. 2d 1053 (C.D. Cal. 2007); Tomes v. Gordon & Berger, P.C., 2004 WL 614525 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 10, 2004); In re Risk Mgmt. Alternatives, Inc., 208 F.R.D. 493 (S.D.N.Y. 2002); Liles v. Am. Corrective Counseling Serv., 131 F. Supp. 2d 1114 (S.D. Iowa 2001); Zsamba v. Cmty. Bank, 56 F. Supp. 2d 1207 (D. Kan. 1999); Sokolski v. Trans Union Corp., 178 F.R.D. 393 (E.D.N.Y. 1998); Ditty v. CheckRite, Ltd., 973 F. Supp. 1320 (D. Utah 1997); Strong v. Nat'l Mgmt. Co., 600 F. Supp. 46 (E.D. Ark. 1984); Duran v. Credit Bur. of Yuma, Inc., 93 F.R.D. 607 (D. Ariz. 1982).

1059 Sierra Club, Lone Star Chapter v. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., 992 F.2d 545, 548 (5th Cir. 1993) (alteration in original, quoting Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 705, 99 S. Ct. 2545, 61 L. Ed. 2d 176 (1979)). See Loigman v. Kings Landing Condo. Ass'n, Inc., 734 A.2d 367 (N.J. Super. Ct. Ch. Div. 1999) (permitting injunctive relief, which is not prohibited by FDCPA).

1060 28 U.S.C. § 1651 ("All Writs" Act); Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Dean Foods Co., 384 U.S. 597, 86 S. Ct. 1738, 16 L. Ed. 2d 802 (1966). See also Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 262 F. Supp. 2d 520 (E.D. Pa. 2003) (enjoining collector from proceeding with sale of consumer's residence).

1061 See S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 5 (1977), reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and at Appx. A.3, infra.

1062 Hrivnak v. NCO Portfolio Mgmt., Inc., 719 F.3d 564 (6th Cir. 2013) (debt collectors' Rule 68 offer of judgment did not moot consumer's FDCPA and state claims where the offer did not satisfy claims that debt collectors deemed meritless, such as claims for declaratory and injunctive relief; finding that because availability of those claims under FDCPA has not been addressed by Sixth Circuit or Supreme Court, they should be determined by dispositive motion rather than motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction due to mootness). See also Henggeler v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2014 WL 793544 (D. Neb. Feb. 26, 2014) (in determining the degree of success of plaintiffs in a FDCPA class action settlement for purposes of determining plaintiffs' attorney fees, noted that settlement included injunction against debt collector repeating its violations).

1063 Koby v. ARS Nat'l Serv., Inc., 846 F.3d 1071 (9th Cir. 2017).

1064 See Gravina v. Client Serv., Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 78204 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 25, 2009); Anderson v. Nationwide Credit Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 57157 (E.D.N.Y. June 25, 2009); Lopez v. GMAC Mortg. Corp., 2007 WL 4357628 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 11, 2007); Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 262 F. Supp. 2d 520 (E.D. Pa. 2003); Wilson v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1379246 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 29, 2002); Klewer v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3378 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 21, 2002); Ballard v. Equifax Check Serv., 27 F. Supp. 2d 1201 (E.D. Cal. 1998); Valderrama v. Nat'l Revenue Corp., 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18627 (D. Neb. Sept. 28, 1981). See also Liles v. Del Campo, 350 F.3d 742 (8th Cir. 2003); Narvaez v. Law Offices of Antonio Duarte, III, P.A., 2015 WL 4605756 (M.D. Fla. July 30, 2015) (low net worth debt collector for home owner's association that agreed to cease its violations of FDCPA); Lambeth v. Advantage Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 4624008 (D. Idaho Aug. 3, 2015) (in class action settlement against apparently low net worth collector, collector agreed to cease its FDCPA violation); Gonzalez v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2015 WL 738329 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 23, 2015) (granting final approval of national injunctive relief class action settlement of some 180,000 members for whom collection agency failed to state that they were debt collector); Smith v. Specified Credit Ass'n, Inc., 2015 WL 468871 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 30, 2015) (because consumer proposed to amend her class action complaint to seek injunctive and/or declaratory relief, collection agency's offer of solely monetary damages did not moot her FDCPA claim).

1065 See Bolin v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 231 F.3d 970, 977 n.39 (5th Cir. 2000) (assuming FDCPA injunctive relief available but noting contrary authority); Gravina v. Client Serv., Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 78204 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 25, 2009); Anderson v. Nationwide Credit Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 57157 (E.D.N.Y. June 25, 2009); Lopez v. GMAC Mortg. Corp., 2007 WL 4357628 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 11, 2007); Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 262 F. Supp. 2d 520 (E.D. Pa. 2003); Wilson v.

More than a dozen, often unreported, decisions have approved consent judgments or settlements including FDCPA injunctive relief,[1066] and several courts have certified FDCPA class actions seeking injunctive relief.[1067]

11.12.3 Injunctive Relief Under Supplementary State Law Claims

Instead of seeking injunctive relief under the FDCPA, consumers may be able to bring state law claims supplementary to the FDCPA cause of action seeking damages or declaratory relief, and then seek injunctive relief under the state law claim.[1068] The Ninth Circuit affirmed a judgment of contempt against a check collection agency for violating an injunction entered under a state statute.[1069]

11.13 Attorney Fees and Costs for Prevailing Consumers

11.13.1 Overview

Consumer attorneys should, and in most states must, in the written retainer agreement with the client, provide for the specific manner of determination of their fee.[1070] In FDCPA cases, the fee is usually related to the Act's fee-shifting provision, 15 U.S.C. § 1692k:

> Except as otherwise provided by this section, any debt collector who fails to comply with any provision of this subchapter with respect to any person is liable to such person in an amount equal to the sum of—
>
> * * *
>
> (3) in the case of any successful action to enforce the foregoing liability, the costs of the action, together with a reasonable attorney's fee as determined by the court.[1071]

This provision establishes an entitlement to awards of costs and reasonable attorney fees to successful plaintiffs.[1072] An award of attorney fees is critical to enforcement of the FDCPA's requirements and fulfillment of the congressional intent.[1073] Awards must be sufficient to encourage attorneys to bring FDCPA actions.[1074] "[A]n award of attorney's fees under the FDCPA is designed not only for plaintiff's benefit but also to serve as a deterrent to defendants and others similarly situated."[1075]

The FDCPA attorney fees provision is identical to that found in the Truth in Lending Act (TILA) and the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), so the numerous TILA and FCRA fees cases should be useful in interpreting the attorney fees provision of the FDCPA. Those TILA and FCRA fee cases are analyzed in other NCLC treatises.[1076]

Transworld Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1379246 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 29, 2002); Klewer v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3378 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 21, 2002); Ballard v. Equifax Check Serv., 27 F. Supp. 2d 1201 (E.D. Cal. 1998); Valderrama v. Nat'l Revenue Corp., 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18627 (D. Neb. Sept. 28, 1981). See also Liles v. Del Campo, 350 F.3d 742 (8th Cir. 2003).

1066 See, e.g., Gonzalez v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2015 WL 738329 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 23, 2015) (approving class action settlement for injunctive relief where Rule 23(b)(3) class for damages might not have met superiority test); Morency v. Evanston Northwestern Healthcare Corp., 1999 WL 521155 (N.D. Ill. July 14, 1999). But cf. Gammon v. GC Serv. L.P., 162 F.R.D. 313 (N.D. Ill. 1995); Strong v. Nat'l Mgmt. Co., 600 F. Supp. 46 (E.D. Ark. 1984); Duran v. Credit Bur. of Yuma, Inc., 93 F.R.D. 607 (D. Ariz. 1982). But cf. Koby v. ARS Nat'l Serv., Inc., 846 F.3d 1071 (9th Cir. 2017) (overturning class settlement which included worthless injunctive relief).

1067 See Schwarm v. Craighead, 233 F.R.D. 655 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 7, 2006) (certifying class action for both injunctive relief and damages based on alleged violations of FDCPA, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and state law in collection of dishonored checks by defendant private debt collector acting under contract and in cooperation with local government law enforcement entities); Piper v. Portnoff Law Assoc., 262 F. Supp. 2d 520 (E.D. Pa. 2003); Wilson v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2002 WL 1379246 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 29, 2002); Klewer v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3378 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 21, 2002); Swanson v. Mid Am, Inc., 186 F.R.D. 665 (M.D. Fla. 1999) (certifying class action for injunctive relief).

1068 See, e.g., Elmore v. Northeast Florida Credit Bur., Inc., 2011 WL 4480419 (M.D. Fla. Sept. 27, 2011) (enjoining defendant from stating an intent "to begin what may be a costly and long asset search on you," followed by "to prevent that action, you must pay"); Midland Funding L.L.C. v. Brent, 644 F. Supp. 2d 961 (N.D. Ohio 2009) (granting injunctive relief under Ohio Consumer Sales Protection Act in putative Ohio class action against use of affidavits falsely claiming to be made on personal knowledge; this injunction was later supplanted by agreed-upon nationwide injunction requiring Midland to establish procedures to prevent use of affidavits not made on personal knowledge), later op. at Brent v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2011 WL 3862363(N.D. Ohio Sept. 1, 2011); Asch v. Teller, Levit & Silvertrust, P.C., 2004 WL 2967441 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 24, 2004); Klewer v. Cavalry Inv., L.L.C., 2002 WL 1058763 (W.D. Wis. May 17, 2002); Ballard v. Equifax Check Serv., 158 F. Supp. 2d 1163 (E.D. Cal. 2001) (granting injunctive relief under state statute for FDCPA violations); Irwin v. Mascott, 112 F. Supp. 2d 937 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2000), appeal from later decision at 370 F.3d 924 (9th Cir. 2004) (holding defendant in contempt for violating injunction but declining to review propriety of injunction); People ex rel. Spitzer v. Boyajian Law Offices, P.C., 851 N.Y.S.2d 72 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2007). See generally Ch. 16, infra.

1069 Irwin v. Mascott, 370 F.3d 924 (9th Cir. 2004), aff'g 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3285 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 27, 2001).

1070 See Venegas v. Mitchell, 495 U.S. 82, 110 S. Ct. 1679, 109 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1990) (plaintiff bound by contingent fee agreement with attorney that produced fee in excess of court-awarded fee).

An example of a retainer agreement is available online as companion material to National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Appx. E.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1071 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3).

1072 See S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 5, 8 (1977), reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and at Appx. A.3, infra. See also Appx. E.3.3, infra.

1073 See § 11.13.8.2, infra.

1074 See Appx. E.3.3.3, infra.

1075 See Goins v. JBC & Assoc., 2005 WL 3536147, at *3 (D. Conn. Nov. 28, 2005) (noting other FDCPA cases against debt collector in declining to reduce lodestar).

1076 See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 11.9 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer Law

In addition, federal court decisions interpreting the Civil Rights Act's attorney fees provision[1077] and other federal laws providing attorney fees for prevailing plaintiffs are frequently relevant.[1078] The Supreme Court has stated that the standards it set out for section 1988 "are generally applicable in all cases in which Congress has authorized an award of attorney fees to a 'prevailing party.'"[1079] Although the FDCPA and other federal consumer statutes refer to awarding fees to a plaintiff in a "successful action," this phrase is viewed as the equivalent of a "prevailing party."[1080] Attorney fees may be available to consumer attorneys in FDCPA cases under other statutory provisions[1081] or Rule 11.

11.13.2 Is a Fee Award Mandatory?

According to the Third Circuit: "Given the structure of the section, . . . the Act mandates an award of attorney's fees as a means of fulfilling Congress's intent that the Act should be enforced by debtors acting as private attorneys general."[1082] The Seventh Circuit explained: "The reason for mandatory fees is that congress chose a 'private attorney general' approach to assume enforcement of the FDCPA."[1083] The Truth in Lending Act (TILA) has identical attorney fee language, and courts have interpreted it as requiring the award of attorney fees even in cases of minor violations.[1084]

Attorney fees in a successful FDCPA suits thus should be mandatory once more than nominal statutory damages have been awarded.[1085] As the Third Circuit stated in reversing and remanding for reconsideration a district court's denial of attorney fees: "Only in unusual circumstances, however, may the court decline to award a fee."[1086] The factors enumerated in the FDCPA to determine the amount of statutory damages are not applicable to an attorney fees award, and fees are not contingent on those criteria being met.

However, the consumer's attorney fees award may be reduced or even denied where there is little success[1087] or no award of FDCPA damages.[1088] Nevertheless, the Seventh Circuit has found that attorney fees awards are mandatory in an FDCPA case even when the recovery is only $100.[1089] An award of statutory damages should lead to attorney fees even where no actual damages are awarded.

Competing considerations as to attorney fees where recovery is minimal were examined in a United States Supreme Court decision denying the award of attorney fees in a Civil Rights Act case under 28 U.S.C. § 1983, although the plaintiff was found to be the prevailing party.[1090] In that case, nominal damages of one dollar were awarded where the plaintiff sought $17 million in compensatory damages. The main decision stated: "When a plaintiff recovers only nominal damages because of his failure to prove an essential element of his claim Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 12.7.1.3 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1077 42 U.S.C. § 1988. See e.g. Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1992).

1078 See, e.g., Perdue v. Kenny A. ex rel. Winn, 559 U.S. 542, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494 (2010); City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449 (1992) (33 U.S.C. § 1365(d)); Ruckelshaus v. Sierra Club, 463 U.S. 680, 691, 103 S. Ct. 3274, 77 L. Ed. 2d 938 (1983) (Clean Air Act); Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983).

1079 Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 446 n.7, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983). See also Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. W. Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001) (to be prevailing party there must be some judicial alteration of the parties' legal relationship); Rayna P. v. Campus Cmty. Sch., 300 F. Supp. 3d 556, 561 (D. Del. 2019); City Consumer Serv., Inc. v. Horne, 631 F. Supp. 1050 (D. Utah 1986).

1080 See, e.g., Fallen v. GREP Southwest, L.L.C., 247 F. Supp. 3d 1165, 1204 (D.N.M. 2017); Rousseau v. Morris, 2014 WL 941476 (D. Conn. Mar. 11, 2014); Merrick v. Scott, 2011 WL 1938188, at *10 (N.D. Tex. May 20, 2011). See also Crabill v. Trans Union, 259 F.3d 662 (7th Cir. 2001) (FCRA).

1081 See, e.g., Means v. Intelligent Bus. Solutions, Ltd., 2015 WL 1470757 (D. Nev. Mar. 31, 2015) (inviting consumer "to move for fees incurred in defending the present motion under 28 U.S.C. § 1927).

1082 Graziano v. Harrison, 950 F.2d 107, 113 (3d Cir. 1991) (citation omitted). See also Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055, 1061 (9th Cir. 2011); Tolentino v. Freedman, 46 F.3d 645 (7th Cir. 1995); Jacobson v. Healthcare Fin. Serv., Inc., 516 F.3d 85 (2d Cir. 2008); Valencia v. Affiliated Group, Inc., 674 F. Supp. 2d 1300 (S.D. Fla. 2009); Riter v. Moss & Bloomberg, Ltd., 2000 WL 1433867 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2000).

1083 Tolentino v. Friedman, 46 F.3d 645, 651 (7th Cir. 1995).

1084 National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 11.9.2.1 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1085 See Zagorski v. Midwest Billing Serv., Inc., 128 F.3d 1164 (7th Cir. 1997); Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); Emanuel v. Am. Credit Exch., 870 F.2d 805 (2d Cir. 1989). But see Davis v. Credit Bur. of the South, 908 F.3d 972 (5th Cir. 2018) (despite an award of statutory damages, the court declined to award attorney fees due to the conduct of plaintiff and counsel).

1086 Graziano v. Harrison, 950 F.2d 107, 113–114 (3d Cir. 1991). See also Larsen v. AR Res., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849 (E.D. Va. 2020).

1087 See Richard v. Caliber Home Loans, Inc. 832 Fed. Appx. 940 (6th Cir. 2020) (reducing total attorney award due to limited success in action and other factors); Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 924 F.3d 949 (7th Cir. 2019) (reduction of attorney fees where jury awarded $1000 in statutory damage and no actual damages); Larsen v. AR Res., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849 (E.D. Va. 2020) (substantial reduction in attorney fees where Plaintiff sought $80,000 in FDCPA damages and only received $1000 from jury); Baylor v. Mitchell Rubenstein & Assoc., 735 Fed. Appx. 733, at *1 (D.C. Cir. 2018); Carroll v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 53 F.3d 626 (4th Cir. 1995); Appx. E.3.3.3, infra.

1088 Johnson v. Eaton, 80 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 1996); Pietrowski v. Merchants & Med. Credit Corp., 256 F.R.D. 544 (E.D. Mich. 2008). See also Nagle v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 297 F.3d 1305 (11th Cir. 2002) (where no damages awarded in an FCRA case, no attorney fees could be awarded); Crabill v. Trans Union, L.L.C., 259 F.3d 662 (7th Cir. 2001) (suggesting that, under recent Supreme Court decisions, a consumer may have no standing to pursue FDCPA attorney fees without recovering damages). But see Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22, 28 (2d Cir. 1989); Emanuel v. Am. Credit Exch., 870 F.2d 805, 809 (2d Cir. 1989).

1089 Zagorski v. Midwest Billing Serv., Inc., 128 F.3d 1164 (7th Cir. 1997). See also Holzhauer v. Hayt, Hayt & Landau, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3286059 (D.N.J. Aug. 10, 2012); Pineda v. P & B Capital Group, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6356866 (W.D. Mo. Dec. 19, 2011); Kim v. Barro, 2009 WL 1616271 (N.D. Ga. June 9, 2009) (plaintiff who accepted $250 offer of judgment was prevailing party and obtained more than the "nominal" damages awarded to civil rights plaintiff in Farrar).

1090 Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1992).

for monetary relief, . . . the only reasonable fee is usually no fee at all."[1091]

Nevertheless, Justice O'Connor, in her concurring opinion, stated that such disparities should not be the only factor considered in deciding on a fee award.[1092] Other factors, such as the significance of the legal issue involved, must be considered. Indeed, fees may be appropriate even when only nominal damages are awarded.[1093]

Almost all courts award attorney fees in federal statutory actions even when the individual is represented on a no-fee basis by a legal services program[1094] or a prepaid legal services plan;[1095] the same rule has been applied in FDCPA suits.[1096] Similarly, the absence of any obligation to pay counsel attorney fees not recovered from the defendant does not mean the fees are not "incurred" and is not a bar to a fee-shifting award.[1097] However, courts award no fees for work done by pro se litigants, irrespective of whether that litigant is an attorney.[1098]

11.13.3 Attorney Fees Where Claim Is Settled

11.13.3.1 Right to Attorney Fees

Many settlements set aside a specified amount for attorney fees or state that the settlement amount includes attorney fees, and the consumer will not seek such fees from the court. But where the settlement does not fully resolve the question of attorney fees, the consumer's attorney must consider the Supreme Court decision in Buckhannon Board and Care Home v. West Virginia Department of Health and Human Services.[1099] Although Buckhannon dealt with the fee-shifting provisions of the fair housing laws and the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Supreme Court made clear that it was announcing a general rule that applied to most, if not all, federal fee-shifting statutes.[1100] The Seventh Circuit has held that Buckhannon applies even to consumer protection statutes that, like the FDCPA,[1101] use the term "successful action" rather than the "prevailing party" language found in the statutes Buckhannon was interpreting.[1102]

Buckhannon holds that a "material alteration of the legal relationship of the parties" is necessary for a plaintiff to be found the prevailing party.[1103] This standard can be met by "enforceable judgments on the merits and court-ordered consent decrees,"[1104] because both have "the necessary judicial imprimatur."[1105] The court, however, rejected the "catalyst" theory, under which courts had held that a plaintiff was a prevailing party even if a favorable order was never entered, as long as the suit achieved the desired result by bringing about a voluntary change in the defendant's behavior. Further, it suggested that a "private settlement" that the court has not adopted as an enforceable order is insufficient to trigger the consumer's right to attorney fees, because it "do[es] not entail the judicial approval and oversight involved in consent decrees."[1106] While 1091 Id., 506 U.S. at 115 (emphasis added).

1092 Id., 506 U.S. at 121 (O'Connor, J., concurring).

1093 Thornton v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 312 Fed. Appx. 161, 164 (11th Cir. 2008) ("Farrar does not preclude the district court from awarding attorney's fees when a jury awards a nominal amount of statutory damages.").

1094 See New York Gaslight Club, Inc. v. Carey, 447 U.S. 54, 70 n.9, 100 S. Ct. 2024, 64 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1980); Martinez v. Roscoe, 100 F.3d 121, 124 (10th Cir. 1996) Gallegos v. Stokes, 593 F.2d 372 (10th Cir. 1979); Rodriguez v. Taylor, 569 F.2d 1231, 1244 (3d Cir. 1977) (Civil Rights Act case); Manning v. Princeton Consumer Discount Co., 533 F.2d 102 (3d Cir. 1976); Rios v. Enter. Ass'n Steamfitters (UAW) Local 638, 400 F. Supp. 993, 995 (S.D.N.Y. 1975), aff'd, 542 F.2d 579 (2d Cir. 1976) (Equal Employment Opportunity Act case). See also National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 11.9.3.2 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1095 See Appx. E.3.3, infra.

1096 See Appx. E.3.3.2, infra.

In Hish v. Chiquoine & Molberg, S.C., 2014 WL 31498 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 3, 2014), for example, the court awarded reasonable attorney fees to the prevailing plaintiff notwithstanding the facts that she was represented by a non-profit legal aid program that itself was barred from recovering fees and thus she incurred no fee obligation to pay her attorneys.

1097 Long v. Nationwide Legal File & Serve, Inc., 2014 WL 3809401, at *10 (N.D. Cal. July 23, 2014).

1098 See Kay v. Ehrler, 499 U.S. 432, 111 S. Ct. 1435, 113 L. Ed. 2d 486 (1991) (civil rights claim); Damarest v. Manspeaker, 948 F.2d 655 (10th Cir. 1991) (Equal Access to Justice Act case); White v. Arlen Realty & Dev. Corp., 540 F.2d 645 (4th Cir. 1975); Adams v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2015 WL 685791 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 18, 2015); Milton v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., P.C., 2007 WL 2262893 (E.D.N.Y. Aug. 3, 2007) (FDCPA case); Kurz v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 324 F. Supp. 2d 444, 447 (S.D.N.Y. 2004); Padilla v. Payco Gen. Am. Credits, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 2d 264 (S.D.N.Y. 2001); Ray v. Immigration & Naturalization Serv., 856 F. Supp. 1576 (S.D. Fla. 1994); Strange v. Wexler, 796 F. Supp. 1117 (N.D. Ill. 1992) (FDCPA case); In re Vasquez, 221 B.R. 222 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1998).

1099 Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. W. Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001).

Buckhannon is examined in more detail in NCLC's Consumer Class Actions § 19.2.2.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1100 Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. W. Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001).

1101 See Dechert v. Cadle Co., 441 F.3d 474 (7th Cir. 2006) (plaintiff, who abandoned his FDCPA claim, was not prevailing party merely because of discovery sanctions award; award of fees to plaintiff reversed).

1102 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3). See Crabill v. Trans Union, 259 F.3d 662 (7th Cir. 2001) (applying Buckhannon to the Fair Credit Reporting Act and concluding that attorney fees are not available unless the plaintiff wins "formal judicial relief").

1103 Buckhannon, 532 U.S. at 604.

1104 Id. See also Johnson v. City of Tulsa, Oklahoma Lodge 93, 489 F.3d 1089 (10th Cir. 2007) (Buckhannon does not preclude an award of attorney fees for counsel's efforts to protect the fruits of a consent decree).

1105 Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. W. Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 604, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001). See Dechert v. Cadle Co., 441 F.3d 474 (7th Cir. 2006) (plaintiff, who abandoned his FDCPA claim was not prevailing party merely because of discovery sanctions award; award of fees to plaintiff reversed).

1106 Buckhannon, 532 U.S. at 604 n.7.

the Ninth Circuit has characterized this language as dictum,[1107] most courts have concluded that a "private settlement," by itself, cannot be a basis to ask a court for a fee award.[1108]

What is a court-ordered decree or judgment and what is a "private settlement"? The key distinction is likely to be that, to qualify as a decree, a final order has been entered in the case which permits the court, under the standards set forth in the Supreme Court decision in Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Insurance Co.,[1109] to retain jurisdiction for enforcement purposes.[1110] An order need not include an admission of liability by the defendant to qualify as a consent decree,[1111] and it is immaterial whether it repeats the terms of the parties' agreement or incorporates them by referring to a separate document.[1112]

Thus, an order that recites or incorporates a stipulation that sets forth steps that the defendant agrees to take, thereby subjecting the parties' agreement to judicial oversight and enforcement, qualifies as a court-ordered decree.[1113] Such steps may include paying damages or clearing a tradeline from a credit report. Even an order of dismissal can meet these standards if the court retains jurisdiction to enforce compliance with the parties' agreement.[1114] But a stipulation of dismissal that does not permit the court to retain jurisdiction to enforce the agreement[1115] probably will not suffice to qualify the plaintiff as a prevailing party.

The right to seek attorney fees should be preserved where there is a judgment for damages, because a money judgment is a "material alteration of the legal relationship of the parties,"[1116] as it creates an obligation of one party to the other that is enforceable by judicial process. The ability to enforce a money judgment by judicial process should be considered the functional equivalent of the judicial oversight that was the hallmark of a court-ordered consent decree for the Buckhannon court.[1117] This type of agreement should also be acceptable to a defendant that sincerely wishes to settle because it leaves the determination of the reasonableness of the fees to the court. The debt collector's concern about settling without knowing its total exposure may possibly be overcome by revealing the number of hours the consumer's attorney has devoted to the case to date, and the hourly rate that will be sought.

A mere stipulation that the issue of attorney fees will be considered by the court may not be sufficient to satisfy Buckhannon.[1118] Some courts have awarded fees when the 1107 Barrios v. California Interscholastic Fed'n, 277 F.3d 1128, 1134 n.5 (9th Cir. 2002).

1108 See, e.g., Tejero v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 993 F.3d 393 (5th Cir. 2021) (where settlement that did not include attorney fees, court held no "successful action to enforce the foregoing liability" under § 1692k(a)(3) where lawsuit did not reach any end result); Harris v. Jacobs Marsh, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1584018, at *3 n.3 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 21, 2016) (finding court had no authority to award fees under FDCPA based on settlement agreement, even though "the parties may have agreed, as Plaintiff argues, that Plaintiff would be a 'prevailing party' in this case"); Nat'l Coalition for Students with Disabilities v. Bush, 173 F. Supp. 2d 1272 (N.D. Fla. 2001) (construing Buckhannon to disallow fees for "private settlements").

1109 511 U.S. 375, 114 S. Ct. 1673, 128 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1994).

1110 Toms v. Taft, 338 F.3d 519 (6th Cir. 2003) (section 1988 case; settlement reached during judicially supervised settlement conference, after which claim was dismissed as moot, not basis for fees even though agreement was read into the record); Richard S. v. Dep't of Developmental Serv., 317 F.3d 1080 (9th Cir. 2003); Truesdell v. Philadelphia Hous. Auth., 290 F.3d 159 (3d Cir. 2002) (district court's order incorporating plaintiff's settlement in mandatory terms is sufficient); Am. Disability Ass'n v. Chmielarz, 289 F.3d 1315 (11th Cir. 2002); Smyth v. Rivero, 282 F.3d 268 (4th Cir. 2002) (consent decree on which fees can be based is one that is enforceable as a judicial decree by the court that entered it); Vasquez v. County of Lake, 2002 WL 31256166 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 7, 2002).

1111 Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. W. Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 604, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001).

1112 Am. Disability Ass'n v. Chmielarz, 289 F.3d 1315 (11th Cir. 2002); Smyth v. Rivero, 282 F.3d 268 (4th Cir. 2002); Nat'l Coalition for Students with Disabilities v. Bush, 173 F. Supp. 2d 1272, 1278–1279 (N.D. Fla. 2001) ("the appropriateness of an award of fees surely ought not turn on whether the court does or does not retype the provisions of a settlement agreement as part of an order compelling compliance").

1113 See Hutchinson ex rel. Julien v. Patrick, 636 F.3d 1, 10–11 (1st Cir. 2011) (three-prong inquiry to determine whether an order contains judicial involvement and actions inherent in a conventional consent decree); Roberson v. Giuliani, 346 F.3d 75 (2d Cir. 2003) (district court's retention of enforcement jurisdiction over parties' private settlement agreement provided sufficient judicial sanction to convey "prevailing party" status on plaintiffs, for purposes of fee-shifting provision of civil rights statute); Independence Project, Inc. v. Ventresca Bros. Constr. Co., 397 F. Supp. 3d 482 (S.D.N.Y. 2019).

1114 Am. Disability Ass'n v. Chmielarz, 289 F.3d 1315 (11th Cir. 2002).

1115 Sole v. Wyner, 551 U.S. 74, 127 S. Ct. 2188, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1069 (2007); Xlear, Inc. v. Focus Nutrition, L.L.C., 893 F.3d 1227, 1238 (10th Cir. 2018) (a clerk of court terminating a case after a settlement by the parties does not constitute sufficient judicial imprimatur for the prevailing party analysis); Oil, Chem. & Atomic Workers Int'l Union v. Dep't of Energy, 288 F.3d 452 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (stipulation of dismissal insufficient even though signed by judge); Perez-Arellano v. Smith, 279 F.3d 791 (9th Cir. 2002); Malibu Media, L.L.C. v. Baiazid, 152 F. Supp. 3d 496, 501 (E.D. Va. 2015) ("a defendant dismissed pursuant to a stipulation of dismissal [under Rule 41(a)(1)(A)(ii)] is not a 'prevailing party'") Dorfsman v. Law Sch. Admission Council, 2001 WL 1754726 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 28, 2001) (stipulation followed by dismissal). See also J.C. v. Reg'l Sch. Dist. 10, 278 F.3d 119 (2d Cir. 2002) (order dismissing hearing as moot after school board adopted individualized educational plan granting all relief sought was insufficient for fee award). But cf. Former Employees of Motorola Ceramic Prods. v. United States, 336 F.3d 1360 (Fed. Cir. 2003) (plaintiffs were prevailing parties where defendant agreed to remand order, and they then won claim before agency on remand).

1116 Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home v. W. Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 604, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 (2001). See also Cabala v. Crowley, 736 F.3d 226 (2d Cir. 2013).

1117 Buckhannon, 532 U.S. at 603 (defining "prevailing party" as one in whose favor a judgment is rendered); Util. Automation 2000, Inc. v. Choctawhatchee Elec. Coop., Inc., 298 F.3d 1238 (11th Cir. 2002) (entry of Rule 68 judgment is basis for attorney fees if Marek v. Chesny, 473 U.S. 1, 105 S. Ct. 3012, 87 L. Ed. 2d 1 (1985), does not bar them); Dennis v. Columbia Collection Med. Ctr., Inc., 290 F.3d 639 (4th Cir. 2002) (party who obtains a judgment prevails); Pitchford v. Oakwood Mobile Homes, Inc., 212 F. Supp. 2d 613 (W.D. Va. 2002) (implying that settlement would have been basis for fees if it had been incorporated into court order). See also Walker v. City of Mesquite, 313 F.3d 246 (5th Cir. 2002) (adopting functional equivalence as standard).

1118 Harris v. Jacobs Marsh, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1584018 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 21, 2016) (settlement agreement which merely permitted plaintiff to make application for reasonable attorney fees was insufficient basis for settlement specifically states that the consumer has prevailed or been successful, that the consumer is entitled to an award of reasonable attorney fees—or at least that the defendant does not contest the right to such fees—and that the reasonableness of the fees will be determined by the court. However, this approach is not without risk.[1119] Counsel should not agree to a simple entry of dismissal, even if the case is dismissed pursuant to an agreement signed by the parties under which the defendant agrees to the relief the plaintiff sought, unless the order embodies the settlement agreement or the court retains jurisdiction to enforce it.[1120]

11.13.3.2 Negotiating a Settlement Containing Attorney Fees

Difficult problems arise when defendants seek to negotiate settlement of the substantive claims and attorney fees simultaneously.[1121] While simultaneous negotiation enables the defendant to know its total liability, it may place the consumer's attorney in an untenable ethical position. Defendants may attempt to divide the award between fees and damages in a way which disfavors either the consumer or the consumer's attorney. The attorney may be tempted to accept a generous fee offer in return for a less than optimal settlement for the client, or, conversely, may feel obligated to negotiate the best settlement for the client, even if this means no attorney fees.

Thus, it is generally viewed as a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct to negotiate separate amounts for the client and for fees at the same time, while it is not unethical to simultaneously negotiate fees and merits relief as a lump sum, or for the defendant to condition a settlement on waiver of fees.[1122] Attorneys should be familiar with their state bar association's ethical opinions and other rulings on the topic. A few states have ethical rules or judicial decisions prohibiting waiver of fees or simultaneous negotiation of fees and the merits, but a number of others have concluded that there is no ethical violation.

Attorneys can reduce the conflict of interest created by lump-sum settlement offers and offers conditioned upon waiver of fees by drafting their retainers with this issue in mind. A retainer that obliges the client to pay fees at an hourly rate or as a percentage of a settlement if the client accepts an offer that does not include sufficient attorney fees means that the attorney and the client both have an economic interest in an adequate fee award.[1123] Such an agreement is generally enforceable, even where there is statutory fee shifting as in the FDCPA.[1124] Frequently, attorneys provide that the fees shall be a certain percentage of the recovery, but in any event not less than what their lodestar amount would be. However, any such agreement must take into account that most state Rules of Professional Conduct require fees to be reasonable, and may require a different approach, depending on the particular circumstances.

An assignment of a claim for money such as for attorney fees may be sufficient to provide standing for a plaintiff's attorney to seek fees.[1125] Plaintiff's attorney may be in the best position to negotiate for attorney fees if the attorney's original fee agreement with the client contains a provision stating that the statutorily authorized fees belong to and are assigned to counsel.[1126] If the fee agreement provides that the right to the fees and expenses is assigned to the attorney, and the defendant is notified that the attorney holds the right to recover fees, court to award fees); Pitchford v. Oakwood Mobile Homes, Inc., 212 F. Supp. 2d 613 (W.D. Va. 2002) (settlement that merely reserved fee issue for court insufficient to establish consumer as prevailing party, but it would have sufficed if parties had stipulated that plaintiff was entitled to fees and that court would decide amount); Dorfsman v. Law Sch. Admission Council, 2001 WL 1754726 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 28, 2001). See also Oil, Chem. & Atomic Workers Int'l Union v. Dep't of Energy, 288 F.3d 452 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (no fees despite stipulation that dismissal is "without prejudice to the right of plaintiff to obtain . . . an award of attorney's fees"; no discussion of whether this provision amounted to a stipulation that plaintiff was the prevailing party).

1119 See Pitchford v. Oakwood Mobile Homes, Inc., 212 F. Supp. 2d 613 (W.D. Va. 2002) (settlement that merely reserved fee issue for court insufficient to establish consumer as prevailing party, but it would have sufficed if parties had stipulated that plaintiff was entitled to fees and that court would decide amount).

1120 See Toms v. Taft, 338 F.3d 519 (6th Cir. 2003) (section 1988 fee application; settlement reached during judicially supervised settlement conference, after which claim was dismissed as moot, not basis for fees even though agreement was read into the record); Smyth v. Rivero, 282 F.3d 268 (4th Cir. 2002) (dismissal order that merely acknowledges, refers to, or approves settlement agreement is insufficient). See also Pitchford v. Oakwood Mobile Homes, Inc., 212 F. Supp. 2d 613 (W.D. Va. 2002) (noting in dicta that an order that meets Kokkonen standards would be sufficient to preserve fee claim).

1121 See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions §§ 14.10, 19.4.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1122 Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 728 n.14, 108 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1986).

1123 A sample retainer with a clause along these lines may be found in National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions, Appx. E.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1124 See Venegas v. Mitchell, 495 U.S. 82, 110 S. Ct. 1679, 109 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1990).

1125 Sprint Commc'ns. Co., L.P. v. APCC Serv., 554 U.S. 269, 271–272, 285–286, 128 S. Ct. 2531 (2008) (assignee of statutory claim under 47 U.S.C. § 226 satisfied Article III standing). However, note that the Anti-Assignment Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3727 ("AAA") generally prohibits the assignment of claims against the government unless the government has waived an objection to the assignment.

1126 See Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 108 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1986) (section 1988 case; suggesting that the lawyer obtain an assignment of rights to attorney fees from the client); Zeisler v. Neese, 24 F.3d 1000, 1002 (7th Cir. 1994) (TILA fees belong to plaintiff, not to attorney, but plaintiff can assign this right to attorney; if attorney notifies defense of assignment, then plaintiff's settlement will not be waiver of fees); Samuels v. Am. Motor Sales, Inc., 969 F.2d 573, 576–579 (7th Cir. 1992) (Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act case; attorney has standing to pursue fee petition after winning judgment for client). See also California Formal Ethics Op. 1994-136 (1994) (retainer agreements in which client assigns right to statutory attorney fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 to attorney are not unethical so long as there is appropriate disclosure and consent). But see Pony v. County of Los Angeles, 433 F.3d 1138 (9th Cir. 2006) (assignment of attorney fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 invalid under California tort law and, by analogy, actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1988).

through a notice of attorney's lien or notice of assignment, then: (1) the defendant cannot settle directly with the plaintiff without incurring liability to counsel,[1127] (2) a purported waiver of the right to fees without the attorney's consent is ineffective,[1128] and (3) the lawyer can enforce the right to fees by petition or appeal without the participation or approval of the client.[1129]

Nevertheless, it is not clear that an assignment has any effect on the ethical issues. Moreover, regardless of an assignment of the fee claim, the client has the right to decide to accept a settlement offer, and the attorney cannot allow their own interests to impair the client's decision.

Where the settlement agreement is not determinative of fees, the best approach is to try to settle the substantive claims with an explicit provision recognizing plaintiff's right to an award of such fees and stating that the issue of the consumer's attorney fees will be specifically reserved for the court if subsequent negotiation between the parties does not resolve the issue. This topic is discussed more fully at § 11.13.3.1, supra.

11.13.4 To Whom Does the Fee Award Belong?

The FDCPA provides that any debt collector who fails to comply with the Act "with respect to any person is liable to such person" for reasonable attorney fees.[1130] This language suggests that the attorney fee in a successful FDCPA case belongs to the consumer, and is payable directly to them and not the attorney.[1131] Thus, the FDCPA falls within the general rule that unless the statute specifically provides for payment to the attorney, and in the absence of an alternative contractual arrangement, the right to attorney fees is that of the litigant.[1132] Indeed, courts have followed this general rule in cases involving a number of federal statutes.[1133]

Whether a formal assignment of the client's rights to attorney fees is valid and enforceable may depend on state law claims.[1134]

The issue of who is entitled to the fee award becomes especially significant where there is at least a theoretical potential for such a fee award to be offset against a preexisting debt of the debtor or a judgment against the debtor. Offset of the fee award, however, has been denied in consideration of the 1127 Zeisler v. Neese, 24 F.3d 1000, 1002 (7th Cir. 1994).

1128 Id.

1129 See Harden v. Autovest, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6997905 (W.D. Mich. Nov. 30, 2016) (motion to dismiss plaintiff's claim for fees denied because provision in fee agreement assigning plaintiff's right to attorney fees and costs that are "obtainable" did not assign his right to recovery of those fees and costs). See also § 11.13.4, infra. Cf. Shealey v. Wilkie, 946 F.3d 1294 (Fed. Cir. 2020) (client's dismissal of his counsel part way through action constituted revocation of counsel's authority and standing to seek fees for work performed).

1130 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3).

1131 See, e.g., Hester v. Graham, Bright & Smith, P.C., 289 Fed. Appx. 35, 44 (8th Cir. 2008) (vacating lower court's award of attorney fees to counsel and remanding to award fees directly to consumer); Shula v. Lawent, 359 F.3d 489, 492 (7th Cir. 2004) (under FDCPA, attorney fees should be awarded to client instead of the attorney, "especially since it is standard for fee-shifting statutes to award attorneys' fees as part of the costs normally awarded a prevailing party"); Szijjarto v. McCarrell, 2014 WL 555122 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 12, 2014); Bauer v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 6733649 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 4, 2012) (attorney fees are awarded directly to successful plaintiff under FDCPA), adopted, 2012 WL 6733021 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 28, 2012); Myrick v. Distribution & Acquisition Network, 2010 WL 2179112, at *5 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 28, 2010) ("The FDCPA provides that the person who recovers damages for a statutory violation, not that person's attorney, should recover a reasonable attorney's fee."); Sanders v. Wash. Mut. Home Loans, Inc., 2009 WL 365683, at *6 n.3 (E.D. La. Feb. 10, 2009) ("Although plaintiffs' attorneys purported to file the motion for determination of attorney's fees and costs on their own behalf, it would be error to award such fees and costs directly to plaintiffs' attorneys."). Cf. Eades v. Kennedy, PC. Law Offices, 343 F. Supp. 3d 104, 108 (W.D.N.Y. 2018) (plaintiff awarded attorney fees, but order stated award was to be made payable to plaintiff's counsel).

1132 See, e.g., United States v. $186,416.00 in U.S. Currency, 642 F.3d 753, 756 (9th Cir. 2011) ("Direct payment to the attorney is the exception, not the rule."); Image Technical Serv., Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 136 F.3d 1354, 1357 (9th Cir. 1998) ("Any fee award in an antitrust case goes to the successful plaintiff, not to plaintiff's counsel.").

1133 See, e.g., Astrue v. Ratliff, 560 U.S. 586, 130 S. Ct. 2521, 177 L. Ed. 2d 91 (2010) (Equal Access to Justice Act); United States v. $186,416.00 in U.S. Currency, 642 F.3d 753 (9th Cir. 2011) (Civil Asset Forfeiture Reform Act); Long v. Morton Plant Hosp. Ass'n, 2008 WL 383808 (11th Cir. Feb. 14, 2008) (Americans with Disabilities Act); Willis v. Gov't Accountability Office, 448 F.3d 1341 (Fed. Cir. 2006) (Civil Service Reform Act); Gilbrook v. City of Westminster, 177 F.3d 839, 875 (9th Cir. 1999) ("In the absence of a contractual assignment to counsel, § 1988 requires that attorney fee awards be made directly to the prevailing party"); Image Technical Serv., Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 136 F.3d 1354, 1357 (9th Cir. 1998) (Clayton Act; "Any fee award in an antitrust case goes to the successful plaintiff, not to plaintiff's counsel."); Zeisler v. Neese, 24 F.3d 1000, 1001 (7th Cir. 1994) (TILA; "the entitlement to attorney's fees belongs to the plaintiff, not to his (in this case her) lawyer"); Freeman v. B & B Assoc., 790 F.2d 145 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (TILA); Moore v. Nat'l Ass'n of Sec. Dealers, Inc., 762 F.2d 1093, 1099 n.10 (D.C. Cir. 1985) (Title VII); United States ex. Rel. Rafter H. Constr., L.L.C. v. Big-D Constr. Corp., 350 F. Supp. 3d 938 (D. Idaho 2018) (attorney fees awarded directly to relators in qui tam action pursuant to False Claims Act). But see Flannery v. Prentice, 28 P.3d 860, 871 (Cal. 2001) (concluding that attorney fees awarded pursuant to state's Fair Employment and Housing Act (exceeding fees already paid) "belong, absent an enforceable agreement to the contrary, to the attorneys who labored to earn them"); Henry M. Lee Law Corp. v. Super. Ct., 139 Cal. Rptr. 3d 712, 723 (Cal. Ct. App. 2012) (construing state wage and hour laws authorizing award of fees to an "employee" and holding that, absent a contract determining a different disposition of an award, attorney fees in excess of those already paid to the attorneys by the client should be made payable directly to the attorney who provided the legal services).

1134 See Pony v. County of Los Angeles, 433 F.3d 1138 (9th Cir. 2006) (right to fees under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 not assignable under California law); Zeisler v. Neese, 24 F.3d 1000 (7th Cir. 1994). See also Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1986). Cf. Igbanugo Partners Int'l Law Firm, P.L.L.C. v. Sabhari, 2013 WL 4711190 (Minn. Ct. App. Sept. 3, 2013) (concluding that unambiguous language in contracts and riders did not show manifest intent on the part of clients to assign their right to Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA) fees to law firm; rather, contract language clearly reflected parties' agreement that, in the event of an EAJA award, any attorney fees owed to law firm would be offset by EAJA award).

public policy behind the attorney fee provision, among other things.[1135]

Cases under other federal consumer protection statutes also have held that it would further a particular act's congressional purpose for the attorney to be granted an independent right to the fees against the offending party. The reasoning underlying such cases, which is equally applicable to the FDCPA, is that courts should decline to award a setoff of attorney fees where the underlying statute pursuant to which the opposing party received a judgment is remedial in nature.[1136] To allow a setoff would in effect relieve the collectors who violated the Act of the attorney fee expense in the case of an insolvent debtor. Such a result would thwart the statute's individual enforcement scheme and its remedial objectives and has been rejected in several cases involving Truth in Lending Act claims where attorney fees were not allowed to be set off by the creditor's counterclaim or claim of recoupment,[1137] and in certain cases were paid directly to the attorney.[1138]

Where the client is represented by a legal services program or other nonprofit organization, some courts order attorney fees to be paid directly to the attorneys because the client does not pay a fee to their attorney and giving the full amount to the consumer would therefore be an unwarranted windfall.[1139]

Although the fee award usually belongs in the first instance to the client, where an appeal solely concerns attorney fees, 1135 Lundsted v. JRV Holdings, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1665154 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 27, 2016) (while state court judgment held by debt buyer could be set off against FDCPA judgment, setoff against consumer's reasonable attorney fees was rejected due to considerations of public policy, priority in time of competing claims, separateness of two actions seeking to be offset, and nature of attorney-client contract).

1136 See, e.g., James v. Home Constr. Co. of Mobile, 689 F.2d 1357, 1359 (11th Cir. 1982) (TILA creates a right of action for attorneys to seek fee awards after settlement of the plaintiff's claim; "If settlement of a TILA case precluded the plaintiff's attorney from seeking a fee award, nothing would prevent indigent clients, who have no financial interest in statutory fee awards, from freely bargaining them away without personal detriment. Such a result would enable creditors who have violated the Act to escape liability for attorney's fees; such a practice would thwart both the statute's private enforcement scheme and its remedial objectives."); Plant v. Blazer Fin. Serv., Inc., 598 F.2d 1359, 1366 (5th Cir. 1979) (TILA case; "Allowance of attorney's fees in a successful action makes legal representation available in a manner analogous to the contingent fee system. Were the attorney's fee award subject to setoff, the expectation of fees from a successful action might well be limited to the resources of the debtor in any case where the outstanding debt, being in default and subject to counterclaim, exceeded the recovery. To allow a setoff would in effect relieve the creditors in violation of the Act of the attorney's fee expense in the case of an insolvent debtor. Such a result would thwart the statute's individual enforcement scheme and its remedial objectives."); Schmidt v. Citibank, 677 F. Supp. 687, 691 (D. Conn. 1987) (TILA case; "Attorney fees recovered are distinct from the consumer's recovery, which is preserved intact. The consumer did not receive the fee nor is he entitled to it, though the claim is made in his name."). See also Joseph A. Fischetti, Ratliff v. Astrue: The Collision of the Equal Access to Justice Act and the Debt Collection Improvement Act, 40 Seton Hall L. Rev. 723, 759 (2010) (written prior to the issuance of Supreme Court decision in Astrue v. Ratliff; arguing that circuit court decisions allowing offset "could have far-reaching consequences, potentially affecting civil-rights, environmental, consumer-protection, employment, and government-transparency laws that are central to our values as a society," even though the fee offsets only apply when the federal government is the creditor). But see Astrue v. Ratcliff, 560 U.S. 586, 588, 130 S. Ct. 2521, 177 L. Ed. 2d 91 (2010) (attorney fee awarded in an Equal Access to Justice Act case "is payable to the litigant and is therefore subject to a Government offset to satisfy a preexisting debt that the litigant owes the United States"; stressing that 31 U.S.C. §§ 3711 and 3716 give the federal government statutory authority to use administrative offsets to recover debts owed to it, and do not list fee awards among the items exempted—a possible basis for distinguishing FDCPA fee awards against non-governmental creditors); Harrington v. Berryhill, 906 F.3d 561 (7th Cir. 2018) (a reduction of a litigant's prior debts to the government by administrative offset constitutes payment to the prevailing party under EAJA, including attorney fees).

1137 See, e.g., Plant v. Blazer Fin. Serv., Inc., 598 F.2d 1359 (5th Cir. 1979), Carr v. Blazer Fin. Serv., Inc., 598 F.2d 1368 (5th Cir. 1979); Schmidt v. Citibank, 677 F. Supp. 687, 691 (D. Conn. 1987); Graham v. Bank of Damascus, 528 F. Supp. 596, 597 (W.D. Va. 1981) ("To allow such a setoff would effectively make Truth in Lending claims unavailable to insolvent debtors."); In re DiCianno, 58 B.R. 810, 814 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1986) ("The debtor has also sought attorneys' fees under § 1640(a)(3) for successful prosecution of the action. He asserts that attorneys' fees are properly payable to him presently, and are not subject to setoff against his debt. . . . We agree, since under the TILA, Congress envisioned that the debtor would be paid the fees in hand to disburse to counsel. A contrary conclusion would not aid debtors in attracting competent counsel to represent them."); Mortg. Elec. Registration Sys., Inc. v. Lambert, 2011 WL 345970 (Ohio Ct. App. Feb. 3, 2011) (attorney fee award belongs to the attorney and cannot be applied to reduce debtor's tender obligation).

1138 Carr v. Blazer Fin. Serv., Inc., 598 F.2d 1368 (5th Cir. 1979). See also Graham v. Graham, 2012 WL 1099886 (S.D. Ga. Mar. 30, 2012).

1139 See Burnett v. Ala Moana Pawn Shop, 3 F.3d 1261, 1262 (9th Cir. 1993) (consumer not charged for attorney services); Kessler v. Associates Fin. Serv., 639 F.2d 498 (9th Cir. 1981); Dennis v. Chang, 611 F.2d 1302, 1309 (9th Cir. 1980) (section 1983 claim) (court can order fees paid directly to attorney where representation is provided pro bono and retainer entitles the organization to any fees); Harris v. Tower Loan, 609 F.2d 120 (5th Cir. 1980); Rodriguez v. Taylor, 569 F.2d 1231, 1245 (3d Cir. 1977) (age discrimination case) (to avoid windfall, court can order fee paid directly to legal services program); Hairston v. R. & R. Apts., 510 F.2d 1090, 1093 (7th Cir. 1975) (housing discrimination case) (to avoid windfall, court can order fee paid directly to legal services organization). See also Saldivar v. Rodela, 894 F. Supp. 2d 916 (W.D. Tex. 2012); Benavides v. Benavides, 526 A.2d 536 (Conn. App. Ct. 1987); Fonsworth v. Hous. Auth. of Town of Windsor, 2002 WL 1980483, at *5 (Conn. Super. Ct. Aug. 22, 2002) (directing that payment of attorney fees be made directly to the legal services organization so that plaintiff did not reap a windfall); Pinnacle Props. v. Saulka, 693 N.E.2d 101, 105 (Ind. Ct. App. 1998) (recognizing that "any award made directly to the Tenants would result in a windfall to the Tenants and, thus, the award must be made to Student Legal Services"); Henriquez v. Henriquez, 992 A.2d 446 (Md. 2010) (attorney fees could be awarded directly to nonprofit organization that provided wife, the prevailing party, with pro bono legal representation during child custody and support proceeding even though fee-shifting statute did not contain language providing for payment of fees directly to an attorney); Black v. Brooks, 827 N.W.2d 256 (Neb. 2013) (in matter of first impression, award of attorney fees to which tenant was entitled due to landlord's willful noncompliance with lease agreements was paid directly to pro bono attorneys who represented tenant); Chanel v. Breton Builder Co., Ltd., 720 N.E.2d 941, 945 (Ohio Civ. App. 1998) (ordering fees in landlord tenant action to be paid directly to Student Legal Services organization).

the consumer's attorney has standing to pursue that action.[1140] Similarly, a prevailing plaintiff's former attorney can intervene to enforce their contingent fee agreement that legitimately exceeds the court's award of statutory attorney fees.[1141] However, an attorney has no right to seek fees if the client has waived the right to those fees, absent a prior assignment of rights[1142] or a contingent fee agreement.

11.13.5 Tax Consequences of Attorney Fee Awards

An attorney fee award may have consequences for the consumer, even if the consumer hands over the full attorney fee award to the attorney. The general rule is that the fee award is taxable income to the consumer even in that case, although there are several exceptions that often apply. These exceptions are examined at § 11.14, infra, including that the FDCPA damages award is not taxable, that the consumer is not obligated to pay for their attorney, for civil rights and related statutes (which possibly may include the FDCPA), and for class actions.

11.13.6 Record-Keeping for Attorney Fee Awards

To establish and maximize attorney fee awards, counsel for a consumer should keep accurate records of time spent on a debt collection case. Counsel should indicate the purpose or activity to which the time was devoted—for example, research, discovery, motion appearance, trial—since federal courts may review the time for reasonableness or assign a different rate of compensation for different types of work. Attorneys should also avoid "block billing" where several unrelated tasks are combined into one entry.[1143] Itemization of each task and describing each entry with sufficient specificity will provide adequate documentation of an attorney's time expenditures. Contemporaneously recorded time sheets are the preferred practice.[1144]

The federal courts have developed rigorous criteria and formulas for determining the rate and amount of awards of attorney fees,[1145] and counsel should be prepared to deal with such formulas. In federal courts, awards of attorney fees are generally based upon the affidavits of counsel. Hearings to determine the reasonableness of the amount of time, function, or rate of compensation usually take place only when awards are contested.

Consumer counsel in debtor abuse cases may also need to fashion their retainer agreement with consumers to provide for their fees on an hourly basis or as a percentage of the recovery if the case is settled. Some consumer counsel find that they must recover a portion of the damage award as attorney fees as well as obtain an award of attorney fees to maintain a practice in this area of law. Fee agreements are subject to local ethics rules, usually requiring the agreements to be written and reasonable.[1146]

11.13.7 Common Fund Attorney Fee Awards in Class Actions

While the lodestar method of computing attorney fees is used in individual FDCPA cases,[1147] a common fund approach to awarding attorney fees is sometimes used in FDCPA class actions.[1148] The common fund method awards the attorney a

1140 See § 11.13.11, infra.

1141 Venegas v. Mitchell, 495 U.S. 82, 110 S. Ct. 1679, 109 L. Ed. 2d 74 (1990) (40% contingent fee of $406,000 recoverable deducting $117,000 lodestar award).

1142 Zeisler v. Neese, 24 F.3d 1000 (7th Cir. 1994); Freeman v. B&B Assoc., 790 F.2d 145 (D.C. Cir. 1986). See also Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1986). Cf. Pony v. County of Los Angeles, 433 F.3d 1138 (9th Cir. 2006) (in 42 U.S.C. § 1983 case, assignment invalid under California law); Panola Land Buying Ass'n v. Clark, 844 F.2d 1506 (11th Cir. 1988) (attorney does not have standing to challenge settlement waiving fees under Equal Access to Justice Act); Smith v. S. Side Loan Co., 567 F.2d 306 (5th Cir. 1978) (attorney has no right to pursue case in chief after client's settlement); Bonfiglio v. EMC Mortg. Corp., 935 So. 2d 561 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2006) (TILA case; where settlement documents waived right to attorney fees, attorney lacked standing to pursue an award of fees). But see United States v. $186,416.00 in U.S. Currency, 722 F.3d 1173 (9th Cir. 2013) (where parties had not entered into settlement that waived any claim to fee award, attorney had valid contractual right to collect fee award and standing to protect his right); James v. Home Constr. Co. of Mobile, 689 F.2d 1357, 1359 (11th Cir. 1982) (plaintiff has no right to waive attorney fees in settlement agreement because that "practice would thwart both the statute's private enforcement scheme and its remedial objectives").

1143 Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849 (E.D. Va. 2020).

1144 See § 11.13.10.2, infra.

1145 See Tolentino v. Friedman, 46 F.3d 645, 653 (7th Cir. 1995) ("Paying counsel in FDCPA cases at rates lower than those they can obtain in the marketplace is inconsistent with the congressional desire to enforce the FDCPA through private actions, and therefore misapplies the law."). But cf. Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1992). In Farrar, the plaintiff, who was granted only nominal damages in this civil rights case when compensatory damages of $17 million were sought, was not entitled to an award of attorney fees. In her concurring opinion, Justice O'Connor wrote: "When the plaintiff's success is purely technical or de minimis, no fees can be awarded." Id. at 576. "That is not to say that all nominal damages awards are de minimis. Nominal relief does not necessarily a nominal victory make." Id., 506 U.S. at 578. Justice O'Connor stated that the difference between the amount sought and the amount recovered was not the only inquiry; other factors, such as the significance of the legal issue, must be considered. See also § 11.13.2, supra.

1146 An example of a retainer agreement is available online as companion material to National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions Appx. E.1 (10th ed. 2020) updated at www.nclc.org/library; § 11.13.1, supra.

1147 See § 11.13.8, infra.

1148 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 19.3.4 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library (detailed circuit-by-circuit analysis of courts using the common fund approach). See, e.g., In re TRS Recovery Serv., Inc. & Telecheck Serv., Inc., Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) Litig., 2016 WL 543137 (D. Me. Feb. 10, 2016) (in class action settlement, approving requested attorney fees and costs in total amount of $1,050,000, with $1,864,000 earmarked for consumers, of whom about 40,000 had made claims). Cf. Lambeth v. Advantage Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2015 WL 4624008 (D. Idaho percentage of the total recovery owed to the class—the common fund. The range normally approved by courts is twenty to thirty percent, with forty to fifty percent being the upper limit.[1149] Many courts will compute a rough lodestar value (allowable hours times reasonable hourly rates) as a cross-check against the common fund award, but the common fund calculation can exceed the lodestar calculation.[1150] Common fund attorney fees jurisprudence is examined in more detail in NCLC's Consumer Class Actions.[1151]

11.13.8 The Lodestar Approach to Calculating Attorney Fees

11.13.8.1 Generally

The lodestar approach is universally used to determine FDCPA attorney fees in individual actions. The lodestar is the number of allowable hours times a reasonable hourly rate or rates. There is a strong presumption that the lodestar amount represents an adequate and proper fee award.[1152]

Determination of both the reasonable hourly rate(s) and the allowable hours is in the trial court's discretion, and an appellate court will review the amount only for an abuse of discretion or a misapplication of the law.[1153] The United States Supreme Court and the circuit courts have developed standards for calculating these awards.[1154] A trial court's failure to follow these standards, or even failure to show clearly that these standards were followed, may be an abuse of discretion.[1155]

At one time, courts commonly adjusted this lodestar figure up or down, based on a number of factors reflective of the quality of representation, results obtained, the responsibilities and risks undertaken, availability of counsel and similar considerations. However recent Supreme Court decisions have severely constricted the availability of upward adjustments to the lodestar, so that, with the exception of delay in receiving award proceeds, upward adjustments to the lodestar are largely unavailable outside the context of common fund recoveries.[1156] In contrast, the lodestar may still be adjusted downward under certain circumstances.[1157] However, most courts have refused to reduce fee awards based on the defense argument that the attorney fees should be proportional to the amount the client recovers.[1158] As these decisions and others show, in most FDCPA cases the attorney fees award exceeds the damages award.[1159]

11.13.8.2 Determining the Allowable Hours

11.13.8.2.1 General standards

The Supreme Court has noted that the FDCPA is a "a comprehensive and complex federal statute."[1160] The complexity

Aug. 3, 2015) (consumer counsel sought lodestar fee, $17,122.50, where debt collector apparently had low net worth and agreed to cease its FDCPA violation).

1149 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 19.3.5.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1150 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 19.3.6 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library. See also Stumpf v. Pyod, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5753829 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 23, 2013).

1151 National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 19.3 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1152 Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 533, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983); Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1544 (9th Cir. 1992). See, e.g., Tenuto v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1764 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 31, 2002) (attorney fee of $140,950 or 35% of total settlement fund minus administrative costs was reasonable where lodestar was between $131,000 and $146,518). Cf. Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc. 338 F. Supp. 3d 729 (N.D. Ill 2018) (while there is strong presumption that lodestar is reasonable, presumption can be overcome in rare circumstance where it does not adequately take into account certain factors; court reduced lodestar figure where consumer had obtained only $500 in statutory damages in FDCPA matter and no actual damages).

1153 See Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 924 F.3d 949, 954 (7th Cir. 2019); Hepsen v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 394 Fed. Appx. 597 (11th Cir. 2010); Schlacher v. Law Offices of Phillip J. Rotche & Assoc., 574 F.3d 852 (7th Cir. 2009); Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 320 Fed. Appx. 442 (6th Cir. 2009). See also Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983); Johnson v. Eaton, 80 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 1996); Carroll v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 53 F.3d 626 (4th Cir. 1995); Harper v. Better Bus. Serv., Inc., 961 F.2d 1561, 1564 (11th Cir. 1992); Mares v. Credit Bur., 801 F.2d 1197 (10th Cir. 1986); Martinez v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1985).

1154 See, e.g., Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 114, 113 S. Ct. 566, 121 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1992); Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 436, 103 S. Ct. 1933, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (1983) ("'[T]he most critical factor' in determining the reasonableness of a fee award 'is the degree of success obtained.'").

1155 See § 11.13.11, infra.

1156 Perdue v. Kenny A. ex rel. Winn, 559 U.S. 542, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494 (2010); Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 483 U.S. 711, 727–728, 107 S. Ct. 3078, 97 L. Ed. 2d 585 (1987) (Delaware II); Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 478 U.S. 546, 564–566, 106 S. Ct. 3088, 92 L. Ed. 2d 439 (1986) (Delaware I); Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 897–902, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984).

1157 See § 11.13.8.2.4, infra. See also Larsen v. AR Res., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849 (E.D. Va. 2020) (lodestar reduced by $50,000 to account for travel time, non-legal tasks, and the low degree of success).

1158 See Appx E.3.3.1, infra. See also Cent. Pension Fund of the Int'l Union of Operating Eng'rs & Participating Emp'rs v. Ray Haluch Gravel Co., 745 F.3d 1, 6 (1st Cir. 2014); Archambault v. GC Serv. L.P., 2016 WL 6208395 (D. Me. 2016) (recognizing there are fixed litigation costs and a rigid proportionality test would allow defendants to "inflict[ ] with impunity small losses on the people whom they wrong"), quoting Orth v. Wis. State Employees. Union, Council 24, 546 F.3d 868, 875 (7th Cir. 2008). But see Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc. 338 F. Supp. 3d 729 (N.D. Ill 2018); Barrows v. Tri-Fin., 2009 WL 3672069 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 30, 2009) (fees for default judgment reduced to make proportionate to damages earned).

1159 See Johnson v. Eaton, 80 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 1996); Cope v. Duggins, 203 F. Supp. 2d 650 (E.D. La. 2002); Silva v. Nat'l Telewire Corp., 2001 WL 1609387 (D.N.H. Dec. 12, 2001) (awarding $59,288.50 attorney fees and $5338.45 costs and expenses); Norton v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 36 F. Supp. 2d 216 (D.N.J. 1999); Appx. E.3.3, infra.

1160 See Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 587, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010) ("a comprehensive and complex federal statute such as the FDCPA that imposes of the FDCPA may justify more time for preparation of an FDCPA case. Thus, a court has upheld a fee award, including hours spent by a prominent national co-counsel, over the defendant's objections that a co-counsel was not necessary and that the co-counsel's hours should not be included in the award.[1161] Time conferring with co-counsel in such cases is also compensable.[1162] The attorney fees award can include work performed before commencement of the litigation.[1163]

The allowable hours in the lodestar calculation are those hours claimed and documented by the attorney that were reasonably expended.[1164] In determining the number of hours that are reasonable to pursue a case, the relevant inquiry is "whether, at the time the work was performed, a reasonable attorney would have engaged in similar time expenditures."[1165] Excessive, non-productive, or duplicative time will not be allowed.[1166]

Courts often reduce or discount hours which are deemed duplicative of other compensated work,[1167] not sufficiently open-ended prohibitions on, inter alia, 'false, deceptive,' § 1692e, or 'unfair' practices, § 1692f").

---

1161 Anchondo v. Anderson, Crenshaw & Assoc., L.L.C., 616 F.3d 1098 (10th Cir. 2010); Archambault v. GC Serv. L.P., 2016 WL 6208395, at *6 (D. Me. 2016) ("the practice of joining with more experienced counsel can increase efficiency"); Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (multiple attorneys can be compensated if their work reflects distinct contributions); Long v. Nationwide Legal File & Serve, Inc., 2014 WL 3809401 (N.D. Cal. July 23, 2014) (rejecting effort to reduce claimed hours, noting that is not uncommon for multiple attorneys to appear at depositions and participate in deposition preparation); Arlozynski v. Rubin & Debski, P.A., 2011 WL 6319190 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 21, 2011) (noting in an FDCPA case that "[i]t is routine practice in federal litigation for multiple attorneys to be involved in the representation of each party"), adopted, 2011 WL 6318970 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 16, 2011); Johnson v. Weinstein & Riley, P.S., 2011 WL 1261578 (E.D.N.C. Mar. 30, 2011) (finding that staffing of case with two attorneys was not inherently excessive or resulting in needless duplication of effort). See also Hutchinson ex rel. Julien v. Patrick, 636 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2011) (disability rights suit); Gay Officers Action League v. Puerto Rico, 247 F.3d 288, 297 (1st Cir. 2001) ("Given the complexity of modern litigation, the deployment of multiple attorneys is sometimes an eminently reasonable tactic."); Garcia v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2012 WL 3778852 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2012) (finding it is not unusual for two attorneys to work together on such activities as conducting legal research, drafting motions, and preparing for trial; deducting some hours for fact that second attorney familiarized himself with case while "getting up to speed"); Cooper v. Sunshine Recoveries, Inc., 2001 WL 740765 (S.D.N.Y. June 27, 2001).

1162 Anchondo v. Anderson, Crenshaw & Assoc., 616 F.3d 1098, 1105 (10th Cir. 2010) (upholding award for time conferencing with co-counsel where supporting billing records "were neither facially excessive . . . nor conclusory"). See, e.g., Jacobson v. Persolve, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7230873 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2016) (observing that "collaboration and brainstorming are an important aspect of legal practice"); Alvarado v. Hovg, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5462429, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 29, 2016) ("[i]t is reasonable for the members of the legal team to meet regularly to develop strategy, update one another on developments, and give and receive instructions regarding assignments"); Castro v. Lloyd & McDaniel, 2016 WL 5110046, at *8 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 19, 2016) (consultations among counsel is "often a necessary practice when it benefits the client").

1163 Hutchinson ex rel. Julien v. Patrick, 636 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2011).

1164 Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 433 n.7, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) (stating in civil rights case that the standards "are generally applicable in all cases in which Congress has authorized an award of attorney fees to a 'prevailing party'"); Gastineau v. Wright, 592 F.3d 747, 748 (7th Cir. 2010); Hepsen v. J.C. Christensen & Assoc., Inc., 394 Fed. Appx. 597 (11th Cir. 2010) (affirming reduction of hours to reasonable amount); Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 378 F. Supp. 3d 222 (W.D.N.Y. 2019); Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc. 338 F. Supp. 3d 729 (N.D. Ill 2018); In re Arbitration Between Okyere & Houslanger & Assoc., 2015 WL 4366865 (S.D.N.Y. May 28, 2015) (inconsistency in consumer counsel's time records reduced fee award); Harper v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 2009 WL 3059113 (D. Colo. Sept. 21, 2009) (hours expended were reasonable); Brown v. Sterling & King, Inc., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15599 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 27, 2009) (hours spent for default judgment were reasonable); Cooper v. Sunshine Recoveries, Inc., 2001 WL 740765 (S.D.N.Y. June 27, 2001); Hagan v. MRS Assoc., 2001 WL 531119 (E.D. La. May 15, 2001) (detailed analysis as to reasonable hours in case: 10 hours as reasonable for settlement efforts, 25 hours for discovery, 14.25 hours for legal research, and 5 hours for opening matter and preparing complaint). See also Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984).

1165 Grant v. Martinez, 973 F.2d 96 (2d Cir. 1992); Eades v. Kennedy, P.C. Law Offices, 343 F. Supp. 3d 104 (W.D.N.Y. 2018).

1166 Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 924 F.3d 949, 956 (7th Cir. 2019) (affirming district court's reduction of fees because majority of attorneys' time was spent "pursuing an unsuccessful and ill-advised effort to win a much bigger payoff than was even remotely possible in the circumstances giving rise to [the plaintiff's] claims"); Ferrari v. U.S. Equities Corp., 661 Fed. Appx. 47 (2d Cir. 2016) (affirming lower court's reduction of compensable hours for time spent on initially deficient complaint and motion practice related thereto, but reversing double deduction for these hours, as there was no finding of misconduct by consumer's attorney); Giovannoni v. Bidna & Keys, 255 Fed. Appx. 124 (9th Cir. 2007) (affirming reduction of the claimed lodestar hours by half because, inter alia, attorney unreasonably prolonged settlement discussions and was inefficient in work performed); Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1544 (9th Cir. 1992); Copeland v. Marshall, 641 F.2d 880 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Larsen v. AR Res., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849 (E.D. Va. 2020); Gray v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 447 F. Supp. 3d 724 (N.D. Ill. 2019); In re Arbitration Between Okyere & Houslanger & Assoc., P.L.L.C., 2015 WL 4366865 (S.D.N.Y. May 28, 2015); Danow v. Law Office of David E. Borback, P.A., 634 F. Supp. 2d 1337 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (awarding fees for two attorneys; third attorney was "second chair" at trial and his services were superfluous), aff'd on other grounds, 367 Fed. Appx. 22 (11th Cir. 2010); Zhang v. GC Serv., L.P., 537 F. Supp. 2d 805 (E.D. Va. 2008) (fee application reduced based on duplication of efforts, billing attorney time for clerical or paralegal work, and unexplained time entries; court found forty-six hours reasonably expended by lead counsel in this uncomplicated case settled fairly early after filing).

1167 Fair Hous. Council v. Landow, 999 F.2d 92 (4th Cir. 1993); Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1544 (9th Cir. 1992) (hours claimed must reflect distinct contribution of each lawyer); Dechert ex rel. Estate of Oyler v. The Cadle Co., 2004 WL 2999112, at *5 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 10, 2004) (reducing fees for duplication, "given that this was a matter arising under a strict liability statute and given that there are an ample number of local practitioners well versed and experienced in the FDCPA"); Cooper v. Sunshine Recoveries, Inc., 2001 WL 740765 (S.D.N.Y. June 27, 2001).

itemized,[1168] unnecessary, or inefficient.[1169] Indeed, a few courts view reducing the award below what would otherwise be a reasonable fee as an appropriate sanction for a grossly excessive fee request.[1170] Courts may also devalue work which is perceived as not requiring a lawyer of the expertise, experience, and reputation of the lawyer who claims the time,[1171] although most courts will not require an attorney to so parse time expenditures.[1172]

Practical considerations in regard to fee applications may be found at § 11.13.8.1, infra. The issue of whether reductions in fees will be imposed when the consumer prevails on some, but not all claims is discussed at § 11.13.6.2.3, infra.

An expert's affidavit on the reasonableness of the hours expended may be useful to the court's determination of this issue.[1173] Courts are far more likely to disallow hours claimed if there are no contemporaneous time records, or if those records fail to specify the nature of the task, the time expended, and the general subject matter involved.[1174]

A defendant who litigates a case vigorously cannot later complain about the resulting hours that consumer's counsel needed to respond.[1175] In evaluating the reasonableness of the hours devoted to the case, some courts consider the amount of time spent by defense counsel on the case, while others discount the relevance of such a comparison.[1176]

Although some courts have held that consumer attorney fees should not be awarded for hours accruing after the consumer inappropriately rejected an offer of judgment,[1177] absent a showing of bad faith, the lodestar should not be adjusted downward for refusing a settlement offer that was lower than the judgment the consumer obtained.[1178] In one case, for 1168 E.g., Lyon v. Chase Bank USA, 656 F.3d 877 (9th Cir. 2011) (court may reduce fee requested if it is only supported by block-billing statements of relevant activities); Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849 (E.D. Va. 2020); O Centro Espirita Beneficente União Do Vegetal in U.S. v. Duke, 343 F. Supp. 3d 1050 (D.N.M. 2018) (block billing does not call for disallowing entire sum sought); Mayer v. RSB Equity Group, L.L.C., 2011 WL 2650185, at *2 (C.D. Cal. July 5, 2011) (reducing fees by 30% where plaintiff's counsel used "block-billing" that "makes it impossible for the Court to determine whether specific entries are excessive or duplicative"); Clark v. Universal Debt Solutions, Inc., 2007 WL 2386581 (D. Haw. Aug. 16, 2007) (hours reduced because some time was billed in quarter-hour increments); Francis v. Snyder, 2006 WL 1236052 (N.D. Ill. May 4, 2006) (reducing attorney fees for block billing, grouping together time for different tasks, and vague entries); Sparkman v. Zwicker & Assoc., P.C., 2006 WL 463939 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 27, 2006) (lack of acceptable time records). But see Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (rejecting defense argument that time records referring to such activities as "continue to revise [summary judgment] Memorandum of Law" were too vague, although then applying a 10% reduction across the board for block billing); Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, Inc., 2003 WL 187416 (W.D. Mich. Jan. 22, 2003) (even though there was some duplication of attendance by local and out-of-state counsel, the duplication would not be the basis for reducing the award when joint attendance was necessary for them to confer on the case and the use of local counsel reduced the total hours spent). See also Samms v. Abrams, 198 F. Supp. 3d 311, 321 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) ("stating that a certain amount of time was spent working on a particular pleading or motion is sufficient for the Court to evaluate the merit of the entry").

1169 Envtl. Defense Fund v. Reilly, 1 F.3d 1254, 1258 (D.C. Cir. 1994); Fair Hous. Council v. Landlow, 999 F.2d 92 (4th Cir. 1993); Keenan v. City of Philadelphia, 983 F.2d 459 (3d Cir. 1992); Mares v. Credit Bur. of Raton, 801 F.2d 1197, 1205 (5th Cir. 1986) (TILA case); Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984) (TILA case); Valencia v. Affiliated Group, Inc., 674 F. Supp. 2d 1300 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (plaintiffs should not be rewarded for holding out for additional attorney fees after refusing settlement demand offering maximum amount of statutory damages awardable, as well as attorney fees and costs). But see Terry v. C&D Complete Bus. Solutions 2011 WL 2144614, at *1 (W.D. Mo. May 31, 2011) ("While it might be easy to second-guess or "Monday morning quarterback" an attorneys' fee request, the issue is reasonableness, not whether the work was perfect or even perfectly efficient.").

1170 Davis v. Credit Bur. of the South, 908 F.3d 972, 977 (5th Cir. Nov. 16, 2018) (denial of all attorney fees where quality of pleadings and brief on appeal along with limited success on simple claim did not warrant extraordinary $450 hourly rate, 156.55 hours, and request for $130,410 in attorney fees); Baylor v. Mitchell Rubenstein & Assoc., 857 F.3d 939 (D.C. Cir. 2017) (Henderson, J., concurring) ($221,155 attorney fee request in connection with accepted offer of judgment was excessive due to attorney's billing for unnecessary or excessive work and seeking hourly rate $125 above that charged to client); Eades v. Kennedy, PC. Law Offices, 343 F. Supp. 3d 104, 106 (W.D.N.Y. 2018) (counsel's hours more extensive than necessary allowing for "an across-the-board reduction in the amount of hours for which compensation is sought").

1171 Envtl. Defense Fund v. Reilly, 1 F.3d 1254 (D.C. Cir. 1994); Fair Hous. Council v. Landlow, 999 F.2d 92 (4th Cir. 1993); Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984); Aslam v. Malen & Assoc., 669 F. Supp. 2d 275 (E.D.N.Y. 2009) (finding that jury instructions had been lifted from this treatise).

1172 Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1548 (9th Cir. 1992).

1173 See § 11.13.10.2, infra (preparation of the fee application). See Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 852 (E.D. Va. 2020) (affidavit verifying prevailing markets rates would have been helpful to support request for alternative rate).

1174 See § 11.13.10.2, infra.

1175 See id.

1176 Tikan v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1212641, at *2 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 12, 2016) (purpose of fee shifting statutes such as FDCPA is to ensure that plaintiffs whose damages may be relatively small may nevertheless obtain counsel to vindicate their federal rights), adopted, 2016 WL 1182771 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 28, 2016).

1177 Lee v. Thomas & Thomas, 109 F.3d 302 (6th Cir. 1997). See also Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 338 F. Supp. 3d 729 (N.D. Ill 2018); Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 6523151 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 29, 2017) (where plaintiff rejected offer of judgment for $2500 more than maximum statutory damages and attorney fees through date of acceptance, and jury awarded no actual damages, but only maximum $1000 in statutory damages, court awarded just $10,875 of the $187,410 requested), aff'd, 924 F.3d 949 (7th Cir. 2019); Guerrero v. Hudson & Keyse, L.L.C., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4921 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 20, 2009) (reduction for attorney time spent after offer of judgment); § 11.7, supra.

1178 See Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 320 Fed. Appx. 442 (6th Cir. 2009); Armstrong v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2012 WL 404893, at *1 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 8, 2012) (rejecting argument that fees should be limited to those accrued at time of pre-litigation settlement offer: "pre-suit settlement negotiations became irrelevant when Plaintiff filed her complaint"; also noting that defendant had rejected amount of fees requested pre-suit); Terry v. C&D Complete Bus. Solutions 2011 WL 2144614, at *2 (W.D. Mo. May 31, 2011) ("While the Court encourages parties to settle their disputes, it is ultimately not relevant to the determination of reasonable attorneys' fees. The question is the reasonableness of the requested fees—not whether example, the court rejected the defendant's argument that the plaintiff's attorney exhibited bad faith in declining his offers of settlement: "Defendant could have made a formal offer of judgment at the inception of this lawsuit thereby avoiding any liability for costs, including attorney's fee, incurred after the offer was made. Instead, Defendant made the decision to continue to try to negotiate a settlement without admission of liability which had the effect of prolonging the litigation and increasing Plaintiff's attorney's fees."[1179] The court found that the defendant's "insistence on settling the matter without any admission of liability significantly contributed to the delay in the resolution of this case and the accrual of additional attorney's fees."[1180]

Allowable hours include not only attorney time, but also time spent by paralegals and law clerks who work on the case (although reimbursed at a lower hourly rate than attorneys).[1181] An attorney's travel time should be compensable, sometimes at a reduced hourly rate.[1182] there was some possibility at some point in time to reduce the fees by settling. Requiring plaintiffs to accept a settlement offer or face a reduction in their attorneys' fees would disregard the fee-shifting policy enacted by Congress."); Bell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2011 WL 673919 (W.D. Okla. Feb. 17, 2011) (questioning and distinguishing Lee v. Thomas and Thomas, where plaintiff rejected defendant's pre-litigation settlement offer of maximum statutory damages and attorney fees to date, but plaintiff, through litigation, recovered an award of damages in excess of statutory amount); Danow v. Law Office of David E. Borback, P.A., 634 F. Supp. 2d 1337 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (ignoring $1000 offer of judgment as basis to reduce fees because it was not "less favorable" than $1000 jury award), aff'd, 367 Fed. Appx. 22 (11th Cir. 2010).

1179 Cabala v. Morris, 2012 WL 3656364, at *4 (D. Conn. Aug. 24, 2012), aff'd on other grounds, 2013 WL 6066412 (2d Cir. Nov. 19, 2013).

1180 Id. See also Garcia v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2012 WL 3778852 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2012) (rejecting the contention that plaintiff's fee award should be reduced based on settlement negotiations considering conflicting perspectives of settlement proceedings on both sides, and lack of evidence on record of bad faith).

1181 Missouri v. Jenkins ex rel. Agyei, 491 U.S. 274, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989). See, e.g., Castro v. Lloyd & McDaniel, 2016 WL 5110046 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 19, 2016) ($200/hour for paralegal time); Langhorne v. Takhar Grp. Collection Serv., Ltd., No. 13-CV-231C, 2016 WL 1177980, at *2 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 28, 2016) ("The court finds the number of hours and the hourly rates ($ 300 per hour for experienced attorney and $ 50 per hour for paralegal) to be reasonable, given the prevailing market rates in this district for FDCPA cases in the recent past."); Zoeckler v. Credit Claims & Collections, Inc., 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20363 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 1, 1983) (FDCPA case; only paralegal work for tasks traditionally done by attorney); Postow v. Oriental Bldg. Ass'n, 455 F. Supp. 781 (D.D.C. 1978), aff'd sub nom. Postow v. OBA Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 627 F.2d 1370 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (TILA case). See, e.g., Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (awarding $95 per hour for paralegal in FDCPA litigation); Ward v. G. Reynolds Sims & Assoc., P.C., 2014 WL 4798935 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 26, 2014) (awarding $140 per hour for paralegals, noting that such work saves plaintiff fees).

1182 Hutchinson ex rel. Julien v. Patrick, 636 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2011); Johnson v. Credit Int'l, Inc., 257 Fed. Appx. 8 (9th Cir. 2007); Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1544 (9th Cir. 1992); In re Pine, 705 F.2d 936 (7th Cir. 1983); Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 853 (E.D. Va. 2020) (reduced by 50%); Alvarado v. Hovg, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5462429 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 29, 2016) (not reducing rate);

11.13.8.2.2 Examples of allowable hours

Courts have found expending the following number of hours to be allowable:[1183]

- 28.7 hours in travel time to conduct in-person depositions;[1184]
- 8 hours for deposition, 9 hours for preparing jury instructions, and 37 hours of trial prep for 3-day trial;[1185]
- 7 hours in case where settlement was $1001—1.0 hour to meet with client, 1.25 hours to obtain and review the relevant documents, 2.25 hours to draft the complaint and update the governing case law, 1.0 hour to review the offer of judgment and discuss it with client, and 1.5 hours for myriad ministerial tasks;[1186]
- 1204.8 total hours for a multiple-year complex consumer class action including contentious discovery, motion practice, and numerous conferences and correspondence over about seven years;[1187]
- 11.5 hours for opening the file, researching potential claims, and drafting the complaint;[1188]
- 25 hours to draft an FDCPA complaint that involved mortgage and foreclosures issues;[1189]
- 13.4 hours for case settled in shortly after the amended complaint;[1190]

Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (50% of time spent traveling); Santiago v. Equable Ascent Fin., 2013 WL 3498079 (N.D. Cal. July 12, 2013) (FDCPA action; awarding hourly rate of $475 to plaintiff's out-of-state attorney, including for travel time); In re Mattera, 128 B.R. 107 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1991) (travel time allowed but deduction made), aff'd, 144 B.R. 687 (E.D. Pa. 1992). Cf. Silva v. Nat'l Telewire Corp., 2001 WL 1609387 (D.N.H. Dec. 12, 2001) (generally, travel time was not compensated at full professional rate; 50% of professional rate was reasonable).

1183 See Appx. E.3.3.3, infra.

1184 Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 853 (E.D. Va. 2020) (reduced from 57.4 hours).

1185 Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 854 (E.D. Va. 2020).

1186 Gray v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 447 F. Supp. 3d 724, 726 (N.D. Ill. 2019).

1187 Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 378 F. Supp. 3d 222, 231 (W.D.N.Y. 2019).

1188 See Campista v. Creditors Fin. Group L.L.C., 2014 WL 127083 (D. Or. Jan. 13, 2014). See also Reith v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2012 WL 5458007 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 8, 2012) (7.5 hours for all timekeepers); Castro v. First Nat'l Collection Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 4468318 (D. Colo. Sept. 27, 2012) (12 hours); Bosket v. NCO Fin. Sys., Inc., 2012 WL 4093023 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 17, 2012) (7.5 hours of attorney time to prepare case and complaint and accept offer of judgment made at time of answer); Pinkham v. Prof'l Claims Bur., Inc., 367 F. Supp. 2d 338 (E.D.N.Y. May 2, 2005) (7.3 hours of work prior to accepting offer of judgment); Riter v. Moss & Bloomberg, Ltd., 2000 WL 1433867 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 26, 2000) (5 hours to draft five-page complaint that was similar to one filed before).

1189 Marshall v. Reisman, 2013 WL 1563335 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 25, 2013), adopted, 2013 WL 1561478 (E.D.N.Y. Apr. 12, 2013).

1190 See Cotner v. Buffaloe & Assoc., 2012 WL 1670552 (E.D. Tenn. May 14, 2012) (13.4 hours to file complaint and amended complaint in case that was settled shortly after scheduling conference). See also Flora v. Plotkin & Plotkin, P.C., 2012 WL 6019311 (D. Colo. Dec. 4, 2012) (14 hours); Nuanes v. NCC Bus. Serv., Inc., 2012 WL 5464598 (D. Colo. Nov. 9, 2012) (10 hours); Howard v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 4359361 (D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2012) (10.1 hours); Ellis v. Midland

- 36 hours and more to obtain a default judgment;[1191]
- 27 hours for prevailing in arbitration;[1192]
- 46 hours for an individual case settled during discovery;[1193]
- 229 hours for a class action settled during discovery;[1194]
- 205.4 hours in case determined by summary judgment;[1195]
- 155 hours after accepting an offer of judgment just before trial involving taped collection calls and a vigorous defense;[1196]
- 172 hours where an offer of judgment was accepted;[1197]
- 189 hours in a settled case;[1198]
- 730 hours for obtaining a jury verdict;[1199]

Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 4356251 (D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2012) (8.4 hours).

1191 French v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 489 F.3d 402 (1st Cir. 2007). See also Penning v. Intrinsictel L.L.C., 2017 WL 3172853, at *2 (W.D. Mich. June 7, 2017) (on default, awarded $46,160 in attorney fees, based on 115 hours of work, requested hourly rate of $400, and $2,240.25 in costs where "the admitted scheme was a complicated one involving many actors"), adopted, 2017 WL 3151231 (July 25, 2017); Buskirk v. Premium Recovery Group, Inc., 2016 WL 796889 (D.N.J. Feb. 29, 2016) ($7,267.50 attorney fees at hourly rate of $450); Crider v. Pac. Acquisitions & Assoc., 2015 WL 6689391 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2015) (25 hours); Middlesworth v. Oaktree Collections, Inc., 2009 WL 3720884 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2009) (13 hours); Basinger-Lopez v. Tracy Paul & Assoc., 2009 WL 1948832 (N.D. Cal. July 6, 2009) (16 hours); Hartung v. J.D. Byrider, Inc., 2009 WL 1876690 (E.D. Cal. June 26, 2009) (23 hours); Clark v. Universal Debt Solutions, Inc., 2007 WL 2386581 (D. Haw. Aug. 16, 2007) (30 hours); Knight v. Integrity Resolution Group, L.L.C., 2007 WL 2345249 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 14, 2007) (25 hours); Gervais v. O'Connell, Harris & Assoc., Inc., 297 F. Supp. 2d 435 (D. Conn. 2003) (27 hours).

1192 Moyer v. Turnbrook Assoc., Inc., 2005 WL 2660353 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 17, 2005) (awarding $6461.87 in attorney fees for 27 hours spent on client intake, research, pleadings, and arbitration after entry of arbitration award of $1000 for violation of FDCPA). See also Nicaisse v. Mel S. Harris & Assoc., 2015 WL 5561296 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 19, 2015) (awarding consumer $13,700 in attorney fees based on 63.5 hours and $2316 in costs as case was strongly litigated by both sides and generated substantial motion practice, depositions, a court appearance before the magistrate judge, and an arbitration hearing).

1193 See Rubenstein v. Nat'l Recovery Agency, Inc., 2012 WL 1425144 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2012). See also Stockman v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2015 WL 4999851 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 21, 2015) (upon settlement of this FDCPA/TCPA case, consumer was awarded attorney fees of $14,366.25 for 63.85 hours of compensable work and costs of $445); Ochoa v. Mistovich, 2012 WL 6720682 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 27, 2012) ($2794 in attorney fees); Holzhauer v. Hayt, Hayt & Landau, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3286059 (D.N.J. Aug. 10, 2012) (34.6 hours).

1194 De La Paz v. Rubin & Rothman, L.L.C., 2013 WL 6184425 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 25, 2013).

1195 Hagen v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 2015 WL 1963057 (D. Minn. Apr. 30, 2015) (205.4 hours of work of consumer's counsel, a University of Minnesota's Legal Clinic professor and four student attorneys assigned to case). See also Pape v. Law Offices of Frank N. Peluso, P.C., 2016 WL 755602 (D. Conn. Feb. 25, 2016) (awarding consumer attorney fees of $34,100 based on 85.25 hours at hourly rate of $400 (based on consumer counsel's 45 years of arcane FDCPA litigation), after $1000 statutory damage award pursuant to summary judgment in his favor); Christopher v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 2015 WL 3960163 (D. Ariz. June 30, 2015) (about 60 hours of work; $15,333); Johnson v. CFS II, Inc., 2013 WL 6700394 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 19, 2013) (147 hours); Lamberson v. Bank of Am. Corp., 2012 WL 4129807 (D. Minn. Sept. 19, 2012) ($17,458 in fees); Cabala v. Morris, 2012 WL 3656364 (D. Conn. Aug. 24, 2012) ($32,489.29 in fees), aff'd, 2013 WL 6066412 (2d Cir. Nov. 19, 2013); Rodriguez v. Florida First Fin. Group, Inc., 2009 WL 535980 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 3, 2009) (109 hours); Nelson v. Select Fin. Serv., Inc., 2006 WL 1672889 (E.D. Pa. June 9, 2006) (68 hours); Owens v. Howe, 365 F. Supp. 2d 942 (N.D. Ind. 2005) (53.5 hours); Goins v. JBC & Assoc., P.C., 2005 WL 3536147 (D. Conn. Nov. 28, 2005) (55 hours); Dowling v. Kucker Kraus & Bruh, L.L.P., 2005 WL 1337442 (S.D.N.Y. June 6, 2005) (95 hours; 11 hours for investigation and discovery, 15 hours for discovery, 56 hours for summary judgment, and 13 hours for the costs and fees; reduced fee application to just over half); Jones v. Vest, 2000 WL 33797103 (E.D. Va. Nov. 7, 2000) (87 hours).

1196 Blalock v. Maximum Sec. Alarm, Inc., 2012 WL 5467531 (D. Or. Nov. 9, 2012) (155 hours (reduced from 182), including 11.7 hours for the fee petition). See also Garcia v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2012 WL 3778852 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2012) ($187,292.25 in attorney fees reflecting 565 hours of attorney time plus $16,470 for postjudgment work on fee application); Stair ex rel. Smith v. Thomas & Cook, 2009 WL 1635346 (D.N.J. June 10, 2009) (93 hours); Cancio v. Fin. Credit Network, Inc., 2005 WL 1629809 (N.D. Cal. July 6, 2005) ($10,000 in fees reducing compensable hours to eight for complaint, seven for case management, eight for discovery, one for acceptance of Rule 68 offer, and 7.8 for attorney fee petition); Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Serv., Inc., 2004 WL 1503953 (D. Kan. June 9, 2004) (awarding over $87,000 in fees).

1197 Thorpe v. Collection Info. Bur., Inc., 1996 WL 806149 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 8, 1996). See also Howard v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 4359361 (D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2012) (awarding $2525); Livingston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 4328367 (D. Colo. Sept. 20, 2012) (following plaintiff's acceptance of offer of judgment, awarding attorney fees in the amount of $1900 at rate of $250 per hour); Giovannoni v. Bidna & Keys, a Prof'l Law Corp., 2006 WL 279345 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 3, 2006) (about twelve attorney and three law clerk hours were reasonably expended where consumer rejected first, but accepted second offer of judgment for $1001); Smith v. Perimeter Credit, L.L.C., 2004 WL 1987231 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 27, 2004) (27 hours).

1198 Rodriguez v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 2009 WL 689056 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 16, 2009). See also Bauer v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 6733649 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 4, 2012) (55 hours in three cases settled before discovery), adopted, 2012 WL 6733021 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 28, 2012); Bishop-Melvin v. First Am. Acceptance Co., L.L.C., 2012 WL 3578173 (D.N.J. Aug. 20, 2012) (23 hours in case settled shortly after complaint was filed); Gupta v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2012 WL 1060054 (D. Minn. Mar. 29, 2012) (105 attorney hours in obtaining settlement after discovery was compelled); Silver v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2010 WL 5140851 (D. Conn. Dec. 16, 2010) (73.65 hours); Dennis v. Syndicated Office Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 3632478 (S.D. Fla. Sept. 14, 2010) (22.5 hours); Morris v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2009 WL 1362594 (E.D. Pa. May 15, 2009) (approximately 200 hours); Sakaria v. FMS Inv. Corp., 2009 WL 1322356 (D. Haw. May 12, 2009) (26 hours); Bernard v. Int'l Portfolio Mgmt., Inc., 2005 WL 1840157 (S.D. Fla. July 25, 2005) (83 hours).

1199 Delalat v. Syndicated Office Sys., Inc., 2014 WL 930162 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2014) (730 hours). See also Sherwood v. BRT Corp., 2015 WL 6437850 (D. Colo. Oct. 23, 2015) (awarding consumer $31 in actual damages, $1000 in statutory damages, and $26,647 in attorney fees for 140.3 hours in this case that went to trial); Rockwell v. Talbott, Adams & Moore, Inc., 2006 WL 436041 (D. Neb. Feb. 21, 2006) (200 hours of legal work, substantial reduction from amount sought due to plaintiff's limited success following two-day jury trial); Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 320 Fed. Appx. 442 (6th Cir. 2009) (165.2 hours after three-day bench trial); Clark v. Quick Collect, Inc., 2006 WL 572157 (D. Or. Mar. 6, 2006) (reducing hours by one-third; 98 hours to prepare case).

- 565 hours in case settled after preparing for a trial;[1200]
- 63 hours to defend an appeal;[1201]
- 2.5 hours to enforce a settlement agreement;[1202]
- 27.1 hours for postjudgment collection activities;[1203]
- 4 hours for preparing motion for attorney fees.[1204]

11.13.8.2.3 Computing allowable hours where consumer does not prevail on all claims

The total number of hours spent on the case will be reduced where the consumer failed to prevail on claims that were unrelated to the successful FDCPA claim and these claims are based on different facts and legal theories, so that work on one claim does not help the attorney prepare for the other.[1205] Conversely, where there is a common core of facts or where the legal theories are related, it is impractical to separate the attorney's time for each claim.[1206] At least when a case is settled, a court need not "scrutinize" every pleading and paper "to determine which involved only successful legal work."[1207]

A fee award should not be reduced based on unsuccessful motion practice. "It is entirely reasonable if not part and parcel of attorney's obligation to zealously advocate to research and pursue strategies that an advocate may ultimately conclude is advantageous to abandon or withdraw. Where the strategy or work was not frivolous in the first instance, an attorney should be entitled to those fees as time reasonably spent pursuing the matter."[1208]

Where attorneys have obtained excellent results, they should recover a fully compensatory fee for work on all the claims, FDCPA and non-FDCPA, even though many of these claims were not successful or would not independently result in attorney fees for prevailing consumers.[1209] The result is what matters,[1210] and the consumer's attorney should not be penalized for raising alternative legal grounds that the court dismisses or does not reach.[1211] On the other hand, a reduced 1200 Garcia v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2012 WL 3778852 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2012) (awarding $187,292.25 in attorney fees reflecting 565 hours of attorney time and $9844.40 in costs, plus $16,470 for postjudgment work on the fee application in a case that was settled by cocounsel after preparing for five-day trial after parties' stipulation to damages of $50,000). See also Dunaway v. JBC & Assoc., Inc., 2005 WL 3465665 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 19, 2005) (262.8 hours in winning summary judgment, preparing for trial on damages, and settling case before trial).

1201 See Hooper v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 2005 WL 1899380 (D. Or. Aug. 8, 2005) (78.1 hours); Shula v. Lawent, 2004 WL 2044279 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 2, 2004).

1202 Kelly v. Jormandy, Inc., 2005 WL 3177730 (W.D. Va. Nov. 29, 2005) (experienced consumer attorney was entitled to fees for 2.5 hours at $300 per hour for enforcing settlement agreement).

1203 See Collins v. Bowman, Heintz, Boscia & Vician P.C., 2012 WL 1142442 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 8, 2012) (repeated failures to pay offer of judgment), adopted, 2012 WL 1142560 (S.D. Ind. Apr. 4, 2012).

1204 Midwest Disability Initiative v. Nelmatt, L.L.C., 344 F. Supp. 3d 1047 (D. Minn. 2018) (ADA-compliance action where court compared analysis to FDCPA cases; reduced from 6.5 hours requested).

1205 See Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983); Eades v. Kentucky, PC. Law Offices, 343 F. Supp. 3d 104, 107 (W.D.N.Y. 2018); In re Arbitration Between Okyere & Houslanger & Assoc., P.L.L.C., 2015 WL 4366865 (S.D.N.Y. May 28, 2015). See also Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 338 F. Supp. 3d 729, 738 (N.D. Ill 2018) (where plaintiff was denied actual damages and provided only limited statutory damages, court reduced fee by 20%).

1206 See Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 853 (E.D. Va. 2020) (no reduction in attorney fees where the TCPA claim (abandoned) and FDCPA claim arose from a common nucleus of facts and required overlapping work); West v. Americas Processing Ctr., Inc., 2018 WL 4610662 (W.D. Va. July 25, 2018); Daley v. A & S Collection Assoc., Inc., 2010 WL 5137834 (D. Or. Dec. 10, 2010). See also Karr v. Med-I Solutions, L.L.C., 2014 WL 5392098, at *4 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 22, 2014) (rejecting collection agency's request for wholesale percentage reduction for work performed on unsuccessful claim, since both claims were interrelated and much of legal work performed would have been performed regardless of whether unsuccessful claim existed); Long v. Nationwide Legal File & Serve, Inc., 2014 WL 3809401 (N.D. Cal. July 23, 2014) (no reduction for unsuccessful claims which arose out of same alleged course of conduct and were based on related legal theories); Rousseau v. Morris, 2014 WL 941476 (D. Conn. Mar. 11, 2014) (awarding fees for time spent on unsuccessful, but related state law claim); Garcia v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2012 WL 3778852 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2012) (time expended on discovery regarding incidents outside statute of limitations was not deducted, since these incidents were admissible as related to plaintiff's claims to show background and establish foundation for other evidence, as well as to show plaintiff's vulnerable state of mind and establish extent of general damages); Bryant v. Cab Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2011 WL 1331267 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 6, 2011) (holding that 50% reduction of attorney fees was not warranted just because plaintiff was entitled to fees on just one of two claims and facts and legal theories with respect to plaintiff's Florida CCPA and FDCPA claims were interrelated, citing Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 434–435, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983)), adopted, 2011 WL 1598732 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 27, 2011).

1207 Hatfield v. AIH Receivable Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 4761047 (W.D. Mo. Mar. 28, 2013) (noting that AIH's argument—that an attorney cannot recover for "unsuccessful legal work"—is not supported by any case law).

1208 Cabala v. Morris, 2012 WL 3656364, at *8 (D. Conn. Aug. 24, 2012), aff'd, 2013 WL 6066412 (2d Cir. Nov. 19, 2013). See also M.T. ex rel. Todd v. Accounts Recovery Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 3764039 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 8, 2012) (no reduction was made for preparing discovery that was not served), adopted, 2012 WL 3764036 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 28, 2012); A.M. ex rel. Mundy v. Accounts Recovery Bur., Inc., 2012 WL 3764034 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 8, 2012) (award included time for preparing discovery where the case settled before discovery was served), adopted, 2012 WL 3764028 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 28, 2012).

1209 See Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 435, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) ("Where a plaintiff has obtained excellent results, his attorney should recover a fully compensatory fee. Normally this will encompass all hours reasonably expended on the litigation, and indeed in some cases of exceptional success an enhanced award may be justified. In these circumstances the fee award should not be reduced simply because the plaintiff failed to prevail on every contention raised in the lawsuit."); Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 320 Fed. Appx. 442 (6th Cir. 2009); Harris v. Marhoefer, 24 F.3d 16 (9th Cir. 1994); Rousseau v. Morris, 2014 WL 941476 (D. Conn. Mar. 11, 2014) (awarding fees for time spent on unsuccessful, but related state law claim); Hatfield v. AIH Receivable Mgmt. Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 4761047 (W.D. Mo. Mar. 28, 2013) (rejecting argument that attorney fees could be awarded only for successful claims); Cooper v. Sunshine Recoveries, Inc., 2001 WL 740765 (S.D.N.Y. June 27, 2001) (elimination of time spent on unsuccessful class claims was warranted).

1210 Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 435, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983).

1211 See Texas State Teachers Ass'n v. Garland Indep. Sch. Dist., 489 U.S. 782, 109 S. Ct. 1486, 103 L. Ed. 2d 866 (1989); Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 fee may be appropriate if the relief is limited in comparison to the scope of the litigation as a whole.[1212] For example, one court reduced the hours reasonably expended to obtain a favorable FDCPA and TCPA settlement, but included an excessive number of hours for obtaining the TCPA settlement which did not involve factual or legal issues in common with the FDCPA claim.[1213] In an unpublished decision, where the plaintiff succeeded in part at summary judgment, but was unsuccessful at trial, the Ninth Circuit found "[t]he award of fees for hours spent pursuing an unsuccessful result cannot be sustained."[1214]

Where a plaintiff prevails against just one of several defendants, time spent litigating against the other defendants may nevertheless be included in an award of fees to the extent such time would likely have been spent litigating the same issues with the defendant against whom the consumer prevailed, had they not already been raised by the other defendants.[1215]

11.13.8.2.4 Fees for work on fee petition, appeal, collection of the award, and related proceedings

Attorney fees are generally awarded for time spent recovering fees through a fee application and related proceedings.[1216] An estimated amount of time for work on a fee hearing should be included in the application or this portion of the request may be rejected for that reason.[1217] The consumer should also

U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983); Gates v. Deukmejian, 987 F.2d 1392 (9th Cir. 1992); City Consumer Serv., Inc. v. Horne, 631 F. Supp. 1050 (D. Utah 1986).

1212 Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983); Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 924 F.3d 949, 954 (7th Cir. 2019) (reduction in fees from $187,410 to $10,875 where majority of time "spent pursuing an unsuccessful and ill-advised effort to win a much bigger payoff than was even remotely possible in the circumstances giving rise to his claims"); Baylor v. Mitchell Rubenstein & Assoc., P.C., 735 Fed. Appx. 733 (D.C. Cir. 2018) (60% reduction in fee where consumer prevailed on only one of her three claims); Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 856 (E.D. Va. 2020) (reduced by 50% based on low degree of success "as reflected in the low ratio of damages achieved to damages sought"); Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 338 F. Supp. 3d 729, 736 (N.D. Ill 2018); Kottle v. Unifund CCR, L.L.C., 992 F. Supp. 2d 982 (C.D. Cal. 2014) (reducing attorney fees by 50% to reflect the "partial" success of the plaintiff who prevailed on only one of three claims asserted); Mann v. Acclaim Fin. Serv., Inc., 348 F. Supp. 2d 923 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (reducing fees by one-third where only partial success); Cooper v. Sunshine Recoveries, Inc., 2001 WL 740765 (S.D.N.Y. June 27, 2001) (elimination of time spent on unsuccessful class claims); Cook v. VFS, Inc., 2000 WL 33727940 (S.D. Ohio Sept. 27, 2000) (50% reduction to time distinctly spent on losing issue); Norton v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 36 F. Supp. 2d 216 (D.N.J. 1999). See also Martinez v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1985) (fees limited where recovery had on only one of eighteen counts); Kramer v. Marine Midland Bank, 577 F. Supp. 999 (S.D.N.Y. 1984) (not full compensation for work on frivolous claims). But see Danow v. Law Office of David E. Borback, P.A., 634 F. Supp. 2d 1337 (S.D. Fla. 2009) (rejecting "limited success" as basis to reduce fees just because related claims were dismissed), aff'd on other grounds, 367 Fed. Appx. 22 (11th Cir. 2010).

1213 See Stockman v. Global Credit & Collection Corp., 2015 WL 4999851 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 21, 2015) (TCPA is not fee-shifting statute; adopting 25% reduction in fees; rejecting consumer attorneys' reduction of 7.96%).

1214 Gonzalez v. Allied Collection Services, Inc., 852 Fed. Appx. 264, 268 (9th Cir. Mar. 29, 2021).

1215 Robinson v. Sherman Fin. Group, L.L.C., 2016 WL 1313082, at *4–5 (E.D. Tenn. Apr. 4, 2016).

1216 See Embree v. Medicredit, Inc., 752 Fed. Appx. 697 (11th Cir. 2018); Comm'r v. Jean, 496 U.S. 154, 110 S. Ct. 2316, 110 L. Ed. 2d 134 (1990); King v. Int'l Data Serv. (IDS), 100 Fed. Appx. 681 (9th Cir. 2004); DeJesus v. Banco Popular de Puerto Rico, 918 F.2d 232 (1st Cir. 1990); O Centro Espirita Beneficente União Do Vegetal in U.S. v. Duke, 343 F. Supp. 3d 1050, 1080 (D.N.M. 2018) ("Time spent preparing the fees application 'must be included in calculating a reasonable fee because uncompensated time spent on petitioning for a fee automatically diminishes the value of the fee eventually received."); Alvarado v. Hovg, L.L.C., 2016 WL 5462429, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 29, 2016) ("Filing a fee request requires checking local case law as to rates for comparable counsel; reviewing the hours spent and making billing judgment decisions; and collecting information on and explaining the professional background of the various billing lawyers and paralegals."); Johnson v. Cheek Law Offices, L.L.C., 2015 WL 542189 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 10, 2015) (fees for fee petition following settlement of FDCPA class action, inter alia (citing Auto Alliance Int'l, Inc. v. United States Customs Serv., 155 Fed. Appx. 226, 229 (6th Cir. 2005))); Garcia v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 2012 WL 3778852 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 30, 2012) ($187,292.25 in attorney fees reflecting 565 hours of attorney time plus $16,470 for postjudgment work on fee application); Arlozynski v. Rubin & Debski, P.A., 2011 WL 6319190 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 21, 2011) (time spent litigating attorney fees is compensable), adopted, 2011 WL 6318970 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 16, 2011); Hernandez v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 2011 WL 4595802 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 3, 2011) (awarding $4500 for fee motion following settlement of FDCPA claim for $6500 plus reasonable attorney fees and costs); Bryant v. Cab Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2011 WL 1331267 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 6, 2011) (time spent litigating attorney fees following settlement of plaintiff's claims is compensable), adopted, 2011 WL 1598732 (S.D. Fla. Apr. 27, 2011); Perez v. Perkiss, 742 F. Supp. 883 (D. Del. 1990); § 11.13.10, Appx. E.3.3.1, infra. See also Blalock v. Maximum Sec. Alarm, Inc., 2012 WL 5467531 (D. Or. Nov. 9, 2012) (awarding 11.7 hours for fee petition); Anastasion v. Credit Serv. of Logan, Inc., 2012 WL 1455219 (D. Utah Apr. 26, 2012) (awarding 29 hours for postjudgment fee application). Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 71 F. Supp. 2d 173 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (attorney was entitled to fees for time incurred in making second application for attorney fees to lower court, but fees reduced for excessive hours billed). Cf. Cotner v. Buffaloe & Assoc., P.L.C., 2012 WL 1670552 (E.D. Tenn. May 14, 2012) (awarding "fees on fees," but limited them to 3% of amount awarded on main fee application). But see Howard v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 4359361 (D. Colo. Sept. 24, 2012) (denying all time for establishing fee award because that endeavor was "largely unsuccessful").

1217 See Gash v. Client Serv., Inc., 548 Fed. Appx. 547 (10th Cir. 2013); Johnson v. Leading Edge Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5313255 (D. Colo. Sept. 23, 2013); King v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 549 Fed. Appx. 791 (10th Cir. 2013) (prevailing FDCPA consumer who wishes to recover compensation for litigating attorney fees should include a request for, and "fair estimate" of, such fees in her initial motion; because consumer did not do so here and otherwise failed to file timely supplemental motion for fees, motion was untimely under Rule 54); Livingston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2012 WL 4328367, at *1 n.2 (D. Colo. Sept. 20, 2012) (denying time spent on establishing fee award because request was "untimely and will not be considered" recover attorney fees for attorney time spent collecting the FDCPA judgment, if necessary.[1218] Similarly, courts sometimes grant attorney fees for postjudgment time expended by an attorney toward efforts to collect the fees awarded in the original action.[1219]

A consumer who is successful in the appeal of an FDCPA action is entitled to an award of attorney fees and costs for work on the appeal.[1220] The consumer's attorney will be compensated not only for work at the trial court level, but also for appellate work.[1221] On the other hand, where the court determined that the consumer's success on appeal was not great, the court awarded considerably less than the lodestar amount, even though the consumer was successful on appeal.[1222] In setting fees in such circumstances, the court should bear in mind, however, that apart from any monetary recovery, "the best measure of success in an FDCPA case is the greater service to the public."[1223]

If a consumer's appellate victory leads only to a remand to the trial court to determine whether there is a valid claim, attorney fees for the appellate case will be reserved until it is determined whether the action is successful at the trial level.[1224] If the consumer eventually prevails, attorney fees should be awarded for both rounds of the case at the trial level and for the work involved in the appeal. Where a successful consumer appeals the amount of the trial court's attorney fees award and prevails, the consumer's attorney should be awarded for time spent on that appeal as well.[1225] as "an issue or argument may not be properly raised in the first instance in a reply brief").

---

1218 See, e.g., Green v. Nationwide Arbitration Serv., L.L.C., 2017 WL 7211136, at *4 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 22, 2017), adopted, 2018 WL 647445 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 31, 2018); Kersten v. Quick Collect, Inc., 152 F. Supp. 3d 1301 (D. Or. 2016); Collins v. Bowman, 2012 WL 1142442 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 8, 2012); Jones v. Regent Asset Mgmt. Solutions, Inc., 2011 WL 2037626, at *5 (D. Conn. May 24, 2011) (debt collector liable for additional fees expended by plaintiff's attorney in collecting the judgment awarded in FDCPA default matter); Queen v. Nationwide Credit, Inc., 2010 WL 4006676, at *3 n.1 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 7, 2010) (fees expended to collect FDCPA judgment are also recoverable); Dichiara v. Pelsinger, 2010 WL 3613798, at *6 (D. Conn. Aug. 30, 2010) (ordering plaintiff recover in full reasonable attorney fees and costs incurred since entry of judgment in attempting to enforce FDCPA judgment awarded on default); See also Torres-Rivera v. O'Neill-Cancel, 524 F.3d 331 (1st Cir. 2008) (prevailing parties are entitled to recover reasonable fees with respect to litigating fee petition, attempting to collect underlying judgments, and seeking statutory interest); Shaw v. AAA Eng'g & Drafting, Inc., 213 F.3d 538, 544–545 (10th Cir. 2000) (allowing award of fees for time spent toward postjudgment collection activities); Free v. Briody, 793 F.2d 807 (7th Cir. 1986) (affirming award of fees for efforts made to collect judgment awarded in ERISA case); Balark v. Curtin, 655 F.2d 798, 803 (7th Cir. 1981) (plaintiff was entitled to attorney fees incurred in collecting section 1988 civil rights judgment). Cf. Bianchi v. Bronson & Migliaccio, L.L.P., 2011 WL 379115 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 2, 2011) (fees may be awarded for postjudgment efforts in enforcing FDCPA awards, but some postjudgment work in this case was unnecessary and avoidable).

1219 See Dotson v. Chester, 937 F.2d 920, 932 (4th Cir. 1991) (attorney fees and costs were properly awarded for amounts expended in attempt to recover portion of original attorney fees allocated to county sheriff); Spain v. Mountanos, 690 F.2d 742, 747 (9th Cir. 1982) ("an award for fees on collection is proper under section 1988"); Means v. Dist. of Columbia, 999 F. Supp. 2d 128 (D.D.C. 2013) (prevailing plaintiffs entitled to fees for work done on motion to recover unpaid attorney fees); Garvin v. Gov't of D.C., 910 F. Supp. 2d 135, 138–139 (D.D.C. 2012) (awarding fees expended in collecting unpaid attorney fees incurred in bringing underlying IDEA action). Cf. Rickabaugh v. Enochs, 2003 WL 22294090, at *6 (Cal. Ct. App. Oct. 7, 2003) (interpreting state enforcement of judgment statute; "a prevailing party who has been authorized by contract or statute to recover attorney fees may recover such fees incurred to enforce a judgment"); Robbins v. Krock, 896 N.E.2d 633 (Mass. App. Ct. 2008) (in case involving contract between attorney and client relating to unpaid legal fees, "attorney's fees incurred in collection of the judgment" were within fee provision of contract).

1220 See, e.g., Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 320 Fed. Appx. 442 (6th Cir. 2009); Joe v. Payco-General Am. Credits, Inc., 34 F.3d 1072 (9th Cir. 1994). See also Easley v. Collection Serv. of Nev., 910 F.3d 1286 (9th Cir. 2018) (attorney fees incurred on appeal in successful challenge of initial fees awarded are authorized under 11 U.S.C. § 362(k) of Bankruptcy Code). But see Alhassid v. Nation Star Mortg., L.L.C., 767 Fed. Appx. 865 (11th Cir. 2019) (plaintiff not entitled to appellate attorney fees under FDUTPA because, under contingency fee agreement, fees would inure to benefit of plaintiff's attorneys and not plaintiff).

1221 See Anchondo v. Anderson, Crenshaw & Assoc., 616 F.3d 1098, 1107 (10th Cir. 2010) (FDCPA case; awarding fees incurred defending, on appeal, earlier award for fees); Dowling v. Litton Loan Servicing L.P., 320 Fed. Appx. 442, 450 (6th Cir. 2009) (FDCPA case; plaintiff entitled to attorney fees incurred defending fee award on appeal); DeJesus v. Banco Popular, 918 F.2d 232, 236 (1st Cir. 1990) (remanding for determination of a reasonable fee and directing the district court to "include in its fee award a reasonable attorney's fee for services rendered in connection with this appeal"); Martinez v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1985); Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984); In re Pine, 705 F.2d 936 (7th Cir. 1983); McGowan v. King, Inc., 661 F.2d 48 (5th Cir. 1981) (awarding attorney fees for services rendered on appeal where only issue was amount of fees awarded in underlying Truth in Lending Act case); Northcross v. Bd. of Educ. of Memphis City Schools, 611 F.2d 624, 632 (6th Cir. 1979) (section 1988 case; plaintiffs should recover attorney fees "for the spent litigating the fees issue itself"); Weisenberger v. Huecker, 593 F.2d 49, 54 (6th Cir. 1979) (concluding that implementation of congressional policy as to § 1988 required awarding fees spent pursuing attorney fees in cases under review and stating that fees should also include amounts spent "defending and prosecuting the instant appeals"); Prandini v. Nat'l Tea Co., 585 F.2d 47, 54 (3d Cir. 1978) (holding that attorneys were entitled to be compensated for time spent successfully appealing first fee award in underlying Title VII case to the extent that time was necessary to obtain a reasonable fee award); Preston v. Thompson, 565 F. Supp. 310 (N.D. Ill. 1983); Citibank Fed. Sav. Bank v. Sandel, 766 So. 2d 302 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2000) (attorney fees may be awarded for services rendered in appeal where only issue was amount of fees awarded in underlying TILA case).

1222 Carroll v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 53 F.3d 626 (4th Cir. 1995) (where consumer abandoned her claim to actual damages on remand from appellate court and received only $50 in statutory damages for a technical violation of FDCPA, district court did not abuse its discretion in limiting award of attorney fees to $500).

1223 Hernandez v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 2011 WL 4595802, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 3, 2011).

1224 Blair v. Nat'l Constr. Co., 611 F.2d 80 (5th Cir. 1980).

1225 Easley v. Collection Serv. of Nev., 910 F.3d 1286 (9th Cir. Dec. 20, 2018) (attorney fees incurred on appeal in successful challenge of initial fees awarded are authorized under 11 U.S.C. 362(k)); In re Pine, 705 F.2d 936 (7th Cir. 1983); Stokes v. Fid. Acceptance Corp., 644 F.2d 355 (5th Cir. 1981). Cf. Middlesworth v. Oaktree Collections, Inc.,

When handling an FDCPA appeal, the consumer's attorney should carefully scrutinize all applicable rules of appellate procedure. For example, some rules require that the fee request be filed within a specified number of days after the appellate decision.[1226]

11.13.8.3 Establishing the Hourly Rate

In Tolentino v. Friedman,[1227] the Seventh Circuit observed:

> In order to encourage able counsel to undertake FDCPA cases, as Congress intended, it is necessary that counsel be awarded fees commensurate with those which they could obtain by taking other types of cases. . . . Paying counsel in FDCPA cases at rates lower than those they can obtain in the marketplace is inconsistent with the congressional desire to enforce the FDCPA through private actions, and therefore misapplies the law.

The hourly attorney rate is based on the prevailing market rate in the community for that individual's level of legal skill and experience.[1228] With that in mind, counsel should submit declarations with information about their skill, experience, and reputation, as well as declarations regarding rates in the community.[1229] In rare instances, out-of-state or "big city" attorneys may be paid at a higher rate.[1230] A few courts deny fees to out-of-state attorneys who work on the case but do not appear pro hac vice if local rules prohibit more than a consulting role without pro hac vice admission.[1231] However, as one court has reasoned, such work, in general, should be compensable since "the legal work of a person unable to enter an appearance in court, such as a paralegal or law clerk, is compensable."[1232]

While the attorney's customary rate, the rate billed to the consumer or other clients, a contingent fee agreement, or the cost of the attorney's time, may all be considered as evidence, none of these is dispositive.[1233] Instead, the rate is based upon the prevailing rate in the community. An "attorney's status as a solo practitioner is not grounds for a reduction in the reasonable hourly rate."[1234] The same is true for a nonprofit legal aid office[1235] and a prepaid legal services plan lawyer.[1236] They should receive the same hourly rate as attorneys with comparable levels of experience in private practice. How to establish the prevailing rate in the community is discussed later in this subsection.

Substantial hourly rates have been found reasonable for lawyers handling FDCPA cases, depending on their level of experience, local community rates, and the dates of services rendered.[1237] The difficulty of the case, for example because

---

2009 WL 3720884 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2009) (denying request for award of anticipated costs of collection where consumer failed to cite any authority to support such award).

1226 See, e.g., Fed. R. App. P. 39.

1227 46 F.3d 645, 652–653 (7th Cir. 1995). Accord Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin., Inc., 523 F.3d 973, 981 (9th Cir. 2008).

1228 Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984); Gonzalez v. City of Maywood, 729 F.3d 1196 (9th Cir. 2013); Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin., Inc., 523 F.3d 973, 979 (9th Cir. 2008); Hollis v. Roberts, 984 F.2d 1159 (11th Cir. 1993). See also Breidenbach v. Experian, 2013 WL 2631368 (S.D. Cal. June 11, 2013) (attorney's attendance at FDCPA seminar cited by court in assessing his experience).

1229 See, e.g., Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 852 (E.D. Va. 2020); Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 378 F. Supp. 3d 222 (W.D.N.Y. 2019); Eades v. Kennedy, P.C., 343 F. Supp. 3d 104 (W.D.N.Y. 2018); Miller v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4111446 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 18, 2017) (where requested rate was within range upheld in district, accepting declarations of plaintiff's attorneys, while noting that other evidence would be preferable); Forkum v. Co-Operative Adjustment Bur., Inc., 2014 WL 3101784 (N.D. Cal. July 3, 2014) (denying fee application without prejudice).

1230 Mathur v. Bd. of Trs. of S. Ill. Univ., 317 F.3d 738 (7th Cir. 2003) (reversing reduction of hourly rate for out-of-town attorneys as plaintiff had been unable to obtain local counsel); McDonald v. Armaontrovit, 860 F.2d 1456 (8th Cir. 1988); Polk v. New York State Dep't of Correctional Serv., 722 F.2d 23 (2d Cir. 1983). See also Arbor Hill Concerned Citizens Neighborhood Ass'n v. County of Albany, 522 F.3d 182, 183–184 (2d Cir. 2008) (court may adjust hourly rate to account for reasonable decision to retain out-of-district counsel); Gates v. Deukmejian, 987 F.2d 1392 (9th Cir. 1992) (collecting cases); Silva v. Nat'l Telewire Corp., 2001 WL 1609387 (D.N.H. Dec. 12, 2001) (attorney fees may be based on non-local rate if it was reasonable for plaintiff to hire non-local specialist because there are no attorneys available in local area with required skill to handle case). But see Waite v. Clark County Collection Serv., L.L.C., 606 Fed. Appx. 864 (9th Cir. 2015) (consumer entitled to award of fees for attorney who did not physically appear in court, seek pro hac vice, sign pleadings, or serve as exclusive contact with client or opposing counsel).

1231 Gsell v. Rubin and Yates, L.L.C., 41 F. Supp. 3d 443 (E.D. Pa. 2014) (declining to award attorney fees for prevailing plaintiff's "consulting" attorney, associate in national law firm, who performed majority of legal work for plaintiff). But see Santiago v. Equable Ascent Fin., 2013 WL 3498079 (N.D. Cal. July 12, 2013) (plaintiff's out-of-state lawyer was permitted to recover fees for work performed prior to admission where attorney (1) was eligible to be admitted pro hac vice as matter of course and (2) had not appeared before court prior to admission); Navarro v. Monarch Recovery Mgmt. Inc., 2014 WL 2805244 (E.D. Pa. June 20, 2014) (rejecting defendant's argument that fees should be reduced for out-of-state consulting attorney not admitted to practice in state and not admitted pro hac vice; distinguishing cases so holding because consulting attorney here acted at all times in secondary role supervised by lead local counsel).

1232 Garza v. Mitchell Ruhenstein & Assoc., 2016 WL 7468039, at *3 (D. Md. Dec. 27, 2016).

1233 Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 97, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1989); Keenan v. City of Philadelphia, 983 F.2d 459, 475 (3d Cir. 1992); Covington v. Dist. of Columbia, 839 F. Supp. 894 (D.D.C. 1993), aff'd, 57 F.3d 1101 (D.C. Cir. 1995). See also Alhassid v. Nation Star Mortg., L.L.C., 767 Fed. Appx 865 (11th Cir. 2019) (plaintiff not entitled to appellate attorney fees under FDUTPA because, under contingency fee agreement, fees would inure to benefit of plaintiff's attorneys and not plaintiff); Ingram v. Oroudjian, 647 F.3d 925, 928 (9th Cir. 2011) (noting failure to submit affidavits of other attorneys regarding prevailing rates in community as factor in upholding district court's reliance on its own knowledge of local market rates and reasonable fees).

1234 Macolor v. Libiran, 2016 WL 1488121, at *7 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 25, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 1453039 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 13, 2016).

1235 Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984). See Appx. E.3.3.2, infra.

1236 Hollis v. Roberts, 984 F.2d 1159 (11th Cir. 1993) (distinguishing Harper v. Better Bus. Serv., Inc., 961 F.2d 1561 (11th Cir. 1992). Accord Siler v. Mgmt. Adjustment Bur., 1992 WL 170699 (W.D.N.Y. July 6, 1992).

1237 See, e.g., Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 378 F. Supp. 3d 222, 229 (W.D.N.Y. 2019) (attorneys granted fees at $375 and $300 per hour depending on experience due to "the complex nature of this case, the

it may be difficult to collect from the defendant, is one factor that may be considered in setting a reasonable hourly rate.[1238]

A contingent fee arrangement between the consumer and their attorney does not operate as a maximum cap for an attorney fee recovery.[1239] In other words, there should not be a downward adjustment because the attorney would have received less under a contingent fee arrangement. While there is no upward adjustment for taking a case on contingency,[1240] doing so places all the risk on the attorney and, when successful, the attorney should not be expected to accept as little as they would charge a client who agreed to pay for services, regardless of success.[1241]

The hourly rate is not affected by the amount of damages sought in the litigation or reasonably recoverable. Thus, the Seventh Circuit reversed a reduction of the market rate that had been incorrectly granted where the lower court had argued that a consumer would not pay the established rate in the community to recover only a maximum of $1000.[1242] The rates should be current rates at the time the work was done or at the time of the award;[1243] the rates paid for older cases should not be the basis of comparison.

The Civil Division of the United States Department of Justice maintains a widely respected matrix of reasonable rates in the Washington, D.C. area, at different experience levels adjusted annually for inflation.[1244] However, most courts outside the Washington, D.C. area have declined to follow it as not relevant to their local market rate.[1245]

The US Consumer Law Attorney Fee Survey Report, a survey conducted by Ronald Burdge, an Ohio consumer attorney, of rates charged by consumer attorneys in different regions of the country is found at www.nclc.org, under "litigation." Some courts have relied upon the survey as evidence of reasonable hourly rates.[1246] fact that Defendants . . . vigorously opposed Plaintiff's action, and the tremendous skill brought to bear by all attorneys involved"); Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 338 F. Supp. 3d 729 (E.D. Ill. 2018) ($327 hourly rate, not $372 hourly rate requested by consumer, was reasonable rate for attorney; case had been simple, involving single FDCPA-violative sentence in single letter from debt collector, and prior decisions in district had awarded attorney $300, $327, and $352 hourly rates in FDCPA cases); West v. Credit Control Serv., Inc., 2017 WL 4938405 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 30, 2017) (awarding requested rates of $595/hour and $585/hour for partners, $295/hour for associate, and $210/hour for paralegals); Samms v. Abrams, 198 F. Supp. 3d 311, 321 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) (approving $400/hour in individual case for attorney with significant experience in litigating FDCPA cases); Jacobson v. Persolve, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7230873 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2016) (following class action settlement, awarding $151,995 in contested attorney fees based on hourly rates of $500 and $600 for experienced attorneys); Castro v. Lloyd & McDaniel, P.L.C., 2016 WL 5110046 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 19, 2016) (in Indianapolis market, approving $575/hour for 25+-year attorney with extensive experience with FDCPA class actions, $275/hour for associate, and $200/hour for paralegal; also noting that even if rates were high for Indianapolis market, premium would be appropriate); Romeo v. Simm Assoc., Inc., 170 F. Supp. 3d 750, 2016 WL 1070827 (M.D. Pa. Mar. 16, 2016) (awarding $375/hour for attorney with 16 years of experience, specializing in consumer protection law, as consistent with market rates in the Middle and Eastern Districts of Pennsylvania); Harlan v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 2015 WL 505400 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 6, 2015) ($620 an hour for experienced partner and $305 an hour for associate); Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (only $400 per hour for attorney with 45 years' experience, but $325 for 2004 law graduate); Serna v. Law Office of Joseph Onwuteaka, PC, 2014 WL 3749652 (S.D. Tex. July 29, 2014) ($300 an hour for a Texas Legal Services attorney with 21 years of experience); Long v. Nationwide Legal File & Serve, Inc., 2014 WL 3809401 (N.D. Cal. July 23, 2014) (awarding fees at requested rates, including $450/hour for lead counsel); Johnson v. CFS II, Inc., 2013 WL 6841964 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 27, 2013) (hourly rates of $400 for lead counsel and $300 for co-counsel); Harlan v. NRA Group, L.L.C., 2011 WL 813961, at *1 n.1 ($555 per hour to supervising senior attorney, "a partner in the firm with a national reputation in consumer law"); Appx. E.3.3.3, infra.

---

1238 Lietz v. Oxford Law, L.L.C., 2016 WL 2897469 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 22, 2016) (FDCPA case citing Maner v. Linkan L.L.C., 602 Fed. Appx. 489, 493 (11th Cir. 2015) and Morgado v. Birmingham-Jefferson County Civil Defense Corps, 706 F.2d 1184, 1191, n.2 (11th Cir. 1983)).

1239 Blanchard v. Bergeron, 489 U.S. 87, 97, 109 S. Ct. 939, 103 L. Ed. 2d 67 (1989).

1240 See § 11.13.8.5, infra; City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449 (1992).

1241 Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 378 F. Supp. 3d 222, 232 (W.D.N.Y. 2019).

1242 Tolentino v. Friedman, 46 F.3d 645, 651 (7th Cir. 1995). See also Norton v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 36 F. Supp. 2d 216 (D.N.J. 1999) (in FDCPA jury trial, plaintiff won $5800 on § 1692g claim, and defendant won $1651.63 on counterclaim for debt; plaintiff's counsel sought fees and costs of $67,697.56, and was awarded $57,206.34 at his current rate of $215 per hour; rejecting argument that there must be proportionality between damages and fee).

1243 See Mares v. Credit Bur. of Raton, 801 F.2d 1197 (10th Cir. 1986); Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984); Norton v. Wilshire Credit Corp., 36 F. Supp. 2d 216 (D.N.J. 1999) ($215 per hour; counsel's rate was $200 at beginning of case, but entire award was based on current rate to compensate for delay in payment). See also City Consumer Serv., Inc. v. Horne, 631 F. Supp. 1050 (D. Utah 1986).

1244 Known as the Laffey Matrix, after a case name, it is available at www.justice.gov. "[B]ecause the original Laffey Matrix is now more than thirty years old, it must be updated to account for inflation. . . . Competing updated Laffey Matrices have developed." Eley v. D.C., 793 F.3d 97, 101 (D.C. Cir. 2015) (discussing benefits and limitations of U.S. Attorney's Office Laffey Matrix, which accounts for inflation in general, and Legal Services Index Laffey Matrix, which adjusts for increases in costs of legal services nationally; applying the "Laffey Matrix" blindly, without regard to examining other factors in determining a proper fee award, is improper).

1245 See, e.g., Forkum v. Co-Operative Adjustment Bur., Inc., 2014 WL 3101784 (N.D. Cal. July 3, 2014); Behrens v. Smith & Greaves, L.L.P., 2012 WL 590845 (D. Or. Feb. 22, 2012); Freid v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 6934845 (D.N.J. Dec. 29, 2011); Harlan v. NRA Group, L.L.C., 2011 WL 813961, at *1 n.1 (but awarding $555 per hour to supervising senior attorney, "a partner in the firm with a national reputation in consumer law").

1246 This Report is also found at http://www.attorneyfeestudy.com. See Beneli v. BCA Fin. Serv., Inc., 324 F.R.D. 89 (Feb. 6, 2018); Fricano v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2015 WL 5331711 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 8, 2015); Gregg v. N.A.R., Inc., 2014 WL 959412 (D. Colo. Mar. 12, 2014); Delalat v. Syndicated Office Sys., Inc., 2014 WL 930162, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2014) (finding survey supportive of hourly rate of $325); Pineda v. P & B Capital Group, L.L.C., 2011 WL 6356866 (W.D. Mo. Dec. 19, 2011) (relying on Burdge survey); Lindenbaum v. NCO Fin. Sys. Inc., 2011 WL 2848748 (E.D. Pa. July 19, 2011) (using survey); Livingson v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 4724268 (N.D. Ohio Dec. 2, 2009) (relying in part on Burdge survey in FDCPA case).

Evidence that the claimed rates are justified may also be drawn from affidavits from attorneys of similar experience and expertise in private practice,[1247] from the fee charged by opposing counsel,[1248] and from published opinions. Attorneys testifying solely on the topic of attorney fees are generally not required to provide expert reports.[1249] Fees of opposing counsel should be discoverable, and also may possibly be obtained from records of bankruptcy courts in which the firm practices, but these are sometimes lower than other prevailing rates in the community, perhaps due to volume discounts or competitive forces.

11.13.8.4 Downward Adjustments to the Lodestar

The lodestar figure is presumed reasonable unless the defendant carries the burden of showing why the figure should be adjusted downward.[1250] The plaintiff though should first provide specific evidence that the hourly rate and costs were reasonable.[1251] Reductions for excessive hours or inflated hourly rates is discussed at §§ 11.9.6.2 and 11.13.6.3, supra. A judge may also reduce counsel's hourly rate sua sponte, based on "first-hand experience with the deficient quality of representation."[1252]

To preempt criticisms of overbilling, in some instances attorneys incorporate a modest across-the-board reduction, in the exercise of "billing judgment," to take into account possible inefficiencies or duplications.[1253]

11.13.8.5 Upward Adjustments to the Lodestar

The Supreme Court ruled in City of Burlington v. Dague[1254] that the lodestar under a federal fee-shifting statute may not be adjusted upwards to compensate for the riskiness of a case or the contingent nature of litigating fee-shifting claims. And in 2010, the Supreme Court elaborated in Perdue v. Kenny A. ex rel. Winn[1255] that enhancements are only permissible in "rare and exceptional circumstances."

The burden is on the consumer,[1256] and the consumer must produce specific evidence that supports the award.[1257] Examples include when the method to compute the hourly rate does not measure the attorney's true market value, when the representation requires an extraordinary outlay of expenses, or where the litigation is exceptionally protracted and there is exceptional delay in the payment of fees.

That last basis was examined in an earlier Supreme Court case, Missouri v. Jenkins ex rel. Agyei,[1258] where the Court expressly approved of either upwardly adjusting the lodestar by a multiplier, prejudgment interest, or an award using current

See also Malick v. NCO Fin. Serv., Inc., 2015 WL 4078037 (S.D. Tex. July 6, 2015) (relying in part on state bar survey of hourly rates for that state's attorneys); Litt v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2015 WL 1849267 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 22, 2015) (same). But see Forkum v. Co-Operative Adjustment Bur., Inc., 2014 WL 3101784 (N.D. Cal. July 3, 2014) (survey does not provide data on prevailing rates in local market); Behrens v. Smith & Greaves, L.L.P., 2012 WL 590845 (D. Or. Feb. 22, 2012) (2008 Consumer Law Attorney Fee Survey does not support higher requested hourly rate as it does not pertain to local market); Freid v. Nat'l Action Fin. Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 6934845 (D.N.J. Dec. 29, 2011) (declining to accord any weight to 2007 Burdge survey).

1247 See, e.g., O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal in U.S. v. Duke, 343 F. Supp. 3d 1050, 1083 (D.N.M. 2018); Castro v. Lloyd & McDaniel, P.L.C., 2016 WL 5110046 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 19, 2016).

1248 See, e.g., Dreher v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2016 WL 4055638 (E.D. Va. July 26, 2016); Real v. Cont'l Group Inc., 116 F.R.D. 211, 213 (N.D. Cal 1986); N.C. Elec. Membership Corp. v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 110 F.R.D. 511, 517 (M.D.N.C. 1986); Schacher v. Am. Academy of Opthamology Inc., 106 F.R.D. 187, 192 (N.D. Ill. 1985); Blowers v. Lawyers Coop. Publ'g Co., 526 F. Supp. 1324, 1325 (W.D.N.Y. 1981); Stastny v. S. Bell Tel., 77 F.R.D. 662, 663–664 (W.D.N.C. 1978).

1249 See, e.g., Infante v. Samara Portfolio, Mgmt., L.L.C., 2018 WL 911853 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 14, 2018).

1250 City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 449 (1992). See also Blum v. Stenson, 465 U.S. 886, 104 S. Ct. 1541, 79 L. Ed. 2d 891 (1984); Hutchinson ex rel. Julien v. Patrick, 636 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2011) (disability rights suit); Robinson v. City of Harvey, 489 F.3d 864, 872 (7th Cir. 2007) (section 1988 claims); Evans v. Port Auth., 273 F.3d 346 (3d Cir. 2001) (section 1988 case; accepting plaintiff's affidavits as to reasonable hourly rate as conclusive where defendant filed nothing in opposition by deadline); People Who Care v. Rockford Bd. of Educ., 90 F.3d 1307 (7th Cir. 1996) (section 1988 case); Gates v. Deukmejian, 987 F.2d 1392 (9th Cir. 1992) (section 1988 case); Varner v. Century Fin. Co., 738 F.2d 1143 (11th Cir. 1984) (TILA case); Goins v. JBC & Assoc., P.C., 2005 WL 3536147, at *3–4 (D. Conn. Nov. 28, 2005) (defendant failed to satisfy its burden to justify reduction of lodestar, rejecting arguments that lodestar figure should be reduced based on lack of complexity of legal issues in case, fact that plaintiff's counsel pursued this "simple case" in a "particularly aggressive manner," and nature of defendants' violation of FDCPA).

1251 Robinson v. Equifax Info. Serv., L.L.C., 560 F.3d 235 (4th Cir. 2009); Larsen v. AR Res., Inc., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849, 852 (E.D. Va. 2020) (declaration by experienced local attorney regarding prevailing market rates satisfied plaintiff's burden of production on the issue); Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 338 F. Supp. 3d 729 (N.D. Ill. May 21, 2018) (plaintiff met burden of "specific evidence" showing that cost of deposition transcript was reasonable).

1252 Ferrari v. U.S. Equities Corp., 661 Fed. Appx. 47, 50 (2d Cir. 2016) (affirming lower court's determination that reasonable rate for consumer attorney's quality of representation was $250, not $400 per hour, even though defendant had argued for only $350 per hour).

1253 Hensley v. Eckerhard, 461 U.S. 424, 434, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 1490 (1983) (section 1988 case); Spegon v. Catholic Bishop of Chicago, 175 F.3d 544, 552 (7th Cir. 1999) (FLSA); Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 338 F. Supp. 3d 729 (N.D. Ill. May 21, 2018); Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (removing duplicative time indicating inefficiency and reducing rate for attorneys performing administrative tasks). See Serna v. Law Office of Joseph Onwuteaka, PC, 2014 WL 3749652, at *7 (S.D. Tex. July 29, 2014) (imposing 10% reduction of hours for lack of evidence of billing judgment).

1254 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 446 (1992).

1255 559 U.S. 542, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494 (2010).

1256 Perdue v. Kenny A. ex rel. Winn, 559 U.S. 542, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494 (2010); City of Burlington v. Dague, 505 U.S. 557, 112 S. Ct. 2638, 120 L. Ed. 2d 446 (1992).

1257 Perdue v. Kenny A. ex rel. Winn, 559 U.S. 542, 130 S. Ct. 1662, 176 L. Ed. 2d 494 (2010).

1258 491 U.S. 274, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989).

rates[1259] to compensate for delay in payment in protracted litigation. An award of postjudgment interest on the fees is appropriate to compensate for delay occasioned by appeal.[1260]

Given the hurdles to upward adjustment to the lodestar established in Perdue, in most cases the consumer attorney will be better off seeking other approaches to maximizing the attorney fees award. Rather than adjust the "lodestar" upwards for issues such as complexity or novelty of a case, courts rely on these factors as justification for the large number of hours expended in the case, or will find that the attorney handled the case with such skill as to justify the higher end of legal rates for that community.

In a class action, the consumer can also seek fees under a common fund approach.[1261] Even if the court computes a rough lodestar as a check against the common fund award, that lodestar can be adjusted upwards for various factors that could not be used to compute a fee-shifting award.[1262] In addition, the Supreme Court cases limiting upward lodestar adjustments under federal fee shifting statutes do not bind state courts when they interpret state fee shifting statutes, and state courts may award upward adjustments for example for state deceptive practices act or state debt collection statute claims.[1263]

11.13.9 Costs

The FDCPA provides that a collector is liable to the consumer for costs in the case of any successful action.[1264] The use of the words "is liable" in section 1692k(a)(3) strongly suggests the inapplicability of the Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(d) standard that gives the court broad discretion as to the awarding costs. Instead, section 1692k(a)(3) makes the award mandatory.[1265]

In seeking reimbursement for costs, the consumer attorney should submit sufficient evidence of the bills and invoices,[1266] and also establish that it is customary in the local legal community to bill separately for such items, as opposed to absorbing them in firm overhead and reflecting them in the hourly rate charged. For example, photocopies, telephone calls, postage, express mail, court imposed filing fees, process servers, and transcripts have all been found recoverable.[1267] Indeed, ACA International, the trade association of debt collection companies, argued in a brief before the U.S. Supreme Court[1268] that this was a proper interpretation of section 1692k(a)(3).[1269] Proof of local billing custom regarding costs may be evidenced by affidavits of local attorneys, possibly telephone surveys of local attorneys, the opponent's billing procedures, or publications of general circulation.[1270] Alternatively, nontaxable costs may possibly be recovered as attorney fees in an FDCPA case,[1271] as under any federal fee-shifting statute that provides for recovery of a reasonable attorney fee as well as costs of the action.[1272] "Even though not normally taxable as costs, out-of-pocket expenses incurred by an attorney which 1259 That is, by awarding the lawyer her billing rate as of the time of the fee petition rather than the lower, "historical rate," which was, or could have been, charged on the date the service was rendered.

1260 Corder v. Brown, 25 F.3d 833, 838 (9th Cir. 1994).

1261 See § 11.13.7, supra.

1262 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 19.3.6.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1263 See National Consumer Law Center, Unfair and Deceptive Acts and Practices § 12.8.11.3 (9th ed. 2016), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1264 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3).

1265 See generally Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 568 U.S. 371, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 185 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2013) (district court may award costs to prevailing defendants in FDCPA cases; no finding that plaintiff brought case in bad faith and for purpose of harassment). But see Peck v. IMC Credit Services, 960 F.3d 972 (7th Cir. 2020) (affirming district court's denial of pro se consumer's petition for costs; "costs" in § 1692k(a)(3) refers to "costs" awardable under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 54(d) and does not include damages or compensation for pro se consumer's time or mailing expenses).

1266 See Cooper v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 338 F. Supp. 3d 729 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (plaintiff showed that cost of preparing deposition was necessarily incurred and reasonable as it was used in summary judgment briefing); Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (denying most costs for failure of proof, but allowing fourteen days for submission).

1267 See Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 378 F. Supp. 3d 222, 235–236 (W.D.N.Y. 2019); Larsen v. JBC Legal Group, 588 F. Supp. 2d 360, 365 (E.D.N.Y. 2008). See also LeBlanc-Sternberg v. Fletcher, 143 F.3d 748, 763 (2d Cir. 1998).

1268 Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 568 U.S. 371, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 185 L. Ed. 2d 242 (2013).

1269 Amicus Brief of ACA Int'l, Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., No. 11-1175, at 6 (U.S. Sept. 2012).

1270 Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1544 (9th Cir. 1992); Report of the Third Circuit Task Force on Court Awarded Attorney Fees, 108 F.R.D. 237, 260–261 (F.R.D. 1985). Cf. Kim v. Barro, 2009 WL 1616271 (N.D. Ga. June 9, 2009) (denying $60 for service costs because plaintiff did not show request for waiver of service).

1271 Giovannoni v. Bidna & Keys, 255 Fed. Appx. 124, 126 (9th Cir. 2007); Bryant v. City of Chicago, 200 F.3d 1092, 1100 n. 3 (7th Cir. 2000) (citing Missouri v. Jenkins, 491 U.S. 274, 285–289, 109 S. Ct. 2463, 105 L. Ed. 2d 229 (1989)); Save Our Cumberland Mountains, Inc. v. Hodel, 826 F.2d 43, 54 (D.C. Cir. 1987) ("We believe that it would be unduly restrictive to find that neither the general term 'costs of litigation' nor the term 'attorney's fees' includes incidental expenses of attorneys that are routine to all litigation and routinely billed to private clients."); Henry v. Webermeier, 738 F.2d 188, 194 (7th Cir. 1984) (travel expenses). See also Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 378 F. Supp. 3d 222, 235–236 (W.D.N.Y. 2019) (travel and lodging); Long v. Nationwide Legal File & Serve, Inc., 2014 WL 3809401 (N.D. Cal. July 23, 2014) (awarding travel expenses for depositions and also copying costs); Davis v. Hollins Law, 2014 WL 2875778 (E.D. Cal. June 24, 2014) (noting that fee-shifting statutes which provide for the recovery of costs by prevailing plaintiffs provide a sufficient basis for the recovery of travel expenses and that denying such expenses would deter them from taking meritorious cases within the district); McNall v. Credit Bur., Inc., 2011 WL 711095 (D. Or. Feb. 22, 2011) (allowing non-taxable expenses: photocopy charges, fax charges, and postage); Larsen v. JBC Legal Group, 588 F. Supp. 2d 360, 365 (E.D.N.Y. 2008) (permitting as part of attorney fee award $808.92 in transportation expenses).

1272 See, e.g., Evans v. Books-A-Million, 762 F.3d 1288, 1299 (11th Cir. 2014) ("the definition of costs under [28 U.S.C.] § 1920 is not controlling and . . . Evans' ($2460.67) expenses for mediation, legal research, postage and travel may be awarded as attorneys' fees if the district court determines they were reasonably incurred in the course of case preparation, settlement, or litigation").

would normally be charged to a fee paying client are recoverable as attorney's fees."[1273]

There are some exceptions to the general rule that costs are to be awarded to the successful plaintiff. One is that courts deny a request to be reimbursed for the estimated future cost of collecting the consumer's judgment from the defendant.[1274] A more significant exception to the general rule is that the cost of an expert's testimony at trial may not be reimbursed beyond the general witness fee allowed under federal law for all fact witnesses under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1920(3) and 1821(b).[1275]

The Supreme Court, in West Virginia University Hospitals v. Casey,[1276] read the express inclusion of reimbursement for expert witness fees under certain federal statutes, such as Equal Access to Justice Act, to mean that the absence of such language in the fee-shifting statute at issue in that case, 42 U.S.C. § 1988, precluded an award of expert fees as costs. Congress later amended section 1988 to provide for expert witness fees,[1277] but the reasoning of Casey might justify the disallowance of expert witness fees under statutes, such as the FDCPA, which do not expressly provide for expert witness fees.[1278]

Nevertheless, there is an argument that the cost of consulting experts who assist the attorney in preparation for the trial, as opposed to testifying, should be recoverable.[1279] Another approach toward ultimately forcing the defendant to pay for at least some of plaintiff's expert's fee is to first submit requests for admissions reciting the essential factual points that the expert's testimony will prove. Then, under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 36, the collector must either admit or deny the request for admissions. If admitted, the points are then established and the cost issue is moot; if not admitted, the expert witness fees may then be available as "reasonable expenses" owing pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37(c)(2) when a request for admission that was denied is proven at trial.[1280]

11.13.10 Fee Applications

11.13.10.1 Requirements

The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require motions for attorney fees and expenses to be filed and served no later than fourteen days after judgment.[1281] What is required in this time period is only notice to the court and to the opponent that fees will be sought and a fair estimate of the total fees and expenses claimed.[1282] A detailed record of hours and rates, affidavits, time records, fee surveys, and other supporting evidence and briefs may be submitted following the motion for fees, "in due course."[1283]

The burden of justifying the amount of attorney fees falls on the consumer's attorney, who should substantiate in detail the number of hours claimed and the hourly rates, and, if applicable and permissible under Perdue v. Kenny A., discussed at § 11.13.6.5, supra, any factors claimed to adjust the lodestar upward. The fee claimant's burden is to provide the court with enough documentary evidence to justify the rates claimed[1284] and the efficacy of the hours expended. Documentary insufficiencies will result in a reduction of the award.

Not all courts require a hearing on the fee application.[1285] The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allow courts to adopt local rules that establish special procedures for resolving fee issues without extensive evidentiary hearings and also facilitates referral of fee issues to special masters or magistrate judges.[1286]

1273 Chalmers v. City of Los Angeles, 796 F.2d 1205, 1216 n.7 (9th Cir. 1986). See also Larsen v. AR Res., 453 F. Supp. 3d 849 (E.D. Va. 2020).

1274 See Selby v. Christian Nicholas & Assoc., Inc., 2010 WL 745748 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 26, 2010); Jamal v. Thompson & Assoc., P.C., 2010 WL 678925 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2010); Middlesworth v. Oaktree Collections, Inc., 2009 WL 3720884, at *2 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 3, 2009); Molinar v. Coleman, 2009 WL 435274, at *3 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 20, 2009).

Note, however, that attorney fees may be awarded for postjudgment collection activities when these become necessary due to the defendant's failure to pay. See § 11.13.8.2.4, supra.

1275 The maximum fee allowed is $40 per day.

1276 499 U.S. 83, 111 S. Ct. 1138, 113 L. Ed. 2d 68 (1991).

1277 See 42 U.S.C. §§ 1988, 2000e-5(k).

1278 See O Centro Espirita Beneficente União Do Vegetal in U.S. v. Duke, 343 F. Supp. 3d 1050 (D.N.M. 2018) (declining expert witness costs; the prevailing party is not entitled to any fees for services rendered by experts in a nontestimonial capacity). Cf. Cruz v. Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers Local No. 3, 150 F.R.D. 29, 36 (E.D.N.Y. 1993) (Casey still requires denial of expert fees under Labor Management Relations Act of 1947 as Civil Rights Act of 1991 did not amend this statute).

1279 See In re Air Crash Disaster at John F. Kennedy Int'l Airport, 687 F.2d 626 (2d Cir. 1982) (statistical consulting costs incurred in preparing trial exhibit may be recovered under 28 U.S.C. § 1920(4)). See also Denny v. Westfield State Coll., 880 F.2d 1465 (1st Cir. 1989) (finding appearance at trial not recoverable but reserving question of expert preparing attorney for trial).

1280 See House v. Giant of Md. L.L.C., 232 F.R.D. 257 (E.D. Va. 2005) (reasonableness of medical bills and their causal connection to accident giving rise to action should have been admitted).

1281 Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B). See also Miller v. Credit Collection Serv., 200 F.R.D. 379 (S.D. Ohio 2000).

1282 See Gash v. Client Serv., Inc., 548 Fed. Appx. 547 (10th Cir. 2013) (estimated fees in motion should include fees for time to present and defend the fee petition).

1283 Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(B). See also Miller v. Credit Collection Serv., 200 F.R.D. 379 (S.D. Ohio 2000); Fed. R. Civ. P. 54 advisory committee's note (1993); Diller, The Impact of the 1993 Amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure on Legal Services Practice in the Federal Courts, 28 Clearinghouse Rev. 134, 140 (June 1994).

1284 See § 11.13.8.3, supra.

1285 Compare Planned Parenthood v. Attorney Gen., 297 F.3d 253 (3d Cir. 2002) (section 1988 case; when reasonable hourly rate is disputed, hearing is required), and Henson v. Columbus Bank & Tr. Co., 651 F.2d 320 (5th Cir. 1980) (TILA case; hearing required), with Thompson v. Pharmacy Corp., 334 F.3d 1242 (11th Cir. 2003) (section 1988 case; hearing not required), and Watkins v. Fordice, 7 F.3d 453 (5th Cir. 1993) (section 1988 case), and Love v. Deal, 5 F.3d 1406, 1409 (11th Cir. 1993) (Voting Rights Act case; hearing required only where there is some dispute of material historical fact), and DeJesus v. Banco Popular de Puerto Rico, 951 F.2d 3, 14 (1st Cir. 1991) (TILA case; hearing not required), and Sablan v. Dep't of Fin., 856 F.2d 1317 (9th Cir. 1988) (section 1988 case), and Mirabal v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 576 F.2d 729 (7th Cir. 1978) (TILA case).

1286 Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(d)(2)(D).

If the action is certified as a class action, then fairness to the class and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require that, even where the parties agree on a fee award, the court must still review that award.[1287] Notice of class counsel's motion for fees must be directed to the class in a reasonable manner.[1288] Any class member may object, as may any person from whom payment is sought.[1289]

11.13.10.2 Preparation of the Fee Application

The first step in a successful fee application is preparing a detailed accounting of time spent and work performed on the case.[1290] While the Supreme Court has not described the standards for record-keeping in detail, and some courts may accept reconstructed records,[1291] contemporaneous time records are by far the preferred practice.[1292] Courts may disallow hours claimed if there are no contemporaneous time records, or if those records fail to specify the nature of the task, the time expended, and the subject matter involved.[1293]

A sample petition for attorney fees is available with this treatise's digital version as companion material>Pleadings and Discovery. The petition should include definite information as to the following:

- The hours devoted to various types of activities, identifying the task and the general subject matter of the task; "stating that a certain amount of time was spent working on a particular pleading or motion is sufficient for the Court to evaluate the merit of the entry."[1294]
- The hours spent by various classes of advocates—partners, associates, paralegals.[1295]
- If the case involves unrelated claims, a breakdown of the time spent on each claim. Records should indicate the claim for which the work was done. If the work relates to several claims—or if the work cannot be effectively separated—the records should indicate these facts as well.[1296]
- An explanation of the fee arrangement with the client.
- The attorney's relevant experience and expertise in the type of litigation.
- Documentation of customary fees in the area for the level of experience and skill of the attorney, such as affidavits from other attorneys in the area or a fee survey[1297].
- The attorney's customary fee for the type of litigation.
- The attorney's rate as previously approved by other courts.
- Calculation of the amount of fees requested.

Affidavits regarding customary fees for attorneys of similar skill and experience in the area should be drafted with Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc.[1298] in mind. Daubert requires federal courts to determine whether an expert's opinion is based on reliable principles and methods before it can be admitted in evidence. This requirement has also been incorporated into the Federal Rules of Evidence.[1299]

Affidavits submitted in support of hourly rates should be careful to spell out the basis for the affiant's knowledge and expertise.[1300] The Seventh Circuit rejected an hourly rate where 1287 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h).

1288 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(1).

Thus, the Ninth Circuit has held in a common fund case that the fee motion must be filed before the deadline for objections to the settlement. In re Mercury Interactive Corp., 618 F.3d 988 (9th Cir. 2010). The class must have notice of the approximate amount of the fees. See also McCoy v. Nationstar Mortg., L.L.C., 2020 WL 1530859 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 31, 2020) (only notice of motion for attorney fees must be served on class, not actual motion).

1289 Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(h)(2).

1290 A sample schedule of attorney hours with the judge's marginal comments is appended to In re Mattera, 128 B.R. 107 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1991) (TILA case), aff'd, 144 B.R. 687 (E.D. Pa. 1992).

1291 See Sussman v. Patterson, 108 F.3d 1206 (10th Cir. 1997) (section 1988 case); Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536 (9th Cir. 1992) (Title VII case), vacated in part on other grounds, 984 F.2d 345 (9th Cir. 1993) (vacating affirmance of award of expert fees in light of parties' settlement of that issue); Jean v. Nelson, 863 F.2d 759 (11th Cir. 1988), aff'd other grounds, 496 U.S. 154 (1990) (Equal Access to Justice Act case); MacDissi v. Valmont Industr., 856 F.2d 1054 (8th Cir. 1988) (Age Discrimination in Employment Act case); Yohay v. Alexandria Employees Credit Union, 827 F.2d 967 (4th Cir. 1987) (Fair Credit Reporting Act case).

1292 Webb v. Bd. of Educ., 471 U.S. 234, 238 n.6, 105 S. Ct. 1223, 85 L. Ed. 2d 233 (1985); Walker v. United States Dep't of Hous. & Urban Dev., 99 F.3d 761 (5th Cir. 1996) (section 1988 case) (non-contemporaneous records rejected); Phetosomphone v. Allison Reed Group, 984 F.2d 4, 8 (1st Cir. 1993) (Title VII case) (absence of contemporaneous time records calls for disallowance of the fee award); Keenan v. City of Philadelphia, 983 F.2d 459, 472 (3d Cir. 1992) (section 1988 case), citing Webb v. Bd. of Educ., 471 U.S. 234, 238 n.6, 105 S. Ct. 1923, 85 L. Ed. 2d 233 (1985); Hallmark v. Cohen & Slamowitz, L.L.P., 378 F. Supp. 3d 222, 230 (W.D.N.Y. 2019); Godson v. Eltman, Eltman, & Cooper, P.C., 328 F.R.D. 35, 63 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 23, 2018).

1293 See Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 437 n.12, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983) (civil rights case); Washington v. Philadelphia County Ct. of Common Pleas, 89 F.3d 1031 (3d Cir. 1996) (section 1988 case); Keenan v. City of Philadelphia, 983 F.2d 459 (3d Cir. 1992) (section 1988 case); Bostic v. Am. Gen. Fin., Inc., 87 F. Supp. 2d 611 (S.D. W. Va. 2000) (15% reduction because of inadequate documentation in TILA case). See also Envtl. Defense Fund v. Reilly, 1 F.3d 1254, 1259–1260 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (Resource Conservation and Recovery Act case); Fair Hous. Council v. Landlow, 999 F.2d 92 (4th Cir. 1993) (section 1988 case); Soler v. G. & U. Inc., 801 F. Supp. 1056 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (Fair Labor Standards Act case) (rejecting thirty-three individual time entries for being insufficiently described).

1294 Samms v. Abrams, 198 F. Supp. 3d 311, 321 (S.D.N.Y. 2016).

1295 Washington v. Philadelphia County Ct. of Common Pleas, 89 F.3d 1031 (3d Cir. 1996) (section 1988 case); Keenan v. City of Philadelphia, 983 F.2d 459, 473 (3d Cir. 1992) (section 1988 case). Cf. Gill v. Mid-Penn Consumer Disc. Co., 1988 WL 107560 (E.D. Pa. Oct. 14, 1988), aff'd, 853 F.2d 917 (3d Cir. 1988) (TILA case; no fees for time spent by substitute attorney where application failed to specify hourly rate of that particular attorney).

1296 See § 11.13.8.2.3, supra. See also Cruz v. Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers Local No. 3, 150 F.R.D. 29, 35 (E.D.N.Y. 1993) (Labor Management Relations Act case), aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 34 F.3d 1148 (2d Cir. 1994).

1297 See, e.g., Bentson v. Chyma, 2017 WL 7513317, at *4 n.2 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 11, 2017) (citing State Bar of Texas website), adopted, 2018 WL 780587 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 8, 2018).

1298 509 U.S. 579, 113 S. Ct. 2786, 125 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1993).

1299 Fed. R. Evid. 702.

1300 Cf. O Centro Espirita Beneficente União Do Vegetal in U.S. v. Duke, 343 F. Supp. 3d 1050 (D.N.M. 2018) (plaintiff submitted affidavit of "one of the most prominent civil rights attorneys in New Mexico" to support hourly rate); Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F the support for it was an affidavit by an attorney who did not live or practice law in the jurisdiction, had not practiced law at all in ten years, and had not made a study of prevailing rates in the community.[1301] If an affidavit from a fee expert is submitted, it should address not just the hourly rate but also other questions that are likely to arise, such as whether the number of hours spent on the case was reasonable and whether it is customary in the community to bill separately for paralegal time.[1302]

Courts may disallow or reduce fees for purely clerical tasks undertaken by attorneys;[1303] some challenged tasks, however, such as filing motions, are not "inappropriate for an attorney to perform, particularly in a situation of a very small firm that lacks the support services of a large firm."[1304] As courts often further penalize fee applicants who submit such claims by a punitive denial or reduction in fees,[1305] many attorneys excise questionable, borderline, or insufficiently documented time entries, and then volunteer a small reduction in the overall claim to compensate for duplication of efforts, inefficiency and billing errors which are inevitable—at least in any large-scale litigation.[1306]

In justifying hours claimed as having been reasonably expended, it may be useful to consider the hours charged by the defense attorneys in opposing the consumer's claim, especially where large time expenditures are necessitated by the defendant having taken an intransigent position or having vigorously opposed the consumer on many issues.[1307] If opposing counsel does not agree to provide information about their own bills for fees, many courts will require their production in postjudgment discovery.[1308] While the number of Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (in this FDCPA fee application, finding unhelpful declaration of experienced landlord-tenant attorney).

1301 Fogle v. William Chevrolet/Geo, Inc., 275 F.3d 613 (7th Cir. 2001).

1302 See, e.g., Dunaway v. JBC & Assoc., Inc., 2005 WL 3465665 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 19, 2005).

1303 Envtl. Defense Fund v. Reilly, 1 F.3d 1254, 1258 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (Resource Conservation and Recovery Act case); Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536, 1543 (9th Cir. 1992) (Title VII case), vacated in part on other grounds, 984 F.2d 345 (9th Cir. 1993) (vacating affirmance of award of expert fees in light of parties' settlement of that issue). Cf. Walker v. United States Dep't of Hous. & Urban Dev., 99 F.3d 761 (5th Cir. 1996) (section 1988 case; clerical work done by attorneys should be compensated at a different rate from legal work). But see Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328 (E.D.N.Y. 2014); Ward v. G. Reynolds Sims & Assoc., P.C., 2014 WL 4798935 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 26, 2014) (tasks such as updating calendars and receiving document transmissions are not purely clerical or administrative and are therefore compensable).

1304 Samms v. Abrams, 198 F. Supp. 3d 311, 321 (S.D.N.Y. 2016).

1305 DeJesus v. Banco Popular de Puerto Rico, 951 F.2d 3, 5 (1st Cir. 1991) (TILA case). See also Oviedo v. Ozierey, 304 N.W.2d 596 (Mich. Ct. App. 1981) (state law); Stern v. Stern, 415 N.Y.S.2d 225 (App. Div. 1979) (state law).

Attorneys may also want to refer to standardized publications regarding approximate hours appropriately billed for routine services.

1306 Jaffee v. Redmond, 142 F.3d 409 (7th Cir. 1998) (section 1988 case); Louisville Black Police Officers v. City of Louisville, 700 F.2d 268, 278 (6th Cir. 1983) (section 1988 case). See § 11.13.8.2.1, supra.

1307 See Gates v. Deukmejian, 987 F.2d 1392, 1395, n.4 (9th Cir. 1992) (section 1988 case); DeJesus v. Banco Popular de Puerto Rico, 951 F.2d 3, 5 (1st Cir. 1991) (TILA case); Douyon v. N.Y. Med. Health Care, P.C., 49 F. Supp. 3d 328, 341 (E.D.N.Y. 2014) (defendant's vigorous defense provides "further justification for the amount of fees and costs incurred," dwarfing statutory damages recovery); Karr v. Med-I Solutions, L.L.C., 2014 WL 5392098, at *5 (S.D. Ind. Oct. 22, 2014) (disparity between $1000 statutory fee award and $26,000 attorney fee due to defendant's choice to "aggressively litigate its position"); Serna v. Law Office of Joseph Onwuteaka, P.C., 2014 WL 3749652, at *7 (S.D. Tex. July 29, 2014); Hagy v. Demers & Adams, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5728345 (S.D. Ohio Oct. 22, 2013) (awarding attorney fees of $74,195, amount of time expended was, in part, product of defendant's vigorous defense); Gradisher v. Check Enforcement Unit, Inc., 2003 WL 187416 (W.D. Mich. Jan. 22, 2003); Armstrong v. Rose Law Firm, P.A., 2002 WL 31050583 (D. Minn. Sept. 5, 2002) (full lodestar fee request of over $43,000 at $250 per hour awarded where consumer was unsuccessful on her state collection law claim, but prevailed on related FDCPA claim and received maximum statutory damages of $1000, attributing necessity of consumer's attorney's efforts entirely to defendant's defense posture). See also Davis v. City & County of San Francisco, 976 F.2d 1536 (9th Cir. 1992) (Title VII case), vacated in part on other grounds, 984 F.2d 345 (9th Cir. 1993); Shula v. Lawent, 2004 WL 1244030 (N.D. Ill. June 7, 2004) (noting defendant's refusal to settle early on, in face of blatant violations, which prolonged case); McPherson v. Sch. Dist. No. 186, 465 F. Supp. 749, 758–759 (S.D. Ill. 1978) (section 1988 case). But see Caputo v. Prof'l Recovery Serv., Inc., 2004 WL 1503953 (D. Kan. June 9, 2004) (refusing to order defendant to disclose hourly rate and total paid to its out-of-state attorney in its unsuccessful defense on merits after determining that information would not be significant to determine rate or total fees to be awarded prevailing plaintiff for reasonable attorney fees).

1308 Gaines v. Dougherty County Bd. of Ed., 775 F.2d 1565, 1571 n.12 (11th Cir. 1985) (abuse of discretion; section 1988 case); Henson v. Columbus Bank & Tr. Co., 770 F.2d 1566, 1575 (11th Cir. 1985) (Truth in Lending Act case; "Because there was a particular need for evidence in this case and because the defendant here has contested the reasonableness of the plaintiff's petition, we find that the district court abused its discretion in refusing to allow Henson discovery of CB & T's records concerning hours expended and fees paid."). See also Bouaphakeo v. Tyson Foods, Inc., 2013 WL 364789 (N.D. Iowa Jan. 30, 2013) (Fair Labor Standards Act case); Mendez v. Radec Corp., 818 F. Supp. 2d 667 (W.D.N.Y. 2011) (Fair Labor Standards Act case; where employer put reasonableness of hours and rates charged by employee's attorneys at issue, billing records of employer's counsel were relevant and discoverable); Cohen v. Brown Univ., 1999 WL 696235, at *3 (D.R.I. May 19, 1999); Murray v. Stuckey's, Inc., 153 F.R.D. 151 (D. Iowa 1993) (Fair Labor Standards Act case); Real v. Cont'l Group Inc., 116 F.R.D. 211, 213 (N.D. Cal 1986) (Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) case); Mitroff v. Xomox Corp., 631 F. Supp. 25 (S.D. Ohio 1985) (ADEA case); Schachar v. Am. Academy of Opthamology Inc., 106 F.R.D. 187, 192 (N.D. Ill. 1985) (antitrust); Blowers v. Lawyers Coop. Publ'g Co., 526 F. Supp. 1324, 1325 (W.D.N.Y. 1981) (Title VII case); Naismith v. Prof'l Golfers Ass'n, 85 F.R.D. 552, 563–564 (N.D. Ga. 1979) (Title VII case; number of hours and hourly rate discoverable); Stastny v. S. Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 77 F.R.D. 662 (W.D.N.C. 1978) (Title VII case). See also Black v. Lojac Enters., Inc., 117 F.3d 1420 (6th Cir. 1997) (table) (where issue of reasonableness of time expended is fully joined, amount of time spent by defense is relevant, but plaintiff here had not met initial burden of submitting enough information). Cf. In re Fine Paper Antitrust Litig., 751 F.2d 562, 587 (3d Cir. 1984) (information about opponent's hours and hourly rates "certainly was relevant," but trial court's discretion to deny discovery upheld). But see Rodriguez v. Wet Ink., L.L.C., 2014 WL 287339 (D. Colo. Jan. 27, 2014) (Title VII case); Marks Constr. Co. v. Huntington Nat'l Bank, 2010 WL 1836785, at *2–3, 7 (N.D. W. Va. May 5, 2010) (ERISA case, denying discovery); Zhang v. GC Serv., L.P., 537 F. Supp. 2d 805, 809 (E.D. Va. 2008) (denying defense hours expended may support the plaintiff's attorney's claimed hours, caution should be exercised, because defense rates may be below market rate.

11.13.11 Appealing Attorney Fee Awards

If the action is successful, but the consumer's attorney believes the fee award is inadequate, this issue alone may be appealed.[1309] The lower court's fee decision though is only reversible in cases involving an abuse of discretion, which may be a difficult burden to shoulder.[1310] If the lower court failed to state valid legal reasons for the reduction from the lodestar, however, the decision should be remanded for an explanation.[1311]

The appeal may be filed by the client[1312] or, in many circumstances, by the attorney, such as where the client consents or where the attorney fees have been assigned to the attorney.[1313] Pendency of a motion for an award of attorney fees does not toll the time to appeal from the judgment on the merits of the case.[1314]

11.14 Tax Consequences of Consumer's Recovery and Attorney Fee Award

11.14.1 Overview

This section will discuss tax considerations in fair debt collection actions. While it cannot replace a consultation with a knowledgeable tax advisor, it will raise several issues regarding the tax implications of an award or settlement.[1315] These considerations may help shape the exact structure of the engagement and settlement to ensure that your client receives an adequate award after tax considerations are taken into account.

---

postjudgment request for defendants' time records: "Such production would be of marginal assistance to the Court, at best, while placing an undue burden on the defense."); Samuel v. Univ. of Pittsburg, 80 F.R.D. 293 (W.D. Pa. 1978) (section 1988 case) (disallowing such discovery).

1309 See, e.g., Paz v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 924 F.3d 949 (7th Cir. 2019); Davis v. Credit Bur. of the South, 908 F.3d 972 (5th Cir. 2018); Hunt v. City of Los Angeles, 638 F.3d 703, 719 (9th Cir. 2011) (order of attorney fees is collateral to, and separately appealable from, judgment); RMA Ventures California v. SunAmerica Life Ins. Co., 576 F.3d 1070 (10th Cir. 2009) (decision on merits and decision on attorney fees are considered separate, final, appealable decisions); Carroll v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 53 F.3d 626 (4th Cir. 1995); Price v. Franklin Inv. Co., 574 F.2d 594 (D.C. Cir. 1978); Herbert v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg. Ass'n, 102 B.R. 407, 409 (E.D. Pa 1989) (appeal of case on merits is separate from appeal of attorney fees award, citing White v. New Hampshire Dep't of Employment Sec., 455 U.S. 445, 452–453, 102 S. Ct. 1162, 71 L. Ed. 2d 325 (1982)).

1310 See, e.g., Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40 (1983); French v. Corporate Receivables, Inc., 489 F.3d 402 (1st Cir. 2007); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81 (2d Cir. 1998); Martinez v. Idaho First Nat'l Bank, 755 F.2d 1376 (9th Cir. 1985); Reneau v. Mossy Motors, 622 F.2d 192 (5th Cir. 1980); McGowan v. King, Inc., 616 F.2d 745 (5th Cir. 1980). See also Pennsylvania v. Delaware Valley Citizens' Council for Clean Air, 478 U.S. 546, 106 S. Ct. 3088, 92 L. Ed. 2d 439 (1986) (guidelines for attorney fees).

1311 Carter v. Caleb Brett L.L.C., 757 F.3d 866 (9th Cir. 2014) (district court erred as matter of law by reducing fee award without sufficiently explaining its rationale for reduction); Gonzalez v. City of Maywood, 729 F.3d 1196, 1206 (9th Cir. 2013) (section 1988 case; district court must explain percentage cut to either lodestar or number of hours required unless reduction is no greater than 10%); Evon v. Law Offices of Sidney Mickell, 688 F.3d 1015, 1034 (9th Cir. 2012) (FDCPA case; remanding because district court reduced requested fees of more than $90,000 to award of $2301.95 but "provided no meaningful explanation for the final number of hours it allowed"); Camacho v. Bridgeport Fin., Inc., 523 F.3d 973 (9th Cir. 2008) (FDCPA case; vacating and remanding fees award where district court made numerous reductions without explaining its decisions); Ferland v. Conrad Credit Corp., 244 F.3d 1145, 1149, 1151 (9th Cir. 2001); Savino v. Computer Credit, Inc., 164 F.3d 81 (2d Cir. 1998).

1312 Cf. Evans v. Jeff D., 475 U.S. 717, 106 S. Ct. 1531, 89 L. Ed. 2d 747 (1986) (section 1988 case; client may waive fee); Turner v. Sec'y of the Air Force, 944 F.2d 804, 807 (11th Cir. 1991) (Title VII case); Benitez v. Collazo-Collazo, 888 F.2d 930 (1st Cir. 1989) (only client had standing to contest fee distribution among co-counsel).

1313 See, e.g., Gonter v. Hunt Valve Co., 510 F.3d 610 (6th Cir. 2007) (False Claims Act case; attorneys had represented client at earlier stage of litigation); Mathur v. Bd. of Trs. of S. Ill. Univ., 317 F.3d 738, 741–742 (7th Cir. 2003) (title VII case; because client's obligations to attorneys were completely satisfied and client did not dispute fee award amount, any additional fees that would be awarded on appeal would not benefit him, but rather his attorneys, and therefore attorneys were deemed actual parties in interest); Samuels v. Am. Motors Sales Corp., 969 F.2d 573 (7th Cir. 1992); Venegas v. Skaggs, 867 F.2d 527 (9th Cir. 1989); Mayberry v. Walters, 862 F.2d 1040 (3d Cir. 1988) (holding attorney had right to appeal as surrogate for client with client's consent); Panola Land Buying Ass'n v. Clark, 844 F.2d 1506 (11th Cir. 1988); Lipscomb v. Wise, 643 F.2d 319 (5th Cir. 1981) (civil rights case); Dietrich Corp. v. King Res. Co., 596 F.2d 422 (10th Cir. 1979); Preston v. United States, 284 F.2d 514, 515 n.1 (9th Cir. 1960). But see Willis v. Gov't Accountability Office, 448 F.3d 1341 (Fed. Cir. 2006) (Civil Service Reform Act case; attorney lacks Article III standing on appeal to assert claim for full amount of attorney fees where former client declined to appeal); Benitez v. Collazo-Collazo, 888 F.2d 930 (1st Cir. 1989).

1314 See, e.g., Yost v. Stout, 607 F.3d 1239 (10th Cir. 2010); Moody Nat'l Bank of Galveston v. GE Life and Annuity Assurance Co., 383 F.3d 249, 250 (5th Cir. 2004); Elec. Privacy Info. Ctr. v. United States Dep't of Homeland Sec., 811 F. Supp. 2d 216, 224 (D.D.C. 2011); Arrington v. La Rabida Children's Hosp., 2009 WL 928922 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 3, 2009). Cf. Movie Gallery, US, L.L.C. v. Greenshields, 2009 WL 3063311 (M.D. Ala. Sept. 22, 2009) (unfair trade practices action; exercising its discretion to toll time for appeal while rule 54(d)(2) motion was pending where plaintiff requested that court, while considering defendants' motion for fees, toll plaintiff's time for appeal pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 58(e)).

1315 An important caveat: NCLC is not staffed by tax lawyers, tax laws often change, and each individual's tax situation is different. The particulars of an individual's taxes and tax planning must be based on a knowledgeable tax professional's analysis of the facts specific to that individual. Note that these issues are complex and some tax return preparers will not have adequate training or knowledge to properly consider them.

11.14.2 Tax Considerations for Prevailing Consumers

11.14.2.1 Generally

This section focuses on whether court awards and settlements,[1316] including cash awards, cancelled debt, and attorney fees, are taxable income to your client. Generally, all income is subject to tax unless specifically excluded by statute.[1317] Most pecuniary awards in the consumer area are taxable, for example, statutory damages, lost wages, penalties, interest, and punitive damages. Cancelled debt is considered taxable income to your client unless excluded by statute[1318] or common law.

In general, most cash awards to a consumer are considered taxable income to the extent the recovery includes the following:

- Recovery of lost wages or income;
- Prejudgment and postjudgment interest;[1319]
- Punitive damages;[1320]
- Statutory, minimum, or multiple damages, except to the extent that they can be treated as non-taxable compensatory damages;
- Emotional distress damages, unless they are linked to a physical injury or result in actual medical expenses; and
- Cancelled debts and forgiven loans, with several important exceptions discussed below.

In consumer rights litigation, however, the following types of recoveries are generally not taxable:

- Return of capital or recovery of a non-deductible expenditure—for example amounts improperly taken from a consumer or unwarranted overcharges;
- Damages from physical injury; and
- Cancellation of a debt (rather than an affirmative award of damages) because, for example, a statutory exemption applies, or the debt is disputed.

These principles are examined in more detail below.

11.14.2.2 Statutory, Minimum, and Multiple Damages

In general, statutory, minimum, and multiple damages are taxable. There may be an exception if they can be viewed under state law as a proxy for non-taxable compensatory damages. Some state laws treat them as a proxy for a compensatory award when public policy requires the consumer to be fully compensated, but problems of proof exist. Also, consider the situation in which the statute awards minimum or actual damages, whichever is greater. At least a portion of a minimum-damages award should be non-taxable if the non-taxable actual damages existed but were not awarded because the minimum damages were greater.

In the context of a multiple-damage award, separate out actual damages from the rest of the award. For example, when treble damages are awarded, only two-thirds of the award should be automatically considered taxable, while the other third should be examined to determine the exact nature of the harm being compensated to see if that portion of the award is non-taxable.

11.14.2.3 Return of Capital; Reduction of Purchase Price

While certain actual damages in a debt collection harassment case may be taxable, such as lost wages or emotional distress, an exception applies for damages that represent the return of money improperly taken. For example, recovery of wrongfully garnished wages is not taxable income, because the wrongdoer is returning money that has already been subject to tax. Such awards are non-taxable, because they are a recovery of capital.[1321] In many consumer cases, actual damages are unrelated to lost wages or income or emotional distress, but instead simply represent the return of amounts improperly taken from the consumer. Generally, awards returning amounts improperly taken from the consumers (i.e. overcharges) are not taxable because the money replaced has already been subject to tax.

11.14.2.4 Physical Injury Damages

In either a court recovery or a settlement, gross taxable income does not include damages (other than punitive damages) "on account of" personal physical injuries or physical sickness.[1322] To exclude these damages from gross income a taxpayer must demonstrate that the underlying cause of action giving rise to the recovery was based on tort or tort-type 1316 Generally, the tax consequences of a settlement or court award are the same. They will be referred to collectively as "award" throughout this section.

1317 I.R.C. § 61 (2017).

1318 26 U.S.C.A. § 108 (West 2018).

1319 Brabson v. United States, 73 F.3d 1040 (10th Cir. 1996).

1320 Punitive damages are not defined in either the Internal Revenue Code or the Treasury Regulations. They have been defined by the courts, however, as damages that are non-compensatory and are designed to punish the offender and serve as an example to others. See Bagley v. Comm'r, 105 T.C. 396 (1995). In some states, part of the punitive damages goes to a state fund or other governmental recipient. This portion of the punitive damages should not be taxable to the consumer because the consumer does not receive it and has no control over its disposition.

1321 They are not "accessions to wealth." Comm'r v. Glenshaw Glass Co., 348 U.S. 426, 431, 75 S. Ct. 473, 99 L. Ed. 483 (1955). See I.R.C. § 108(e)(5).

While they may result in a decrease in the tax basis of the item purchased, this will rarely have any consequences for consumer goods since they generally are not depreciable and not sold at a profit.

1322 I.R.C. § 104(a)(2). See also O'Gilvie v. United States, 519 U.S. 79, 117 S. Ct. 452, 136 L. Ed. 2d 454 (1996) (punitive damages are taxable).

rights.[1323] State law decides whether a tort-type injury is involved.[1324]

If an action has its origin in a physical injury or physical sickness, then all damages (other than punitive damages) that flow from the physical event are treated as damages received on account of personal physical injuries or physical sickness, whether or not the recipient of the damages is the injured party.[1325] If the tortious act causes physical injuries, which in turn cause other damages such as lost wages or pain and suffering, then all of the damages are "on account of" physical injury and are thus excluded from income.[1326]

Pain and suffering damages accompanying physical injury are also excluded from income, but stand-alone emotional distress damages are taxable.[1327] Moreover, any damages awarded to compensate for physical symptoms which flow from the emotional distress, such as insomnia, headaches, and stomach disorders, are taxable because they will likely be treated as damages for emotional distress and not physical injuries.[1328]

Nevertheless, even when no physical injury is present, emotional distress damages are not taxable up to the amount paid for medical expenses attributed to the treatment of that distress.[1329] Because the Internal Revenue Code refers to the amount "paid" as opposed to the amount "paid by the consumer," expenses paid by insurers should count toward this non-taxable amount.

1323 Comm'r v. Schleier, 515 U.S. 323, 115 S. Ct. 2159, 132 L. Ed. 2d 294 (1995).

1324 Brabson v. United States, 73 F.3d 1040, 1044 (10th Cir. 1996).

1325 I.R.C. § 104(a)(2). See H.R. CONF. REP. 104-737, 301 (1996), as reprinted in 1996 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1474, 1589. But see Amos v. Comm'r, 86 T.C.M. (CCH) 663 (T.C. 2003), 2003 WL 22839795 (T.C. Dec. 1, 2003) (although dominant reason Dennis Rodman agreed to settlement amount was to compensate courtside cameraman for his claimed physical injuries; 40% of award was not received on account of personal physical injury or sickness, and thus was includable in taxpayer's income, when settlement agreement expressly provided that portion of settlement amount was paid in return for cameraman's agreement not to defame payor, disclose existence or terms of settlement agreement, publicize facts relating to injury incident, or assist in any criminal prosecution against Rodman with respect to incident).

1326 See Banaitis v. Comm'r, 340 F.3d 1074, 1080 (9th Cir. 2003).

1327 I.R.C. § 104(a). See Murphy v. I.R.S., 493 F.3d 170 (D.C. Cir. 2007) (when taxpayer sued to recover federal income tax paid on compensatory damages she had been awarded in administrative action against her former employer under whistleblower environmental statutes for "mental pain and anguish" and "injury to professional reputation," damages were outside Internal Revenue Code's "personal physical injuries or physical sickness" damages exclusion from personal income, even though taxpayer no doubt had suffered from certain physical manifestations of emotional distress on which award was based).

1328 "It is intended that the term emotional distress includes symptoms (e.g., insomnia, headaches, stomach disorders) which may result from such distress." H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 104-737, at 301.2 n.56 (1996).

1329 I.R.C. § 104(a).

11.14.2.5 Cancelled Debt

11.14.2.5.1 The general rule

Cancelled debts are taxable income unless a statutory exemption or other exclusion applies. Income from cancelled debts[1330] is taxable because the debtor realizes an accession to wealth.[1331] Receipt of loan proceeds is not taxable because of the corresponding obligation to repay. When that obligation is cancelled, the debtor has an increase in wealth which is subject to tax.[1332]

Unless a statutory exemption or common law exclusion exists, the debtor must report the cancelled debt as income. The logic that treats forgiveness of most debt obligations as income applies only to the principal amount of the debt. Interest and fees that are forgiven or refunded to the borrower are not considered income.

If a consumer has taken a deduction for interest payments in previous years, and that interest is subsequently refunded to the consumer, the consumer has received a tax benefit. According to one court, the amount previously taken as a deduction becomes income in the current year under the "tax benefit" rule.[1333]

11.14.2.5.2 Statutory exemptions

There is no taxable income to the debtor for a cancelled debt when a statutory exemption applies.[1334] These exemptions include when the debt is cancelled in a bankruptcy case; when the debtor is insolvent; for cancelled student loans in certain circumstances; when the loan relates to a primary residence and was cancelled (or an agreement to cancel existed) before January 1, 2021;[1335] and when the cancellation relates to a purchase price reduction between a buyer and seller.[1336]

1330 Cancelled debt (COD) is also referred to as discharge of indebtedness (DOI).

1331 The concept of discharge-of-indebtedness income, first articulated in United States v. Kirby Lumber Co., 284 U.S. 1, 52 S. Ct. 4, 76 L. Ed. 2d 131 (1931), and later codified at I.R.C. § 61(a)(12), requires taxpayers who have incurred a financial obligation that is later discharged in whole or in part to recognize as taxable income the extent of the reduction in the obligation. Two rationales have been identified for this rule: (1) the taxpayer has an increase in wealth due to the reduction in valid claims against the taxpayer's assets or (2) the consideration received by a taxpayer in exchange for the indebtedness is excluded from income when received because of the obligation to repay, and the cancellation of that obligation removes the reason for the original exclusion.

1332 I.R.C. § 61(a)(12) (2017).

1333 "The tax benefit rule" applies whenever an individual recovers a previously deducted amount that reduced income subject to tax. For example, if an individual wins a recovery for reimbursement of overcharged interest on a home mortgage, and that individual had deducted the mortgage interest they paid on a previous year's tax return, the recovery or reimbursement of that interest is taxable. See I.R.C. § 111; Hillsboro Nat'l Bank v. CIR, 460 U.S. 370, 383, 103 S. Ct. 1134, 75 L. Ed. 2d 130 (1983); Schlifke v. Comm'r, 61 T.C.M. (CCH) 1697 (1991).

1334 See I.R.C. § 108.

1335 There are several other statutory exceptions outside the scope of this discussion. See I.R.C. § 108(a).

1336 I.R.C. § 108(e)(5).

The Internal Revenue Code specifically excludes from gross income any cancelled debt resulting from the cancellation of consumer debt in a bankruptcy case.[1337] The timing of the bankruptcy filing is crucial. If the debt is discharged in bankruptcy, the cancelled debt is entirely excludable from gross income.[1338] The bankruptcy exception does not apply if the debt is forgiven before or after the bankruptcy action.

Insolvency for purposes of the insolvency exception is defined as excess of liabilities over the fair market value of assets, as determined immediately prior to the discharge or cancellation of the debt.[1339] Total liabilities include the debt about to be cancelled. Contingent liabilities are counted as liabilities if it is "more likely than not" that the taxpayer will be called upon to pay the obligation in the amount claimed.[1340] Any amount cancelled that exceeds the insolvency is not excluded from income. IRS Publication 4681 is a helpful resource for determining whether a debtor is insolvent.

Student loans that are cancelled due to the debtor's work in certain professions for a certain period of time,[1341] or due to the death or disability of the student[1342] are not taxable. Another example of debt cancellation that is not taxable is gratuitous debt forgiveness, for example, when a family member or friend cancels a loan.[1343]

11.14.2.5.3 Non-statutory exclusions

In many consumer cases, the amount of a debt or even the existence of a debt that arose in connection to a consumer transaction is disputed, for example, when the debtor does not owe the debt, is the victim of identity theft, or when credit card charges were unauthorized. When there is a reasonable dispute as to the validity of the debt, its cancellation is not income.[1344] This doctrine usually applies to unliquidated, disputed debts.[1345]

A related doctrine involves the purchase price reduction. A purchase price reduction is not taxable income if a legitimate argument exists for contesting the purchase price.[1346] For example, consider a consumer claim against the creditor (under the FTC Holder Rule) that a seller's deception resulted in the consumer paying too much for a motor vehicle, causing the consumer to finance an excessive amount. Reduction or cancellation of that loan is not taxable because it falls under the purchase-price-reduction exception.[1347]

In addition, contingent liabilities are not income when they are cancelled.[1348] For example, there is no taxable income when a sale, which is contingent on financing, falls through.

11.14.2.5.4 Exception for operation of law; TILA rescission

Truth in Lending Act rescission of a home mortgage is an important example of when cancelled debt is not taxable income. Since the statute rescinds the mortgage debt, it is legally wiped out and not considered income when it is cancelled. However, the consumer has to recognize as income any deductions previously claimed for the interest paid on the mortgage.[1349]

One can also argue that in a Truth in Lending rescission, all that is cancelled is interest and fees. The rescission does not forgive any principal, but just erases any liability for interest and fees. Past payments made toward interest and fees are returned or applied to reduce the principal, and the consumer tenders the net amount financed. The refunded fees and the amount saved in future interest do not increase the taxpayer's pre-loan wealth and should not be treated as income.

11.14.2.6 Form 1099-C evidencing debt cancellation

Creditors are required to report to the IRS on Form 1099-C cancelled debt which exceeds $600.[1350] The creditor must also issue a copy of the Form 1099-C to the taxpayer on or before January 31 of the year following the year of the discharge.[1351]

Debt that is cancelled due to operation of law generally does not have to be reported by the lender on a Form 1099-C.[1352] Foreclosures and the running of statutes of limitations are important exceptions and are circumstances under which the IRS requires the lender to report the cancelled debt on a Form 1099-C.[1353]

1337 I.R.C. § 108(a)(1)(A).

1338 I.R.C. § 108(d)(2). If the bankruptcy exclusion applies, the taxpayer should not include any of the DOI in gross income on the taxpayer's tax return but must attach a Form 982 to his or her return. In lieu of a Form 982, the taxpayer can include a statement on his or her return, such as this: "The 1099-C DOI income reported by XYZ Bank is based on a discharge of indebtedness in bankruptcy under Title 11 United States Code. Therefore, it is excluded from gross income pursuant to I.R.C. § 108(a)(1)(A)."

1339 I.R.C. § 108(d)(3).

1340 Merkel v. Comm'r, 109 T.C. 463, 483 (1997), aff'd, 192 F.3d 844 (9th Cir. 1999).

1341 I.R.C. § 108(f)(1).

1342 I.R.C. § 108(f)(5).

1343 I.R.C. § 102 (gifts and bequests are not taxable to the recipient).

1344 Zarin v. Comm'r, 916 F.2d 110 (3d Cir. 1990). See also Estate of Smith v. C.I.R., 198 F.3d 515, 530 (5th Cir. 1999). Cf. Preslar v. Comm'r, 167 F.3d 1323, 1329 (10th Cir. 1999) (noting that, if debt is unenforceable as result of infirmity at time of its creation—for example, fraud or misrepresentation—tax liability may be avoided through purchase price reduction under I.R.C. § 108(e)(5) or an "infirmity exception"). But see Payne v. Comm'r, 357 Fed. Appx. 734 (8th Cir. 2009) (payment to bank was in settlement of undisputed credit card balance).

1345 See Preslar v. Comm'r, 167 F.3d 1323 (10th Cir. 1999).

1346 Rev. Rul. 92-99, 1992-2 C.B. 35 (1992); I.R.C. § 108(e)(5).

1347 I.R.C. § 108(e)(5).

1348 See I.R.S. P.L.R. 9642041 (Oct. 18, 1996).

1349 See Schlifke v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo. 1991-19, 61 T.C.M. (CCH) 1697 (1991).

1350 See Treas. Reg. §§ 1.6050P-1(a), 1.6050P-1T(b)(2)(B), 1.6050P-1(b)(2)(F).

1351 See Treas. Reg. § 1.6050P-1(f)(2).

1352 61 Fed. Reg. 262 (1996) ("A discharge of indebtedness occurring by operation of law not enumerated above is not required to be reported under the final regulations.").

1353 Treas. Reg. § 1.6050P-1(b)(2).

Creditors are not required to report consumer debts discharged in bankruptcy.[1354] However, if the lender mistakenly issues Form 1099-C for debt discharged in bankruptcy, it is still not taxable income.[1355] The taxpayer should simply file a Form 982 with their income tax return reporting the amount as discharged in bankruptcy.[1356]

The filing of a Form 1099-C does not prove that there has been a taxable event under the Internal Revenue Code. The lender is likely to file Form 1099-C without regard to whether one of the several exclusions from gross income, discussed above, applies. In addition, some Forms 1099-C are filed in error by creditors. A settlement agreement involving debt forgiveness can cover this issue by addressing whether the creditor will issue a Form 1099-C and in what amount.

When consumers receive a Form 1099-C, they or their tax professional must make an independent analysis, distinct from that performed by the creditor, about whether the cancelled debt is taxable income or whether one of the exclusions applies. If the taxpayer claims the amount is excluded, the taxpayer must attach—depending on the circumstances of the exclusion—a Form 982, a statement, or a Form 8275 to the tax return for the year in which the debt was cancelled.[1357]

A creditor or debt collector is unlikely to be liable to the consumer simply for issuing an inaccurate Form 1099-C. However, an improper motive for submitting a 1099-C form may give rise to an unfair and deceptive act or practice claim or a FDCPA violation.[1358]

11.14.2.7 Allocation Between Taxable and Non-Taxable Portions

Sometimes a settlement agreement will allocate the recovery to non-taxable and taxable portions. If this allocation is challenged, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and courts will consider all facts, including the allegations contained in the complaint, the evidence presented, the arguments made in the court proceeding, and the intent of the payor to determine the proper allocation.[1359]

The language of the settlement agreement, judgment, and any disbursement order is paramount. The U.S. Tax Court has held that the allocation in a settlement is generally binding for tax purposes to the extent that the agreement is entered into by the parties in an adversarial context, at arm's length, and in good faith.[1360] However, the IRS is not necessarily bound by the allocations contained in settlement agreements to which it was not a party.[1361] The allocation among the various claims of the settlement can be challenged when the facts and circumstances indicate that the allocation does not reflect the economic substance of the settlement.[1362]

11.14.3 Tax Consequences of Attorney Fee Awards

11.14.3.1 Generally

An important caveat: this section seeks to place attorney fee tax issues in a coherent context. Tax laws often change, some issues discussed here are unresolved, and each client's tax situation is different. The particulars of an individual's taxes and tax planning must be based on a knowledgeable tax professional's analysis of the facts specific to that individual.

Except when the law is clear, professional advice may be needed. Even then, these issues are complex; some tax return preparers will not have adequate training or knowledge to properly consider them. Failing to report the attorney fees as income could increase the likelihood of the IRS imposing an accuracy-related penalty if the fees are later found to be includable in the client's income.[1363]

In general, income is taxed to the person who earns it. As the FDCPA and other consumer statutes award attorney fees to a prevailing consumer, courts often have found that attorney fees (whether awarded by a court or determined as part of a settlement) belong to the client and are income to the client. The Supreme Court in Astrue v. Ratliff[1364] held that fee awards under the Equal Access to Justice Act, which specifies that payment of attorney fees are to made to the "prevailing party," are to be paid directly to the prevailing litigant, not to that litigant's attorney. The FDCPA and many other fee-shifting statutes contain similar language.[1365]

At issue then is whether that fee award, or some portion of it, is income to the client even when the client does not retain the award. When received by the consumer's attorney, the fees are income to the attorney. But the question is whether the attorney fee award is also income to the client.

That the client does not receive the fee award does not end the inquiry, because tax law may consider the payment of attorney fees to be income to the client either as satisfaction of 1354 Treas. Reg. § 1.6050P-1(d)(1).

1355 See, e.g., Treas. Reg. § 1.6050P-1(a)(3) (discharged indebtedness must be reported whether or not it is taxable income).

1356 See IRS Publication 4681, at 5, available at https://www.irs.gov.

1357 See I.R.C. § 108(d)(2).

1358 § 7.2.5.4, supra.

1359 Threlkeld v. Comm'r, 87 T.C. 1294, 1306 (1986), aff'd, 848 F.2d 81 (6th Cir. 1988); Bent v. Comm'r, 87 T.C. 236, 245 (1986), aff'd, 835 F.2d 67 (3d Cir. 1987).

1360 Robinson v. Comm'r, 102 T.C. 116, 127 (1994) (citing Threlkeld v. Comm'r, 87 T.C. 1294, 1306–1307 (1986), Fono v. Comm'r, 79 T.C. at 680, 694 (1982), aff'd without pub. op., 749 F.2d 37 (9th Cir. 1984), and Mitchell v. Comm'r, T.C. Memo. 1990-617, aff'd, 992 F.2d 1219 (9th Cir. 1993)), rev'd in part on other grounds, 70 F.3d 34 (5th Cir. 1995).

1361 See Robinson v. Comm'r, 102 T.C. 116, 127–134 (1994), rev'd in part on other grounds, 70 F.3d 34 (5th Cir. 1995).

1362 See Phoenix Coal Co. v. Comm'r, 231 F.2d 420, 423 (2d Cir. 1956); Bagley v. Comm'r, 105 T.C. 396, 406 (1995), aff'd, 121 F.3d 393 (8th Cir. 1997). See also Hemelt v. United States, 122 F.3d 204, 208 (characterization of settlement proceeds cannot depend entirely on the intent of the parties).

1363 See, e.g., Green v. Comm'r, 312 Fed. Appx. 929 (9th Cir. 2009); Sanford v. Comm'r, 2008 WL 2491676 (U.S. Tax Ct. June 23, 2008).

1364 560 U.S. 586, 130 S. Ct. 2521, 177 L. Ed. 2d 91 (2010).

1365 For example, under the FDCPA, 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(a)(3), the debt collector is liable to "such person" (that is, the consumer) for costs of the action and attorney fees.

the client's debt[1366] or as anticipatory assignment of income.[1367] The United States Supreme Court case Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Banks[1368] held that the contingent attorney fee portion of a client's recovery is an anticipatory assignment of income attributable to the client:

> In the context of anticipatory assignments, however, the assignor often does not have dominion over the income at the moment of receipt. In that instance the question becomes whether the assignor retains dominion over the income-generating asset, because the taxpayer "who owns or controls the source of the income, also controls the disposition of that which he could have received himself and diverts the payment from himself to others as the means of procuring the satisfaction of his wants." Looking to control over the income-generating asset, then, preserves the principle that income should be taxed to the party who earns the income and enjoys the consequent benefits.

In the case of a litigation recovery, the income-generating asset is the cause of action that derives from the plaintiff's legal injury. The plaintiff retains dominion over this asset throughout the litigation.[1369]

The general rule then is that, if a third party pays an obligation owed by a taxpayer (such as where the defendant is required to pay for attorney services rendered to the consumer), then the taxpayer realizes income in the amount of the payment.[1370] However, the Court in Banks went on to note that it was faced with a fairly narrow issue:

> After Banks settled his case, the fee paid to his attorney was calculated solely on the basis of the private contingent-fee contract. There was no court-ordered fee award, nor was there any indication in Banks' contract with his attorney, or in the settlement agreement with the defendant, that the contingent fee paid to Banks' attorney was in lieu of statutory fees Banks might otherwise have been entitled to recover.[1371]

A close reading of Banks indicates that the Supreme Court might treat statutory attorney fees paid to the attorney differently from fees pursuant to the contingent fee agreement at issue therein. One goal of statutory fees is to allow consumers to pursue litigation even when a corporation utilizes a scorched earth strategy. This defense strategy would succeed, and fair settlements discouraged if, because of the inclusion of attorney fees, a client is in a worse financial position having filed and won the case than if the client had not succeeded in vindicating their rights. Imagine an arduously fought case in which the consumer's attorney fees ballooned from matching the hours spent by the corporation's lawyers.

The Banks court discussed this issue but declined to address it. The opinion does indicate that the Court may find such fees not taxable to the consumer—it stated that the "plaintiff usually has little control over the amount awarded." Additionally, it noted that, when statutory fees are greater than the damage award, "[t]reating the fee award as income to the plaintiff in such cases, it is argued, can lead to the perverse result that the plaintiff loses money by winning the suit. Furthermore, it is urged that treating statutory fee awards as income to plaintiffs would undermine the effectiveness of fee-shifting statutes in deputizing plaintiffs and their lawyers to act as private attorneys general."[1372]

In addition, as described in the subsections following, there are several clear exceptions to the rule that an attorney fee award is taxable income to the consumer. If the underlying recovery is not taxable income (as discussed at § 11.14.2, supra), then the attorney fee award is not taxable to the client either.[1373] Another exception relates to where the consumer is not obligated to pay the consumer's attorney.[1374] There is also a statutory exception related to civil rights cases that may extend to certain consumer litigation.[1375] Other exceptions apply to class actions.[1376]

If the attorney fee award is taxable to the consumer, this can have harsh consequences for the consumer, significantly increasing the consumer's tax obligation and elimination of the child tax credit, earned income tax, other credits and tax benefits. This issue is examined at § 11.14.3.6, infra.

11.14.3.2 Attorney Fees Not Taxable to Client Where Damages Recovery Not Taxable

Generally, when the underlying award or settlement to the client is not taxable, then the attorney fees are also not taxable to the client. Whether all or part of a settlement or court award is non-taxable is examined at § 11.14.2, supra.

When the recovery involves taxable and non-taxable amounts, such as for personal injury and back wages, the attorney fees are normally apportioned accordingly,[1377] often in the same proportion to the award. Thus, the percentage of the contingent fee that is included in the taxpayer's gross income and also taken as an itemized deduction is the same 1366 See Old Colony Tr. Co. v. Comm'r, 279 U.S. 716, 49 S. Ct. 499, 73 L. Ed. 2d 918 (1929).

1367 See Commissioner v. Banks, 543 U.S. 426, 125 S. Ct. 826, 160 L. Ed. 2d 859 (2005); Commissioner v. Sunnen, 333 U.S. 591, 604, 68 S. Ct. 715, 92 L. Ed. 2d 898 (1948).

1368 543 U.S. 426, 125 S. Ct. 826, 160 L. Ed. 2d 859 (2005).

1369 Commissioner v. Banks, 543 U.S. 426, 434–435, 125 S. Ct. 826, 160 L. Ed. 2d 859 (2005) (citations omitted).

1370 Old Colony Tr. Co. v. Comm'r, 279 U.S. 716, 49 S. Ct. 499, 73 L. Ed. 918 (1929).

1371 Id., 543 U.S. at 439.

1372 Comm'r v. Banks, 543 U.S. 426, 125 S. Ct. 826, 160 L. Ed. 2d 859 (2005). But see Sinyard v. Comm'r, 268 F.3d 756 (9th Cir. 2001) (pre-Banks case, with one judge dissenting; noting that taxing statutory attorney fees may have perverse results, but stating that remedy was with Congress).

1373 See § 11.14.3.2, infra.

1374 See § 11.14.3.3, infra.

1375 See § 11.14.3.4, infra.

1376 See § 11.14.3.5, infra.

1377 See, e.g., Sinyard v. Comm'r, 268 F.3d 756 (9th Cir. 2001).

as the percentage of the full award which is included in gross income.[1378]

11.14.3.3 Where the Consumer Is Not Obligated to Pay the Consumer's Attorney

Whether a fee award is taxable to the client may depend on whether the client has an obligation to pay for the attorney's services. When the client is responsible for paying for the attorney's services, they will generally have income equal to the fee award, even if paid by another person. The satisfaction of another's obligation is income to the person who owed the debt.[1379] If a retainer or other agreement provides that the attorney will not charge the client for legal services, i.e., when the client has no obligation to pay fees, any fees paid to the attorney may not be income to the client.[1380]

The strongest case for excluding the attorney fee award from the client's income is when the attorney's retainer agreement does not require the client to pay an attorney fee. An IRS Private Letter Ruling to a legal services organization indicates that a fee recovery from the defendant is not taxable to the legal services client. The fees awarded directly to a legal services organization and a private firm that had co-counseled the case with it[1381] were not taxable to the client even though the client's recovery of damages was taxable.[1382]

The legal services organization's retainer agreement expressly provided that the client would not be charged any fees for legal services, and there was no retainer agreement between the client and the private law firm. The IRS reasoned that, because the litigant had no obligation, express or implied, to pay attorney fees, the award of attorney fees was not includable in the litigant's income. If the fee arrangement specifically states that the client is not liable for the fee, then attorney fees should not be not includable in the client's income because the client is under no contractual obligation to pay fees.[1383]

Another strategy considered by some attorneys is to ask the client to agree in the retainer to irrevocably assign to the attorney any right to attorney fees and any control over the attorney fee claim. However, such an agreement may be considered as an anticipatory assignment of income, leading to an attribution of attorney fees.[1384] Nevertheless, the United States Solicitor General, representing the Internal Revenue Service before the Supreme Court, gave qualified endorsement to this strategy: "If such an assignment [of statutory attorney fees to the attorney] is viewed as a transfer of the entirety of the attorney fee claim to the lawyer, such that the prevailing party retains no meaningful interest in or control over the claim, then it may be possible to view any recovery on that claim as income only of the lawyer."[1385] Some cases state that the client does not own statutory attorney fees.[1386]

11.14.3.4 No Tax Is Owed on Fees in "Civil Rights" Cases

In certain "civil rights" cases, including some consumer claims, clients may deduct attorney fees and costs "above the line," which means that the client reports only their net income—that is, the amount of the award the client keeps.[1387] This eliminates the harsh result where the consumer's tax liability may increase, even though the fee award is received by the consumer's attorney.

The "above-the-line" deduction is available if the attorney fees relate to causes of action delineated in Internal Revenue Code § 62(a)(20): fee awards paid by or on behalf of the taxpayer "in connection with any action involving a claim of unlawful discrimination,"[1388] regardless of whether the fees and costs result from a contingent fee, statutory fee-shifting award, or a class action common fund award.

"Unlawful discrimination" is a defined term in the Internal Revenue Code to include claims under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1983, or 1985, the Fair Housing Act, and the Americans with Disabilities Act. The rule also applies to certain employment claims, such as those under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act and the Family Medical Leave Act.

1378 See Sinyard v. Comm'r, 268 F.3d 756 (9th Cir. 2001).

1379 Old Colony Tr. Co. v. Comm'r, 279 U.S. 716 (1929) (when payment is made to satisfy the obligation of a taxpayer to a third party, the amount of the payment is generally includible in the taxpayer's gross income).

1380 See IRS Private Letter Ruling, PLR 201015016, 2010 WL 1511524 (Apr. 16, 2010); IRA Private Letter Ruling PLR 201552001, 2015 WL 9474657 (Dec. 24 2015).

1381 IRS Private Letter Ruling, P.L.R. 201015016, 2010 WL 1511524 (Jan. 5, 2010) (released on April 16, 2010).

1382 IRS Private Letter Ruling, P.L.R. 201015016, 2010 WL 1511524 (Jan. 5, 2010) (released on April 16, 2010).

1383 IRS Private Letter Ruling, P.L.R. 200748010 (Nov. 30, 2007). Note, however, that Astrue v. Ratliff, 560 U.S. 586,130 S. Ct. 2521, 177 L. Ed. 91 (2010) could arguably leave counsel unpaid absent an attorney's lien.

1384 The strategy is more likely to succeed if there is no express contractual liability for a fee between the client and litigating counsel.

1385 Reply Brief of Petitioner, Comm'r v. Banks, 2004 WL 2190372 (U.S. Sept. 22, 2004).

However, note that, in Banks, the payment of attorney fees from a contingent-fee litigation recovery was viewed as the satisfaction of the beneficiary's legal obligation to the attorney from a prior assignment.

1386 See, e.g., Citizens Legal Envtl. Action Network v. Premium Standard Farms, Inc., 397 F.3d 592 (8th Cir. 2005) (plaintiff not entitled to keep statutory attorney fees).

1387 The American Jobs Creation Act of 2004, which included the Civil Rights Tax Fairness Act, was enacted on October 22, 2004. The Act allows an above-the-line deduction (that is, a deduction taken from gross income in arriving at adjusted gross income) for any deductible attorney fees and court costs paid by, or on behalf of, the taxpayer in connection with an action involving, among others, a claim of unlawful discrimination (including employment discrimination, civil rights, and other cases regarding employment relationships).

1388 IRC § 62(a)(20). The act defines "unlawful discrimination" to include a number of specific federal statutes (sections 62(e)(1) through (16)), any federal whistle-blower statute (section 62(e)(17)), and any federal, state, or local law "providing for the enforcement of civil rights" or "regulating any aspect of the employment relationship . . . or prohibiting the discharge of an employee, the discrimination against an employee, or any other form of retaliation or reprisal against an employee for asserting rights or taking other actions permitted by law." IRC § 62(e)(18).

In addition, Internal Revenue Code § 62(a)(20) applies to "[a]ny provision of Federal, State, or local law, or common law claims permitted under Federal, State, or local law . . . providing for the enforcement of civil rights."[1389] Mortgage discrimination cases alleging fair housing violations are clearly within the ambit of this provision. It would seem to include Equal Credit Opportunity Act discrimination claims and claims under state credit discrimination statutes as well.

Since claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 are specifically covered, the provision should apply to consumer due process claims, such as may be alleged in many repossession, foreclosure, and garnishment cases involving governmental action.[1390] One could also argue that the IRS exception might apply to consumer fee-shifting statutes such as the FDCPA, but there is little authority directly on point. See the discussion of the Banks case at § 11.14.3.1, supra.

11.14.3.5 Taxability of Fees in Class Actions

In class action suits, the fee award is not income to the class representatives or class members when they are paid directly to the class counsel, are part of an opt-out class action lawsuit, and the class representatives and members do not have a separate contingency fee or retainer agreement with counsel.[1391] This rule may not apply to "opt-in" class action lawsuits.[1392]

11.14.3.6 Implications to Consumers if a Fee Award is Taxable to the Consumer

A large attorney fee award being taxable to the client can result in a sizeable tax liability for the client. This liability can adversely affect the client's ability to claim important credits, such as education credits, the child tax credit, and the Earned Income Credit.[1393] The alternative minimum tax (AMT) also may be implicated. The "below-the-line" deduction for attorney fees is not permitted in tax years 2019 through 2028.[1394] These adverse results are avoided when attorney fees are deductible "above-the line," which means that the client reports only their net income—that is, the amount of the award the client keeps,[1395] such as in civil rights and employment cases.

For low-income clients, the loss of the child tax credit, Earned Income Credit, and other credits can be catastrophic. For other clients, the application of the AMT is generally of greatest concern. Attorneys should carefully consider the tax implications of any Award before advising their clients.

11.15 Article III Constitutional Standing Under Spokeo As Applied to the FDCPA

11.15.1 Introduction; Basic Elements of Standing in Federal Court

Standing is a basic element of any civil action. A plaintiff who fails this basic test will be barred from all relief.

For federal courts, standing has a constitutional foundation. Article III of the United States Constitution limits a federal court to jurisdiction over "cases" or "controversies" between parties.[1396]

Article III standing consists of three elements: "The plaintiff must have (1) suffered an injury in fact (2) that is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) that is likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision."[1397] To establish the first element, an injury in fact, "a plaintiff must show that he or she suffered 'an invasion of a legally protected interest' that is 'concrete and particularized' and 'actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical.'"[1398] The Supreme Court has made it clear that a small harm is sufficient to create standing: even "an identifiable trifle is enough for standing."[1399]

1389 IRC § 62(e).

1390 IRC § 62(e)(13).

1391 See IRS Private Letter Ruling PLR200518017, 2005 WL 1060971 (May 6, 2005); IRS Private Letter Ruling 200316040, 2003 WL 1901404 (Apr. 18, 2003); IRS Private Letter Ruling PLR 20022200, 2002 WL 1155028 (Feb. 28,2002); IRS Rev. Rul. 80-364 (IRS RRU), 1980-52 I.R.B. 15, 1980-2 C.B. 294, 1980 WL 130164 (Dec. 29, 1980). See also National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 19.6 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1392 IRS Private Letter Ruling, PLR 200222001, 2002 WL 1155028 (May 31, 2002) (because class members have not personally agreed to compensate class counsel). See also IRS Private Letter Ruling PLR200518017, 2005 WL 1060971(May 6, 2005); IRS Private Letter Ruling 200316040, 2003 WL 1901404 (Apr. 18, 2003); Rev. Rul. 80-364, 1980-2 C.B. 294, Rev. Rul. 80-364, 1980-2 C.B. 294; Sinyard v. Comm'r, 268 F.3d 756 (9th Cir. 2001) (attorney fees awarded in opt-in class action suit under fee-shifting provision of ADEA included in plaintiff's gross income; injured party, not attorney, is eligible to receive court awarded fees).

1393 For example, the child tax credit begins to phase out at $150,000 if married and filing a joint return or if filing as a qualifying widow or widower; at $112,500 if filing as head of household; or at $75,000 if you are a single filer or are married and filing a separate return.

1394 IRC § 67(g).

1395 The American Jobs Creation Act of 2004, which included the Civil Rights Tax Fairness Act, was enacted on October 22, 2004. The Act allows an above-the-line deduction (that is, a deduction taken from gross income in arriving at adjusted gross income) for any deductible attorney fees and court costs paid by, or on behalf of, the taxpayer in connection with an action involving, among others, a claim of unlawful discrimination (including employment discrimination, civil rights, and other cases regarding employment relationships).

1396 U.S. Const. art. III, § 2.

1397 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (citation omitted). See also TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2203, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) ("a plaintiff must show (i) that he suffered an injury in fact that is concrete, particularized, and actual or imminent; (ii) that the injury was likely caused by the defendant; and (iii) that the injury would likely be redressed by judicial relief").

1398 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1548, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1399 United States v. Students Challenging Regulatory Agency Procedures, 412 U.S. 669, 690 n.14, 93 S. Ct. 2405, 37 L. Ed. 2d 254 (1973). See also Craftwood II, Inc. v. Generac Power Sys., Inc., 920 F.3d 479, 481 (7th Cir. 2019) (injuries from junk fax may be slight, but identifiable trifle is sufficient); Robbins v. Resident Verify, L.L.C., 2021 WL 3292652 (D. Utah Aug. 2, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; temporary denial of lease renewal is concrete); Foley v. Mary Washington Healthcare Servs., Inc., 2021 WL 3193177 (E.D. Va. July 28, 2021) (post-Ramirez

Article III standing is required only in the federal system. It has no application in state courts,[1400] although some state courts have incorporated Article III principles into their own state standing doctrines. However, since federal courts have original jurisdiction over FDCPA claims, most FDCPA claims will probably be litigated there, and every FDCPA plaintiff must be prepared to address Article III standing.

Article III standing goes to subject matter jurisdiction, so it can be raised at any time.[1401] For example, it can be raised sua sponte by an appellate court, even when it was not raised below.[1402] Whether a claim is sufficient on the merits is a separate question from Article III standing, and courts should not mix merits questions in with Article III questions.[1403] The party invoking federal jurisdiction must establish standing for each claim and each form of relief.[1404]

This section begins by analyzing the Supreme Court's two key decisions on Article III standing for claims under federal consumer protection statutes—its 2016 decision in Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins[1405] and its 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez.[1406] Section 11.15.3, infra, then provides a broad overview of the developing law on the application of these decisions to FDCPA cases. It includes a Circuit-by-Circuit analysis of Court of Appeals decisions in FDCPA cases that apply Ramirez or are cited favorably by it, a summary of strategic considerations, a discussion of the difference between procedural and substantive violations, and a catalog of decisions recognizing types of harm that FDCPA violations may cause as concrete.

The section then turns to the application of Spokeo to specific FDCPA violations:

- Violations of specific FDCPA provisions regarding deception and nondisclosure (§ 11.15.4, infra);
- Violations of section 1692g's disclosure requirements and dispute right (§ 11.15.5, infra);
- Contacts at inconvenient times or places (§ 11.15.6, infra);
- Third-party contacts or public disclosure of facts about the debt (§ 11.15.7, infra);
- Contacts with a represented debtor (§ 11.15.8, infra);
- Conduct serving to harass, oppress, or abuse (§ 11.15.9, infra);
- Unfair or unconscionable collection methods (§ 11.15.10, infra); and
- Lawsuits in distant forums (§ 11.15.11, infra).

The section concludes with subsections regarding the burden of proof (§ 11.15.12, infra) and removal and the benefits of filing FDCPA cases initially in state court (§ 11.15.13, infra).

In analyzing Article III standing for FDCPA claims, practitioners should also consult Chapter 15, infra, which analyzes the common law torts that are most often applied to debt collection abuses and can serve as common law analogs to FDCPA claims. Standing questions under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, the Truth in Lending Act, and the Telephone Consumer Protection Act often raise similar issues and are discussed in other books in this series.[1407]

Whether a plaintiff has statutory standing is a separate question from Article III standing and focuses on the question of which persons are authorized by the statute to bring suit. Statutory standing is discussed in § 4.4, supra. Ramirez states that, as several circuit decisions have held, "[e]very class member must have Article III standing in order to recover individual damages." However, the court specifically did not "address the distinct question whether every class member must demonstrate standing before a court certifies a class."[1408] Most courts have held that such a showing is not necessary to grant certification because a class action is a representative decision; purchase of postage stamp in order to dispute debt in writing, because of collector's failure to disclose that dispute could be oral, is concrete harm); Liotta v. Wolford Boutiques, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1178083, at *4 n.4 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 30, 2017) (citing this language and rejecting argument that injuries from TCPA violations are de minimis). But see In re FDCPA Mailing Vendor Cases, ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 3160794, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. July 23, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; amount of debt wrongfully disclosed to third party was too small to be concrete injury; failing to acknowledge Supreme Court precedent).

1400 ASARCO Inc. v. Kadish, 490 U.S. 605, 617, 109 S. Ct. 2037, 104 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1989). See generally § 11.15.14, infra (Art. III standing when case is removed from state court).

1401 See, e.g., Central States SE & SW Areas Health & Welfare Fund v. Merck-Medco Managed Care, L.L.C., 433 F.3d 181, 198 (2d Cir. 2005).

1402 Summers v. Earth Island Institute, 555 U.S. 488, 499, 129 S. Ct. 1142, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2009) (court has independent duty to assure that standing exists, even if no party challenges it). See, e.g., Frank v. Autovest, L.L.C., 961 F.3d 1185, 1187 (D.C. Cir. 2020) (vacating district court's judgment in FDCPA case because plaintiff lacked standing, even though district court did not evaluate or rule on standing); Gunn v. Thrasher, Buschmann & Voelkel, P.C., 982 F.3d 1069 (7th Cir. 2020) (raising standing sua sponte; ordering dismissal of FDCPA case for lack of jurisdiction).

1403 See, e.g., Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747, 758–759 (6th Cir. 2018) (refusing to mix merits questions—here, whether creditor's internal policy of honoring verbal disputes foreclosed a claim that it violated § 1641g by failing to specify that a dispute must be in writing—in with Article III analysis); Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75, 82 n.6 (2d Cir. 2018) (whether collector's incorrect identification of creditor was material goes to merits and is not relevant to Art. III analysis); Lewis v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 1989449 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2018) (finding standing, but denying claim on merits; accuracy of collector's reports to credit bureaus is grounds for judgment on the merits but does not affect claimant's standing to bring claim).

1404 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2208, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1405 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016). See also Frank v. Gaos, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 104, 203 L. Ed. 2d 404 (2019) (per curiam) (stating that Spokeo abrogated ruling a 2010 Ninth Circuit decision that violation of statutory right automatically satisfies injury-in-fact requirement whenever statute authorizes person to sue to vindicate that right; remanding case to allow courts below to addres standing).

1406 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1407 National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 11.2.1.3 (9t ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library; National Consumer La Center, Truth in Lending § 11.2.4 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nc .org/library; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception La § 6.10 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1408 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 1108 n ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

juridical entity, and the standing inquiry (like the personal jurisdiction inquiry) keys on the class representative.[1409] This analysis should survive the Ramirez decision.

11.15.2 The Supreme Court's Interpretation of Article III's Requirements in Spokeo and Ramirez

11.15.2.1 Article III Standing As Interpreted by Spokeo

In its 2016 decision Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins,[1410] the Supreme Court for the first time addressed the issue of constitutional standing in a case under a chapter of the federal Consumer Credit Protection Act, the Act that includes the FDCPA. The primary claim at issue was a violation of a requirement of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) that consumer reporting agencies (CRAs) "follow reasonable procedures to assure maximum possible accuracy of" consumers' reports.[1411]

The Spokeo decision focused on the injury-in-fact element of standing.[1412] It held that, although the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals correctly held that the particularity requirement[1413] for an injury-in-fact was met, it overlooked the concreteness requirement.[1414] As a result, the Court remanded the case to the Ninth Circuit for completion of the standing analysis.

The Supreme Court did not disagree with the Ninth Circuit's analysis of the particularity requirement. It noted that Robins' allegations "that Spokeo violated his statutory rights, not just the statutory rights of other people" and that "Robins's personal interests in the handling of his credit information are individualized rather than collective,"[1415] both concern particularity, not concreteness.[1416] Since the Court did not remand for further analysis of particularity, it apparently concluded that these allegations of particularity were sufficient.[1417]

In its analysis of the concreteness requirement, the Supreme Court reaffirmed its longstanding position that intangible injuries can be concrete.[1418] A harm can be actionable even if it is "difficult to prove or measure."[1419] The Court held that history and congressional judgment both play important roles in determining which intangible harms constitute injury in fact.[1420] With respect to history, the Court noted that "[b]ecause the doctrine of standing derives from the case-or-controversy requirement, and because that requirement in turn is grounded in historical practice, it is instructive to consider whether an alleged intangible harm has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts."[1421] An example mentioned by the Court is slander,[1422] which is actionable because it is inherently damaging without showing actual damage to reputation, an intangible interest.

Spokeo also holds that Congress "may elevat[e] to the status of legally cognizable injuries concrete, de facto injuries that were previously inadequate in law." The Court held that "Congress is well positioned to identify intangible harms that meet minimum Article III requirements, [and] its judgment is also instructive and important."[1423] Nevertheless, the Court stated that "Article III standing requires a concrete injury even in the context of a statutory violation."[1424] Analogizing to tort law, the Court also held that a "risk of real harm" is sufficient to satisfy concreteness.[1425]

The Court added that deprivation of a "bare procedural right, divorced from any concrete harm" would not establish standing.[1426] Nonetheless, the Supreme Court noted that "the violation of a procedural right granted by statute can be sufficient in some circumstances to constitute an injury in fact. In other words, a plaintiff in such a case need not allege any additional harm beyond the one Congress has identified."[1427] The Court gave as examples the right to information that Congress had decided should be made public.[1428]

1409 See National Consumer Law Center, Consumer Class Actions § 10.3.3.2.1 (10th ed. 2020), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1410 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1411 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(b).

1412 See § 11.15.1, supra.

1413 For an injury to be "particularized," it "must affect the plaintiff in a personal and individual way." Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1548, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1414 Id.

1415 Id. at 1548 (emphasis in original).

1416 Id.

1417 Id. at 1554 (Ginsburg dissenting).

1418 See, e.g., Valley Forge Christian College v. Americans United for Separation of Church and State, Inc., 454 U.S. 464, 102 S. Ct. 752, 70 L. Ed. 2d 700 (1982) (noneconomic injuries); Sierra Club v. Morton, 405 U.S. 727, 92 S. Ct. 1361, 1366, 31 L. Ed. 2d 636 (1972) (aesthetic and environmental well-being and enjoyment of park's scenery, natural and historic objects, and wildlife).

1419 Id. at 1549.

1420 Id. at 1549.

1421 Id.

1422 Id.

1423 Id.

1424 Id. (internal citations and quotations omitted). See also Thole v. U.S. Bank, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 1615, 1621–1622, 207 L. Ed. 2d 85 (2020) (reiterating this point); Frank v. Gaos, ___ U.S. ___, 139 S. Ct. 1041, 203 L. Ed. 2d 404 (2019) (per curiam) (reiterating that Spokeo rejects the view that a plaintiff automatically satisfies the injury-in-fact requirement whenever a statute grants a person a statutory right and purports to authorize that person to sue to vindicate that right).

1425 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016). But see TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (risk of harm can support standing only for prospective relief unless risk causes some other harm). See generally § 11.15.2.2.6, infra.

1426 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016). See § 11.15.3.3, infra (discussion of distinction between procedural and substantive rights for purposes of Article III standing).

1427 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (emphasis in original).

1428 Id. at 1549–1550 (citing Federal Election Comm'n v. Akins, 524 U.S. 11, 20–25, 118 S. Ct. 1777, 141 L. Ed. 2d 10 (1998) (confirming that group of voters' "inability to obtain information" that Congress had decided to make public is sufficient injury in fact to satisfy Article III) and Public Citizen v. Department of Justice, 491 U.S. 440, 449, 109 S. Ct. 2558, 105 L. Ed. 2d 377 (1989) (two advocacy organizations' failure to obtain information subject to disclosure under Federal Advisory Committee Act "constitutes sufficiently distinct injury to provide

Finally, the Supreme Court gave two examples of cases where statutory violations might not result in concrete harms: (1) a consumer reporting agency's failure to provide a required notice to a user of a credit report and (2) incorrectly reporting a consumer's zip code. The Court characterized these violations as examples of procedural violations that may not satisfy the concreteness requirements.[1429]

11.15.2.2 Article III Standing As Interpreted by Ramirez

11.15.2.2.1 The holding in Ramirez

The Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez[1430] is its second major decision about the application of Article III to claims under federal consumer protection laws. The case arose when TransUnion, one of the "Big Three" nationwide consumer reporting agencies (CRAs or credit bureaus), issued a report identifying a car buyer, Sergio Ramirez, as a potential terrorist. TransUnion had done so based solely on the fact that Ramirez had the same first and last name as a person on the federal government's terrorist watch list. TransUnion did not check any other identifying features, such as Ramirez's middle initial, date of birth, or address.

Since federal law prohibits transacting any business with a person who is on this list, Ramirez was denied a car loan. Ramirez filed suit on his own behalf and on behalf of thousands of other individuals who had been wrongly labeled as terrorists due to TransUnion's appallingly sloppy matching criteria.

The Supreme Court agreed with Ramirez that TransUnion had failed to use reasonable procedures to ensure the accuracy of class members' credit reports. The Court held, however, that while Ramirez had suffered a concrete injury, the other class members who were tagged as terrorists had standing only if their erroneous information in TransUnion's files was sent to third parties. Over a stinging dissent written by Justice Thomas, the Court held 5-4 that class members whose false information had not been published to a third party did not suffer concrete harm, and they had no standing to bring an FCRA action in federal court.

The Ninth Circuit had found that TransUnion also violated the FCRA by, in response to Ramirez's request for a copy of his credit file, sending him an incomplete version of his file that summarized his FCRA rights, but did not mention the terrorist alert. A day later, it sent him a second mailing that informed him of the terrorist match, but did not include the required summary of his FCRA rights. The Supreme Court characterized these disclosure violations as mere format violations, and the majority held that the class members—other than Ramirez himself—did not have standing to raise these claims because they did not identify any "downstream consequences" that they suffered from failing to receive the required information.

11.15.2.2.2 Physical harm, monetary injury, defamation, privacy, constitutional rights

Most of Ramirez's holdings increase the difficulty of supporting standing in federal court consumer actions. However, Ramirez also solidifies the view that three types of injury should be sufficient for constitutional standing in federal court:

First, Ramirez states that "[i]f a defendant has caused physical or monetary injury to the plaintiff, the plaintiff has suffered a concrete injury in fact under Article III."[1431] This fairly obvious point is only implicit in Spokeo. Ramirez highlights the importance of placing a monetary value on the denial of a consumer right whenever possible. As discussed in § 11.15.3.4, infra, there are many possible ways that plaintiffs may have suffered monetary harm due to an FDCPA violation, and these should be investigated and alleged in every case.

Second, Ramirez lists several types of intangible harms that are concrete because they were actionable under common law for analogous wrongs: reputational harms, disclosure of private information, and intrusion upon seclusion.[1432] This holding is of great importance for cases involving unwanted debt collection contacts, false reports to credit reporting agencies, and contacts with or disclosures about the debt to third parties, and is discussed in more detail in §§ 11.15.2.2.3, 11.15.5.4, 11.15.7, and 11.15.8, infra.

Third, Ramirez identifies infringement of rights afforded by the Constitution as injuries that may be concrete.[1433] While the Court mentions only free speech and free exercise as examples, the decision should remove any doubt that a consumer has standing to litigate other constitutional rights as well. Since the Supreme Court has held that the Constitution protects privacy, pointing to Ramirez's language might buttress the argument that consumers have standing to bring claims under FDCPA provisions that protect their privacy.[1434] As another example, FDCPA claims involving debts that are being collected by or for government agencies or involving distant forum abuse may raise due process concerns that may bolster the argument for standing.[1435] standing to sue")). See generally § 11.15.4.4.3, infra (standing to assert informational injuries).

---

1429 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1550, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016). But cf. Daniel Solove, When Is a Person Harmed by a Privacy Violation? Thoughts on Spokeo v. Robins (May 17, 2016), available at https://www.teachprivacy.com (discussing potential harms from incorrect zip code).

1430 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1431 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1432 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). ("Various intangible harms can also be concrete. Chief among them are injuries with a close relationship to harms traditionally recognized as providing a basis for lawsuits in American courts. Id., at 340–341, 136 S. Ct. 1540. Those include, for example, reputational harms, disclosure of private information, and intrusion upon seclusion.").

1433 Id.

1434 See § 11.15.2.2.3, infra.

1435 See § 11.15.12 (Art. III standing for claims involving distant forum abuse), § 14.11 (Constitutional torts), infra.

11.15.2.2.3 When does harm have a close relationship to harm traditionally recognized as a basis for a lawsuit?

Ramirez provides more detail about one of the two alternative tests for Article III standing articulated in Spokeo—that the harms the plaintiff suffered have a close relationship to a harm traditionally recognized as providing a basis for a lawsuit in American courts.[1436] Ramirez states that Article III "does not require an exact duplicate in American history and tradition."[1437]

Accordingly, the Court agreed that the harm caused by disclosure to a third party that a consumer was a "potential terrorist" (emphasis added) was closely related to the harm made actionable by the tort of defamation, even though this statement was only misleading, rather than being literally false, as required for a defamation claim. However, the Court also held that, because at common law publication of the false information was "a fundamental requirement of an ordinary defamation claim,"[1438] mere retention in a consumer's credit file of a false identification as a terrorist had an insufficiently close relationship to a harm traditionally actionable at common law to give the plaintiff Article III standing.[1439]

In determining whether a statutory claim is sufficiently related to a common law cause of action to allow standing, the Court's refusal to distinguish between a misleading statement and a false statement is helpful in arguing that a statute and common law claim are sufficiently related. For example, in some jurisdictions an invasion of privacy is actionable as a common law tort only if the invasion is "highly offensive."[1440] Ramirez supports the argument that a statutory claim is sufficiently related to this common law tort, even if the statutory claim does not require such a high degree of offensiveness. This, like the difference between a misleading statement and a false statement, is essentially only a difference in degree. In a decision she wrote when she was on the Seventh Circuit,[1441] Justice Barrett explicitly adopted the view that a difference in degree does not defeat Article III standing, as long as the kind of harm is the same.

While common law torts are the most obvious analogs for FDCPA violations, Ramirez and the Supreme Court's other decisions do not limit the analogs to common law torts. Any type of claim that is rooted in "American history and tradition"[1442] can support Article III standing.[1443]

11.15.2.2.4 The role of Congress's judgment

Spokeo very clearly holds that "the judgment of Congress" plays an "important role[]" in determining whether an intangible injury is concrete.[1444] The decision holds that, "because Congress is well positioned to identify intangible harms that meet minimum Article III requirements, its judgment is also instructive and important."[1445] It quotes with approval two of its earlier decisions, holding that Congress may "elevat[e] to the status of legally cognizable injuries concrete, de facto injuries that were previously inadequate in law," and that "Congress has the power to define injuries and articulate chains of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy where none existed before."[1446]

Spokeo made this point clear even with respect to procedural protections: "[T]he violation of a procedural right granted by statute can be sufficient in some circumstances to constitute an injury in fact. In other words, a plaintiff in such a case need not allege any additional harm beyond the one Congress has identified."[1447]

The majority opinion in Ramirez can be interpreted to rob this principle of meaning. Ramirez states that "Congress's creation of a statutory prohibition or obligation and a cause of action does not relieve courts of their responsibility to independently decide whether a plaintiff has suffered a concrete harm under Article III."[1448] It goes on to hold:

> For standing purposes, . . . an important difference exists between (i) a plaintiff 's statutory cause of action to sue a defendant over the defendant's violation of federal law, and (ii) a plaintiff's suffering concrete harm because of the defendant's violation of federal law. Congress may enact legal prohibitions and obligations. And Congress may create causes of action for plaintiffs to sue defendants who violate those legal prohibitions or obligations. But under Article III, an injury in law is not an injury in fact. Only those plaintiffs who have been concretely harmed by a defendant's statutory violation may sue that private defendant over that violation in federal court. As then-Judge Barrett succinctly summarized, "Article III grants federal

1436 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016). See § 11.15.2.2.1, supra.

1437 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1438 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2210 n.6, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1439 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2210, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1440 See § 15.3.1, infra.

1441 Gadelhak v. AT&T Serv., Inc., 950 F.3d 458 (7th Cir. 2020) (Barrett, J.). Accord Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1024–1025 (11th Cir. 2021) (citing Gadelhak for this proposition), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021); Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc., 8 F.4th 1184 (10th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; citing Gadelhak for this proposition); Thome v. Sayer Law Group, 2021 WL 4690829 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 7, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; citing Gadelhak and similar decisions; question is kind, not degree of harm).

1442 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1443 See, e.g., Farrell v. Blinken, 4 F.4th 124 (D.C. Cir. July 13, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding historical basis for right to sue to require U.S. government to recognize one's renunciation of U.S. citizenship).

1444 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1445 Id.

1446 Id.

1447 Id.

1448 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2205, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

courts the power to redress harms that defendants cause plaintiffs, not a freewheeling power to hold defendants accountable for legal infractions."[1449]

This passage appears to confine Congress's role to creation of substantive rights, with no role in defining whether a harm is concrete—a flat contradiction of Spokeo and the cases it relied on. Justice Thomas's strong dissent points out how far this conclusion strays from logic and history.[1450]

Where, then, does Ramirez leave the role of the judgment of Congress? The decision holds that Congress's creation of a statutory right with a private cause of action is not in itself enough to establish that a violation creates a concrete injury. However, in order to give continuing meaning to Spokeo, Congress must have some role in determining whether an injury is concrete. Perhaps there is an argument that the rule that courts must give "due respect" to Congress's judgment[1451] means that there is a presumption that a harm is concrete if Congress identified it as actionable. At the very least, in borderline cases, courts should side with Congress's judgment.

It is important to note that Ramirez cites with approval a robocall decision by Justice Barrett when she was on the Seventh Circuit. Her harmonization of the role of Congress and the analogy to common law claims may carry great weight:

> Now, for Congress's judgment. In passing the Act, Congress decided that automated telemarketing can pose this same type of harm to privacy interests. Pub. L. No. 102-243, § 2, 105 Stat. 2394, 2394 (1991) (explaining in the findings that "[u]nrestricted telemarketing . . . can be an intrusive invasion of privacy" and characterizing telemarketing as a "nuisance"). While Congress cannot transform a non-injury into an injury on its say-so, that is hardly what it did here. Instead, Congress identified a modern relative of a harm with long common law roots. And Gadelhak claims to have suffered the very harm that the Act is designed to prevent. Cf. Melito, 923 F.3d at 92–93 (reaching the same conclusion).
>
> The Eleventh Circuit treated the injury in its case [Salcedo v. Hanna, 936 F.3d 1162, 1172 (11th Cir. 2019)] as abstract partly because common law courts generally require a much more substantial imposition—typically, many calls—to support liability for intrusion upon seclusion. See, e.g., Sofka v. Thal, 662 S.W.2d 502, 511 (Mo. 1983). But when Spokeo instructs us to analogize to harms recognized by the common law, we are meant to look for a "close relationship" in kind, not degree. See 136 S. Ct. at 1549. In other words, while the common law offers guidance, it does not stake out the limits of Congress's power to identify harms deserving a remedy. Congress's power is greater than that: it may "elevat[e] to the status of legally cognizable injuries concrete, de facto injuries that were previously inadequate in law." Id. (alteration in original) (quoting Lujan v. Defs. of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 578, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992)). A few unwanted automated text messages may be too minor an annoyance to be actionable at common law. But such texts nevertheless pose the same kind of harm that common law courts recognize—a concrete harm that Congress has chosen to make legally cognizable. Van Patten, 847 F.3d at 1043.[1452]

As discussed in the next section, it is also possible to interpret Ramirez as addressing only violations of procedural rights created by Congress, not substantive rights. Perhaps, when Congress creates a new substantive right and creates a remedy for its violation, courts will defer to its judgment that a violation is a concrete injury. Post-Spokeo decisions from federal Courts of Appeal have often analyzed the "judgment of Congress" by asking "is this a harm that the Congress enacted the statute to prevent?"[1453] These decisions may still hold weight after Ramirez.

There is a danger that some courts will interpret Ramirez, with its downplay of Congress's role and its stress on the relationship not just between the harm the plaintiff claims and a harm made actionable at common law but also between the "fundamental requirements" of the two claims, as leaving Congress only with the authority to codify common-law torts that were recognized in the Eighteenth Century. This conclusion would be a profound assault on our representative democracy and would stretch the Ramirez decision beyond all reason.

11.15.2.2.5 Procedural vs. substantive requirements—does it make a difference?

The Spokeo decision dwelt on a characterization of the case's FCRA violations as merely "procedural." Although the Spokeo Court did not clearly indicate the role of the distinction between procedural and substantive violations, many decisions have given meaning to this distinction, often by giving greater weight or conclusive weight to Congress's judgment in enacting a statute that creates substantive protections and grants a private remedy for violations.[1454]

The majority opinion in Ramirez appears to give no weight to this distinction. It uses the term "procedural" only once, in a quote from Spokeo by which it characterizes the plaintiff's "format" claim as a "bare procedural violation."[1455] And it applies the same standards to the plaintiffs' claim that they

1449 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2205, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021), quoting Casillas v. Madison Ave. Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 329, 332 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.).

1450 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2220–2221, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1451 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1452 Gadelhak v. AT&T Serv., Inc., 950 F.3d 458, 462–463 (7th Cir. 2020) (Barrett, J.) (finding standing for TCPA claim involving five unwanted text messages). See also Ward v. Nat'l Patient Account Services Solutions, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3616067, at *6 (6th Cir. Aug. 16, 2021) (Moore, J., dissenting) (interpreting Ramirez in this way).

1453 See § 11.15.4.4.1, infra.

1454 See § 11.15.3.3, infra.

1455 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2213, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

were wrongfully tagged as potential terrorists as it applies to the "format" claim. It is hard to imagine a violation that is more "substantive" than being tagged and reported as a potential terrorist, so the Court's application of the same standards to this claim suggests that it makes no difference whether a violation is procedural or substantive.

However, remember that the claim that the Ramirez plaintiffs were wrongfully tagged as terrorists was based on the FCRA requirement that credit reporting agencies "follow reasonable procedures to assure maximum possible accuracy" in consumer reports.[1456] One of the claims in Spokeo was also based on this requirement, and the Spokeo Court characterized it, and all of the plaintiff's other claims, as procedural. As a result, perhaps there is still an opening to argue that Congress's views should be given more weight when the claim is a violation of a substantive statutory protection.

Accordingly, since Ramirez deals only with rights that the Court has characterized as procedural, it would still be reasonable to argue that, when Congress has created a substantive right and made violations privately actionable, deprivation of that right is a concrete injury in and of itself. At least one post-Ramirez decision recognizes this distinction in an FDCPA case, holding that section 1692e, which prohibits deception, creates substantive rights, violation of which establishes a de facto injury.[1457] However, this approach is much more likely to be successful if the right that Congress created is not only substantive but also one that would be readily recognized as important, and it is far safer to file suit only where it is possible to allege some harm besides the violation of the right itself or there is a clear analogy to a common law claim. Distinguishing between procedural and substantive rights is discussed in § 11.15.3.3, infra.

11.15.2.2.6 Is the risk of harm a concrete injury?

Ramirez appears to cut back on the principle that Spokeo seemed to adopt, that "the risk of real harm" can be a concrete injury in a suit seeking money damages.[1458] Where there is only a risk of harm, the majority opinion in Ramirez states that standing is confined to suits seeking prospective relief, such as an injunction.[1459] This statement appears to be dicta, since the Court concluded on the facts that the plaintiffs had not established a risk of harm,[1460] but some courts have treated it as a holding.[1461]

Of course, a risk of harm can independently create concrete injury. Ramirez acknowledges that there might be standing if "the exposure to the risk of harm itself causes a separate concrete harm."[1462] As an example, the Court noted that "a plaintiff's knowledge that he or she is exposed to a risk of future physical, monetary, or reputational harm could cause its own current emotional or psychological harm."[1463] While the Court cautioned that it was not taking a position on whether emotional distress might suffice as a concrete injury,[1464] it has approved of the award of emotional distress damages in the past,[1465] and many lower courts have held that emotional distress is a concrete injury for purposes of Article III standing.[1466] A plaintiff might also spend money on precautionary measures upon learning of a risk of harm, and many courts have held that a loss of time is also a concrete injury.[1467]

One concern is how great and how clear the risk of harm must be in order to meet Article III standards. A second basis for the Ramirez majority's rejection of the risk-of-harm argument was that "the plaintiffs did not factually establish a sufficient risk of future harm to support Article III standing,"[1468] because the risk of future harm was too speculative. The dissents by both Justice Thomas and Justice Kagan appropriately lambast this mischaracterization of the record.[1469]

The fact that this part of the majority opinion is based on its characterization of the factual record means that it can be

---

1456 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(b) (emphasis added).

1457 Garrett v. Fin. Bus. & Consumer Solutions, Inc., 2021 WL 3726199, at *2–3 (D. Colo. Aug. 23, 2021) (mag.; finding standing for § 1692e claim, but not for § 1692g claim, because that section confers only procedural rights). But see Kola v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 2021 WL 4135153, at *7–8 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 10, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; whether right is substantive or procedural, Congress's judgment is insufficient to establish standing).

1458 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___ U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1459 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2210–2211, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See Ward v. Nat'l Patient Account Services Solutions, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3616067, at *2–3 (6th Cir. Aug. 16, 2021) (concluding that Ramirez abrogates prior 6th Cir. decision that found material risk of harm to be concrete injury in suit for damages); Cheatham v. Adams, 2021 WL 4313961 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 22, 2021) (risk of harm that never materialized is not concrete; dismissing claims involving failure to give section 1692e(11) and 1692g disclosures).

1460 Tolliver v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 4306056 (W.D. Wis. Sept. 22, 2021) (interpreting Ramirez to have questioned, but not decided, whether standing for suit for damages can be based on risk of harm).

1461 See, e.g., Ward v. Nat'l Patient Account Services Solutions, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3616067, at *2–3 (6th Cir. Aug. 16, 2021) (concluding that Ramirez abrogates a prior 6th Cir. decision that found material risk of harm to be concrete injury in suit for damages); Kola v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 2021 WL 4135153, at *5 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 10, 2021) (characterizing this statement as a holding).

1462 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2210–2211, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (emphasis in original).

1463 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2211 n.7, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1464 Id.

1465 Carey v. Piphus, 435 U.S. 247, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1978). See also § 11.8.2 (recovery of emotional distress damages for FDCPA violations), § 15.2 (the torts of intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress, and recovery of emotional distress damages for other torts), infra; National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 12.5.2 (9th ed. 2018), updated at www.nclc.org/library (emotional distress as a basis for an award of actual damages in FCRA cases).

1466 See § 11.15.3.4, infra.

1467 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law §§ 6.10.3.4, 6.10.5 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1468 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2212, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1469 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2222, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (Thomas, J., dissenting); id. at 2225–2226 (Kagan, J., dissenting).

overcome with stronger proof. The high court's reluctance to draw the obvious conclusions from the facts in the record highlights the importance of nailing down the risk of harm with positive proof, leaving as little as possible to inferences.

Rejecting risk of harm as a basis for Article III standing for a suit seeking damages also implies that there must be a showing that the individual plaintiff was harmed. Harm to a hypothetical least sophisticated consumer is unlikely to be sufficient. In Casillas v. Madison Avenue Assoc., Inc.,[1470] a decision written by Justice Barrett when she was on the Seventh Circuit, that Ramirez cites with approval, states:

> Casillas insists that the "unsophisticated consumer" standard, which we have applied elsewhere in our precedent, means that standing exists whenever a debt-collection letter might have misled a naive consumer. But the "unsophisticated consumer" standard is a rule for interpreting a debt-collection letter to determine whether it is misleading. It is not a rule permitting those who have not been injured to vindicate the rights of those who have.

In Trichell v. Midland Credit Management, Inc.,[1471] another decision that Ramirez cites with approval, the Eleventh Circuit held that "a statutory violation that imposes a risk of concrete harm to consumers in general, but not to the individual plaintiff, cannot fairly be described as causing a particularized injury to the plaintiff."

Many district court and circuit decisions prior to Ramirez held that a risk of some particular type of harm created standing. Ramirez undercuts their conclusion that a risk of harm is sufficient to satisfy Article III for a suit seeking damages. Nonetheless, these decisions can still be cited as support for the argument that the harms they identify would have been concrete if they had materialized.

11.15.2.2.7 "Downstream consequences" must be shown for disclosure format violations; informational injuries

The Ramirez Court addressed several additional issues with respect to the plaintiff's claims that were based on TransUnion's failure to comply with the FCRA's file disclosure requirement and its duty to include a summary of consumer rights with a file disclosure. The Court characterized these claims as based on incorrect formatting of the notices Ramirez received,[1472] a characterization disputed by the dissent.[1473] It held that the plaintiffs, other than Ramirez himself, lacked standing because they did not present evidence of harm caused by the format of the mailings.[1474] Quoting Spokeo, the Court said that, without such proof, these were "bare procedural violation[s], divorced from any concrete harm."[1475]

An amicus had raised an additional ground for Article III standing for these violations: that they were concrete because they were informational injuries. The Court rejected this argument on three grounds:[1476]

- The Court held that the violations only involved formatting, not a denial of information.
- The Court distinguished its prior cases recognizing informational injuries as concrete on the ground that they involved public disclosure or sunshine laws that entitle all members of the public to certain information, and cited two Circuit decisions that make the same distinction.[1477] The Court did not, however, suggest any reason why a plaintiff would be more concretely injured by denial of information mandated by a sunshine law than by a law that mandates a disclosure to that particular individual, and it did not explicitly hold that denial of information is concrete only when it violates a sunshine-type law.
- The Court stated that the plaintiffs had not identified any "downstream consequences" from failing to receive the required information, and stated broadly that an "asserted informational injury that causes no adverse effects cannot satisfy Article III."[1478] The Court suggested that consumers might have had standing if they had established that they would have tried to correct their files, and thereby prevent dissemination of a misleading report, if they had been sent the information in the proper format.[1479]

The Court's treatment of informational injuries creates particular problems for litigation alleging statutory disclosure violations. For example, several important FDCPA provisions impose disclosure requirements on debt collectors, and the core protections of the Truth in Lending Act are disclosure requirements. In these cases, case selection will be of utmost importance. Cases that focus on technical requirements or format will likely be dismissed for lack of standing unless the plaintiff can allege and prove some "downstream consequences."

It is important to stress, however, that the Ramirez Court characterized the plaintiff's claims as involving the format of disclosures, not the failure to give disclosures or the provision of misleading disclosures. Cases that involve non-disclosure or misleading disclosure of substantive information may receive a more favorable reception in the courts. For example, Casillas v. Madison Avenue Assoc., Inc., a decision written by Justice Barrett when she was on the Seventh Circuit that the Supreme Court cites with approval in Ramirez, distinguishes between a defendant's failure to give notice of statutory rights, which 1470 926 F.3d 329, 336 n.6 (7th Cir. 2019) (citation omitted).

1471 964 F.3d 990, 1002 (11th Cir. 2020).
1472 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2213, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).
1473 Id. at 2221–2222.
1474 Id. at 2213–2214.
1475 Id. at 2213.
1476 Id. 2213–2214.
1477 Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990 (11th Cir. 2020); Casillas v. Madison Ave. Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 329 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.).
1478 Id. at 2214 (quoting Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F. 3d 990, 1004 (11th Cir. 2020)).
1479 Id. at 2213.

the decision holds is not a concrete injury, and a defendant's failure to provide substantive information.[1480]

Even for these cases, however, courts are much more likely to find standing if it can be truthfully alleged and proven that the consumer was actually misled, or that the consumer took or failed to take some action because of the violation. The Seventh Circuit has held that an allegation that the consumer was confused by the misleading disclosure is insufficient.[1481] However, other courts have held that confusion is a concrete injury.[1482] Ramirez adds some weight to this view, in that it cites the fact that the plaintiffs, other than Ramirez, did not present any evidence "that they were confused, distressed, or relied on the information in any way" as support for its conclusion that the plaintiffs had not alleged a concrete harm.[1483]

11.15.2.2.8 Private rights vs. public rights

In Spokeo, Justice Thomas, while concurring in the majority opinion, had proposed a somewhat different conceptual framework, founded on a distinction between "private rights" and "public rights." Quoting Blackstone, he defined private rights as those "belonging to individuals, considered as individuals," including rights of personal security, property rights, and contract rights. In Justice Thomas' view, "historically a plaintiff suffered a de facto injury merely from having his personal, legal rights invaded."[1484] By contrast, a public right—one that involves "duties owed to the whole community, considered as a community, in its social aggregate capacity"—was privately actionable only if the plaintiff could allege some special, individualized damage. Justice Thomas and the three other dissenters reiterated their support for this view in Ramirez.[1485]

In a 2020 decision, Thole v. U.S. Bank, a decision that held that a retirement plan participant lacked standing to sue a bank for mismanagement of the plan, Justice Gorsuch joined Justice Thomas in a concurring opinion that was based on this framework.[1486] In Ramirez, however, Justice Gorsuch joined Justice Kavanaugh's opinion, which explicitly rejected this approach.[1487] Given the fact that five Justices have agreed with the private rights/public rights framework in at least one decision, it is possible that in another case there might be a majority that would find standing based on Justice Thomas's framework, so it might be worthwhile to preserve this argument in cases that might reach the Supreme Court.

1480 926 F.3d 329, 335 (7th Cir. 2019). See § 11.15.3.1, infra (discussing this decision).

1481 Smith v. GC Services L.P., 986 F.3d 708 (7th Cir. 2021).

1482 See § 11.15.3.4, infra.

1483 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2213, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1484 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___ U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1551–1553, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (Thomas, J., concurring).

1485 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2214, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1486 Thole v. U.S. Bank, ___ U.S. ___, 140 S. Ct. 1615, 1622–1623, 207 L. Ed. 2d 85 (2020).

1487 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2207 n.3, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

11.15.3 The Lay of the Land Since Spokeo and Ramirez*: Overview and Strategy Considerations*

11.15.3.1 Circuit-by-Circuit Overview of Decisions Applying Ramirez to FDCPA Claims

The Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez,[1488] deals only with claims under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, but has profound implications for FDCPA litigation. How the Circuits apply Ramirez to FDCPA decisions will be of critical importance.

This subsection will analyze Circuit decisions applying Ramirez to FDCPA claims as those decisions are issued. It also summarizes four pre-Ramirez Circuit decisions that the Ramirez Court cited with approval—three in FDCPA cases and one in a TCPA case. Other pre-Ramirez Circuit decisions are addressed in §§ 11.15.5 to 11.15.12, infra, in connection with the specific FDCPA violations they address.

Sixth Circuit: In Hagy v. Demers & Adams,[1489] a pre-Ramirez decision, a law firm sent a letter to the consumers' lawyer, informing him that a creditor was waiving a claim that the consumers owed a deficiency. The consumers claimed that the letter violated the FDCPA because it did not identify the law firm as a collector. The Sixth Circuit held that the letter did nothing other than help the consumers. Since they did not allege that the letter caused them any harm or caused any risk of harm, the court concluded that they lacked standing. The decision deals only with the question whether Congress's creation of a private cause of action for non-disclosure of the debt collection purpose of a collection letter is sufficient in and of itself to establish standing, and does not explore whether there might be a close relationship between the harm the plaintiff was seeking to redress and a harm traditionally providing the basis for a lawsuit in English and United States Courts. Ramirez cites the decision for its statement that Congress "may not simply enact an injury into existence, using its lawmaking power to transform something that is not remotely harmful into something that is."[1490]

In Ward v. National Patient Account Services Solutions, Inc.,[1491] a post-Ramirez decision, the Sixth Circuit held that a consumer did not have Article III standing to assert a FDCPA § 1692e(14) claim based on the caller's identification of itself as NPAS, rather than as NPAS, Inc. As a result of the collector's failure to give its full name, the consumer sent a cease-contact letter to the wrong entity, and then received another call from the defendant because the defendant had not received the letter. The majority held, over a persuasive dissent, that the harm of receiving the unwanted call had not been clearly enough

1488 Id. at 2190 (2021).

1489 882 F.3d 616 (6th Cir. 2018).

1490 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2205, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (quoting Hagy v. Demers & Adams, 882 F.3d 616, 622 (6th Cir. 2018)).

1491 ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3616067 (6th Cir. Aug. 16, 2021).

pleaded in the consumer's complaint, so it did not consider the argument that the unwanted call was an invasion of privacy and a concrete harm. The court held that the consumer's confusion about the identity of the caller was not a concrete injury in itself. It also held that the consumer's decision to retain counsel to prevent further calls was not a concrete harm because it was voluntary, a conclusion that runs counter to well-accepted views of causation. For example, standard damages for a breach of the implied warranty of title include the legal costs of defending title against a third-party claimant, even though the buyer could have given up and simply suffered the loss of title.[1492]

Seventh Circuit: In Casillas v. Madison Avenue Assoc., Inc.,[1493] a pre-Ramirez decision written by Justice Barrett when she was on the Seventh Circuit and cited favorably by the Supreme Court in Ramirez, the Seventh Circuit rejected the view that a collector's failure to inform a consumer of FDCPA § 1692g's requirement that a dispute letter be in writing creates a risk of harm that gives the consumer Article III standing. The court relied heavily on its decision in a non-FDCPA case,[1494] in which it held that a plaintiff cannot satisfy the injury-in-fact element of standing simply by alleging that the defendant violated a disclosure provision of a consumer protection statute. However, it distinguished disclosures that are required at the beginning of a credit arrangement and that address how to deal with problems that may arise in the future, on the ground that these are arguably of use to all consumers.[1495] It also distinguished the case of non-disclosure of substantive information, which deprives a consumer of the opportunity to challenge it, from the failure to give the consumer a notice of statutory rights.[1496] The court also took a very narrow view of the types of informational injuries that create Article III standing, essentially limiting the Supreme Court decisions on this question to sunshine laws, a view that the Supreme Court echoed in Ramirez.[1497]

Since it held that the violation did not create standing in and of itself, the court examined the particular plaintiff's allegations. She did not allege that she tried to dispute or verify the debt orally, that she had ever considered contacting the creditor, that she had any doubt that she owed the debt, or that she had read the notice. The court concluded that the violation amounted to the omission of information that she never would have used, so did not create a risk of harm for her.

Ramirez cites Casillas favorably three times: once for the general proposition that there is no case or controversy if the plaintiff does not allege an injury that the defendant caused and the court can remedy, once for its statement that federal courts do not have "freewheeling power to hold defendants accountable for legal infractions," and once for the view that the Ramirez defendant's failure to give the plaintiff information in the format required by the FCRA was not a concrete harm, because the FCRA is not a sunshine or public disclosure law.[1498]

Gadelhak v. AT&T Services, Inc.[1499] is a Seventh Circuit decision that Ramirez cites with approval. Written by Justice Barrett when she was on the Seventh Circuit, the decision holds that five unwanted text messages, sent in violation of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA) amounted to a concrete injury. Ramirez cites the decision favorably for its conclusion that intrusion upon seclusion is a concrete injury.[1500] The fact that the Supreme Court cited a case involving harassing text messages for this conclusion should be very helpful when arguing that unwanted debt collection contacts create concrete harm in and of themselves.[1501]

Justice Barrett's harmonization of the role of Congress and the analogy to common law claims is of particular note and may carry great weight. As discussed in more detail in § 11.15.2.2.4, supra, in her view, Congress has the authority to identify "a modern relative of a harm with long common law roots," and a consumer who suffers that harm has Article III standing. The decision states: "While the common law offers guidance, it does not stake out the limits of Congress's power to identify harms deserving a remedy."[1502] In Justice Barrett's view, when Congress chooses to make a harm legally cognizable that is the same kind of harm that common law courts recognize, a consumer who suffers that harm has standing, even if the harm might be too minor to be actionable at common law.

In Wadsworth v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc.,[1503] a post-Ramirez decision, the Seventh Circuit held that a consumer did not have standing to bring suit regarding a collector's failure to identify herself as a collector or to state that she was attempting to collect a debt. The decision does not interpret Ramirez, but applies the Seventh Circuit's earlier Article III decisions that a debt collector's failure to inform a debtor of the debtor's statutory rights causes a concrete injury only if impairs the debtor's ability to use that information for a substantive purpose that the statute envisions. The decision also follows the court's earlier decisions holding that emotional harms are not concrete injuries.[1504]

Tenth Circuit: In Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc.,[1505] a post-Ramirez decision, the Tenth Circuit held that, because of the 1492 See, e.g., Jefferson v. Jones, 408 A.2d 1036 (Md. 1979); Colton v. Decker, 540 N.W.2d 172 (S.D. 1995). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Automobile Fraud § 9.2.2.4.1 (6th ed. 2021), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1493 926 F.3d 329 (7th Cir. 2019).

1494 Grosbek v. Time Warner Cable, Inc., 865 F.3d 884 (7th Cir. 2017).

1495 Id. at 336.

1496 Id. at 335.

1497 See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1498 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2205, 2214, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1499 950 F.3d 458 (7th Cir. 2020).

1500 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1501 See § 11.15.7, infra.

1502 Gadelhak v. AT&T Services, Inc., 950 F.3d 458, 462–463 (7th Cir. 2020).

1503 ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3877930 (7th Cir. Aug. 31, 2021).

1504 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1505 ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3627103 (10th Cir. Aug. 17, 2021) (finding standing for claims under §§ 1692g and 1692c(c)).

close relationship to the common law tort of intrusion upon seclusion, a consumer had Article III standing to litigate a claim that a collector violated FDCPA § 1692g by leaving her a voicemail message after she had disputed the debt and asked that collection contacts cease. The court stressed that, whether or not this contact intruded to the degree required by common law, it was the same kind of harm recognized at common law—intrusion into a plaintiff's peace and quiet. As additional support for its conclusion that the plaintiff's claim satisfied Article III, the court cited Congress's judgment that unwanted debt collection contacts were abusive and that it enacted the FDCPA to protect against them. The court affirmed summary judgment for the debtor on claims under FDCPA §§ 1692c(c) and 1692g(b).

Eleventh Circuit: In Trichell v. Midland Credit Management, Inc.,[1506] a pre-Ramirez decision, the Eleventh Circuit held that consumers did not have standing to sue a collector that sent them notices saying that they were pre-approved for options, including one involving very low monthly payments, that were designed to save them money. The letters did not disclose that making a payment would revive the debts, which were past the statute of limitations. The court held that, since the plaintiffs had not made payments in response to the letter or wasted time or money to determine whether to do so, they lacked standing.[1507]

The court rejected the argument that the deception that the plaintiff suffered satisfied Article III because it has a close relationship to the harm made actionable by the common law tort of fraudulent or negligent misrepresentation. In doing so it focused on the elements of the common law torts, rather than on the nature of the harm.[1508] However, Ramirez holds that the federal law claim need not be an "exact duplicate" of a claim traditionally actionable in English and United States courts,[1509] but need only share its "fundamental requirements."[1510]

The court also characterized Congress's role in the question as "limited."[1511] Ignoring the fact that a substantial part of the FDCPA directly addresses deception and creates a cause of action for it, the court held that the brevity of Congress's statutory findings and what it characterized as the narrowness of the FDCPA's cause of action disfavored standing.[1512]

Ramirez cites Trichell for the proposition that courts cannot treat an injury as concrete for Article III purposes "based only on Congress's say-so."[1513] It also cites the decision for its view that an informational injury under a statute other than a sunshine law is not a concrete harm.[1514]

In a post-Ramirez decision, Hunstein v. Preferred Collection and Management Services, Inc.,[1515] the Eleventh Circuit held that a collector's disclosure of personal information—the consumer's name, the fact that he owed a balance, his minor son's name, and the fact that the debt was for his son's medical treatment—to a mailing vendor was a concrete injury. The court noted that invasions of personal privacy have been traditionally actionable in American courts, and that in Ramirez the Supreme Court cited "reputational harms, disclosure of private facts, and intrusion upon seclusion" as examples of harms that can be concrete.[1516] The Eleventh Circuit stressed Ramirez's holding that Article III does not require an exact match between a statutory claim and a common-law cause of action,[1517] and agreed with the many courts that have held that the alleged injury must be similar only in kind, not in degree, to a harm that is traditionally actionable.[1518] The court also held that the fact that the personal information had been revealed only to the mailing vendor's employees, rather than to a wider swath of the public, was only a difference of degree, so did not preclude standing. This decision has, however, been vacated and scheduled for rehearing en banc.[1519]

11.15.3.2 Strategic Considerations

Before filing an FDCPA claim, the consumer's attorney must carefully evaluate whether the claim meets the case or controversy requirements of Article III—in particular, whether the consumer has suffered a concrete injury. The attorney should consider not only the intricacies of Spokeo and Ramirez, but also whether the complaint smacks of something serious or something trivial. Evaluating claims through the materiality standard that some courts have adopted[1520] may be helpful as a starting point, but the materiality of a violation is not necessarily equivalent to the concreteness of the harm

6 964 F.3d 990 (11th Cir. 2020).

7 Id. at 996.

8 See § 11.15.4.3, infra.

9 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

Id. at 2210 n.6.

Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990, 999 (11th Cir. 2020).

Id. at 1000 (reading section 1692k(a) to require FDCPA plaintiffs to have suffered actual damages, and treating this as evidence that Congress did not intend to make violations actionable without a showing of actual damages). But see Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1033 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (declining to read Trichell or section 1692k to categorically limit class of FDCPA plaintiffs to those with actual damages).

1513 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2205, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (quoting Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990, 999 n.2 (11th Cir. 2020)).

1514 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2214, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1515 17 F.4th 1016, 1033 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021).

1516 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1517 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1033 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (noting that "if Article III required a perfect match between an alleged harm and a common-law tort, Congress could only replicate and codify existing common-law causes of action—it would have no power to create enforceable rights. That is not, and couldn't be, the law.")

1518 Id. at *5–6.

1519 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021).

1520 See §§ 7.3.9, 8.1.5, supra.

it causes. Advocates should expect to have to defend against a motion to dismiss on Article III grounds in every FDCPA case filed in federal court.

Since Spokeo requires that an injury in fact be evident from the pleadings, advocates should take care to explain the harm caused by the alleged FDCPA violation in the complaint. Choosing cases in which the plaintiff's facts demonstrate some harm beyond the violation itself is important, and will likely be essential in many cases involving disclosure violations and other informational injuries. Even when there is a strong analogy to a common law claim, the case will be greatly strengthened by pleading and proving some downstream harm. Federal courts are likely to be emboldened by Ramirez to dismiss FDCPA claims of all types on standing grounds where the pleading does not allege downstream consequences resulting from the violation.

For these reasons, advocates should explore carefully whether the consumer suffered some additional harm beyond experiencing the violation.[1521] Any response to the collector's wrongful act, including a phone call, an Internet search, a request for advice, or anxiety, should be developed, and the advocate should strongly consider pleading that harm. The advocate should also ask the potential plaintiff the questions that the defendant is likely to ask in deposition. For example, in a deception case the advocate should ask:

- Did the consumer receive and open the letter that was deceptive? Did the consumer read it?[1522]
- Did the consumer notice the allegedly deceptive part of the letter? Did the consumer understand that part? How did the consumer interpret it?
- Did the deceptive part of the letter cause the consumer any concerns or cause the consumer to take or forgo, or consider taking or forgoing, any steps?
- Was there anything in the letter that the consumer did not understand, and did the consumer take any steps to get clarification?
- Does the consumer have, or did the consumer have, any disputes, doubts, or questions about the debt?
- If the violation involves non-disclosure, what impact, if any, would the information have had on the consumer if it had been disclosed?
- Did the collector's violations cause the consumer embarrassment, distress, worry, or fear?
- Did the violations cause the consumer to waste time?

Negative answers to these questions may make it clear that the case has too many weaknesses that the defense may exploit.

A common theme in favorable opinions prior to Ramirez is that courts will find concrete harm where the alleged injury is the type of harm that Congress was seeking to protect against in passing the statute. As discussed in § 11.15.2.2.4, supra, Ramirez throws the deference to be given to Congress into confusion. Nevertheless, pointing out, whenever possible, that Congress specifically intended to curb the type of harm in question when it enacted the FDCPA[1523] can only strengthen the case for standing. If the injury alleged does not appear to be within the purposes of the statute or appears to be tangential to those purposes, courts will be more likely to find that there is no concrete harm.

In a class action, there is some danger that tying the debtor's claim too closely to some particular harm the debtor has suffered will lead the court to conclude that the class representative's claim is not typical of those of the class, or that there are too many individual issues to allow class certification. If the named plaintiff's particular injuries can be presented in a way that merely illustrates the concreteness of the harm caused to that individual, and not as an integral part of the claim that is asserted on behalf of the class, there will be less danger that they will interfere with class certification.

Evaluating Article III standing issues is particularly important before deciding to appeal a case. Article III standing can be raised sua sponte by an appellate court,[1524] so is likely to arise in every appeal of an FDCPA decision. Advocates should pay especially close attention to the Spokeo and Ramirez decisions their circuit has issued, both in FDCPA and other cases.[1525] Advocates should appeal only strong cases that present easily recognizable substantive wrongs, and should obtain at least one second opinion—from a tough judge—about whether the case presents the Article III issues in a favorable light.

Some states have more expansive standing rules than Article III as interpreted by Spokeo and Ramirez. An important strategy to consider is to file an FDCPA case in state court in one of these states, rather than in federal court. The defendant will have the right to remove the case to federal court, but then if the court finds that Article III standing is lacking it will remand the case to state court rather than dismissing it. The potential benefits of filing the case initially in state court are discussed in more detail in § 11.15.13, infra. However, this strategy should be reserved for strong cases that will appeal to a state court judge, particularly since it may be the judge's first introduction to the FDCPA.

Even if the suit is filed initially in federal court, if it is dismissed for lack of Article III standing the dismissal should be 1521 See § 11.15.3.4, infra (cataloging types of harm that courts have found concrete).

1522 See, e.g., Casillas v. Madison Ave. Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 329, 335 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.) (noting that consumer did not allege that she read disclosure about which she sued; affirming dismissal for lack of standing); Seung Eun Oh v. Collecto, Inc., 2021 WL 3732881 (D.N.H. Aug. 23, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; no standing where consumer did not read letter).

1523 See, e.g., Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747, 760 (6th Cir. 2018) (contrasting collector's failure to specify that § 1692g dispute must be in writing, which was enacted to prevent "precisely the type of harm—abusive debt collection practices—the FDCPA was designed to prevent," with case seeking to apply FDCPA to violation of state procedural rule).

1524 See § 11.15.1, supra.

1525 See § 11.15.3.1, supra (overview of first wave of Spokeo decisions by U.S. Courts of Appeals).

without prejudice.[1526] In that case, it can be refiled in another court, assuming that the statute of limitations has been tolled or has not passed.

11.15.3.3 Distinguishing Between Procedural and Substantive Violations

In framing an FDCPA claim, it may be helpful to present it as a violation of a substantive rather than a procedural right to the extent possible. In Spokeo, the Supreme Court drew a distinction between "procedural" rights and "substantive" rights. It characterized the rights involved in the case as procedural, and held that, at least in some circumstances, a "bare procedural violation" without some other concrete harm would not establish standing.[1527]

After Spokeo, some courts concluded that, as long as a right created by the FDCPA can be characterized as substantive, the plaintiff has standing without the need to allege any other concrete harm.[1528] However, the Supreme Court's 2021 decision in Ramirez throws the role of any distinction between procedural and substantive rights into doubt.[1529] While Ramirez deals only with FCRA violations that it or Spokeo characterizes as procedural, it broadly states that Congress's creation of a statutory prohibition and a private cause of action to enforce it does not mean that Article III is satisfied,[1530] and it does not confine this statement to procedural rights. Indeed, Ramirez makes nothing of the distinction between procedural and substantive rights that seemed so central to the Spokeo court. Even before Ramirez, several Seventh Circuit decisions held that the distinction was irrelevant.[1531]

Given the uncertainty created by Ramirez, it is unclear whether the distinction between procedural and substantive rights matters in the Article III analysis. Nonetheless, it will be worthwhile to stress the substantive nature of FDCPA rights. Many post-Spokeo decisions hold that rights created by the FDCPA are substantive.[1532] Some decisions treat violations

1526 Cheatham v. Adams, 2021 WL 4313961, at *6 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 22, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision).

1527 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1528 See, e.g., Meyer v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2019 WL 2009378 (M.D. Fla. May 7, 2019) (sections 1692e and 1692f create substantive rights, and no additional harm need be shown to establish standing); Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515, at *5 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018); Bock v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 254 F. Supp. 3d 724 (D.N.J. 2017); Taylor v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 252 F. Supp. 3d 344 (S.D.N.Y. 2017), aff'd, 886 F.3d 212 (2d Cir. 2018); Prindle v. Carrington Mortg. Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4369424 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 16, 2016). See also Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., 654 Fed. Appx. 990 (11th Cir. 2016) (finding standing where right is substantive and Congress has elevated its violation to status of legally cognizable injury).

1529 See § 11.15.2.2.5, supra.

1530 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2205, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1531 Nettles v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 983 F.3d 896, 899 (7th Cir. 2020); Gunn v. Thrasher, Buschmann & Voelkel, P.C., 928 F.3d 1069 (7th Cir. 2020); Larkin v. Finance Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 982 F.3d 1060 (7th Cir. 2020).

1532 Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., 654 Fed. Appx. 990 (11th Cir. 2016); Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.; requirements of § 1692e are substantive); Kranz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 3899223, at *5 (W.D. Tex. July 10, 2020) (claim that subpoenas that falsely threatened contempt affected substantive rights, even though deception arose because they were sent by mail instead of by sheriff service, in violation of state's procedural rules); Cartmell v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2020 WL 113829 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 10, 2020) (right to receive truthful information); Gause v. Medical Business Consultants, Inc., 424 F. Supp. 3d 1175 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 12, 2019) (rights created by § 1692e and 1692f are substantive, but § 1692g is procedural); Beane v. RPW Legal Services, P.L.L.C., 378 F. Supp. 3d 948, 956 (W.D. Wash. 2019) ("allegations of 'informational violations' of the FDCPA under Section 1692e are sufficient to satisfy standing, even absent allegations of additional harm"); Adams v. Jackson, 2019 WL 5865510, at *4 (D.S.C. Apr. 30, 2019); Wenger v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 2119980 (M.D. Pa. May 15, 2019) (FDCPA creates substantive right to receive truthful information); Meyer v. Fay Servicing, L.L.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2019 WL 2009378 (M.D. Fla. May 7, 2019) (sections 1692e and 1692f create substantive rights, and no additional harm need be shown to establish standing); Walker v. Lamb, 2019 WL 542328, at *6 (W.D. Ark. Feb. 11, 2019) (violation of § 1692e(10) is substantive); Dreisen v. RSI Enters. Inc., 2019 WL 283646 (D. Ariz. Jan. 22, 2019) (requirement that collector disclose its purpose in initial communication was enacted to protect concrete interests, not procedural rights); Hovermale v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2018 WL 6322614, at *4–5 (D.N.J. Dec. 4, 2018) (right to receive accurate information is substantive); Im v. Bayview Loan Servicing L.L.C., 2018 WL 840088, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 12, 2018) (materially false or misleading statement is not a bare procedural violation, but infringes on substantive rights conferred by FDCPA); Watkins v. Investment Retrievers, Inc., 2018 WL 558833 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2018) (§§ 1692e and 1692f); Ceban v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 2018 WL 451637 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 17, 2018) (right to be free from deceptive or unfair debt collection practices is substantive); Ferrell v. HIS Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8186795, at *6 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 22, 2017); Rhein v. Forster, Garbus & Garbus, L.L.P., 2017 WL 4969335 (D.N.J. Nov. 1, 2017); Napolitano v. Ragan & Ragan, 2017 WL 3535025, at *7 (D.N.J. Aug. 17, 2017) (right created by FDCPA to be free from receiving false or deceptive information is substantive); Pritchett v. Paul Mason & Assoc., Inc., 2017 WL 11151610 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 2, 2017) (right to be free from deception is substantive); Grubb v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3191521, at *6 (D.N.J. July 27, 2017); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412, at *5 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (FDCPA creates substantive right to receive information), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Matute v. A.A. Action Collection Co., 2017 WL 2573714 (D.N.J. June 13, 2017) (complaint alleging that collector sought amounts not owed and failed to comply with § 1692g asserts rights that are not merely procedural); Pogorzelski v. Patenaude & Felix APC, 2017 WL 2539782 (E.D. Wis. June 12, 2017) (informational injury, here misrepresentation of attorney's involvement, is more than procedural); Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (collection letter seeking payment of contingent fees that were not yet incurred, in violation of §§ 1692e and 1692f); Bock v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 254 F. Supp. 3d 724 (D.N.J. 2017) (deceptive implication that attorney was meaningfully involved in preparation of complaint violates substantive rights and is concrete injury; right to truthful information is substantive right); Taylor v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 252 F. Supp. 3d 344 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) ("a materially false or misleading statement is not a 'bare procedural violation' but rather an infringement on an individual's substantive right conferred by Congress to receive truthful information in debt collection communications"), aff'd, 886 F.3d 212 (2d Cir. 2018); Gibson v. US Collections West, Inc., 2017 WL 1833597, at *3–4 (D. Ariz. May 8, 2017) (contacting consumer who sent cease-contact letter is not a of FDCPA § 1692g as procedural,[1533] and very occasionally a court has referred to some other FDCPA protection as procedural, usually without any detailed analysis.[1534]

The Spokeo Court did not define what makes a right "procedural" vs. "substantive." Its discussion of whether an incorrect zip code or failure to provide a notice to a user of a credit report causes concrete harm suggests that it considered those violations to be procedural, but it did not explain its criteria.[1535] An earlier decision, Massachusetts v. EPA, characterizes the right to challenge an agency's action as an example of a procedural right.[1536] It holds that a litigant who has been denied such a right has standing if there is some possibility that the requested relief will prompt the agency to reconsider the decision that harmed the litigant.

An FDCPA decision expresses the distinction as follows:

> A "procedural right" is defined as "[a] right that derives from legal or administrative procedure; a right that helps in the protection or enforcement of a substantive right." On the other hand, a "substantive right" is "[a] right that can be protected or enforced by law; a right of substance rather than form."[1537]

This decision also defines a "bare procedural violation" that does not support standing as one that "has no effect on the substantive right."

11.15.3.4 Types of Harms That FDCPA Violations May Cause

Before filing an FDCPA claim, advocates must inquire carefully about any harms the consumer suffered.[1538]

Spokeo and Ramirez make clear that both tangible and intangible injuries can meet the concreteness requirement.[1539] Concrete harms that would satisfy the injury-in-fact requirement and that an individual consumer might suffer as a result procedural violation); Reed v. Receivable Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1399597 (E.D. La. Apr. 19, 2017) (consumer has substantive right to be free from debt collection abuse; claims include repeated calls and failure to make disclosures required by § 1692g), aff'd, 706 Fed. Appx. 239 (5th Cir. 2017); Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff P.C., 2017 WL 1230847 (D. Conn. Mar. 30, 2017); Guerrero v. GC Services, L.P., 2017 WL 1133358 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 23, 2017) (mag.); Verdun v. Fidelity Creditor Serv., 2017 WL 1047109, at *5–6 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2017) (mag.); Remington v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2017 WL 1014994, at *2 (D. Conn. Mar. 15, 2017) (false statement that settlement may have tax consequences is "impairment of an FDCPA-created substantive right to truthful, non-deceptive information in debt collection communications"); Bautz v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 226 F. Supp. 3d 131 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 23, 2016) (right to truthful information in debt collection communications is substantive); Hill v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6462119 (D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2016) (right to truthful information and to be free from collection of unauthorized interest are not merely procedural violations), aff'd on other grounds, 888 F.3d 343 (8th Cir. 2018); Sullivan v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7187507 (W.D. Pa. Oct. 18, 2016) (section 1692e provides substantive rights, which Congress has elevated to status of legally cognizable injury), adopted, 2016 WL 7189859 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 9, 2016); Irvine v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 198 F. Supp. 3d 1232 (D. Colo. 2016); Barkley v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc. (In re Martin), 617 B.R. 866 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 2020) (filing a proof of claim on extinguished time-barred debt is substantive violation). See also Nettles v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 983 F.3d 896 (7th Cir. 2020) (stating that §§ 1692e and 1692f are substantive protections, but holding distinction irrelevant and finding no standing). But cf. Galea v. Midland Credit Mgmt. Inc., 2020 WL 905747 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 25, 2020) (claim that "Time Sensitive" on envelope created false sense of urgency is bare procedural violation; no standing without allegation of some resulting harm).

533 Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747 (6th Cir. 2018); Zirogiannis v. Seterus, Inc., 707 Fed. Appx. 724 (2d Cir. 2017) (section 1692g requirement that validation notice specify the amount of the debt is a procedural requirement); Garrett v. Fin. Bus. & Consumer Solutions, Inc., 2021 WL 3726199, at *2–3 (D. Colo. Aug. 23, 2021) (mag.; finding standing for § 1692 claim, but not for § 1692g claim because that section confers procedural rights); Kale v. Procollect, Inc., 2021 WL 2784556 (W.D. Tenn. July 2, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; terming failure to state amount of debt, in violation of § 1692g, a procedural violation); Gause v. Med. Business Consultants, Inc., 424 F. Supp. 3d 1175 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 12, 2019); Walker v. Lamb, 2019 WL 542328, at *5 (W.D. Ark. Feb. 11, 2019); O'Boyle v. GC Services L.P., 2018 WL 2271033 (E.D. Wis. May 17, 2018); Tyler v. Timothy E. Baxter & Assoc., 2018 WL 5078373 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2018); Kimble v. W. Ray Jamieson, P.C., 2018 WL 814225 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 9, 2018) (referring to § 1692g rights as procedural, but without analysis); Abercrombie v. Rogers, Carter, & Payne, 2016 WL 8201965 (W.D. La. Nov. 22, 2016) (misstatement about whether writing is required to dispute debt, and about extent to which debt will be presumed valid if debtor does not dispute it, affects procedural right, designed to buttress substantive right to be free from debt collection abuse), adopted, 2017 WL 489426 (W.D. La. Feb. 6, 2017); Perry v. Columbia Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6094821 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 19, 2016) (right to dispute debt is procedural right; plaintiff who received § 1692g notice does not have standing to assert that it misstated deadline for disputing debt where he did not allege that he was confused, that debt was invalid, or that he intended to dispute it). Cf. Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75, 81 (2d Cir. 2018) (finding standing; analogizing improper identification of creditor, in violation of §§ 1692e and 1692g(a), as procedural violation; procedural violation may manifest injury in fact if Congress conferred procedural right to protect concrete interests; since § 1692g protects concrete interests, violation may demonstrate risk of real harm to underling interest, sufficient to establish concreteness without need to allege any additional harm); Hargis v. Equinox Collection Services, Inc., 2019 WL 2341662 (N.D. Okla. June 3, 2019) (section 1692g was enacted to protect consumers' concrete interests, not purely procedural rights, but collector's misstatements about whether dispute must be in writing are procedural).

1534 Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, PA, 946 F.3d 855, 867–868 (6th Cir. 2020) (treating deception in collection letter as procedural violation, without explaining why); Brown v. R & B Corp., 267 F. Supp. 3d 692 (E.D. Va. 2017) (finding standing, but stating that requirement that debt be reported as disputed is procedural requirement intended to protect substantive right to be free from abusive debt collection practices); Wheeler v. Am. Profit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 4358718 (E.D. Mo. Sept. 29, 2017) (characterizing prohibition against flat-rating that gives false impression that collector is involved as procedural, but without analysis; no standing without allegation of harm that goes beyond inconvenience).

1535 See § 11.15.2, supra.

1536 549 U.S. 497, 517–518, 127 S. Ct. 1438, 167 L. Ed. 2d 248 (2007).

1537 Grubb v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3191521, at *6 (D.N.J. July 27, 2017).

1538 See § 11.15.3.2, supra.

1539 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021); Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

of nondisclosure, false, deceptive, or misleading statements, telephone harassment, or other FDCPA violations might include:

- Paying more than is actually owed;[1540]
- Paying a debt that the consumer would have preferred to contest;[1541]
- Disclosing detrimental information that the consumer would have preferred not to reveal;[1542]
- Paying a low-priority debt, instead of essential immediate obligations such as rent, commuting expenses, day care, utility costs, and food, because the debt collector imparts a deceptive sense of urgency about paying the past-due debt;[1543]

1540 See, e.g., Bassett v. Credit Bur. Servs., Inc., 2021 WL 3579073 (D. Neb. Aug. 13, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding Article III standing for claim against collector that dunned consumer for amounts not owed; analogizing to common law conversion claim); Seib v. Metropolitan Ins. Co., 2020 WL 2531119, at *5 (D. Or. Mar. 30, 2020) (paying inflated mortgage payments), adopted, 2020 WL 2529615 (D. Or. May 15, 2020); Shallenburg v. PNC Bank, 2020 WL 555447, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 4, 2020) (payment of contested mortgage debt in order to avoid loss of opportunity to sell home is concrete injury); Farina v. Metropolitan Transportation Authority, 2019 WL 3966163 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 21, 2019) (plaintiffs who made payments toward E-Z Pass fines that were wrongfully imposed have standing); Ferrell v. HIS Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8186795 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 22, 2017) (demand for unauthorized convenience fee for payment by credit card puts consumer at material risk of paying it); Ozmun v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 3140660, at *6 (W.D. Tex. July 24, 2017) (misstatement of balance due or character or status of debt "could have disastrous financial, legal, and reputational consequences for a consumer"); Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (overstatement of amount of debt—here, collection letter seeking payment of contingent fees that were not yet incurred—in violation of §§ 1692e and 1692f creates risk that consumer will pay more than is owed); Bell v. Adler Wallach & Assocs., Inc., 2016 WL 11583377 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 15, 2016) (concrete harm sufficiently alleged where plaintiff paid charges he believed he did not owe because he was fearful he might be sued or the debt might be reported to credit bureaus). See also Brunett v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 982 F.3d 1067, 1069 (7th Cir. 2020) (suggesting in dicta that debtor who, because of intimidating or confusing debt collection communication, pays something she does not owe would have standing); Larkin v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 982 F.3d 1060, 1066 (7th Cir. 2020) (suggesting that paying debts that were not owed, or appreciable risk of doing so, would be injury-in-fact, but not shown here); Powell v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 782 F.3d 119 (4th Cir. 2014) (pre-Spokeo decision; debt collector's overstatement of amount of a debt by double-counting attorney fees and failing to give credit for payments is material because it can lead consumer to pay more than she otherwise would). Cf. Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75, 81 (2d Cir. 2018) (finding standing for claim regarding incorrect identification of creditor; noting that requirement of detailed validation notice enables consumers to confirm that they owe the debt and its amount before paying it). See generally TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (monetary harm is concrete).

1541 See, e.g., Brown v. SWC Group L.P., 2019 WL 1147125, at *7 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 10, 2019) (finding standing where identity theft victim offered to pay debt she did not owe in order to keep it off her credit report), adopted, 2019 WL 2306115 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 12, 2019); Ferris v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 2018 WL 701285, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2018) ("[w]thout knowing the identity of the current creditor, Ferris might have been tricked into paying a debt he did not actually owe or a debt he intended to dispute"); Watkins v. Investment Retrievers, Inc., 2018 WL 558833, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2018) (finding standing where plaintiff alleged that false statement in dunning letter was intended to intimidate him into making a payment). See also Lox v. CDA, Ltd., 689 F.3d 818, 827 (7th Cir. 2012) (pre-Spokeo decision; debt collector's false statement that the court could require the consumer to pay the debt collector's attorney fees in addition to the debt "would have undoubtably been a factor in his decision-making process, and very well could have led to a decision to pay a debt that he would have preferred to contest"); Muha v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 558 F.3d 623, 629 (7th Cir. 2009) (pre-Spokeo decision; "Confusing language in a dunning letter can have an intimidating effect by making the recipient feel that he is in over his head and had better pay up rather than question the demand for payment."); Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 325 F.R.D. 608, 612–614 (N.D. Ind. 2018) (standing established by collector's misrepresentation or implication that by paying settlement debtor would avoid negative credit report, when in fact the debt had already been reported; denial of right to truthful information is concrete injury). See generally TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (monetary harm is concrete).

1542 Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836, at *10 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.; collector's failure to identify itself as a collector is concrete harm because it created risk that she might volunteer detrimental information), Dreisen v. RSI Enter. Inc., 2019 WL 283646, at *3 (D. Ariz. Jan. 22, 2019) (collector's failure to disclose debt collection purpose of call "created a risk that Driesen might volunteer information to her detriment during subsequent interactions"); Erickson v. Elliot Bay Adjustment Co., 2017 WL 1179435, at *4 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 29, 2017) (collector contacts with represented debtor create substantial risk of harm in that it "can result in the inadvertent and uncounseled disclosure of information, to the debtor's detriment").

1543 See Adams v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4735157, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 27, 2019) (citing both plaintiff's mental anguish and risk that deceptive debt collection letter would induce debtor to pay low-priority debt as concrete harms); Biber v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 229 F. Supp. 3d 457 (E.D. Va. 2017) (consumer has standing to assert claims under §§ 1692e and 1692f against collector that misrepresented that administrative wage garnishment proceedings had already commenced or were imminent; these misrepresentations "could have materially and adversely affected [plaintiff's] decisions regarding debt repayment"); Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 265 F. Supp. 3d 731 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (finding standing under Spokeo; noting inherent danger that deceptive or harassing debt collection practices will induce consumer to make decisions detrimental to his personal financial position or legal rights, such as uninformed decisions about debt prioritization). See also Bazile v. Fin. Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 983 F.3d 274, 280 (7th Cir. 2020) (stating in dicta that choosing to pay lower interest rate debt because of collector's failure to disclose that this debt was accruing interest would be concrete injury); Oyola v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1940313 (D. Mass. Mar. 1, 2018) (consumer who had been unable to pay for food for her family because of wrongful garnishment still has standing even if collector has now returned the garnished funds), adopted, 2018 WL 2010574 (D. Mass. Mar. 21, 2018). See generally TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (monetary harm is concrete).

- Forgoing or losing an opportunity that the plaintiff would have exercised to dispute[1544] or settle[1545] a debt;
- Paying the wrong person;[1546]
- Spending time or money to learn the truth about a matter that was misrepresented[1547] or to contest a false claim or stop further abuse;[1548]

1544 Casillas v. Madison Ave. Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 329, 334 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.) (lost opportunity to obtain benefit because of defendant's failure to provide information is concrete harm; plaintiff need not allege that attempt would have been successful); Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747 (6th Cir. 2018) (finding standing; failure of § 1692g notice to specify that dispute must be in writing creates risk of unintentional waiver of FDCPA's debt validation rights); Thome v. Sayer Law Group, 2021 WL 4690829 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 7, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; harms made actionable by misrepresentation torts stem from inequity of knowledge; finding standing where plaintiff would have disputed debt but for section 1692g notice's statement that she had only 14 days to pay balance); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (failure to disclose that dispute must be in writing created risk that consumer would dispute debt by phone, which would not trigger collector's statutory duties to verify debt and cease collection), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Lane v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3671467, at *4 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2016) (pointing out that denial of § 1692g rights deprives debtor not only of information but also of ability to force thirty-day cessation of collection activity). Cf. Rossi v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 2020 WL 2527176, at *5 (W.D. Wis. May 18, 2020) (loss of opportunity to challenge claim could be concrete, but not shown here). But cf. Cheatham v. Adams, 2021 WL 4313961 (E.D.. Ark. Sept. 22, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; loss of opportunity to dispute debt and obtain pause in collection activity not concrete injury where complaint did not allege that debtor would have exercised these rights).

1545 Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 197 F. Supp. 3d 1205 (S.D. Cal. 2016) (misidentification of creditor in complaint served on debtor caused risk of harm in that it could have affected consumer's litigation strategy, led to lost opportunities to settle the debt, and exposed the consumer to the possibility of a default judgment), aff'd on other issues, 735 Fed. Appx. 340 (9th Cir. 2018) (affirming Art. III dismissal of different claim that was based on letter that debtor never received); Bautz v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 226 F. Supp. 3d 131 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 23, 2016) (deceptive statement about tax consequences of settling debt presents a material risk of injury, because misinformation about tax consequences could impact whether debtor decides to pay the lesser amount offered as opposed to the full debt or some other option). See also Beane v. RPW Legal Services, P.L.L.C., 378 F. Supp. 3d 948, 958–959 (W.D. Wash. 2019) (finding standing for § 1692g claim; collector's wildly varying statements about amount of debt and its failure to respond to debtor's request for clarification likely prejudiced her ability to dispute it or make intelligent decision on whether to settle it). Cf. Rossi v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 2020 WL 2527176, at *7 (W.D. Wis. May 18, 2020) (loss of opportunity to settle debt would be concrete, but not shown here).

1546 Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412, at *9 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (failure to identify current creditor creates risk that debtor will pay wrong person), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Hsu v. Enhanced Recover Co., L.L.C., 2017 WL 4310643 (W.D. Tex. July 10, 2017) (consumer has standing to assert claim regarding collector's failure to provide its true legal name, in violation of § 1692e(14); information would help debtor evaluate whether collector runs legitimate or fraudulent operation, whether its claim is valid, and how to respond); Janetos v. Fulton Friedman & Gullace, L.L.P., 2016 WL 9446140 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 21, 2016) (denial of statutorily-required information, here disclosure of name of creditor, is concrete harm as matter of law; noting that this requirement reduces the risk of fraud by scammers who claim falsely to be entitled to collect a debt). See also Fritz v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 955 F. Supp. 2d 163, 171 (E.D.N.Y. 2013) (pre-Spokeo decision; noting that misrepresentation about ownership of debt could lead consumer to pay wrong person).

1547 Sykes v. Veripro Solutions, Inc., 2020 WL 4926547 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 21, 2020) (finding standing where consumer alleged that collection letter misinformed him about character of debt, whether there was enforceable lien on his property, and whether debt could be legally reported to credit agencies, and that as a result he was harassed, aggravated, concerned, and intimidated, and retained counsel); Keys v. Collection Professionals, Inc., 2018 WL 1469006 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 26, 2018) (paying for credit report to determine whether collector was adding unauthorized interest is concrete injury); Ferris v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 2018 WL 701285, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2018) (collector's provision of false information creates risk of harm, in that, if debtor is forced to investigate it, the delay may result in further fees and harm to credit rating); Horowitz v. GC Services L.P., 2016 WL 7188238 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2016) (non-debtor's expenditure of time to respond to voice mail, his use of a cell phone minute, and collector's recording of his call without telling him). See also Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 755 F.3d 1109, 1119–1122 (9th Cir. 2014) (pre-Spokeo decision; identifying "American Investment Bank, N.A.," instead of "CIT Online Bank "as the originator of loan could cause consumer to engage in attempt to investigate debt that would use up part of thirty-day period to dispute it). See also Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282 (7th Cir. 2020) (suggesting that debtor's calls and letters to investigate accuracy of the debts might be concrete injury if she had made them because of confusion arising from violation alleged, i.e., collector's failure to disclose whether interest was accruing); Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990, 997 (11th Cir. 2020) (suggesting that "wast[ing] time or money in determining whether to" make payments in response to defendant's letters might be a concrete injury, but not shown here); Frank v. Autovest, L.L.C., 961 F.3d 1185, 1190 (D.C. Cir. 2020) (stating in dicta that standing might be established by "investigatory injuries—e.g. resources spent uncovering or confirming the truth"). But see Nettles v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 983 F.3d 896 (7th Cir. 2020) (consulting attorney because of overstatement of debt is not concrete injury); Brunett v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 982 F.3d 1067, 1069 (7th Cir. 2020) (fact that debtor hired lawyer because of her confusion about collection letter's accurate statement that she might owe taxes on forgiven debt does not establish standing; "[a] desire to obtain legal advice is not a reason for universal standing"); Valenzuela v. Axiom Acquisition Ventures, L.L.C., 2021 WL 62495 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 7, 2021) (stating that "expenditure of resources" to speak with law firm regarding his rights because of his frustration with misleading collection letter is not concrete harm). See generally TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (monetary harm is concrete).

1548 Pinson v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 942 F.3d 1200, 1209 (11th Cir. 2019) (spending time and incurring out-of-pocket expenses to contest creditor's use of false name when reporting debt to credit bureau is concrete injury); Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017) (spending time and money to defend against meritless suit is an injury); Fullmer v. A-1 Collection Agency, LLC, 2021 WL 4155068, at *2 (D. Utah Sept. 13, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; attorney fees and costs that consumer incurred to get confidential medical information that had been filed in state court debt collection suit reclassified as private is concrete injury); Neal v. Adams, 2021 WL 4466392 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 29, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding attorney fees to defend collection action to be sufficient for standing to extent they were caused by collector's filing of suit in wrong venue, but insufficient for claim that collector failed to give § 1692g notice in absence of showing that incurring fees was caused by that violation); Lako v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2021 WL 3403632 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 4, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; cost of hiring attorney to defend collection action is concrete harm); Smith v. Moss Law Firm, P.C., 2020

- Waiver of a right or a defense;[1549]
- Increasing the consumer's burden of proof in a collection action, or otherwise negatively impacting the posture of the case;[1550] and
- The entry of a judgment against the debtor due to a false statement that is filed in court, with the potential additional harm of credit reports, garnishment, and other methods of judgment execution.[1551]

WL 584617 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 6, 2020) (plaintiff's anxiety and legal costs when he is wrongly sued and case is not immediately dismissed are concrete harms); Roe v. Roosen, Varchetti & Oliver, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 2523589 (E.D. Mich. June 19, 2019) (finding standing; citing fact that consumer contacted attorney after her employer received garnishment notice for debt that was not hers as one of the concrete harms); Mills v. Turner, 2017 WL 3670967, at *13 (D. Mass. Aug. 25, 2017) (finding standing where false threat of suit prompted consumer to retain counsel); Erickson v. Elliot Bay Adjustment Co., 2017 WL 1179435, at *5 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 29, 2017) (plaintiff's telephone call to ask counsel to dispute amount of debt is concrete injury); Verdun v. Fidelity Creditor Serv., 2017 WL 1047109 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2017) (mag.; plaintiff's expenditure of funds to hire attorney to clarify his legal obligations after receiving confusing debt collection letter is concrete injury); Everett v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6948052 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 28, 2016) (finding standing to bring claim regarding letter's misrepresentation of tax consequences of settling claim; citing costs consumer incurred to consult her attorney as one of the harms); Mogg v. Jacobs, 2016 WL 4395899 (S.D. Ill. Aug. 18, 2016) (concrete harm shown where consumer incurred costs to defend against collection action that was filed in violation of automatic stay); Robinson v. JH Portfolio Debt Equities, L.L.C. (In re Robinson), 554 B.R. 800 (Bankr. W.D. La. 2016) (attorney fee for contesting time-barred proof of claim is concrete injury). See also Ngo v. NPAS, Inc., 2021 WL 149121, at *4 (E.D. La. Jan. 15, 2021) (consumer retained counsel because he felt harassed by collector's contacts); LoMastro v. Baxter Credit Union, 2018 WL 5885536 (W.D. Wis. Nov. 9, 2018) (finding standing where plaintiff alleged that meritless suit was filed because of collection attorney's failure to be meaningfully involved, causing her to have to defend it); Moran v. Greene & Cooper Attorneys L.L.P., 43 F. Supp. 3d 907, 914 (S.D. Ind. 2014) (pre-Spokeo decision; "[u]nsophisticated consumers may lose track of their debts . . . and it is plausible that Plaintiff here would reasonably be confused by a letter demanding that he pay a sum of money to 'Unknown'"). But see Ward v. Nat'l Patient Account Services Solutions, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3616067 (6th Cir. Aug. 16, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; expense of retaining counsel to stop further calls is not concrete harm because it is voluntary); Frank v. Autovest, L.L.C., 961 F.3d 1185 (D.C. Cir. 2020) (hiring of attorney to defend collection action is not concrete harm where it was prompted by collection suit itself rather than by false affidavits collector filed); Lyshe v. Levy, 854 F.3d 855 (6th Cir. 2017) (potential harm that debtor might, because of collector's violation of state procedural rule, be required to visit a notary or contact the collector to request an electronic copy of discovery requests is not the type of harm FDCPA was enacted to prevent); Alarcon v. Vital Recovery Services, Inc., 2018 WL 6266558 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2018) (stating in dicta that being forced to hire attorney because defendant brought suit on debt that had been extinguished is not concrete harm; asserting, contrary to law's general recognition of consequential damages, that "[t]he concrete harm that confers standing must be a direct result of the defendant's statutory violation, not simply by plaintiff's chosen response to the harm"); Johnston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 229 F. Supp. 3d 625 (W.D. Mich. Jan. 26, 2017) (disregarding without explanation plaintiff's travel expenses and time he spent consulting with counsel and making telephone calls after receiving settlement offer that collector then refused to implement). But cf. Tolliver v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 4306056 (W.D. Wis. Sept. 22, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; time and expenses spent to file FDCPA suit not concrete harm); Allgire v. HOVG, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1021394 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 16, 2017) (costs of consulting with attorney because of allegedly deceptive demand for payment "is not an injury sought to be avoided by enforcement of the FDCPA" because FDCPA gives court authority to award costs and attorney fees; not clear from opinion whether consultation was about filing FDCPA claim or about interpreting misleading collection letter); Bass v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2016 WL 6877729 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 22, 2016) (fact that consumer hired attorney after receiving deceptive notice from collection firm is not concrete harm where court speculates that he might have hired attorney even without deception).

1549 Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747 (6th Cir. 2018) (finding standing; failure of § 1692g notice to specify that dispute must be in writing creates risk of unintentional waiver of FDCPA's debt validation rights); Diehm v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 426 F. Supp. 3d 578 (W.D. Wis. 2019) (finding standing at summary judgment stage where debtor submitted evidence that she would have disputed claim but for her belief that collection attorney had reviewed it; fact that she does not identify any substantive defenses does not negate standing); Adams v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4735157, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 27, 2019) (finding standing; noting that false statement that homeowner could raise defenses in foreclosure by advertisement proceeding could induce homeowners into inaction or delay in raising defenses; plaintiff also alleged mental anguish); Navarroli v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2019 WL 1044801 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 3, 2019) (offer to settle time-barred debt, without disclosing that payment would revive the debt, created risk of waiver of the statute of limitations defense); Kaiser v. Cascade Capital, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1521892 (D. Or. Mar. 28, 2018) (demands for time-barred debt create risk that debtor would make a payment and thereby waive the defense); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412, at *9 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (failure to disclose that dispute must be in writing created risk that consumer would dispute the debt by phone, which would not trigger collector's statutory duties to verify the debt and cease collection), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Lane v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3671467, at *4 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2016) (pointing out that denial of § 1692g rights deprives debtor not only of information but also of the ability to force a thirty-day cessation of collection activity). But see Bass v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2016 WL 6877729 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 22, 2016) (holding that fact that consumer would have waived defense of lack of service of process by attending hearing as wrongfully instructed in notice from collector is not sufficiently concrete where he did not, in fact, attend hearing; failing to consider risk of harm).

1550 Scarbrough v. Rausch, Sturm, Israel, Enerson & Hornick, L.L.P., 2018 WL 5305080 (E.D. Mich. July 26, 2018) (creditor's filing of false affidavit caused concrete harm by shifting burden of proof and forcing debtor to file counter-affidavit); Newman v. Encore Capital Group, 2017 WL 3479510 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017) (injury shown where collector's filing of false affidavit may have changed burden of proof in collection action to consumer's detriment). See generally § 11.15.5.4, Infra (Article III standing for claims involving false statements in collection actions).

1551 See, e.g., McMurray v. Forsythe Fin., L.L.C., 2021 WL 83265, at *2 (D. Utah Jan. 11, 2021) (finding standing for claim that collection agency garnished debtor's wages after obtaining money judgment without having registered, in violation of state law); Sayeed v. Cheatham Farms Master Homeowners' Ass'n, 2018 WL 8053811 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 29, 2018) (plaintiff has standing to bring FDCPA claim against creditor for recording an Arizona judgment in debtor's current home state after serving notice on the wrong person, even though creditor did not seek to enforce judgment against him, where he alleged that he suffered emotional distress, damaged credit rating, and unspecified pecuniary loss); Oyola v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1940313 (D. Mass. Mar. 1, 2018) (finding standing; judgment was entered against consumer after service at address where she no longer lived, then her wages were garnished and she could not feed her family), adopted, 2018 WL 2010574 (D. Mass. Mar. 21, 2018); Toohey v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 2271548

Some of these decisions find standing based on the risk of a particular harm, rather than the actual materialization of that harm. As noted in § 11.15.2.2.6, supra, the majority opinion in the Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez[1552] states that a risk of harm can serve as a concrete injury only in a suit seeking prospective relief such as an injunction. Decisions based on a risk of harm are still relevant after Ramirez for suits seeking money damages rather than prospective relief, because they support that view that the harm in question is concrete if it materializes.

Other types of harm that consumers may suffer due to FDCPA violations include:

- Damage to the consumer's credit rating;[1553]
- Damage to the consumer's reputation;[1554]
- Reluctance to seek further care from a medical provider on whose behalf the collector is acting;[1555]
- Forgoing or delaying other actions that the consumer would otherwise have taken;[1556]
- Invasion of privacy;[1557]
- Wasted time and annoyance,[1558] although some courts, including the Seventh Circuit, disagree;[1559]

(S.D.N.Y. May 12, 2017) (filing of affidavit of merit in state court collection suit that gave false impression that collector had reviewed account-level documentation is procedural violation that caused concrete harm by enabling collector to obtain state court judgment). See also Budewitz v. Daubert Law Firm, S.C., 2020 WL 5775428 (W.D. Wis. Sept. 28, 2020) (serving wage garnishment before responding to debtor's request for verification is concrete harm). But see Burns v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3003598 (E.D. Mich. July 10, 2019) (finding lack of standing where false affidavit of service led to default judgment, but consumer later got judgment vacated; failing to recognize harm of having to take steps to have it vacated).

1552 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1553 See, e.g., Lueck v. Bureaus, Inc., 2021 WL 4264368 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 20, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; decreased credit score is concrete harm); Maxwell v. Law Office of Jennifer McCoy, P.C., 2021 WL 3741999 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 23, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; damage to credit rating caused by failure to report debt as disputed is concrete harm); Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751486, at *2–3 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019) (collector caused concrete harm by wrongfully reporting debt to credit reporting agencies as unpaid); Oyola v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1940313, at *7 (D. Mass. Mar. 1, 2018) (decrease in credit score is itself concrete injury), adopted, 2018 WL 2010574 (D. Mass. Mar. 21, 2018). But see Norman v. Bosak Motors of Burns Harbor L.L.C., 2021 WL 4749617 (N.D. Ind. Oct. 12, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; lower credit score is not a concrete harm in itself). See generally § 11.15.5.3, infra (standing to assert claim that collector wrongfully reported information to credit reporting agency).

1554 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (credit reporting agency's dissemination of derogatory information about plaintiff to third parties is concrete harm in and of itself because of close relationship to harm that is actionable through common law tort of defamation); Robbins v. Resident Verify, L.L.C., 2021 WL 3292652 (D. Utah Aug. 2, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; embarrassment due to tenant screening company's exaggeration of plaintiff's criminal record is concrete harm); Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798, 805 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (embarrassment due to dissemination of private information to others in the community is concrete harm); Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017). But cf. Tolliver v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 4306056 (W.D. Wis. Sept. 22, 2021) (collector's failure to report debt as disputed not closely enough related to defamation tort; distinguishing Ramirez and denying standing). See generally § 11.15.5.3 (credit reporting), § 11.15.8 (wrongful third-party contacts), infra.

1555 Larkin v. Fin. System of Green Bay, Inc., 982 F.3d 1060, 1066 (7th Cir. 2020) (suggesting in dicta that consumers might have had standing if collection letters regarding medical bill had deterred them from seeking medical care).

1556 See, e.g., TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2213 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (citing fact that plaintiffs did not show that they "would have tried to correct their credit files . . . had they been sent the information in the proper format" in support of conclusion that they lacked standing). See also Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1023 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding standing; communication of debtor's personal information to third party in violation of FDCPA creates harm analogous that recognized by tort of public disclosure of private facts); Thome v. Sayer Law Group, 2021 WL 4690829, at *13-14 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 7, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; fees that accrued because § 1692g notice's confusing language led plaintiff not to dispute debt is concrete harm if proven); Roe v. Roosen, Varchetti & Oliver, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 2523589 (E.D. Mich. June 19, 2019) (finding standing where wage garnishment sent to wrong person's employer caused plaintiff, a real estate agent, to suffer embarrassment and emotional distress and to refrain from selling real estate for fear that her wages would be garnished). But cf. Kola v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 2021 WL 4135153 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 10, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; passing by opportunity to pay a debt because of conflicting notices about its amount, and thereby incurring more interest, is not concrete injury where facts showed that plaintiff could not have afforded to pay it anyway).

1557 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021); Donovan v. FirstCredit, Inc., 983 F.3d 246, 250-252 (6th Cir. 2020) (visible indications on letter that it was from debt collector causes harm closely related to that which forms basis of common law invasion of privacy claim; consumer has standing); St. Pierre v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 898 F.3d 351 (3d Cir. 2018) (finding standing; disclosure of debtor's account number implicates a core concern animating the FDCPA—invasion of privacy—so is closely related to harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing the basis for a lawsuit in English and American courts). See also FDCPA § 1692(a) (citing invasion of privacy as one of the harms FDCPA was designed to prevent). See generally §§ 11.15.7, 11.15.8, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (invasion of privacy as basis for standing for violation of restrictions on robocalls).

1558 See, e.g., Ngo v. NPAS, Inc., 2021 WL 149121 (E.D. La. Jan. 15, 2021) (finding standing where plaintiff felt harassed by collector's contacts and retained counsel); Alarcon v. Vital Recovery Services, Inc., 2018 WL 6266558 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 30, 2018) (receipt of repeated calls creates standing, as they take time to answer); Swike v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4099307, at *4 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 15, 2017) (recognizing wasted time and annoyance from receipt of debt collection communications as concrete injury); Reed v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 89047 (W.D. Pa. June 10, 2017) (wasted time and annoyance caused by repeated calls is concrete harm, even if consumer does not answer them). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.4 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (wasted time and annoyance as concrete harms from unwanted calls in violation of Telephone Consumer Protection Act).

1559 Gunn v. Thrasher, Buschmann & Voelkel, P.C., 982 F.3d 1069 (7th Cir. 2020) (where language in collection letter was legally sound and factually correct, fact that consumers were annoyed or intimidated by receiving it is insufficient); Tolliver v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 4306056, at *4 (W.D. Wis. Sept. 22, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision); Wheeler v. Am. Profit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 4358718 (E.D. Mo.

- Confusion about the claim or the individual's rights,[1560] although there is contrary authority, particularly from the Seventh Circuit;[1561]
- Being named as the defendant in a collection action;[1562]
- Interference with the debtor's employment;[1563]
- Travel expenses to get to a court in a distant venue where the collector has filed suit;[1564] and
- Emotional distress.[1565]

Sept. 29, 2017) (no standing for procedural violation without allegation of harm that goes beyond inconvenience).

1560 Perez v. McCreary, Veselka, Bragg & Allen, P.C., 2021 WL 3639801 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; confusion is sufficient basis for Art. III standing); Tataru v. RGS Fin., 2021 WL 38142 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 4, 2021) (allegation that debtor was confused about creditor's identification and thought letter might be a scam is sufficient, because thinking that letter was a scam could lead debtor to fail to exercise rights); Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 4059154 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 28, 2019) (finding standing where deceptive collection letter caused fear, confusion, and emotional distress, even though debtor was not deceived); Rodriguez v. Codilis & Assoc., 2018 WL 1565596, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 30, 2018) (confusion is sufficiently concrete); Watkins v. Investment Retrievers, Inc., 2018 WL 558833, at *4 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 24, 2018) (agreeing with debtor that dissemination of false information constitutes risk of harm because it confuses consumer as to FDCPA rights); Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798, 805 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (confusion is concrete harm); Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017) (citing debtors' confusion; finding standing). See also Heisler v. Convergent Healthcare Recoveries, Inc., 2020 WL 1249481 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 16, 2020) (where alleged injury is deprivation of substantive information, must still allege actual injury, but opening letter, reading parts of it, and being left unsure as to whom to pay and to whom this debt related is sufficient. See generally TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2213, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (citing fact that plaintiffs did not present any evidence "that they were confused, distressed, or relied on the information in any way" as support for conclusion that they had not alleged concrete harm).

Note that the decisions from district courts in the Seventh Circuit cited in this note were decided before Smith v. GC Services L.P., ___F.3d ___, 2021 WL 210948 (7th Cir. Jan. 21, 2021), and so do not take its holding about confusion into account.

1561 Ward v. Nat'l Patient Account Services Solutions, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3616067 (6th Cir. Aug. 16, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; confusion is not concrete injury); Wadsworth v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3877930 (7th Cir. Aug. 31, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; confusion is not concrete injury); Markakos v. Medicredit, Inc., 997 F.3d 778 (7th Cir. 2021) (confusion and aggravation because § 1692g notices letters stated inconsistent amounts due is not concrete harm); Pennell v. Global Trust Mgmt., L.L.C., 990 F.3d 1041 (7th Cir. 2021) (stress and confusion insufficient); Smith v. GC Services, L.P., ___ F.3d ___, 2021 WL 210948 (7th Cir. Jan. 21, 2021) (confusion insufficient unless it leads debtor to take some detrimental step); Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282 (7th Cir. 2020) (holding that confusion alone is not injury-in-fact; suggesting that taking action to clarify confusion might be, but finding debtor's phone calls and letters to clarify amount of debt insufficiently tied to alleged violation, failure to state that interest was accruing); Brunett v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 982 F.3d 1067, 1069 (7th Cir. 2020) (neither confusion, nor fact that consumer found letter intimidating is concrete injury); Cooper v. Atlantic Credit & Fin. Inc., 822 Fed. Appx. 951 (11th Cir. 2020) (confusion caused by letter that contradicted and overshadowed validation notice is insufficient without any allegation of possible financial or legal consequences); Marcano v. Nationwide Credit & Collection, Inc., 2021 WL 4523218, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 4, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; plaintiff's failure to pay debt because of collection letter's confusing presentation of amount owed not concrete harm where no interest or fees accrued as a result); Rodriguez v. Beyer & Assoc., 2021 WL 179596 (E.D. Wis. Jan. 19, 2021) (confusion insufficient without allegation that it detrimentally affected debtor's handling of her debts); Matthias v. Tate & Kirlin Assoc., Inc., 2021 WL 107181 (W.D. Wis. Jan. 12, 2021) (confusion insufficient where debtor did not seek clarification, make a payment, or otherwise attempt to manage his debt; fact that he turned the letter over to his bankruptcy lawyer does not change this conclusion); Martinez v. Aargon Agency, Inc., 2018 WL 4355162 (D. Nev. Sept. 12, 2018) (improperly mixing merits of FDCPA claim in with standing; holding that, even though debtor was confused by collection letter's reference to interest, she lacks standing because letter was not deceptive). See also Adams v. Skagit Bonded Collectors, L.L.C., ___ Fed. Appx. ___, 2020 WL 7055395 (9th Cir. Dec. 2, 2020) (bare allegation of confusion is insufficient).

1562 Boerner v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 326 F. Supp. 3d 665 (E.D. Wis. July 25, 2018) (being named as a defendant in a collection action that should not have been brought, with its attendant legal costs, anxiety, and worry, is a concrete injury).

1563 See § 11.15.8, infra (wrongful third-party contacts).

1564 See § 11.15.12, infra (standing for suits regarding venue abuse).

1565 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1022 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; emotional distress is tangible harm); Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017); Moore v. Blibaum & Assoc., 693 Fed. Appx. 205 (4th Cir. 2017); Westerman v. Cintar Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2021 WL 4554334 (D. Md. Oct. 5, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision); Thome v. Sayer Law Group, 2021 WL 4690829, at *13–15 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 7, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; confusing notice's exacerbation of plaintiff's emotional distress regarding potential foreclosure on home is concrete injury); Crandall v. Miller & Stephens, P.A., 2021 WL 4595535, at *3 (D. Minn. Oct. 6, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; emotional distress is "obviously" concrete injury; here, plaintiff also asserted common law claims for malicious prosecution and abuse of process); Haynes v. TransUnion, L.L.C., 2021 WL 3185581 (E.D.N.Y. July 28, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; emotional distress due to collection attempts is concrete injury); Robbins v. Resident Verify, LLC, 2021 WL 3292652 (D. Utah Aug. 2, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; embarrassment due to tenant screening company's exaggeration of plaintiff's criminal record is concrete harm); McMurray v. Forsythe Fin., L.L.C., 2021 WL 83265, at *2 (D. Utah Jan. 11, 2021); Kranz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 3899223, at *5 (W.D. Tex. July 10, 2020) (holding that false threat to take oral deposition at debtor's exam is concrete harm because it is violation of substantive right created by Congress; finding, in footnote 9, that plaintiff's emotional distress is also sufficiently concrete); Sykes v. Veripro Solutions, Inc., 2020 WL 4926547 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 21, 2020) (finding standing where consumer alleged that collection letter misinformed him about character of debt, whether there was enforceable lien on his property, and whether debt could be legally reported to credit agencies, and that as a result he was harassed, aggravated, concerned, and intimidated, and retained counsel); Smith v. Moss Law Firm, P.C., 2020 WL 584617 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 6, 2020) (plaintiff's anxiety and legal costs when he is wrongly sued and case is not immediately dismissed are concrete harms); Palmer v. Online Information Services, Inc., 2020 WL 7658063 (E.D. Tex. Nov. 9, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 7388963 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 16, 2020); Waldrop v. LTS Collections Inc., 2020 WL 6545772 (D. Ariz. Nov. 6, 2020) (default judgment); Mraz v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 5876947 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 2, 2020); Lamirand v. Ray Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 6134356 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 19, 2020); Rivera v. Dove Investment Corp., 2020 WL 6366054 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 23, 2020); Shallenburg v. PNC Bank, 2020 WL 555447, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 4, 2020); Hampton v. Barclays Bank Del., 2019 WL 6727083 (D. Kan. Dec. 11, 2019); Camaj v. Makowever Abbate Guerra Weggner Vollmer P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 6037597, at *4 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 14, 2019); Heinitz v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4805326 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 30,

The conclusion that emotional distress is a concrete harm is particularly clear, since emotional distress is widely allowed as an element of actual damages in FDCPA cases.[1566] Indeed, courts often look to common law to determine whether actual damages are available for certain types of harm in FDCPA cases,[1567] so FDCPA decisions awarding emotional distress damages are based on the very analogy to common law and other traditional claims that the Supreme Court's Article III rulings require. While Ramirez explicitly avoids taking a position on whether emotional distress is concrete harm,[1568] the Supreme Court has held in the past that "[d]istress is a personal injury familiar to the law" and is compensable as an actual injury.[1569] In addition, Congress's statement of its purposes in enacting the FDCPA stresses its intent to protect consumers from injuries that are primarily emotional, such as marital instability and invasions of individual privacy.[1570] Since Ramirez, a number of courts have held that emotional distress is a concrete injury,[1571]

2019) (anxiety is concrete harm; fact that debtor also had other reasons to be anxious about foreclosure does not preclude tracing his anxiety to collector's misrepresentations about its imminence); Adams v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4735157 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 27, 2019) (consumer has standing; letter that conveyed false sense of urgency caused mental anguish and has potential to induce debtor to send money that is needed for necessities); Spehr v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4246929 (E.D. Mo. Sept. 6, 2019); Henderson v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2019 WL 4148172, at *6 (W.D. Va. Aug. 30, 2019); Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 4059154 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 28, 2019) (finding standing where deceptive collection letter caused fear, confusion, and emotional distress, even though debtor was not deceived); Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751486, at *2-3 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019); Villalobos v. Meyer Njus Tanick, P.A., 2019 WL 3562663 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 5, 2019) (increased confusion and pressure); Suarez v. Camden Prop. Trust, 2019 WL 3423427, at *3 (E.D.N.C. July 29, 2019); Roe v. Roosen, Varchetti & Oliver, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 2523589 (E.D. Mich. June 19, 2019) (finding standing where wage garnishment sent to wrong person's employer caused plaintiff, a real estate agent, to suffer embarrassment and emotional distress and to refrain from selling real estate for fear that her wages would be garnished); Wenger v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 2119980 (M.D. Pa. May 15, 2019) (anxiety); Decker v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1112256 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 11, 2019); Brown v. SWC Group LP, 2019 WL 1147125, at *7 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 10, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 2306115 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 12, 2019); Peacock v. Stewart Zlimen & Jungers, Attorneys, Ltd., 2018 WL 5808808 (D. Minn. Nov. 6, 2018) (frustration, confusion, and helplessness); Yergovich v. Small Community Specialists L.L.C., 337 F. Supp. 3d 635 (E.D. Va. 2018); Sayeed v. Cheatham Farms Master Homeowners' Ass'n, 2018 WL 8053811 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 29, 2018); Boerner v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 326 F. Supp. 3d 665 (E.D. Wis. July 25, 2018); Plouffe v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2018 WL 2984874 (E.D. Pa. June 13, 2018) (standing established where plaintiff alleged that violations caused him to incur "numerous costs" and caused excessive stress and aggravation of his existing medical condition); Proescher v. Security Collection Agency, 2018 WL 3432737 (M.D. Fla. June 8, 2018) (finding standing where collector reported debt to credit bureau even though consumer had already paid it, causing her emotional and physical distress), adopted, 2018 WL 3428157 (M.D. Fla. July 16, 2018); Kaiser v. Cascade Capital, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1521892, at *4 (D. Or. Mar. 28, 2018) (anxiety is sufficient); Lewis v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 1989449 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2018) (finding standing where debtor alleged that collector reported a debt she did not owe, thereby preventing her from qualifying for a loan and causing emotional distress); Oyola v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1940313 (D. Mass. Mar. 1, 2018), adopted, 2018 WL 2010574 (D. Mass. Mar. 21, 2018); Dixon v. Law Office of J. Scott Watson P.C., 2018 WL 705032 (E.D. Pa. Feb. 5, 2018) (fear and anxiety due to confusing settlement proposal is concrete injury); Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798, 805–806 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (embarrassment); Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017); Barnhill v. FirstPoint, Inc., 2017 WL 22178439 (M.D.N.C. May 17, 2017); Bartl v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2017 WL 1740152 (D. Minn. May 3, 2017); Ghanta v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 1423597, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 8, 2017); Morris v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1035944 (D.S.C. Mar. 17, 2017). But see Wadsworth v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3877930 (7th Cir. Aug. 31, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision); Mishniot v. Int'l Recovery Sys. Ltd., 2017 WL 714345 (D. Nev. Feb. 22, 2017) (stating that "embarrassment, frustration, personal humiliation, mental anguish, and anger" are not concrete harms and are not analogous to traditionally-recognized injuries, without mentioning torts such as intentional infliction of emotional distress or Congress's focus on emotional harms such as marital instability and invasions of privacy). But cf. Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, PA, 946 F.3d 855 (6th Cir. 2020) (questioning in dicta whether emotional distress is concrete harm; concurring opinion convincingly rebuts the majority on this point); Bass v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2016 WL 6877729 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 22, 2016) (finding allegation of emotional distress insufficient to satisfy concreteness requirement on ground that it could not be fairly traced to the deceptive communication, as opposed to collection suit to which communication related).

1566 See §§ 2.6.2.2.2, 2.6.3, 2.6.4, supra.

1567 See § 11.8.1 (standards for actual damages), § 11.15.2.2.3 (role of analogies to common law in determining Art. III standing), supra.

1568 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2211 n.7 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See also Gadelhak v. AT&T Services, Inc., 950 F.3d 458, 463 n.2 (7th Cir. 2020) (Barrett, J.) (discussed in § 11.15.7, infra).

1569 Carey v. Piphus, 435 U.S. 247, 263, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252 (1978) (holding that mental suffering and emotional anguish are compensable in § 1983 suit). See generally § 11.8.2, supra.

1570 FDCPA § 1692(a), (b) (referring to marital instability and invasion of privacy caused by abusive debt collection practices, and the inadequacy of existing laws to redress "these injuries"); S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 2, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, and reproduced in Appx. A, infra (referring to "suffering and anguish" caused by unscrupulous debt collectors). See Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017) ("Congress recognized that abusive debt collection practices contribute to harms that can flow from mental distress, like 'marital instability' and 'the loss of jobs.'"); Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836, at *12 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.; detailing Congress's concerns).

1571 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1022 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision); Westerman v. Contar Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2021 WL 4554334 (D. Md. Oct. 5, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision); Thome v. Sayer Law Group, 2021 WL 4690829, at *13–15 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 7, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; confusing notice's exacerbation of plaintiff's emotional distress regarding potential foreclosure on home is concrete injury); Crandall v. Miller & Stephens, P.A., 2021 WL 4595535, at *3 (D. Minn. Oct. 6, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; emotional distress is "obviously" a concrete injury); Haynes v. TransUnion, L.L.C., 2021 WL 3185581 (E.D.N.Y. July 28, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; emotional distress due to collection attempts is concrete injury); Robbins v. Resident Verify, LLC, 2021 WL 3292652 (D. Utah Aug. 2, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; embarrassment due to tenant screening company's exaggeration of plaintiff's criminal record is concrete harm); Benjamin v. Rosenberg & Assoc., 2021 WL 3784320, at *5–6 (D.D.C. Aug. 26, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding Article III standing for claims involving unfounded threat to conduct foreclosure sale, misrepresentations to obtain summary

but the Seventh Circuit continues to hold that it is not.[1572]

In Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, PA,[1573] the Sixth Circuit questioned whether anxiety could ever be a concrete injury, but in doing so it focused on the severity of the emotional distress required for certain common law tort claims, rather than whether anxiety is closely related to a traditionally actionable harm. This view is inconsistent with Ramirez, which holds that the fact that a federal claim presents a scaled-down version of an element of a common law claim does not mean that a harm is not concrete.[1574] Buchholz's analysis of this question is dicta and is convincingly rebutted by a special concurrence in the case.[1575]

Section 2.6.2.2, supra, includes a list of many other types of harm that FDCPA violations can cause.

11.15.4 Article III Standing for Deception or Nondisclosure Violations

11.15.4.1 Generally

Congress identified deceptive debt collection practices as one of its primary concerns when it enacted the FDCPA.[1576] Many provisions of the FDCPA protect debtors from false, deceptive, or misleading practices. These are found primarily in FDCPA § 1692e, but violations of the disclosure requirements of FDCPA § 1692g can also be framed as false, deceptive, or misleading.[1577] Complaints about deception by debt collectors continue to be common.[1578]

Where a deceptive statement or failure to make a required disclosure does not cause tangible harm, one approach to establish standing, recognized by both Spokeo and Ramirez, is to show that the intangible harm "has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts."[1579] A number of courts recognize that the FDCPA's prohibition of false, deceptive, and misleading statements protects against a harm analogous to that which has been traditionally recognized as actionable at common law through torts such as fraud and deceit.[1580] To the extent that false statements reach third judgment, misrepresentation of legal status of debt, attempts to collect illegal or unreasonable amounts, and false representation that certain parties had rights in debt, on ground that these acts have close relationship to wrongful litigation torts and cause emotional distress). Cf. Santiago v. Hunter Warfield, Inc., 2021 WL 4894092 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 20, 2021) (denying standing where plaintiff's allegations of emotional distress were conclusory).

1572 Wadsworth v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3877930 (7th Cir. Aug. 31, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision). Accord Marcano v. Nationwide Credit & Collection, Inc., 2021 WL 4523218, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 4, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision).

1573 946 F.3d 855 (6th Cir. 2020).

1574 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2209 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (harm has close relationship to that made actionable by common law tort of defamation, even though defendant's statement was only misleading, rather than literally false as required for that tort).

1575 Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, PA, 946 F.3d 855, 872–873 (6th Cir. 2020) (Murphy, J., concurring in part and in the judgment). Accord Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836, at *11–12 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.; agreeing with Buchholz concurrence that emotional distress is concrete injury).

1576 15 U.S.C. § 1692a (referring to "abundant evidence of the use of . . . deceptive . . . debt collection practices").

1577 See generally § 11.15.5.2, infra (applying Spokeo to § 1692g claims).

1578 Consumer Fin. Protection Bur., Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, CFPB Annual Report 20 (Mar. 2016), available at www.consumerfinance.gov (noting that common complaints include false threats of arrest or jail, threats to sue on a debt that is too old, attempts to collect the wrong amount, impersonation of an attorney or a law enforcement or government official, and claims that the consumer committed a crime by not paying the debt).

1579 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1548, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1580 Thome v. Sayer Law Group, 2021 WL 4690829 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 7, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; harms made actionable by misrepresentation torts stem from inequity of knowledge; finding standing where plaintiff would have disputed debt but for § 1692g notice's statement that she had only 14 days to pay the balance); Bassett v. Credit Bur. Services, Inc., 2021 WL 3579073, at *3 (D. Neb. Aug. 13, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding standing); Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836, at *10 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.); Gibbons v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2020 WL 5039316 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 26, 2020) (false implication that collection letter was from attorney causes concrete harm because it is closely related to common law misrepresentation claims and Congress has elevated it to an actionable harm; plaintiff's fear of suit is also sufficient to confer standing); Cunningham v. Credit Bur. of Lancaster Cty., Inc., 2018 WL 6062351 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 20, 2018); Haddad v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 255 F. Supp. 3d 735, 739 (N.D. Ill. 2017) (false statement that flexible payment arrangements would no longer be available if account was forwarded to attorney is concrete harm because of Congress's judgment that there is intrinsic value in truthful information and because of its historical relationship to liability for fraudulent misrepresentation); Aguirre v. Absolute Resolutions Corp., 2017 WL 4280957, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2017) (language in collection letter that falsely threatened to add charges to the debt "is well within the heartland of common law fraud"); Scibetta v. TD Banknorth, 2017 WL 3448544, at *3 (D.N.J. Aug. 11, 2017); Griffin v. Andrea Visgilio-McGrath, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3037387, at *6 (D.N.J. July 18, 2017); Bock v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 254 F. Supp. 3d 724 (D.N.J. 2017); Haddad v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 255 F. Supp. 3d 735 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Thomas v. John A. Youderian Jr., L.L.C., 232 F. Supp. 3d 656, 669 (D.N.J. Feb. 3, 2017) ("The right not to be given false information about the true amount owed is rooted in an interest traditionally recognized at law."). See also Hovermale v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2018 WL 6322614, at *4 (D.N.J. Dec. 4, 2018) (the informational injury that results from receiving false information is closely related to that made actionable by common law fraud). But see Adams v. Skagit Bonded Collectors, L.L.C., ___ Fed. Appx. ___, 2020 WL 7055395 (9th Cir. Dec. 2, 2020) (finding no standing to assert claim that collection letter was deceptive, because reliance is element of common law fraud claim); Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990 (11th Cir. 2020) (rejecting analogy between FDCPA deception claim and common law claim for fraudulent or negligent misrepresentation, because those torts require showing of reliance and damages); Kola v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 2021 WL 4135153, at *7–8 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 10, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; rejecting analogy to fraud or negligent misrepresentation because of failure to allege reliance); Brown v. R & B Corp., 267 F. Supp. 3d 692 (E.D. Va. 2017) (rejecting common law tort analogy on ground that common law does not permit recovery for false statements in context of debt collection, but finding standing on ground that parties, the harm caused is closely analogous to that long recognized as actionable by the torts of libel and slander.[1581] False representations about the amount of a debt, particularly when made in the context of litigation or threatened litigation, create the same harms as are traditionally actionable through torts such as malicious prosecution and abuse of process.[1582]

In Spokeo, the Supreme Court recognized a second approach to show that an injury is concrete: that Congress may "elevat[e] to the status of legally cognizable injuries concrete, de facto injuries that were previously inadequate in law."[1583] Congress "has the power to define injuries and articulate chains of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy where none existed before."[1584] Congress could not have made its intent clearer to define deception in debt collection as an injury that gives rise to a cause of action. Its legislative findings,[1585] the legislative history,[1586] the broad prohibitions of deception in FDCPA § 1692e and 1692e(1), the fifteen specific deceptive acts prohibited by subsections 1692e(2) through 1692e(16), and the explicit private remedies created by section 1692k all show that the FDCPA's prohibition against debt collectors' use of false, deceptive, or misleading representations or means "is a core object of the FDCPA."[1587]

The Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez throws this second approach into some confusion, however.[1588] There, the Supreme Court held that a federal court did not have Article III jurisdiction over various FCRA claims, even though Congress had unmistakably provided that they were privately actionable.[1589] The Court cited with approval decisions from the Sixth, Seventh, and Eleventh Circuits that held that Congress's judgment was not sufficient to give federal courts Article III jurisdiction over FDCPA claims involving deception or non-disclosure.[1590] The Ramirez decision was 5-4, however, and it dealt with FCRA rights that the Supreme Court has characterized as procedural. It is conceivable that the Court might give more weight to Congress's judgment in a case involving substantive protections.[1591] At the very least, it is clear that a showing that Congress intended to make a particular harm privately actionable will strongly buttress a claim of standing.[1592]

Prior to Ramirez, a number of courts had also concluded that the violation of the debtor's right under the FDCPA to receive truthful information from a debt collector was a concrete "informational injury."[1593] Ramirez declined to accept this theory, albeit in the context of a violation that the Court characterized as involving nothing more than formatting. While the Court used broad language that lower courts may construe as applicable to substantively deceptive statements as well,[1594] that language is dicta, and the Court also cited favorably a Seventh Circuit decision that draws a distinction between disclosures that involve substantive information, rather than information about statutory rights.[1595] Accordingly, courts may be willing to look more favorably on claims regarding false or deceptive statements that involve substantive matters, and may be willing to give more weight to Congress's judgment that these violations are actionable.

Ramirez also declined to apply the principle, articulated in Spokeo, that Article III standing can be based on the fact that the defendant's acts created a risk of real harm. A number of courts have held that, after Ramirez, a risk of harm can create standing only for a claim for prospective relief such as an injunction.[1596]

In summary, after Ramirez, it is still clear that federal courts have Article III jurisdiction over FDCPA claims if the harm the plaintiff suffered has a close relationship to a harm reporting debt without reporting it as disputed violates right created by Congress and creates risk of harm).

1581 See, e.g., Pinson v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 942 F.3d 1200 (11th Cir. 2019) (harm caused by reporting false information to credit bureau is closely related to that caused by defamation; consumer has standing). See generally §§ 11.15.5.2, 11.15.5.4, 11.15.8, 15.5, infra.

1582 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017). But see Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, PA, 946 F.3d 855, 870 (6th Cir. 2020) (finding consumer's receipt of debt collection from attorney not to be analogous to malicious prosecution or abuse of process, because it did not explicitly threaten civil litigation or criminal prosecution). See generally § 11.15.5.4, infra.

1583 Id. at 1549 (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 578, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992)).

1584 Id. at 1549 (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 580, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992) (J. Kennedy, concurring)).

1585 FDCPA § 1692(a) ("There is abundant evidence of the use of . . . deceptive . . . debt collection practices by many debt collectors."). See also S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 2 (1977), as reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696 (identifying "misrepresentation of a consumer's legal rights" as a reason for enacting the statute).

1586 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 2, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, and reproduced in Appx. A.3, infra ("Collection abuse takes many forms, including . . . misrepresentation of a consumer's legal rights").

1587 Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747, 759 (6th Cir. 2018).

1588 See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1589 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1590 Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990 (11th Cir. 2020); Casillas v. Madison Ave. Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 329, 337–338 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.); Hagy v. Demers & Adams, 882 F.3d 616 (6th Cir. 2018).

1591 But see Kola v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 2021 WL 4135153, at *7–8 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 10, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; whether right is substantive or procedural, Congress's judgment is insufficient to establish standing).

1592 See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1593 See, e.g., Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.; caller's failure to identify that he is a debt collector and that call concerns debt is concrete injury without need to show any additional harm, because it places debtor at risk of disclosing information that she would prefer not to disclose).

1594 See, e.g., Neal v. Adams, 2021 WL 4466392, at *5 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 29, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; plaintiff must allege downstream consequences even for complete failure to provide information required by § 1692g).

1595 Casillas v. Madison Ave. Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 329, 334–335 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.). See, e.g., Perez v. McCreary, Veselka, Bragg & Allen, P.C., 2021 WL 3639801 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding Art. III standing for claim that debtor received false, misleading, and deceptive debt collection communications; also finding anxiety and worry to be concrete injuries).

1596 See § 11.15.2.2.6, supra.

that has traditionally provided the basis for a claim in English and United States courts. In the absence of a common law analogy, if the violation relates to format, the plaintiff will have to show additional harm, and practitioners must also be prepared for courts to require such a showing for violations that go beyond format. Practitioners should interview potential plaintiffs thoroughly to identify any harm they may have suffered in addition to the violation itself. Types of tangible and intangible harms that consumers are likely to suffer as a result of deceptive debt collection practices or non-disclosure are listed in § 11.15.3.4, supra, and cited in the following sections in connection with the particular violation.

11.15.4.2 Article III Standing for Claims That Collector Misstated Amount Owed or Demanded an Unauthorized Fee

A common consumer claim is that a debt collector has overstated the amount of the debt in a letter or a pleading in violation of FDCPA § 1692e(2)(A), often in combination with parallel claims under sections 1692e(5), 1692e(10), and 1692f(1). Prior to the Supreme Court's 2021 opinion in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez,[1597] many courts held that misstatement of the amount of the debt was concrete harm in and of itself.[1598] However, other courts, including the Seventh Circuit, disagreed, and held that the consumer must show some harm in addition to the violation itself.[1599] Similarly, prior to Ramirez many courts

1597 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1598 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685, 693 (8th Cir. 2017) (false representation in pleadings of amount of debt is concrete injury; creates same risk of mental distress as is traditionally recognized in torts such as abuse of process); Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836, at *10 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.; consumer has standing to sue regarding overstatement of amount of debt because it claim has close relationship to common law fraud and correlates with Congress's judgment); Zuniga v. TrueAccord, 2020 WL 2840318 (D.N.M. June 1, 2020) (plaintiff has standing to sue regarding letter that offered payment plan that would overpay debt, because claim involves substantive rights created by Congress); Richardson v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2019 WL 3216030 (N.D. Ill. July 17, 2019) (receipt of letter seeking allegedly improper fees is concrete harm, because it is injury Congress sought to protect against; plaintiff also testified that he found letter misleading, but only for reasons other than statement of amount owed); Garland v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg. Inc., 303 F. Supp. 3d 554 (E.D. Mich. 2018) (any violation of FDCPA is concrete injury; in enacting FDCPA, Congress created new right and new injury); Stinson v. Nat'l Credit Systems Inc., 2018 WL 3954764, at *6 n.6 (N.D. Ga. June 26, 2018) (finding standing where plaintiff was confused by the collection letter and frustrated and embarrassed about the debt, and the situation caused a strain on her marriage), adopted, 2018 WL 4471930 (N.D. Ga. July 27, 2018); Keys v. Collection Prof'ls, Inc., 2018 WL 1469006 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 26, 2018) (receiving debt collection letter that wrongly assesses and seeks interest is concrete injury; Congress's judgment is sufficient); Drew v. Valley Credit Serv., Inc., 2018 WL 1321587 (W.D. Va. Mar. 14, 2018) (misleading statements regarding amount of debt is concrete harm because this is direct violation of specific statutory interest that Congress has created); Castellanos v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 297 F. Supp. 3d 1301, 1305–1307 (S.D. Fla. 2017) (consumer has standing to bring FDCPA claim for sending collection letters seeking payment of debt that had been fully settled); Chernyakhovskaya v. Resurgent Capital Services L.P., 2017 WL 3593115 (D.N.J. Aug. 18, 2017) (risk of harm from receipt of misinformation is concrete injury); Ozmun v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 3140660, at *6 (W.D. Tex. July 24, 2017) (misstatement of balance due or character or status of debt "could have disastrous financial, legal, and reputational consequences for a consumer"); Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 265 F. Supp. 3d 731, 746–750 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (finding standing where plaintiffs alleged they were deceived, but alleged no other harm); Gonzalez v. Credit Protection Ass'n, L.P., 2017 WL 2798404 (N.D. Ill. June 28, 2017) (collection letters sought sales tax that was not owed; informational injury provides standing); Stockman v. Credit Protection Ass'n, 2017 WL 2798403 (N.D. Ill. June 28, 2017) (collection letters sought sales tax that was not owed; informational injury provides standing); Genova v. IC Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 2289289 (D.N.J. May 25, 2017) (collection letter seeking payment of contingent fees that were not yet incurred, in violation of §§ 1692e and 1692f); Taylor v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 252 F. Supp. 3d 344 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) (plaintiff has standing to pursue claim that letters were misleading as to whether debts were accruing interest and fees), aff'd, 886 F.3d 212 (2d Cir. 2018); Haddad v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 255 F. Supp. 3d 735 (N.D. Ill. 2017) (falsely stating that additional charges may continue to be added to balance); Masson v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 819099 (E.D. La. Mar. 2, 2017) (misrepresentation of liability for collection costs); Kaymark v. Udren Law Offices, P.C., 2016 WL 7187840 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 12, 2016) (allegation that complaint sought amounts to which creditor was not entitled, in violation of §§ 1692e(2)(A), 1692e(5), 1692e(10), and 1692f(1), shows concrete injury; FDCPA gives consumer the right to truthful information); Munoz v. Cal. Business Bur., Inc., 2016 WL 6517655 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016); Hill v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6462119 (D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2016) (consumer has standing to assert claim under §§ 1692e(2)(A), 1692e(5), 1692e(10), and 1692f against collector that filed suit seeking interest to which it is not entitled, even though consumer defeated collector's claim at trial, because consumer has right to truthful information; consumer could probably also have shown expenditure of time and money to defend the false claim), aff'd on other grounds, 888 F.3d 343 (8th Cir. 2018); Jorgensen v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 11003432 (D. Minn. Aug. 31, 2016) (debtor has standing where collector seeks to collect more than is owed, even if debtor does not overpay); Bernal v. NRA Group, L.L.C., 318 F.R.D. 64, 72 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 2016) (receiving collection letter that wrongfully assessed percentage-based collection fee is concrete harm, even without allegation that debtor paid it); Nyberg v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 3176585 (D. Or. June 2, 2016) (incorrect statement of amount of debt).

The Illinois and Indiana district court decisions cited in this note were issued before the Seventh Circuit's decision in Nettles v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 983 F.3d 896 (7th Cir. 2020), which held that overstatement of the amount of a debt was not a concrete injury in itself, so do not take that decision into account. The Florida and Georgia district court decisions predate Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990 (11th Cir. 2020), which found no standing for a misleading collection letter where the consumer did not act to his detriment in reliance on it, and so do not take it into account.

1599 Nettles v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 983 F.3d 896 (7th Cir. 2020) (finding no standing where consumer stated on appeal that only injury was receipt of collection letter that overstated amount of debt and that letter did not affect her at all); Maxwell v. Law Office of Jennifer McCoy, P.C., 2021 WL 3741999 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 23, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; following 7th Cir. precedent; threat to charge late fees did not cause concrete harm where plaintiff suffered anxiety but did not alter her course of action); Montgomery v. Everest Receivable Services, Inc., 2021 WL 4806388 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 14, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision: collection letters that suggested that debtor owed double the amount of the debt and that multiple accounts were owing did not cause concrete injury where debtor did not allege any risk of overpaying); Jones-Bell v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2019 WL 4746766 (E.D. Mich.

held that a demand for an unauthorized fee caused concrete harm to the debtor in and of itself,[1600] but others held that it was necessary for the debtor to show some harm in addition to the demand itself.[1601]

Ramirez appears to reject two of the rationales that some of the decisions finding standing cite. First, the majority opinion in Ramirez states that a risk of harm—a rationale on which some of the decisions finding standing relied—is sufficient to create Article III standing only for prospective relief such as an injunction.[1602] Second, Ramirez rejects the argument that provision of information to class members in the wrong format was a concrete injury in and of itself and in dicta makes the sweeping statement that "an asserted informational injury that causes no adverse effects cannot satisfy Article III."[1603]

Ramirez continues to recognize, as Spokeo did, that an intangible harm is a concrete injury if it has a close relationship to a harm recognized as a traditional basis for suit in English and American courts.[1604] Misstatement of the amount owed will thus amount to a concrete injury in and of itself if there is a close common law analogy for the FDCPA claim. The Eighth Circuit has held that being subjected to attempts to collect debts not owed has a close relationship to the harm made actionable by the common law torts of malicious prosecution, wrongful use of civil proceedings, and abuse of process.[1605]

Sept. 30, 2019) (two-cent discrepancy between amount collector proposed to settle debt and amount that proposed installment payments would have totaled does not create concrete harm); Smith v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 4489466 (N.D. Ohio Sept. 19, 2018) (finding no standing where plaintiffs alleged that collector's debt validation letter included unexplained charges and misrepresented the identity of owner of their note and mortgage, but did not allege that they lost or spent any money or suffered any cognizable non-economic harm; failing to evaluate risk of harm); Martin v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2017 WL 6570210 (W.D. Mo. Dec. 22, 2017) (consumer lacks standing to bring FDCPA claim regarding letter that, through clerical error, stated two different amounts owed, where she had not read letter); Allgire v. HOVG, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1021394 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 16, 2017) (debtor has no risk of harm from misrepresentation that is not material—here $1.90 misstatement of amount required to settle debt—so does not have standing); Borg v. Phelan, Hallinan, Diamond & Jones, P.L.L.C., 2017 WL 2226649 (M.D. Fla. May 22, 2017) (where foreclosure firm had not yet requested allegedly illegal fee in any demand or complaint, but was merely keeping track of it with intent to ask court to include it in award of costs if foreclosure action was successful, injury is too speculative and consumer lacks standing). See also Fuchs v. Selene Fin., L.P., 2018 WL 2268132 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 29, 2018) (no standing where plaintiffs have now admitted that amount sought in Notice of Default was correct, and do not claim it caused any economic injury or emotional distress). Cf. Van Hoven v. Buckles & Buckles, P.L.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 2947593 (W.D. Mich. July 1, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; questioning standing where collector carried charge on its books that it was not allowed to impose on consumers, but had procedure in place to back these charges out before instituting garnishments).

1600 Bass v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 316 F. Supp. 3d 1047 (N.D. Ill. 2018) (demanding unauthorized collection fee creates concrete injury even if debtor does not pay it, because it injures debtor's interest in receiving accurate information); Diaz v. FCI Lender Services, Inc., 2018 WL 4581013 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 28, 2018) (following unreported 2d Cir. decision; finding standing where collection letter wrongfully claimed late charges); Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515, at *6 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018) (violation of FDCPA's protections against seeking unauthorized fees is concrete injury because it is core object of FDCPA); Ferrell v. HIS Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8186795 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 22, 2017) (demand for unauthorized convenience fee for payment by credit card puts consumer at material risk of paying it); Aguirre v. Absolute Resolutions Corp., 2017 WL 4280957 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 27, 2017) (false statement that other charges would be added); McLain v. Head Mercantile Co., 2017 WL 3710073 (M.D. La. Aug. 28, 2017) (finding standing where violation was misrepresentation that debtor would have to pay unauthorized convenience fee if she paid with check by phone); Fuentes v. AR Resources, Inc., 2017 WL 1197814 (D.N.J. Mar. 31, 2017) (misrepresentation that consumer would have to pay unauthorized convenience fee for credit card payments creates risk that she will pay it, so plaintiff has standing); Thomas v. John A. Youderian Jr., L.L.C., 232 F. Supp. 3d 656, 669 (D.N.J. Feb. 3, 2017) (demanding fee for making payment on debt by credit card creates concrete injury, although barely; misrepresentation might deter consumers from using this convenient payment method, even though plaintiff did not suffer this effect personally); Bell v. Adler Wallach & Assoc., Inc., 2016 WL 11583377 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 15, 2016) (debtor who, as a result of collection letter, paid an allegedly inflated debt because he was fearful of suit has standing); Simmet v. Collection Consultants, 2016 WL 11002359 (C.D. Cal. July 7, 2016) ("[e]ven if Plaintiff never actually paid the alleged convenience fee, mere 'attempt[s] to collect a debt in violation of the FDCPA' are sufficient to constitute concrete and particularized injuries"). See also Jaber v. GC Services L.P., 2019 WL 2579459 (E.D. Mich. June 24, 2019) (plaintiff has standing to assert FDCPA claim regarding letter that threatened to impose charges even though, as an identity theft victim, she knew that she did not owe the debt). Cf. Martinez v. Integrated Capital Recovery, L.L.C., 2021 WL 124523 (E.D. Cal. Jan. 13, 2021) (holding that Congress elevated FDCPA violations to status of legally cognizable harm, with no need to show additional harm, but concluding that this means that plaintiff must plead sound FDCPA claim on merits, which this plaintiff did not do).

1601 Fulp v. Sykes, Bourdon, Ahern, & Levy, P.C., 2020 WL 4926176 (E.D. Va. Aug. 21, 2020) (collection letter that stated that $3 fee would be required for payments by phone did not cause concrete harm where consumer had other cost-free payment options and did not intend to pay by phone; also finding no analogous common law tort); Perea v. Codilis & Assoc., 2019 WL 4750283 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 30, 2019) (false statement that late charges could be added to debt is not concrete injury unless plaintiff was misled or would have acted differently; risk to unsophisticated consumer is insufficient); Viera v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2018 WL 4964545 (D.R.I. Oct. 12, 2018) (consumer who did not pay unauthorized fee that servicer demanded and who did not allege that fee continues to appear on his account has not alleged concrete injury and cannot bring claim under state debt collection practices statute in federal court; no discussion of intangible injuries or risk of harm); Alexander v. Account Discovery Systems, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1225887 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 4, 2018) (consumer does not have standing to bring suit regarding creditor's demand for unauthorized convenience fee for online credit or debit card payments where he did not pay fee); Blue v. Diversified Adjustment Serv., 2017 WL 3600723 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 11, 2017) (debtor who did not pay fee lacks standing to sue regarding collector's demand for unauthorized convenience fee if debtor chooses to pay online).

1602 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2210, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2.6, supra.

1603 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2214, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2.6, supra.

1604 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016). See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1605 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017). See also Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1025 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th

Overstatement of the amount owed might also be analogous to the harm recognized by the common law torts of fraud and negligent misrepresentation.[1606] To the extent the false statement about the debt has been shared with others, the harm would be similar to common law defamation.[1607] While Ramirez holds that the statutory claim must have the same "fundamental requirement[s]" as the common law claim, the Court did not require that the elements be the same.[1608] Indeed, Ramirez holds that there need not be "an exact duplicate" in common law for the federal claim.[1609]

Spokeo also held that Congress has the power to elevate to define injuries and articulate chains of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy where none existed before.[1610] Ramirez throws the role of Congress into confusion,[1611] but it is still important to point out how clearly Congress expressed its intent to make deception such as misstatement of the amount owed actionable in federal court. At the very least, Congress's judgment buttresses other theories of standing.

Since Ramirez, one court analogized to the common law tort of conversion to find Article III standing for a claim against a collector that dunned a consumer for amounts not owed.[1612] Another court held that a consumer had standing where she alleged that defendant's filing of a collection suit in violation of the bankruptcy stay caused her emotional distress.[1613] Decisions from courts in the Seventh Circuit are likely to continue to hold that anxiety, confusion, and emotional distress are insufficiently concrete to justify standing for claims regarding misstatement of the amount owed or demands for unauthorized fees.[1614]

Even though there may be arguments for distinguishing Ramirez, advocates should not rely on doing so, but should be prepared to produce evidence of downstream consequences whenever possible. A number of pre- and post-Ramirez decisions, cited in § 11.15.4.2, supra, provide guidance about the types of adverse consequences that will support standing for a claim that the collector overstated the amount of the debt or demanded an unauthorized fee. One possible adverse consequence of this deception is that the debtor may spend time, effort, or money to investigate the amount owed or defend against the inflated claim. For example, in Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A.,[1615] the Eighth Circuit held that a consumer had standing to assert FDCPA claims against a collection firm that filed a collection action seeking interest to which it was not entitled. The consumer's allegations that he had to retain an attorney and serve discovery requests and that he spent time to defend against the meritless claim amounted to concrete injuries.[1616]

Misstatement of the amount of the debt also causes consumers tangible harm if they pay more than actually owed.[1617] The consumer may also have a diminished credit score due to the overstated amount of a debt that is reported to consumer reporting agencies, thereby impeding the consumer's access to lower-cost credit, jobs, or housing.[1618] Demanding unexpected fees as a condition of paying the debt may mean that the money that a debtor has saved up is insufficient.[1619] Some courts hold that confusion caused by misleading debt collection notices is a concrete harm.[1620] Emotional distress[1621] may be sufficient to 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; citing this holding of Demarais with approval). See generally §§ 11.15.5.4, 15.6, infra.

1606 See, e.g., § 11.15.5.0, supra.

1607 See §§ 11.15.2, 11.15.5.2, supra, § 11.15.8, infra.

1608 See § 11.15.2.2.3, supra.

1609 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, __U.S.___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See generally § 11.15.2.2.3, supra.

1610 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1611 See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1612 Bassett v. Credit Bur. Services, Inc., 2021 WL 3579073 (D. Neb. Aug. 13, 2021).

1613 Crandall v. Miller & Stephens, P.A., 2021 WL 4595535, at *3 (D. Minn. Oct. 6, 2021).

1614 See, e.g., Maxwell v. Law Office of Jennifer McCoy, P.C., 2021 WL 3741999 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 23, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; following 7th Cir. precedent; threat to charge late fees did not cause concrete harm where plaintiff suffered anxiety but did not alter her course of action). See also Shields v. Professional Bur. of Collections of Md., Inc., 2021 WL 4806383 (D. Kan. Oct. 14, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; debtor's general confusion about the amount due and whether interest was accruing is not concrete harm). See generally § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1615 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017). See also Erickson v. Elliot Bay Adjustment Co., 2017 WL 1179435, at *4 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 29, 2017) (consumer has standing where, upon receiving collection letter demanding unauthorized attorney fees and filing fees, he made telephone call to ask counsel to dispute the debt); Hill v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6462119 (D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2016) (consumer has standing to assert claim under §§ 1692e(2)(A), 1692e(5), 1692e(10), and 1692f against collector that filed suit seeking interest to which it is not entitled, even though consumer defeated collector's claim at trial, because consumer has right to truthful information; consumer could probably also have shown expenditure of time and money to defend the false claim), aff'd on other grounds, 888 F.3d 343 (8th Cir. 2018). But cf. Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282 (7th Cir. 2020) (receipt of collection letter that fails to state that debt would accrue interest is not concrete injury, nor are debtor's calls and letters to inquire about accuracy of amount demanded, because she was not seeking clarification about interest).

1616 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017).

1617 See, e.g., Bassett v. Credit Bur. Services, Inc., 2021 WL 3579073 (D. Neb. Aug. 13, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision); Shallenburg v. PNC Bank, 2020 WL 555447, at *4 (M.D. Fla. Feb. 4, 2020) (payment of contested mortgage debt in order to avoid loss of opportunity to sell home is concrete injury); Bell v. Adler Wallach & Assoc., Inc., 2016 WL 11583377 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 15, 2016) (debtor who, as result of collection letter, paid allegedly inflated debt because he was fearful of suit has standing). See generally § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1618 See generally § 11.15.5.2, infra (applying Spokeo to misstatements to credit reporting agencies).

1619 See, e.g., Grandberry v. Medical-Commercial Audit, Inc., 2019 WL 1978590 (E.D. Mo. May 3, 2019) (imposition of unauthorized charge for online payment, which prevented consumer from paying debt because she did not have the additional funds, caused concrete injury).

1620 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1621 See, e.g., Ben-Davies v. Blibaum & Assoc., 695 Fed. Appx. 674 (4th Cir. 2017) (seeking interest on judgment debt at unauthorized rate, causing consumer to suffer emotional distress, is concrete injury); Moore v. Blibaum & Assoc., P.A., 693 Fed. Appx. 205 (4th Cir. 2017) (finding standing where plaintiff alleged that she suffered emotional distress, anger, and frustration as consequence of collector's demand for inflated amount); Crandall v. Miller & Stephens, P.A., 2021 WL 4595535, at *3 (D. Minn. Oct. 6, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding support Article III standing, although advocates should select cases where the plaintiff's distress was significant and the debt collection communication was of a nature that many people would find distressing. Standing problems are particularly likely if the claim is based on incorrect inferences that debtors might draw from collection letters, rather than on direct misstatements.

If downstream consequences cannot be alleged and proven, state court may be a better forum for the case.[1622] Even in state courts that have broad standing doctrines, though, Ramirez heightens the importance of case selection. Cases that appear to be making mountains out of molehills could cause state courts to rethink and tighten their standing doctrines.

11.15.4.3 Article III Standing for Claims Regarding Collector's Misstatements to Credit Reporting Agencies

Section 1692e(8) of the FDCPA prohibits collectors from reporting or threatening to report false credit information to any person.[1623] This section includes a requirement that, when a collector communicates with a credit reporting agency about a debt that the consumer has disputed, it must indicate that the debt is disputed.[1624]

Misstatements to credit reporting agencies or other third parties cause harm that is closely analogous to the harm traditionally regarded as providing the basis for libel and slander claims in English and American courts.[1625] In TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez,[1626] the Supreme Court held that reporting derogatory information about a consumer to a third party is concrete harm in and of itself, because of its close relationship to the common law tort of defamation. The court therefore concluded that a court had Article III jurisdiction over an FCRA claim based on a credit bureau's misleading report about a consumer to a car dealer. This opinion provides strong support for the view that a false statement about a consumer made by a debt collector to a credit bureau is also a concrete injury in and of itself.

The Eleventh Circuit reached just that conclusion in a decision issued two years before Ramirez.[1627] Many lower court decisions have also held that a consumer who alleged that a collector failed to report a disputed debt as disputed had Article III standing as interpreted by Spokeo.[1628] While some of these standing where plaintiff alleged that defendant's filing of collection suit in violation of bankruptcy stay caused her emotional distress); Lamirand v. Ray Servicing, L.L.C., 2020 WL 6134356 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 19, 2020) (finding standing where plaintiffs alleged that collector's overstatement of amount owed in letter to their attorney caused them emotional distress); Hernandez v. BC Services, Inc., 2020 WL 2308233 (S.D. Ill. May 8, 2020) (standing established where flurry of collection letters and telephone conversations listed inconsistent amounts owed and pressured debtor to pay, impeding his ability to respond and causing him stress); Peacock v. Stewart Zlimen & Jungers, Attorneys, Ltd., 2018 WL 5808808 (D. Minn. Nov. 6, 2018) (understatement of amount owed in garnishment summons caused concrete injury where debtor alleged that, if the garnishment had been successful it would not have paid off entire debt, and he suffered frustration, confusion, and helplessness). See generally § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1622 See § 11.15.14, infra (advantages of filing suit in state court).

1623 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8), discussed at § 7.2.8, supra.

1624 See 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(8), discussed at § 7.2.8, supra.

1625 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016); Pinson v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 942 F.3d 1200 (11th Cir. 2019) (harm caused by reporting false information to credit bureau is closely related to that caused by defamation; consumer has standing to assert FDCPA claim); Pedro v. Equifax, Inc., 868 F.3d 1275, 1279–1280 (11th Cir. 2017) (FCRA case; "the reporting of inaccurate information about [plaintiff's] credit to a credit monitoring service" was a concrete injury because it had "a close relationship to the harm caused by the publication of defamatory information, which has long provided the basis for a lawsuit in English and American courts."). See § 11.15.2, supra.

1626 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1627 Pinson v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 942 F.3d 1200 (11th Cir. 2019).

1628 Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 345–346 (7th Cir. 2018); Sayles v. Advanced Recovery Sys., Inc., 206 F. Supp. 3d 1210, 1211 (S.D. Miss. 2016), aff'd, 865 F.3d 246 (5th Cir. 2017); Webster v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 473 F. Supp. 3d 861 (S.D. Ind. July 21, 2020) (failing to report disputed debt as disputed is concrete injury even though this consumer testified that she did not know if it affected her credit score); Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836, at *11 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.; no need to show additional harm); Centeno v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2020 WL 7310761 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 10, 2020) (finding standing even though consumer could not identify any specific impact on her credit score or ability to obtain credit); Foster v. AFNI, Inc., 2020 WL 1531651, at *4 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 31, 2020) (failure to report debt as disputed causes the type of harm Congress intended to prevent; no further harm need be shown); Escobar v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 2019 WL 3751486 (D. Conn. Aug. 8, 2019) (consumer has standing to bring FDCPA claim against collector that continued to report debt as unpaid after consumer paid it); Thar v. Nationwide Collection Agencies, Inc., 2019 WL 1768869 (E.D. Mich. Mar. 4, 2019), adopted, 2019 WL 1765756 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 22, 2019); Francisco v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 498936 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 8, 2019) (finding standing even though plaintiff viewed her credit report only once, which was before she disputed the debt, her credit score was not reduced, and there was some evidence that her attorneys invited the violation); Lewis v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 1989449 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2018) (finding standing where debtor alleged that collector reported a debt she did not owe, thereby preventing her from qualifying for a loan and causing emotional distress); Baranowski v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2018 WL 1534967 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2018); Denson v. Virtuoso Sourcing Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 8229343 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 31, 2017) (finding standing because the provision was enacted to protect consumers' concrete interests, and the violation here actually harms, or threatens to harm, those interests); Flores v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 5891032 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 29, 2017) (noting that an incorrectly reported debt can be a "red flag" to anyone who runs a credit check, including landlords and employers, and thus can be used to pressure debtors to pay debts without exploring their legal options); Guerrero v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 2017 WL 7052292, at *3 (W.D. Tex. Oct. 24, 2017) (mag.; following Sayles; consumer has standing because failure to report debt as disputed exposes her to risk of harm), adopted, 2017 WL 7052319 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 19, 2017); Arellano v. Virtuoso Sourcing Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3993959 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 11, 2017) (finding standing because the provision was enacted to protect consumers' concrete interests, and the violation here actually harms, or threatens to harm, those interests); Jones v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 7052288 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 16, 2017) (plaintiff alleged that failure to report debt as disputed lowered her credit rating; court finds standing because lowered credit rating creates risk of harm); Tejero v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 3217101 (W.D. Tex. July 27, 2017) (following Sayles; failure decisions are based on the fact that such a report causes a risk of harm, a theory that the majority opinion in Ramirez states can only justify jurisdiction to issue injunctive relief,[1629] their conclusions that the consumer had standing are well-supported by Ramirez's holding that the mere fact of dissemination of derogatory information to a third party causes concrete harm. Courts have also held that consumers have Article III standing to assert other violations of FDCPA § 1692e(8), including reporting an inflated amount to a credit reporting agency,[1630] reporting a debt that is not owed,[1631] or re-aging an account so that it stays on a debtor's credit report longer.[1632]

There are only a few contrary opinions. A series of nearly identical pre-Ramirez decisions issued by a judge in the Eastern District of Virginia[1633] hold that the risk of harm from failure to report a debt as disputed is too speculative. These decisions fail to consider the relationship of the harm alleged to the harm made actionable by common law defamation torts, an analogy on which the Supreme Court relied in Ramirez.[1634]

Three other decisions hold complaints insufficient where they did not allege specifically or failed to prove that the consumer's credit score was damaged.[1635] However, the credit scores that credit reporting agencies disclose to consumers may differ from the FICO scores that most lenders actually use, and many creditors use specialized scores or even custom-built ones.[1636]

In any event, it will often be possible to allege that the false report to the credit bureau did cause a reduction in the consumer's credit score, which many decisions, both before[1637] and after[1638] Ramirez, hold to be concrete harm. The fact that a credit score that a credit reporting agency provides to a consumer is unaffected by a misstatement is no assurance that a specialized FICO score or custom-built score used by a particular creditor has not been or will not be affected. In addition, Ramirez supports the view that the collector's misstatement to the credit bureau has a close relationship to the harm made actionable by the common law tort of defamation, as it amounts to dissemination of the false information to a third party—the credit bureau. This is the case whether or not the credit bureau uses that information to produce a reduced credit score.

The argument for standing may be strengthened by pointing out that the FDCPA's prohibition should be characterized as substantive. In Spokeo, the Supreme Court treated the FCRA's protection against dissemination of an inaccurate credit report as a procedural protection. But the FCRA provision requires only that credit reporting agencies use "reasonable procedures to assure maximum possible accuracy."[1639] By contrast, the FDCPA flatly prohibits reporting of information that the collector knows or should know to be false—clearly a substantive protection. Indeed, many decisions characterize all of the FDCPA's protections as substantive.[1640] After Ramirez, it is not clear what weight the Supreme Court will give to the distinction between procedural and substantive protections,[1641] to report debt as disputed creates risk of harm); Ozmun v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 3140660, at *6 (W.D. Tex. July 24, 2017) (failure to report debt as disputed creates risk of real harm); Duchene v. Aargon Collection Agency, Inc., 2017 WL 2402464, at *2 (M.D. Fla. June 2, 2017) ("Plaintiff has statutorily-created rights under the FDCPA to dispute a debt and have that debt properly reported to credit reporting agencies, so that Plaintiff's credit is not adversely impacted. It is axiomatic that an inaccurate credit rating poses a risk of harm because it may influence other creditors or potential creditors to take an adverse action, such as declining future credit."); Taylor v. Collection Consultants, 2016 WL 10968140 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2016); Irvine v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 198 F. Supp. 3d 1232, 1236–1237 (D. Colo. 2016) (reporting debt without reporting that it is disputed is concrete harm because it is violation of substantive right). Cf. Castillo v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2017 WL 2902844 (N.D. Cal. July 7, 2017) (dismissing complaint so that plaintiff can moot the standing question by adding allegations asserted in his opposition briefs that his credit score was in fact lowered because of collector's failure to report debt as disputed). But see Brown v. R & B Corp., 267 F. Supp. 3d 692 (E.D. Va. 2017) (rejecting analogy to harm recognized at common law, but finding standing on other grounds for failure to report disputed debt as disputed). But cf. Nevils v. Rent Recover of Better NOI, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5947399 (D. Nev. Nov. 30, 2017) (dismissing with leave to amend; simply pleading "Plaintiff has been damaged" by collector's reporting of debt, without noting that it was disputed, is insufficient).

1629 See § 11.15.2.2.6, supra.

1630 Erickson v. Elliot Bay Adjustment Co., 2017 WL 1179435, at *5 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 29, 2017).

1631 Proescher v. Security Collection Agency, 2018 WL 3432737 (M.D. Fla. June 8, 2018) (finding standing where collector reported debt to credit bureau even though consumer had already paid it, causing her emotional and physical distress), adopted, 2018 WL 3428157 (M.D. Fla. July 16, 2018).

1632 O'Dell v. Nat'l Recovery Agency, ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2018 WL 1172435 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 6, 2018).

1633 Taylor v. Medical Data Systems, Inc., 2017 WL 2989184 (E.D. Va. July 13, 2017); Gathers v. CAB Collection Agency, Inc., 2017 WL 2703686 (E.D. Va. June 22, 2017); Holmes v. Contract Callers, Inc., 2017 WL 2703685 (E.D. Va. June 22, 2017); Coleman v. Charlottesville Bur. of Credits, Inc., 2017 WL 1381666 (E.D. Va. Apr. 17, 2017).

1634 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2.3, supra.

1635 McKibben v. I.C. System, Inc., 2018 WL 1896419 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 19, 2018) (finding no standing for claim that collector should have reported that debt, currently listed as "past due" and "in collection," was included in consumer's bankruptcy, as court was unpersuaded that this would have improved consumer's credit score), adopted, 2018 WL 1905067 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 20, 2018); Piper v. Meade & Assoc., Inc., 282 F. Supp. 3d 905 (D. Md. Oct. 10, 2017) (finding no standing where plaintiff alleged only that she was "damaged" by the failure to report debt as disputed; suggesting that plaintiff must show actual effect on credit score, not just risk); Higgens v. Trident Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1230537 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 28, 2017) (finding no standing where complaint did not allege an effect on plaintiff's credit score, how plaintiff's score was affected, or whether reduction in his score caused adverse consequences).

1636 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 16.4.5.4 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1637 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1638 Lueck v. Bureaus, Inc., 2021 WL 4264368 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 20, 2021). Cf. Tolliver v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 4306056, at *3 (W.D. Wis. Sept. 22, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; no standing where plaintiff did not allege that collector's failure to report debt as disputed lowered his credit score or created that risk).

1639 FDCPA § 1682e(b) (emphasis added).

1640 See § 11.15.3.3, supra.

1641 See § 11.15.2.2.5, supra.

but pointing out that the FDCPA's protection is substantive is likely at least to buttress the argument for standing.

Defendants may point to the fact that Ramirez holds that a credit reporting agency was liable for false statements in its database only if it disseminated those statements to third parties, and argue that, therefore, a collector's report of false information to a credit reporting agency is concrete harm only if the credit reporting agency, in turn, disseminates the false information to additional parties. That would be a solid argument if the credit reporting agency were the defendant, but when the collector is the defendant its report of the false information to the credit reporting agency is a publication to a third party.

Even though there is a strong argument that a collector's false report to a credit bureau is concrete harm in and of itself, it is always advisable to plead any known facts showing an actual reduction in the plaintiff's credit score or other adverse consequences. For example, an alternate ground on which the Eleventh Circuit found that a consumer had standing was that the plaintiff spent time and incurred out-of-pocket costs to contest a creditor's use of a false name when reporting a debt to a credit bureau.[1642] Any reporting of the false information by the credit bureau to potential creditors or other third parties should be documented and alleged, as broader dissemination magnifies the harm recognized by the common law tort of defamation.[1643] Evidence that the consumer's credit score was decreased or the consumer was denied credit because of the violation will make it even clearer that the consumer suffered concrete harm.[1644]

FDCPA § 1692e(8) also prohibits collectors from threatening to report false information. For threats, it may be possible to establish concrete harm by evidence that the consumer suffered emotional distress,[1645] and the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress may provide an analogy to a harm that is actionable under common law. Concrete harm may also be shown by evidence that the consumer took steps or refrained from doing so because of the threat.[1646] Standing when consumers assert a violation of the related provision in FDCPA § 1692g against reporting a debt to a credit reporting agency before responding to a consumer's dispute is discussed in § 11.15.7, infra.

1642 Pinson v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 942 F.3d 1200, 1209 (11th Cir. 2019).

1643 See, e.g., Lewis v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 1989449 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2018) (finding standing where debtor alleged that collector reported debt she did not owe, thereby preventing her from qualifying for loan and causing emotional distress).

1644 See, e.g., Lewis v. Experian Info. Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 1989449 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2018) (finding standing where debtor alleged that collector reported debt she did not owe, thereby preventing her from qualifying for loan and causing emotional distress); Castillo v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2017 WL 2902844 (N.D. Cal. July 7, 2017) (dismissing complaint so that plaintiff can moot standing question by adding allegations asserted in his opposition briefs that his credit score was in fact lowered because of collector's failure to report debt as disputed).

1645 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1646 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

11.15.4.4 Article III Standing for Claims Involving False or Fabricated Statements in Collection Actions

Prior to Ramirez, a number of courts found Article III standing over claims based on a collector's presentation of false or fabricated statements to debtors[1647] or courts[1648] in collection actions. Other courts found Article III jurisdiction where the collector gave the consumer misleading instructions about how to respond to discovery requests[1649] or about the deadlines for seeking administrative review of a claim;[1650]

1647 Hill v. Accounts Receivable Services, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6462119 (D. Minn. Oct. 31, 2016) (consumer has standing to assert claim under §§ 1692e(2)(A), 1692e(5), 1692e(10), and 1692f against collector that presented fabricated assignment document to him during court hearing, even though consumer defeated collector's claim at trial, because consumer has right to truthful information; consumer could probably also have shown expenditure of time and money to defend false claim), aff'd on other grounds, 888 F.3d 343 (8th Cir. 2018). See also Roe v. Roosen, Varchetti & Oliver, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 2523589 (E.D. Mich. June 19, 2019) (finding standing where wage garnishment sent to wrong person's employer caused plaintiff, a real estate agent, to suffer embarrassment and emotional distress, to contact attorney, and to refrain from selling real estate for fear that her wages would be garnished).

1648 Loewe v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2020 WL 409655 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 24, 2020); Scarbrough v. Rausch, Sturm, Israel, Enerson & Hornick, L.L.P., 2018 WL 5305080 (E.D. Mich. July 26, 2018) (creditor's filing of false affidavit caused concrete harm by shifting burden of proof and forcing debtor to file counter-affidavit); Newman v. Encore Capital Group, 2017 WL 3479510 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017) (injury shown where collector's filing of false affidavit may have changed burden of proof in collection action to consumer's detriment); Toohey v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 2271548 (S.D.N.Y. May 12, 2017) (filing of affidavit of merit in state court collection suit that gave false impression that collector had reviewed account-level documentation is a procedural violation that caused concrete harm by enabling collector to obtain state court judgment); Ozmun v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 3140660, at *6 (W.D. Tex. July 24, 2017) (finding standing because collector's misrepresentation of amount of debt in its motion for default judgment creates risk of harm, even though no default judgment was granted). But see Frank v. Autovest, L.L.C., 961 F.3d 1185 (D.C. Cir. 2020) (false affidavits stating that affiants were employees of original creditor when they were actually collection firm's employees do not create concrete harm where consumer did not take or fail to take any action because of them); Daniels v. Aldridge Pite Haan, L.L.P., 2020 WL 3866649 (M.D. Ga. July 8, 2020) (finding no standing where collection firm sent debtor's attorney two filings that contained misstatements, and debtor cited no resulting harm); Elston v. Encore Capital Group, Inc., 2019 WL 3037054 (E.D. Wash. July 11, 2019); Burns v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3003598 (E.D. Mich. July 10, 2019) (making allegations in collection suit without having possession of supporting evidence did not cause harm where consumer did not dispute the allegations; also holding that false affidavit of service in earlier collection action, which led to default judgment, caused no harm where consumer later got the judgment vacated, but failing to recognize the harm of having to take the steps to have it vacated).

1649 Washington v. Brumbaugh & Quandahl, P.C., 2017 WL 4174754, at *4–5 (D. Neb. Sept. 19, 2017) (finding standing for claim based on collector's false statement that debtor's responses to request for admissions must be sworn and filed, on which debtor relied to her detriment).

1650 Henderson v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2019 WL 4148172, at *6 (W.D. Va. Aug. 30, 2019) (misinformation about deadlines for seeking administrative review of student loan debt and for requesting hearing on garnishment).

The harm caused by this type of misconduct has a close relationship to the common law torts of malicious prosecution[1651] and abuse of process,[1652] and these analogies may provide a basis for Article III jurisdiction after Ramirez. In a pre-Ramirez decision against a collector that had abused the court system, the Eighth Circuit held:

> With [FDCPA] § 1692f(1), Congress identified a harm—being subjected to attempts to collect debts not owed. This "alleged intangible harm has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts." Id. It is similar to the harm suffered by victims of the common-law torts of malicious prosecution, wrongful use of civil proceedings, and abuse of process. See, e.g., Bertero v. Nat'l Gen. Corp., 13 Cal. 3d 43, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608, 614 (1974) (in bank) ("The individual is harmed because he is compelled to defend against a fabricated claim which not only subjects him to the panoply of psychological pressures most civil defendants suffer, but also to the additional stress of attempting to resist a suit commenced out of spite or ill will, often magnified by slanderous allegations in the pleadings."); Carter v. Oster, 134 Mo. App. 146, 112 S.W. 995, 999 (1908) ("But there are torts of which mental distress is the proximate and natural result, and for which damages may be assessed. Such are malicious prosecutions. . . ."); Baglini v. Lauletta, 338 N.J. Super. 282, 768 A.2d 825, 839 (2001) ("Courts have required little or no proof with regard to intangible damages for malicious use of process, apparently *692 in the belief that a 'normal person' subjected to wrongful litigation would have suffered at least some damages."). See also Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 674, 681 (June 2017 update); Dan B. Dobbs et al., The Law of Torts § 593 (2d ed. June 2017 update) ("According to most counts, a majority of American courts allow the plaintiff to pursue the wrongful civil litigation claim without showing any special kind of injury.").[1653]

Since Ramirez, at least one court has held that the analogy to common law wrongful litigation torts meant that a consumer had standing to bring FDCPA claims regarding misrepresentations made in the context of a foreclosure case.[1654]

Filing false or fabricated statements with a court also means that false information about the consumer has been disseminated to third parties—it is disseminated to the court and to any other parties in the case, and, unless it is filed under seal, is fully available to any member of the public. Ramirez holds that, because of its close relationship to the common law tort of defamation, a consumer suffered a concrete harm when a credit reporting agency made a derogatory report to a third party.[1655] The same analogy supports the view that dissemination of false derogatory material to third parties by filing it with a court causes a concrete injury in and of itself. While common law recognizes a privilege for statements made in judicial proceedings, Ramirez requires only that the "fundamental requirements" of the federal claim and the common law claim be closely related,[1656] not that the potential defenses be similar.

In addition, in many cases the presentation of the fraudulent material to a court will, in and of itself, cause concrete harm. For example, in one case a court found that a collector's submission of a false affidavit to a court caused concrete harm to the debtors because it shifted the burden of proof and forced them to file a counter-affidavit.[1657] It will often be true that the mere filing of false or fabricated documents in court has consequences with respect to the posture of the case, the burdens of proof, or the actions required of the consumer. The false document may even enable the collector to obtain a state court judgment.[1658] One court found a lack of standing where a false affidavit of service in a collection action led to a default judgment, on the ground that the consumer later got the judgment vacated, but the court erred in failing to recognize the harm of having to take the steps to have it vacated.[1659]

Consumers are also likely to be able to document out-of-pocket costs, expenditure of time to contest the false statements, or entry of adverse rulings. The collector's false filings may have made it necessary for the consumer to retain counsel.[1660] The consumer may have acted or failed to act in some way because of believing the false information.

Another possibility is that the false information may have caused the consumer confusion or emotional distress, which

1651 See § 15.6.2, infra.

1652 See § 15.6.3, infra.

1653 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685, 691–692 (8th Cir. 2017). See also Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1025 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; citing this holding of Demarais with approval).

1654 Benjamin v. Rosenberg & Assoc., 2021 WL 3784320, at *5–6 (D.D.C. Aug. 26, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding Article III standing for claims involving unfounded threat to conduct foreclosure sale, misrepresentations to obtain summary judgment; misrepresentation of legal status of the debt, attempts to collect illegal or unreasonable amounts, and false representation that certain parties had rights in the debt, on ground that these acts have close relationship to wrongful litigation torts and cause emotional distress).

1655 See §§ 11.15.2.2.1, 11.15.2.2.3, supra, §§ 11.15.5.2, 15.5, infra.

1656 See § 11.15.2.2.3, supra.

1657 Scarbrough v. Rausch, Sturm, Israel, Enerson & Hornick, L.L.P., 2018 WL 5305080 (E.D. Mich. July 26, 2018). See also Newman v. Encore Capital Group, 2017 WL 3479510 (E.D. Mich. Aug. 14, 2017) (injury shown where collector's filing of false affidavit may have changed burden of proof in collection action to consumer's detriment).

1658 See, e.g., Toohey v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 2271548 (S.D.N.Y. May 12, 2017) (filing of affidavit of merit in state court collection suit that gave false impression that collector had reviewed account-level documentation is procedural violation that caused concrete harm by enabling collector to obtain state court judgment).

1659 Burns v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3003598 (E.D. Mich. July 10, 2019).

1660 See, e.g., Lako v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2021 WL 3403632 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 4, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; cost of hiring attorney to defend collection action is concrete harm). See generally § 11.15.3.4, supra.

may amount to concrete harm.[1661] However, as a matter of case selection, cases should be brought only where the consumer can testify to serious confusion or distress and the false statement is one that would often cause consumers to respond in the same way.

Exploring and alleging any steps that the consumer took or failed to take because of the false filing or deceptive information is particularly important in light of Lyshe v. Levy, a pre-Ramirez Sixth Circuit decision.[1662] The court held that there was no Article III standing for a claim regarding a collector's false statement that requests for admission would be deemed admitted unless the consumer provided sworn responses, where the consumer did not allege that he was misled, took any action, or was harmed in any other way by the false statement. It may be possible to distinguish Lyshe on the ground that the court characterized the alleged violation as a procedural one that did not involve any harm that the FDCPA was designed to prevent. In addition, the court only addressed the consumer's claim that the violation of the FDCPA was a concrete harm in and of itself, and did not explore any common law tort analogies. Nonetheless, advocates should take care not only to develop tort analogies but also to explore and document any consequences the consumer suffered because of the violation.

In Frank v. Autovest, L.L.C.,[1663] the District of Columbia Circuit held that false statements in court filings by a debt buyer and its collection law firm did not cause a concrete injury to a consumer who testified that she had not taken any action or refrained from taking any action because of the misrepresentations. She testified that the collection suit itself caused her stress and inconvenience, and that she incurred court costs and attorney fees to respond to the suit, but she did not tie these injuries to the false statements. The decision rejects the argument that, because of Congress's authority to define new injuries and identify new chains of causation, every violation of the FDCPA creates a concrete injury.[1664] It also holds that the debtor's "informational injury"—the denial of access to truthful information—was not a concrete injury in itself.[1665]

11.15.4.5 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Collector's Failure to Identify Itself As a Collector and Disclose the Debt Collection Purpose of the Contact

FDCPA § 1692e(11) requires a debt collector to identify itself as such in communications with the consumer and, in initial communications, to disclose the debt collection purpose of the communication. These requirements address collection abuses observed by the Senate when the FDCPA was enacted, specifically "obtaining information about a consumer through false pretense, impersonating public officials and attorneys, and simulating legal process."[1666] To end these abuses, Congress gave consumers the right to be informed that the entity contacting them is a debt collector and that any information obtained from the consumer will be used for collection purposes.[1667]

The harms to consumers that failure to provide this congressionally mandated information can cause is seen in cases like Romine v. Diversified Collection Services.[1668] In that case, Western Union urged consumers to call Western Union to confirm information to get delivery of a personal telegram. When the consumer called Western Union, it recorded the consumer's telephone caller ID, confirmed it with the consumer, and then provided the phone number to the debt collector, who used it to contact the consumer for debt collection. In addition to disclosing personal contact information, consumers might unwittingly disclose personal information like bank account or credit card details, believing that this information was being provided for some other purpose.

Obtaining personal information without FDCPA § 1692e(11) disclosures causes harm that is analogous to that made actionable by the common law tort of intrusion upon seclusion, and the consumer is harmed even if there is no publication of that information.[1669] As examples of this tort, the Restatement cites highly analogous actions such as eavesdropping and surreptitiously or deceptively obtaining access to personal information.[1670]

If no personal information is disclosed, a court might give weight to Congress's judgment that this injury is sufficiently concrete to confer standing.[1671] In Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., an unpublished decision, the Eleventh Circuit held that a consumer had Article III standing to assert a claim that a medical accounts servicer failed to provide the FDCPA § 1692e(11) notice, even though she did not allege any actual damages resulting from the violation.[1672] The court held that the right to receive this information was substantive, and that Congress had elevated the injury to the status of a legally cognizable injury through the FDCPA. However, in 2020 the Eleventh Circuit issued two decisions that are inconsistent with Church,[1673] and the Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez[1674] throws the role of Congress into some doubt.

1661 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.
1662 854 F.3d 855 (6th Cir. 2017).
1663 961 F.3d 1185 (D.C. Cir. 2020).
1664 Id. at 1188–1189.
1665 Id. at 1188.
1666 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, and reproduced in Appx. A.3, infra.
1667 FDCPA § 1692e(11).
1668 55 F.3d 1142 (9th Cir. 1998).
1669 See § 11.15.2.1, supra, § 11.15.10, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.2.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (harm caused by unwanted calls and texts is analogous to that made actionable by tort of invasion of privacy, so consumer has standing to bring Telephone Consumer Protection Act claim).
1670 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652B, Illustrations 2, 3, 4 (1977).
1671 See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.
1672 654 Fed. Appx. 990 (11th Cir. 2016).
1673 Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990 (11th Cir. 2020); Cooper v. Atlantic Credit & Finance Inc., 822 Fed. Appx. 951 (11th Cir. 2020).
1674 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

A Sixth Circuit decision also holds that the failure of a letter from a law firm stating that a creditor was waiving a deficiency claim to state that it was from a debt collector did not cause the consumers any concrete harm.[1675] The decision deals only with the level of deference due to Congress's judgment, not with any possible analogy to a common law claim.

In the first Circuit-level post-Ramirez decision on the question, Wadsworth v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc.,[1676] the Seventh Circuit ruled that a consumer did not have standing to bring suit regarding a collector's failure to identify herself as a collector or state that she was attempting to collect a debt. The court applied its earlier decisions that, when a debt collector fails to inform a debtor of the debtor's statutory rights, then the debtor has suffered a concrete injury only if impairs the debtor's ability to use that information for a substantive purpose that the statute envisioned. The debtor had not paid the debt in the wake of the calls, and the court followed its earlier decisions holding that emotional harms are not concrete injuries.[1677]

A post-Ramirez district court decision similarly holds that failure to inform the debtor of the debt collection purpose of a communication did not cause a concrete injury where the debtor did not allege any downstream consequences.[1678] The court stressed that the debtor had been served with a complaint that included the required information, and characterized the violation as involving only format. Another post-Ramirez decision deals with an unintelligible five-second voicemail message, probably left by a collector when he did not realize he had connected to the debtor's phone. The court denied standing over a claim that the message did not identify the caller as a collector where the debtor made only conclusory allegations that the message caused to be upset and to feel threatened.[1679]

In light of these developments, advocates should not rely on the judgment of Congress as the sole basis for standing in cases where the collector did not succeed in obtaining information that the consumer would have preferred not to reveal. Such claims will be more likely to proceed in federal court if the consumer can allege and prove some other harm beyond the non-disclosure itself.[1680] The distress that calls or letters from unidentified or poorly-identified entities may cause might be a sufficient basis for standing, but as a matter of case selection the advocate should make sure that the distress is significant and a natural result of receipt of such communications.[1681]

675 Hagy v. Demers & Adams, 882 F.3d 616 (6th Cir. 2018) (plaintiffs lack standing to sue for law firm's failure to identify itself as collector, where they identified no harm or risk of harm that this caused in these circumstances).

676 ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3877930 (7th Cir. Aug. 31, 2021).

677 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

678 Cheatham v. Adams, 2021 WL 4313961 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 22, 2021).

679 Santiago v. Hunter Warfield, Inc., 2021 WL 4894092 (M.D. Fla. Oct. 20, 2021).

680 See, e.g., Neal v. Adams, 2021 WL 4466392, at *6 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 29, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding no standing where plaintiff already knew that defendant was a debt collector).

681 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

11.15.4.6 Article III Standing for Other Claims of False, Deceptive, or Misleading Acts

Courts have held that many other types of false, deceptive, or misleading acts cause concrete harm to consumers and meet the requirements for Article III jurisdiction:

- Deception regarding the involvement of an attorney in a collection effort;[1682]

1682 Gibbons v. Weltman, Weinberg & Reis Co., 2020 WL 5039316 (E.D. Pa. Aug. 26, 2020) (false implication that collection letter was from attorney causes concrete harm, because it is closely related to common law misrepresentation claims and Congress has elevated it to actionable harm; plaintiff's fear of suit is also sufficient to confer standing); Kranz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 3899223, at *6 (W.D. Tex. July 10, 2020) (even if deception about attorney involvement is considered procedural, violation is sufficient to constitute injury-in-fact); Diehm v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 426 F. Supp. 3d 578 (W.D. Wis. 2019) (finding standing at summary judgment stage where debtor submitted evidence that she would have disputed claim but for her belief that collection attorney had reviewed it; fact that she does not identify any substantive defenses does not negate standing); Adams v. Jackson, 2019 WL 5865510 (D.S.C. Apr. 30, 2019) (finding standing to assert claim that carefully-hedged collection letter from attorney was deceptive, but rejecting claim on merits); Villalobos v. Meyer Njus Tanick, P.A., 2019 WL 3562663 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 5, 2019) (finding standing where letter implied that it was the product of attorney's professional judgment, causing consumer to suffer increased confusion and pressure); LoMastro v. Baxter Credit Union, 2018 WL 5885536 (W.D. Wis. Nov. 9, 2018) (finding standing where plaintiff alleged that meritless suit was filed because of collection attorney's failure to be meaningfully involved, causing her to have to defend it); Degrasse v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2018 WL 2214651 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 5, 2018) (finding standing on theory that procedural violations of sections 1692e and 1692g are concrete injuries, but denying claim on the merits); Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 265 F. Supp. 3d 731 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (allegation that consumers were deceived and misled is sufficient; earlier decision notes that one of claims is that letters deceptively conveyed impression of attorney involvement); Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (letter misrepresenting attorney's involvement; allegation of confusion is sufficient); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351, at *4 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (being subjected to baseless collection suit creates basis for both FDCPA claim and unjustified-litigation torts); Napolitano v. Ragan & Ragan, 2017 WL 3535025 (D.N.J. Aug. 17, 2017) (misrepresentation of level of attorney involvement places debtor at risk of economic injury); Pogorzelski v. Patenaude & Felix APC, 2017 WL 2539782 (E.D. Wis. June 12, 2017) (informational injury is more than procedural; consumer who has received debt collection communication misrepresenting attorney's involvement has suffered the type of injury FDCPA was intended to protect against); Bock v. Pressler & Pressler, L.L.P., 254 F. Supp. 3d 724 (D.N.J. 2017) (finding standing because right to truthful information is substantive right made actionable by Congress); Carter v. CACH, L.L.C., 2016 WL 11581052 (N.D. Ga. Nov. 30, 2016) (consumer has standing because Congress created substantive right to be free from abusive debt collection practices), adopted, 2016 WL 11581047 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 27, 2016). But see Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, P.A., 946 F.3d 855 (6th Cir. 2020) (plaintiff must show harm in addition to FDCPA violation; finding no standing on theory that plaintiff did not show that receipt of collection letters that misrepresented attorney's involvement created anxiety that was more than he would experience in facing debt collection). But cf. Rossi v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 2020 WL 2527176 (W.D. Wis. May 18, 2020) (rejecting argument that attorney's signature on complaint led her to infer that attorney had

- Falsely identifying the collector as a credit bureau;[1683]
- Misrepresentation regarding the imminence of suit, garnishment, seizure of the debtor's assets, or some other action;[1684]
- False threats to take action that the collector does not intend to take[1685] or has no right to take;[1686]
- Threatening to report a discharged debt;[1687]
- Demanding payment of a debt that has been discharged in bankruptcy,[1688] that was incurred by an identity thief,[1689] or otherwise is not owed;[1690] investigated it significantly and substantially, which deterred her from contesting it; concluding on summary judgment that real reason that she failed to contest it was not this unreasonable inference, but because she knew she owed debt).

1683 Cunningham v. Credit Bur. of Lancaster Cty., Inc., 2018 WL 6062351 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 20, 2018).

1684 Heinitz v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4805326 (N.D.N.Y. Sept. 30, 2019) (misrepresentation of imminence of foreclosure); Spehr v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4246929 (E.D. Mo. Sept. 6, 2019) (finding standing where plaintiff alleged that collector made false threat to accelerate mortgage, causing him mental distress); Wenger v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 2119980 (M.D. Pa. May 15, 2019) (misrepresentation that debt would be accelerated if full amount was not paid by stated date); Moukengeschaie v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 277 F. Supp. 3d 337 (E.D.N.Y. Sept. 29, 2017) (mag.; threatening to seize assets, without first having sent debtor a notice of assignment of the debt); Biber v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 229 F. Supp. 3d 457 (E.D. Va. 2017) (consumer has standing to assert claims under §§ 1692e and 1692f against collector that misrepresented that administrative wage garnishment proceedings had already commenced or were imminent; these misrepresentations "could have materially and adversely affected [plaintiff's] decisions regarding debt repayment"). But see Gunn v. Thrasher, Buschmann & Voelkel, P.C., 928 F.3d 1069 (7th Cir. 2020) (treating statement that creditor "may seek to foreclose" its lien as true even though, because of low amount of debt, collector sued solely for money, not foreclosure; allegation that consumers were "annoyed or intimidated" by letter is insufficient for standing); Galea v. Midland Credit Mgmt. Inc., 2020 WL 905747 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 25, 2020) (claim that "Time Sensitive" on envelope created false sense of urgency is a bare procedural violation; no standing without allegation of some resulting harm); Scibetta v. TD Banknorth, 2017 WL 3448544 (D.N.J. Aug. 11, 2017) (holding that consumer lacks standing to assert claim that collector threatened repossession when it had no intention of doing so).

1685 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017) (consumer has standing to assert claim that collector made false threat to proceed to trial when it did not have any evidence or witnesses; threat caused consumer to obtain counsel, serve discovery requests, prepare for trial, and appear); Kranz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 3899223, at *5 (W.D. Tex. July 10, 2020) (false threat to take oral deposition at debtor's exam is concrete harm because it is violation of substantive right created by Congress; finding, in footnote 9, that plaintiff's emotional distress is also sufficiently concrete); Adams v. Seterus, Inc., 2019 WL 4735157 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 27, 2019) (consumer has standing; letter that conveyed false sense of urgency caused mental anguish and has potential to induce debtor to send money that is needed for necessities); Suarez v. Camden Prop. Trust, 2019 WL 3423427, at *3 (E.D.N.C. July 29, 2019) (finding standing where false threat to refer small claim to collection agency caused emotional distress, anger, and frustration); Mills v. Turner, 2017 WL 3670967, at *13 (D. Mass. Aug. 25, 2017) (finding standing where false threat of suit prompted consumer to retain counsel; misleading statements also create risk of harm); Lee v. Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2016 WL 9275411 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 25, 2016) (finding standing because Congress elevated right to be free from deceptive or unfair debt collection tactics to legally cognizable injury).

1686 See Benjamin v. Rosenberg & Assoc., 2021 WL 3784320 (D.D.C. Aug. 26, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding Article III standing for FDCPA claim regarding false threat to schedule foreclosure sale because of its close relationship to wrongful litigation torts); Im v. Bayview Loan Servicing L.L.C., 2018 WL 840088 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 12, 2018) (collector's misrepresentation of its right to foreclose is concrete injury in and of itself). See also Farina v. Metropolitan Transportation Authority, 2019 WL 3966163 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 21, 2019) (claims under section 1983 and state laws; unconstitutional threat to enforce disputed obligation is sufficient). But see Seung Eun Oh v. Collecto, Inc., 2021 WL 3732881 (D.N.H. Aug. 23, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; no standing where consumer did not read letter). But cf. Hunter v. NHCash.com, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4053769 (E.D. Va. Sept. 12, 2017) (no standing for claim based on collection letters that sought to enforce payday loan that was illegal and void, where plaintiffs pled no other harm; rejecting argument that there is a common law analog for this claim; suggesting that allegations of anxiety and emotional distress will be sufficient if plaintiffs amend their complaint).

1687 Caprel v. Specialized Loan Servicing, Inc., 2017 WL 1739919, at *3 (N.D. Ill. May 4, 2017) (noting that plaintiff's failure to allege financial injury did not mean that he did not suffer any concrete injury; listing intangible injuries he might have suffered).

1688 Barnhill v. FirstPoint, Inc., 2017 WL 22178439 (M.D.N.C. May 17, 2017) (collector represented that consumer owed debt that had been discharged in bankruptcy, causing her emotional distress); Pritchett v. Paul Mason & Assoc., Inc., 2017 WL 11151610 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 2, 2017) (finding standing for § 1692e claim and parallel § 1692f claim where collector filed proof of claim for debt that had been discharged in an earlier bankruptcy; invasion of these rights is sufficient to give plaintiff standing); Prindle v. Carrington Mortg. Services, 2016 WL 4369424 (M.D. Fla. Aug. 16, 2016) (plaintiff has standing to assert that letter regarding discharged mortgage debt disclosed too inconspicuously that it was not seeking payment, because this breaches statutory right created by Congress); Mogg v. Jacobs, 2016 WL 4395899 (S.D. Ill. Aug. 18, 2016) (false representations in letter and state court complaint that debt was collectible when it was subject to automatic bankruptcy stay; having lawsuit filed against him and incurring costs to obtain representation in collection action is concrete harm); McCamis v. Servis One, Inc., 2016 WL 4063403 (M.D. Fla. July 29, 2016) (Congress has elevated FDCPA violations to the status of legally cognizable injuries).

1689 Brown v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2019 WL 1281972 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 20, 2019) (collection calls to identity theft victim; finding standing because being subject to unlawful debt collection demands is concrete harm); Brown v. SWC Group L.P., 2019 WL 1147125, at *7 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 10, 2019) ("There is clearly a risk of material harm from debt collectors attempting to collect fraudulent debts from identity theft victims, and that risk falls squarely within the ambit of what Congress was trying to remedy in the FDCPA's prohibitions on false and misleading representations and abusive practices"), adopted, 2019 WL 2306115 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 12, 2019).

1690 Roe v. Roosen, Varchetti & Oliver, P.L.L.C., 2019 WL 2523589 (E.D. Mich. June 19, 2019) (finding standing where wage garnishment sent to wrong person's employer caused plaintiff, a real estate agent, to suffer embarrassment and emotional distress, to contact attorney, and to refrain from selling real estate for fear that her wages would be garnished); Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 2019 WL 1083025 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 7, 2019) (finding standing where collector sent and served postjudgment execution documents (information subpoenas) on non-debtor plaintiff, whose name was similar to actual debtor's; plaintiff probably suffered additional harm besides the violation itself, but court finds it unnecessary to address this), aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 973 F.3d 154 (2d Cir. 2020) (addressing merits of claims); LoMastro v. Baxter Credit Union, 2018 WL 5885536 (W.D. Wis. Nov. 9, 2018) (finding standing for claim that defendant brought suit without giving consumer notice of her statutory right to cure;

- Misrepresentations about the nature or benefits of settlement offers, such as a false statement that an offer to settle a debt is time-limited;[1691]
- Deceptive or misleading statements about potential tax consequences of settling a debt;[1692]
- False statements about how long a debt would appear on the debtor's credit report;[1693]
- Seeking payment of a debt without disclosing that it is time-barred[1694] or that making a payment will revive the debt;[1695] finding it plausible that plaintiff would have been able to cure default if she had been notified of this right); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (being subjected to baseless collection suit creates basis for both FDCPA claim and unjustified-litigation torts); Matute v. A.A. Action Collection Co., 2017 WL 2573714 (D.N.J. June 13, 2017) (violating FDCPA by seeking amounts not owed is concrete injury because it is type of practice FDCPA is intended to prevent). But cf. In re FDCPA Mailing Vendor Cases, ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 3160794, at *5–6 (E.D.N.Y. July 23, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; treating plaintiff's allegation that debts were not owed as merely allegation that collector failed to identify original creditor; finding no Art. III standing where plaintiffs alleged no actual injury, and rejecting argument that standing can be based on informational injury).

1691 Johnson v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 325 F.R.D. 608, 612–614 (N.D. Ind. 2018) (standing established by collector's misrepresentation or implication that by paying settlement debtor would avoid negative credit report, when in fact the debt had already been reported; denial of right to truthful information is concrete injury); Haddad v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 255 F. Supp. 3d 735, 739 (N.D. Ill. 2017) (false statement that flexible payment arrangements would no longer be available if account was forwarded to attorney is concrete harm because of Congress's judgment that there is intrinsic value in truthful information and because of its historical relationship to liability for fraudulent misrepresentation). But see Johnston v. Midland Credit Mgmt., 229 F. Supp. 3d 625 (W.D. Mich. Jan. 26, 2017) (holding that collector's refusal to implement settlement that collection letter said was available did not cause concrete harm; disregarding without explanation plaintiff's travel expenses and the time he spent consulting with counsel and making telephone calls, and inexplicably holding that further collection attempts were not "certainly impending" in light of collector's repudiation of settlement it offered).

1692 Schultz v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2020 WL 3026531 (D.N.J. June 5, 2020); Leonard v. Capital Mgmt. Services, L.P., 364 F. Supp. 3d 198 (W.D.N.Y. 2019); Taylor v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 252 F. Supp. 3d 344 (S.D.N.Y. 2017), aff'd, 886 F.3d 212 (2d Cir. 2018); Rhein v. Forster, Garbus & Garbus, L.L.P., 2017 WL 4969335 (D.N.J. Nov. 1, 2017) (finding standing but rejecting claim on merits); Remington v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2017 WL 1014994 (D. Conn. Mar. 15, 2017) (plaintiff who received letter falsely stating "this settlement may have tax consequences" has standing); Medina v. AllianceOne Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 220328, at *1 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 19, 2017) ("The FDCPA is designed to protect the consumer from the inherent harm caused when a debt collector, in seeking to collect a debt, is not straight with the consumer but instead makes a false or deceptive statement to achieve its purpose. The deceptive declaration in the letter about a requirement to report the consumer's resolution of the debt to the IRS creates a particularized and concrete injury, at the very least unnecessary fear and anxiety on the part of the consumer."); Bautz v. ARS Nat'l Services, Inc., 226 F. Supp. 3d 131 (E.D.N.Y. Dec. 23, 2016) (even if this misrepresentation were procedural rather than substantive, it presents a material risk of injury because misinformation about tax consequences could impact whether debtor decides to pay the lesser amount offered as opposed to the full debt or some other option). See also Everett v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6948052 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 28, 2016) (plaintiff's allegation that letter that misrepresented tax consequences caused her to incur costs consulting her attorney, suffer financial loss, and be subject to the threat of harm is sufficient). But see Brunett v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 982 F.3d 1067, 1069 (7th Cir. 2020) (finding no standing where collector's statement about tax consequences was not inaccurate and consumer alleged only confusion, not that she acted to her detriment on that confusion).

1693 Griffin v. Andrea Visgilio-McGrath, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3037387 (D.N.J. July 18, 2017) (false statement about how long judgment debt would appear on credit record is sufficient to establish standing because it is breach of plaintiff's personal statutory right to be free from abusive debt collection practices).

1694 Perez v. McCreary, Veselka, Bragg & Allen, P.C., 2021 WL 3639801 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; receipt of false information and confusion are sufficient grounds for Art. III standing); Schafer v. Allied Interstate L.L.C., 2018 WL 10303096 (W.D. Mich. Feb. 9, 2018); Kaiser v. Cascade Capital, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1521892 (D. Or. Mar. 28, 2018) (noting that, if plaintiffs had been induced to make payment on debt they would have waived statute of limitations defense); McMahon v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2018 WL 1316736 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 14, 2018); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (being subjected to baseless collection suit creates basis for both FDCPA claim and unjustified-litigation torts); Wheeler v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3235683 (N.D. Ill. July 31, 2017) (consumer has standing to make claim that collector violated §§ 1692e(2)(A) and 1692f by offering a settlement through website without indicating that debt was time-barred, even though earlier collector had told him six months earlier that limitations period had expired), later op. at 2018 WL 1920254 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 24, 2018) (certifying class and rejecting defendant's renewed challenge to plaintiff's standing); Taymuree v. Nat'l Collegiate Student Loan Trust 2007-2, 2017 WL 952962 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 13, 2017) (rejecting argument that harm was caused by consumer's breach of payment obligation); Sullivan v. Allied Interstate, L.L.C., 2016 WL 7187507 (W.D. Pa. Oct. 18, 2016), adopted, 2016 WL 7189859 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 9, 2016); Hayes v. Convergent Healthcare Recoveries, Inc., 2016 WL 5867818 (C.D. Ill. Oct. 7, 2016) ("[F]ailure to disclose that debt is not legally enforceable creates "material risk of harm—the risk that the consumer would be misled into believing that the debt is legally enforceable. Furthermore, a dunning letter that misleads the consumer as to the legal status of the debt is exactly the harm that Congress identified and sought to curb by creating a statutory right to accurate information under the FDCPA."); Nyberg v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2016 WL 3176585, at *7 (D. Or. June 2, 2016) (mag.; filing of time-barred state collection suit is concrete injury); Barkley v. Santander Consumer USA, Inc. (In re Martin), 617 B.R. 866 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. 2020) (filing proof of claim on extinguished time-barred debt); Robinson v. JH Portfolio Debt Equities, L.L.C. (In re Robinson), 554 B.R. 800 (Bankr. W.D. La. 2016) (attorney fee for contesting time-barred proof of claim is concrete injury). See also Buchholz v. Meyer Njus Tanick, P.A., 946 F.3d 855, 864 (6th Cir. 2020) (stating in dicta that knowingly litigating time-barred claim may be concrete injury in itself). But cf. Nitti v. Penn Credit Corp., 2017 WL 4381683 (E.D. Va. Oct. 2, 2017) (dismissing contract claim that was based on FDCPA where plaintiff did not allege that he suffered actual injury or was exposed to risk of harm by collector's demand for time-barred tax debt).

1695 Cartmell v. Credit Control, L.L.C., 2020 WL 113829 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 10, 2020) (plaintiff has Art. III standing even though he did not intend to make payment and did not feel threatened by letter); Navaroroli v. Midland Funding L.L.C., 2019 WL 1044801 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 5, 2019) (seeking to bait consumer into reviving debt by making payment is concrete harm, because it is type of conduct Congress sought to deter); Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 1427070 (N.D. Ill. Apr. 21, 2017) (consumers have standing because this practice invades

- Failure to disclose the amount of the debt or other information that the FDCPA requires;[1696]
- Misidentification of the collector;[1697]
- Misidentification of, or failure to identify, the current creditor;[1698]
- Misrepresentations regarding the identity of the owner of a debt or the real party in interest in a collection action;[1699]
- Statement of the amount owed in a confusing way or without sufficient detail,[1700] although there is significant contrary authority;[1701] and their legally-protected interest in certain information about their debts). But see Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F.3d 990 (11th Cir. 2020) (finding no standing for collection letter that deceptively offered payment plan "designed to save you money" that would have resulted in restarting statute of limitations for a time-barred debt, on ground that consumer did not act to his detriment in reliance on it).

1696 Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (finding standing for variety of disclosure violations under §§ 1692e, 1692f, and 1692g, including failure to state current amount of debt and current creditor), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017). But see Bazile v. Finance Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 983 F.3d 274 (7th Cir. 2020) (must show harm beyond non-disclosure of amount of debt and that it may increase due to interest; nonreceipt of information to which plaintiff is entitled under statute may amount to concrete injury, but only if it impairs plaintiff's ability to use that information for substantive purpose that statute envisioned); Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282 (7th Cir. 2020) (debtors lack standing to assert claim under §§ 1692e and 1692f that collection letter failed to disclose that interest was accruing; must show that non-disclosure detrimentally affected debtors' handling of their debts). See generally § 11.15.6, infra (violations of § 1692g).

1697 Ngo v. NPAS, Inc., 2021 WL 149121, at *4 (E.D. La. Jan. 15, 2021); Busby v. Vacation Resorts Int'l, 2019 WL 669641 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 19, 2019) (finding standing for claim under §§ 1692e, 1692f, and 1692*i* that collection letter purported to be from attorney, even though creditor itself was actually handling collection, where debtor alleges he was misled); McLain v. Head Mercantile Co., 2017 WL 3710073 (M.D. La. Aug. 28, 2017) (use of unregistered name on collection letter); Scibetta v. TD Banknorth, 2017 WL 3448544, at *3 (D.N.J. Aug. 11, 2017) (collector's failure to identify itself as collector, using its proper name); Hsu v. Enhanced Recover Co., L.L.C., 2017 WL 4310643 (W.D. Tex. July 10, 2017) (consumer has standing to assert claim regarding collector's failure to provide its true legal name, in violation of § 1692e(14); information would help a debtor evaluate whether collector runs legitimate or fraudulent operation, whether its claim is valid, and how to respond); Velez v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1476144 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 24, 2017) (plaintiff has standing to assert claim that collection letter gave unregistered false name for collector; injury in fact is being subjected to unfair and abusive practices); Verdun v. Fidelity Creditor Serv., 2017 WL 1047109, at *5–6 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 20, 2017) (mag.; finding standing where debt collection letter gave impression that collector was the creditor and that California law required debtor to contact the collector). See also Derosia v. Credit Corp Solutions, Inc., 2018 WL 1513043 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 27, 2018) (consumer has standing to assert FDCPA claim regarding false statement on collection letter that collector was licensed). But see Ward v. Nat'l Patient Account Services Solutions, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3616067 (6th Cir. Aug. 16, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; rejecting analogy to intrusion upon seclusion and finding no standing to assert § 1692e(14) claim based on caller's identification of itself as NPAS, rather than as NPAS, Inc.; consumer's resulting confusion was not concrete injury, nor was her voluntary decision to retain counsel to prevent further calls); Hagy v. Demers & Adams, 882 F.3d 616 (6th Cir. 2018) (plaintiffs lack standing to sue for law firm's failure to identify itself as collector, where they identified no harm or risk of harm that this caused in these circumstances). But cf. Benjamin v. Rosenberg & Assoc., 2021 WL 3784320 (D.D.C. Aug. 26, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding no standing where plaintiff's complaint did not identify any way in which collection firm's failure to add mortgage servicer as plaintiff in foreclosure complaint harmed her). See generally § 11.15.5.3, supra (standing to assert violation of § 1692e(11) requirement that collector identify itself as debt collector).

1698 Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75 (2d Cir. 2018); Klein v. Affiliated Group, Inc., 2019 WL 246768, at *6 (D. Minn. Jan. 17, 2019) (rejecting collector's argument that amending complaint would be futile because of lack of standing: "A debt collector's alleged misrepresentation regarding the current legally authorized creditor could create a concrete risk of Article III harm, because a debtor who is confused about the identity of the authorized collector might be misled into making payments to the wrong entity"); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412, at *9 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (failure to identify current creditor creates risk that debtor will pay wrong person), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017). But see Adams v. Skagit Bonded Collectors, L.L.C., ___ Fed. Appx. ___, 2020 WL 7055395 (9th Cir. Dec. 2, 2020) (finding no standing; allegation of confusion is insufficient). But cf. Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 197 F. Supp. 3d 1205 (S.D. Cal. 2016) (risk of harm from misidentification of creditor in letter that consumer never received is too hypothetical; no standing), aff'd, 735 Fed. Appx. 340 (9th Cir. 2018). See generally § 11.15.6.3, infra (standing to assert violation of requirement that § 1692g notice identify the current creditor).

1699 Tourgeman v. Collins Fin. Services, Inc., 197 F. Supp. 3d 1205 (S.D. Cal. 2016) (misidentification of original creditor in complaint creates risk of affecting debtor's litigation strategy, could lead to lost opportunities to settle the debt, and could expose debtor to a default judgment, but risk of harm is too hypothetical as to misidentification and misrepresentations in letter that consumer never received), aff'd, 735 Fed. Appx. 340 (9th Cir. 2018). But see Smith v. U.S. Bank, 2018 WL 1488391 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 27, 2018) (finding no standing; rejecting plaintiffs' claim that complaint's misidentification of ownership of debt forced them to have to defend the action, as they would have had to defend it even without the misidentification). See generally § 11.15.6.3, infra (violation of requirement that § 1692g notice identify current creditor).

1700 Espinal v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2020 WL 4048213 (D.N.J. July 16, 2020); Hackler v. Tolteca Enters., Inc., 2019 WL 7759523, at *2 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 9, 2019); Roth v. Solomon and Solomon, P.C., 2018 WL 718402 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 5, 2018); Feldheim v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 257 F. Supp. 3d 361 (S.D.N.Y. 2017); Grubb v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 3191521, at *5–7 (D.N.J. July 27, 2017) (collection letters stated contradictory amounts owed, did not explain the calculation, and did not give amount owed on date of letter; plaintiff alleged that the letters confused her); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (collector's failure to disclose current amount due and interest rate create risk that consumer would pay wrong amount), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff P.C., 2017 WL 1230847 (D. Conn. Mar. 30, 2017) (consumer has standing to assert claim under §§ 1692d, 1692e, and 1692f(1) for unclear statement of amount of debt; distinguishing cases where a required disclosure related to something that did not affect the consumer, such as a payment plan the consumer did not have; here the disclosure relates to consumer's own debt); George v. Wright, Lerch & Litow, L.L.P., 2016 WL 6963990 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 29, 2016) (holding that plaintiff has standing to assert claim that demand for 75% of debt, when the balance changed daily due to accrual of interest, was misleading, and need not show that she herself was deceived, but dismissing claim on merits).

1701 Markakos v. Medicredit, Inc., 997 F.3d 778 (7th Cir. 2021) (confusion and aggravation because section 1692g notices letters stated

- Other deception.[1702]

Ramirez holds that federal courts do not have Article III jurisdiction over a claim that a defendant violated a statutory requirement regarding the format of a disclosure unless the plaintiff shows some "downstream consequences" resulting from the violation. As discussed in § 11.15.2.2.7, supra, there may be an argument that this rule should be confined to format violations, and so should not apply to a claim involving failure to provide a required disclosure or provision of a false or deceptive disclosure.[1703] However, advocates should not rely on distinguishing Ramirez on this ground, but should be prepared to produce evidence of downstream consequences or point to analogous common law torts that treat the harm, or a closely related harm, as actionable.

One possible downstream consequence of false, deceptive, or misleading communications is that they may cause the debtor to be confused or deceived. Although there is significant contrary authority,[1704] a number of pre-Ramirez decisions find the debtor's actual confusion or deception, after opening the letter and reading it, to be a concrete injury.[1705] This theory should be pursued only when the letter was likely to be confusing or deceptive to many typical readers, and the debtor can testify convincingly about the confusion it caused.

A danger of relying solely on the debtor's confusion or deception as a concrete injury is that courts may not consider the debtor's state of mind after receiving a deceptive communication to be concrete enough and "downstream" enough from the deception to support Article III standing. For this reason, it is important to allege and be prepared to prove other adverse effects of the deception whenever possible. The debtor may have taken some action because of the deception. For example, a debtor who was deceived by the collector's false statements about the urgency or the validity of the claim may have paid a debt that the debtor otherwise would not have paid, or put it ahead of more important obligations. A debtor who was not deceived may have felt compelled to respond by retaining counsel, defending against the debt, or spending time and effort to document the true facts.[1706] A showing that, because of the deceptive communication, the debtor refrained from taking some action that the debtor otherwise would have taken should also be sufficient.[1707]

Deceptive communications—particularly threats or letters that convey a false sense of urgency—can cause mental anguish or emotional distress. Since emotional distress is recognized as providing a basis for some common law torts, there is a good claim that it is a concrete injury for purposes of Article III standing, and a number of courts have so held in inconsistent amounts due is not concrete harm); Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282 (7th Cir. 2020) (receipt of collection letter that fails to state that debt would accrue interest is not concrete injury, nor are debtor's calls and letters to inquire about accuracy of amount demanded, because she was not seeking clarification about interest); Marcano v. Nationwide Credit & Collection, Inc., 2021 WL 4523218 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 4, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; plaintiff's failure to pay a debt because of collection letter's confusing presentation of amount owed not concrete harm where no interest or fees accrued as a result); Kola v. Forster & Garbus L.L.P., 2021 WL 4135153, at *7-8 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 10, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; inconsistent statements about amount of debt not concrete even if this violates a substantive right); Shields v. Professional Bur. of Collections of Md., Inc., 2021 WL 4806383 (D. Kan. Oct. 14, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; collection letters' failure to state that balance could increase due to interest and other changes, and their confusing presentation of the amount owed, not concrete injury where plaintiff alleged only that they caused general confusion); Wright v. AR Resources, Inc., 2020 WL 7047804 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 1, 2020) (finding no standing where collection letter cited two different amounts owed, but plaintiff alleged only hypothetical harm); Hill v. Resurgent Capital Services, L.P., 2020 WL 4429254 (S.D. Fla. July 31, 2020) (misrepresentation that claim is for principal, not interest, did not cause concrete harm in absence of allegation that consumer was led to pay this amount or spent time and money to contest it; potential effect on other consumers insufficient); Smith v. U.S. Bank Ass'n, 2018 WL 1488391 (N.D. Ohio Mar. 27, 2018) (failure to respond to consumers' request for an explanation of certain charges is not the same as false representation of amount of debt and does not cause concrete harm); May v. Consumer Adjustment Co., 2017 WL 227964 (E.D. Mo. Jan. 19, 2017) (failure to state that interest was accruing did not cause harm to this plaintiff, who called collector and got explanation of why amount due was changing, so she does not have standing).

1702 Rivera v. Dove Investment Corp., 2020 WL 6366054 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 23, 2020) (consumer has standing where collector sent him discovery in aid of execution based on collection suit that had been dismissed ten years earlier, causing him emotional distress); Sykes v. Veripro Solutions, Inc., 2020 WL 4926547 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 21, 2020) (finding standing where consumer alleged that collection letter misinformed him about character of debt, whether there was enforceable lien on his property, and whether debt could be legally reported to credit agencies, and that as a result he was harassed, aggravated, concerned, and intimidated, and retained counsel).
See § 11.15.4, supra.

1704 See, e.g., Smith v. GC Services L.P., ___ F.3d ___, 2021 WL 210948 (7th Cir. Jan. 21, 2021) (confusion insufficient unless it leads debtor to take some detrimental step).

1705 See, e.g., Perez v. McCreary, Veselka, Bragg & Allen, P.C., 2021 WL 3639801 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; confusion is sufficient basis for Art. III standing); Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 265 F. Supp. 3d 731 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (allegation that consumers were deceived and misled is sufficient; earlier decision notes that one of claims is that letters deceptively conveyed impression of attorney involvement); Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (letter misrepresenting attorney's involvement; allegation of confusion is sufficient). See generally § 11.15.4.3, supra.

1706 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1707 See, e.g., Dichm v. Messerli & Kramer, P.A., 426 F. Supp. 3d 578 (W.D. Wis. 2019) (finding standing at summary judgment stage where debtor submitted evidence that she would have disputed claim but for her belief that collection attorney had reviewed it; fact that she does not identify any substantive defenses does not negate standing). But cf. Rossi v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 2020 WL 2527176 (W.D. Wis. May 18, 2020) (rejecting argument that attorney's signature on complaint led her to infer that attorney had investigated it significantly and substantially, which deterred her from contesting it; concluding on summary judgment that real reason that she failed to contest it was not this unreasonable inference, but because she knew she owed debt). See generally TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2213 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (citing fact that plaintiffs did not show that they "would have tried to correct their credit files . . . had they been sent the information in the proper format" in support of conclusion that they lacked standing); § 11.15.3.4, supra (decisions regarding standing where FDCPA violation caused plaintiff to forgo or delay some action).

cases involving deceptive communications.[1708] However, cases should rely on emotional distress to establish standing only where the plaintiff's distress was significant and the communication was of a nature that would cause many people to feel distress.

If the deceptive statement reached third parties and reflects negatively on the debtor, Ramirez makes it particularly clear that the consumer has suffered a concrete harm. This issue is discussed in § 11.15.5.2, supra, and § 11.15.9, infra.

11.15.5 Article III Standing for FDCPA § 1692g Claims

11.15.5.1 Generally

FDCPA § 1692g gives consumers the right to identifying information about the debt and the debt collector at the beginning of a debt collector's work:

- The amount of the debt;[1709] and
- The name of the current creditor.[1710]

The section 1692g notice also gives the consumer the right to request additional information and access to an informal dispute resolution mechanism by requiring that the notice contain:

- A statement that the consumer has the right to dispute the debt orally or by letter within thirty days, and that the debt collector will assume the debt is valid if it is not disputed;[1711]
- A statement that if the consumer disputes the debt, or requests verification of the debt or the name of the original creditor in writing within thirty days, the debt collector will provide that verification[1712] or the name of the original creditor.[1713]

By clear implication and necessity, the debt collector must also identify itself and provide its contact information in these initial communications.[1714]

In addition to these disclosures, FDCPA § 1692g requires collectors to take specific actions if the consumer exercises the right to dispute the debt or requests the name and address of the original creditor. It also requires a thirty-day pause in collection activity until the collector obtains verification of the debt, or the original creditor's name and address, and mails the information to the consumer.[1715]

This section discusses Article III standing after Spokeo for claims under FDCPA § 1692g. In general, the Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez[1716] is likely to make litigation of violations of FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements in federal court more difficult unless the consumer can allege and prove "downstream consequences" resulting from the violation. Claims based on the collector's failure to comply with its substantive duties under FDCPA § 1692g may fare better, but practitioners should select cases carefully to make sure that it is clear that the violation harmed the consumer.

Advocates should also refer to the general discussion in § 11.15.5.3, supra, of standing to assert claims for violation of the related requirement in FDCPA § 1692e(11) to disclose the debt collector's identity as a debt collector and the debt collection purpose of a communication.

11.15.5.2 Whether Violations of FDCPA § 1692g's Disclosure Requirements Cause Concrete Harm

11.15.5.2.1 The purposes behind FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements

The rights and obligations established by FDCPA § 1692g were considered by the Senate at the time of passage to be a "significant feature" of the Act.[1717] "This provision [FDCPA § 1692g] will eliminate the recurring problem of collectors dunning the wrong person or attempting to collect debts which the consumer has already paid."[1718] Congress enacted section 1692g to protect debtors' concrete interest in avoiding abusive debt collection practices.[1719]

The problems originally addressed by Congress in FDCPA § 1692g have widened, and its importance has increased over the years. The last few decades have seen the rise of the debt buying industry, which often collects debt with incomplete and sometimes erroneous data.[1720] The rise of the Internet has also introduced massive thefts of individuals' personal financial information from corporate computers and the subsequent sale of that data to identity theft networks as well as scammers who use the data to impersonate legitimate debt collectors.[1721]

The initial FDCPA § 1692g disclosures help consumers determine whether a debt collector is legitimate, whether the debt is the consumer's, and whether the debt is for the correct amount. For example, if the consumer has never heard of the creditor or does not recognize the amount of the debt, this may raise red flags that the debt collector's claim is mistaken or even fraudulent. The disclosures required by FDCPA § 1692g also inform consumers of their verification rights so that they

1708 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.
1709 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(1).
1710 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(2). See § 9.3.5, supra. Section 1692e(11) also requires an initial disclosure to consumers that the debt collector is collecting a debt and any information obtained will be used be used to collect the debt. See §§ 7.2.11, 11.15.4.8, supra.
1711 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(3).
1712 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(4).
1713 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(a)(5).
1714 See § 9.3.5, supra.
1715 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(b).
1716 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).
1717 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696.
1718 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696.
1719 Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75, 81 (2d Cir. 2018); Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747, 757–758 (6th Cir. 2018).
1720 See § 1.3.4, supra.
1721 See National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting Ch. 9 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

can inquire further about the identity of the original creditor, the amount of the debt, etc. Unfortunately, disclosures are often inadequate, not sent, or sent to the wrong address.

11.15.5.2.2 Article III standing for violation of FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements prior to Ramirez

Prior to the Supreme Court's decision in Ramirez, a number of courts held that a violation of the disclosure requirements of FDCPA § 1692g was a concrete injury. Stressing the risk of harm caused by depriving the plaintiff of information that might have helped him defend a foreclosure proceeding, the Second Circuit held that FDCPA § 1692g protects concrete interests, so an alleged violation satisfied the injury-in-fact requirement.[1722] The Sixth Circuit held that a debtor had Article III standing to assert a claim that a validation notice violated the FDCPA because it failed to state that the creditor was obligated to provide additional information about the creditor and the debt only if the debtor disputed the debt in writing.[1723] The court treated this as a procedural violation, but held that it was one that created a risk of real harm to a concrete interest, so the plaintiff did not need to allege any additional harm beyond the one Congress had identified. An unpublished Eleventh Circuit decision, giving weight to Congress's judgment, held that failure to give the FDCPA § 1692g notice was in itself a concrete harm.[1724]

Many lower courts similarly found Article III standing where the consumer alleged that the collector failed to:

- Give the consumer the FDCPA § 1692g notice;[1725]
- Disclose the amount of the debt, in violation of FDCPA § 1692g(a)(1);[1726]
- Identify the current creditor, in violation of FDCPA § 1692g(a)(2);[1727]

1722 Cohen v. Rosicki, Rosicki & Assoc., 897 F.3d 75 (2d Cir. 2018). Accord Papetti v. Does 1–25, 691 Fed. Appx. 24 (2d Cir. 2017) ("[s]ection 1692g furthers [the FDCPA's] purpose by requiring a debt collector who solicits payment from a consumer to provide that consumer with 'a detailed validation notice,' which allows a consumer to confirm that he owes the debt sought by the collector before paying it; [T]he FDCPA violations alleged by Papetti, taken as true, 'entail the concrete injury necessary for standing'"); Zirogiannis v. Seterus, Inc., 707 Fed. Appx. 724 (2d Cir. 2017) (failure to give debtor § 1692g notice that adequately specifies amount of debt is concrete injury).

1723 Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747 (6th Cir. 2018).

1724 Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., 654 Fed. Appx. 990 (11th Cir. 2016) ("Church did not receive information to which she alleges she was entitled. While this injury may not have resulted in tangible economic or physical harm that courts often expect, the Supreme Court has made clear an injury need not be tangible to be concrete. See Spokeo, Inc., 578 U.S. at ___, 136 S. Ct. at 1549; Havens Realty Corp., 455 U.S. at 373. Rather, this injury is one that Congress has elevated to the status of a legally cognizable injury through the FDCPA. Accordingly, Church has sufficiently alleged that she suffered a concrete injury, and thus, satisfies the injury-in-fact requirement.").

1725 Lavallee v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 932 F.3d 1049 (7th Cir. 2019); Church v. Accretive Health, Inc., 654 Fed. Appx. 990 (11th Cir. 2016) (failure to give all required disclosures is concrete harm); Ngo v. NPAS, Inc., 2021 WL 149121, at *4 (E.D. La. Jan. 15, 2021); Somerset v. Stephen Einstein & Assoc., 351 F. Supp. 3d 201, 207 (E.D.N.Y. 2019); Cohen v. Ditech Fin., L.L.C., 342 F. Supp. 3d 460 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 21, 2018) (finding standing for claim that mortgage field service company's door hanger notice failed to include the disclosures required by § 1692g, but dismissing claim on merits); Stinson v. Nat'l Credit Systems Inc., 2018 WL 3954764, at *6 n.6 (N.D. Ga. June 26, 2018); Geary v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2608691 (S.D. Ohio June 16, 2017) (finding standing to assert claim that initial communication did not contain § 1692g disclosures, which "go to the heart of the FDCPA"; noting that these plaintiffs would have disputed the debt, and did so once they received the § 1692g disclosures). But see Wadsworth v. Kross, Lieberman & Stone, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3877930 (7th Cir. Aug. 31, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding no standing for claim of failure to give § 1692g notice within five days of first contact where debtor did not show that this impaired her ability to use information for substantive purpose that statute envisioned); Cheatham v. Adams, 2021 WL 4313961 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 22, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; dismissing claim where plaintiff did not allege any downstream consequences from collector's failure to give section 1692g notice; stressing that consumer had gotten the required information in other ways). But cf. Dennin v. Waypoint Resource Group, L.L.C., 2020 WL 6205836 (C.D. Ill. Oct. 22, 2020) (consumer who already knew about and exercised his validation rights lacks standing for claim that validation notice was sent to wrong address, as he suffered no harm or risk of harm).

1726 Zirogiannis v. Seterus, Inc., 707 Fed. Appx. 724 (2d Cir. 2017) (violation of requirement to give debtor a notice that adequately specifies the amount of the debt is a concrete injury; violation creates material risk that debtor will fall victim to the abusive debt collection practices that Congress passed the FDCPA to prevent); Beane v. RPW Legal Services, P.L.L.C., 378 F. Supp. 3d 948 (W.D. Wash. 2019) (finding standing; collector's uncertain and varying statements about the amount of the debt likely had negative impact on debtor's ability to dispute it or make an intelligent decision on whether to settle it); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (failure to state current amount of the debt, including interest, created risk that consumer would pay wrong amount), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Balke v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 2634653 (E.D.N.Y. June 19, 2016) (no need to plead facts showing an injury beyond the statutory violation itself). But see Martinez v. Aargon Agency, Inc., 2018 WL 4355162 (D. Nev. Sept. 12, 2018) (mixing merits of the FDCPA claim in with standing; holding that debtor lacks standing because collection letter's statement of amount owed was accurate).

1727 Hargis v. Equinox Collection Services, Inc., 2019 WL 2341662 (N.D. Okla. June 3, 2019) (consumer has standing even if he did not experience confusion about the creditor's identity); Ferris v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 2018 WL 701285 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 31, 2018) (misstatement about identity of current creditor creates risk that consumer will be deceived into paying debt he does not know or wishes to dispute); Huyghue v. Shafritz & Assoc., 2018 WL 7457827 (M.D. Fla. Apr. 12, 2018); Degrasse v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2018 WL 2214651 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 5, 2018) (finding standing but denying claim on the merits); Peña v. IQ Data Int'l Inc., 2017 WL 11591837 (D. Ariz. 2017); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412, at *9 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (failure to disclose current creditor created risk that consumer would pay someone who did not legitimately own the debt), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Long v. Fenton & McGarvey Law Firm P.S.C., 223 F. Supp. 3d 773 (S.D. Ind. 2016); Janetos v. Fulton Friedman & Gullace, L.L.P., 2016 WL 9446140 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 21, 2016) (denial of statutorily-required information, here disclosure of name of creditor, is concrete harm as a matter of law). See also Heisler v. Convergent Healthcare Recoveries, Inc., 2020 WL 1249481 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 16, 2020) (where alleged injury is deprivation of substantive information, must still allege actual injury, but opening letter, reading parts of it, and being left unsure as to whom to pay and to whom this

- Make the required disclosures accurately, clearly, and without omissions;[1728] or
- State accurately the steps the consumer must take to dispute the debt, such as whether the dispute must be in writing.[1729]

However, in 2019, in Casillas v. Madison Avenue Assoc., Inc.,[1730] the Seventh Circuit held that violation of an FDCPA disclosure requirement—the failure to specify that a section 1692g dispute must be in writing in order to trigger the collector's duties—did not create standing in and of itself. The court relied heavily on a non-FDCPA decision[1731] in which it held that a plaintiff cannot satisfy the injury-in-fact element of standing simply by alleging that the defendant violated a disclosure provision of a consumer protection statute. It further concluded that the plaintiff had not alleged any other concrete harm. The plaintiff had not alleged that she read the disclosure, had tried to dispute the debt, had even considered contacting the collector, or had any doubt about whether she owed the debt. Even though the notice might create a materially greater risk that an unsophisticated consumer would fall victim to abusive debt collection practices, it did not create such a risk for her, so the court concluded that she lacked standing. The Casillas opinion was written by Justice Barrett when she was on the Seventh Circuit, and the Supreme Court cites it with approval three times in Ramirez.[1732]

Two years later, in Smith v. GC Services L.P.,[1733] the Seventh Circuit held more broadly that a that a consumer did not have standing to bring suit regarding a confusing FDCPA § 1692g notice unless the notice's lack of clarity led her to take a detrimental step, such as paying money she did not owe. The consumer had alleged that the notice failed to specify what must be in writing.

In addition, the Eleventh Circuit held, in an unpublished decision, that a debtor did not have standing to litigate a claim regarding a letter that overshadowed the validation notice in an earlier letter.[1734] The court relied on the fact that the debtor had not alleged any harm other than confusion.

---

debt related is sufficient); Bell v. Adler Wallach & Assoc., Inc., 2016 WL 11583377 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 15, 2016) (finding standing, but without discussing this particular claim).

Note that the Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin district court decisions cited in this note predate Smith v. GC Services L.P., ___ F.3d ___, 2021 WL 210948 (7th Cir. Jan. 21, 2021), and so do not take it into account.

1728 Rhee v. Client Services, Inc., 2020 WL 4188161 (D.N.J. July 21, 2020) (finding standing to assert claim that validation notice was overshadowed); Oloko v. Receivable Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2019 WL 3889587 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 19, 2019) (claim that collection letter sent during 30-day validation period, demanding immediate payment, overshadowed validation notice involves inaccurate information; plaintiff has standing); Untershine v. Encore Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 2019 WL 3766564, at *3 (E.D. Wis. Aug. 9, 2019) (finding standing where collection letter allegedly overshadowed validation notice by inviting consumer to call if payment had already been made); Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 265 F. Supp. 3d 731 (E.D. Mich. 2017) (holding that consumer has standing to assert several claims, one of which alleged that debt collection letters contained material that overshadowed dispute rights); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (finding standing in case alleging overshadowing and failure to disclose that dispute must be in writing), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Matute v. A.A. Action Collection Co., 2017 WL 2573714 (D.N.J. June 13, 2017) (finding standing where plaintiff alleged that defendant mailed collection letters that did not comply with § 1692g); Reed v. Receivable Recovery Services, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1399597 (E.D. La. Apr. 19, 2017) (finding standing; claims include failure to make disclosures required by § 1692g), aff'd, 706 Fed. Appx. 239 (5th Cir. 2017); Allah-Mensah v. Law Office of Patrick M. Connelly, P.C., 2016 WL 6803775 (D. Md. Nov. 17, 2016) (misstatement of § 1692g rights—here, the extent to which debt will be assumed valid if consumer does not contest it—is concrete, especially in the context of this letter, which stresses the negative consequences such as garnishment that flow from a valid debt; noting at *8 that this violation "presents a material risk that the consumer would be misled into believing that the consumer has no right to challenge the debt after thirty days"); Lane v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3671467 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2016) (consumer has standing to assert claim that other material in collection letter overshadowed validation notice); Balke v. Alliance One Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 2017 WL 2634653 (E.D.N.Y. June 19, 2016) (no need to plead facts showing an injury beyond the statutory violation itself, here overshadowing of notice of right to dispute the debt).

Note that the Illinois and Wisconsin district court decisions cited in this note predate Smith v. GC Services L.P., ___ F.3d ___, 2021 WL 210948 (7th Cir. Jan. 21, 2021), so do not take it into account.

1729 Macy v. GC Services L.P., 897 F.3d 747 (6th Cir. 2018) (finding standing; failure of § 1692g notice to specify that dispute must be in writing creates risk of unintentional waiver of FDCPA's debt validation rights); Hackler v. Tolteca Enters., Inc., 2019 WL 7759523, at *2 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 9, 2019); Hargis v. Equinox Collection Services, Inc., 2019 WL 2341662 (N.D. Okla. June 3, 2019) (right to dispute a debt is the most fundamental of those set forth in § 1692g(a); failure to provide accurate information about how to do so creates risk that consumers will forgo disputing the debt and lose important protections); Kausar v. G.C. Services L.P., 2017 WL 5175596 (D.N.J. Nov. 8, 2017); Byrne v. Oregon One, Inc., 2017 WL 3568412 (D. Or. July 18, 2017) (failure to disclose that dispute must be in writing created risk that consumer would dispute debt by phone, which would not trigger collector's statutory duties to verify debt and cease collection), adopted, 2017 WL 3568398 (D. Or. Aug. 16, 2017); Schweer v. HOVG, L.L.C., 2017 WL 2906504 (M.D. Pa. July 7, 2017) (letter advised consumer to call to dispute the debt, overshadowing the § 1692g notice); Jones v. Advanced Bur. of Collections, L.L.P., 317 F.R.D. 284, 289 n.2 (M.D. Ga. 2016) (finding standing for claim that § 1692g notice failed to indicate that request for verification must be in writing); Dickens v. GC Services L.P., 2016 WL 3917530 (M.D. Fla. July 20, 2016) (failure to state that dispute must be in writing to trigger collector's duty to verify debt), later op. after remand, 336 F. Supp. 3d 1369 (M.D. Fla. 2018) (reiterating conclusion that debtor has standing). See also Kimble v. W. Ray Jamieson, P.C., 2018 WL 814225 (W.D. Tenn. Feb. 9, 2018) (failure to specify that dispute must be in writing in order to trigger collector's duty of verification, as required by § 1692g(a)(4), creates material risk of harm, so plaintiff has standing, but collector's allegedly false statement that dispute must be in writing to prevent collector from assuming that debt is valid does not cause concrete injury where collector will honor written or oral disputes).

1730 926 F.3d 329 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.).

1731 Groshek v. Time Warner Cable, Inc., 865 F.3d 884 (7th Cir. 2017).

1732 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2203, 2205, 2214 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1733 ___ F.3d ___, 2021 WL 210948 (7th Cir. Jan. 21, 2021). Accord Markakos v. Medicredit, Inc., 997 F.3d 778 (7th Cir. 2021) (confusion and aggravation because § 1692g notices letters stated inconsistent amounts due is not concrete harm).

1734 Cooper v. Atlantic Credit & Fin. Inc., 822 Fed. Appx. 951 (11th Cir. 2020).

A number of lower courts likewise held, prior to Ramirez, that consumers did not have standing to raise claims regarding FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirement unless they could show some concrete harm beyond the non-disclosure or misleading disclosure itself.[1735]

11.15.5.2.3 Article III standing for violation of FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements after Ramirez

The Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez[1736] appears to reject some of the theories on which decisions relied to find Article III standing for violation of FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements. First, although it appears to be dicta since the Court held that there was insufficient proof of a risk of harm in the first place, the majority opinion states that a risk of harm can be a basis for standing only for a suit seeking prospective relief such as an injunction.[1737] Second, it rejects the theory that a violation of a format requirement for a disclosure can be a concrete injury in and of itself: some "downstream consequences" must be alleged and proven.[1738] It also suggests that a denial of information is a concrete injury only if it is required by a sunshine law.[1739] In addition, Ramirez throws the role of Congress into doubt. While the decision states that courts "must give due respect" to Congress's judgment, it goes on to disregard Congress's creation of rights under the FCRA and a cause of action to enforce them.[1740] The opinion gives far greater weight to whether the harm alleged bears a close relationship to a harm made actionable under common law.

Ramirez is particularly significant for cases involving violation of FDCPA § 1692g's disclosure requirements because it cites the Seventh Circuit's 2019 decision in in Casillas v. Madison Avenue Assoc., Inc.[1741] three times with approval. Courts may view this as an implicit adoption of Casillas' holding that a federal court has Article III jurisdiction over a claimed violation of a FDCPA § 1692g disclosure requirement only if the violation caused the plaintiff some particular harm beyond the violation itself.[1742] However, as discussed in 1735 See, e.g., Cooper v. Atlantic Credit & Fin. Inc., 822 Fed. Appx. 951 (11th Cir. 2020) (confusion caused by letter that contradicted and overshadowed validation notice is insufficient without any allegation of possible financial or legal consequences); Sevela v. Kozeny & McCubbin, L.C., 2020 WL 469970 (D. Neb. Jan. 28, 2020) (no standing for claim that § 1692g notice was unclear about who would assume debt to be valid; plaintiff did not plead any particular harm or risk of harm); Pozzuolo v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 371 F. Supp. 3d 217 (E.D. Pa. 2019) (plaintiff did not suffer concrete harm from letter that wrongly stated that he could dispute debt by calling collector, where he merely scanned over letter before forwarding it to counsel, neither wrote nor called collector, and did not dispute debt and had no reason to do so, as he acknowledges debt and amount); Gause v. Med. Bus. Consultants, Inc., 424 F. Supp. 3d 1175 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 12, 2019) (denying standing to bring overshadowing claim where debtor did not allege that debt was incorrect or that he intended to dispute it or request verification, or would have done so but for errors in the notice); Johnson v. Wetsch Abbott Osborn Van Vliet P.L.C., 2019 WL 7666751 (S.D. Iowa Mar. 21, 2019) (§ 1692g notice's slightly inconsistent timelines, creating minor uncertainty about how cure period related to validation period, did not cause concrete harm); Walker v. Lamb, 2019 WL 542328, at *3–5 (W.D. Ark. Feb. 11, 2019) (no standing where plaintiff's response to motion to dismiss asserted that she suffered confusion and stress, but she had not pleaded any harm in her complaint other than informational injury); Tyler v. Timothy E. Baxter & Assoc., 2018 WL 5078373 (E.D. Mich. Oct. 18, 2018) (no standing where collection letter left name of creditor blank, but collector sent corrected letter 19 days later, and plaintiff alleged no confusion, anxiety, risk of overpayment, or other harm); Adams v. Universal Fid., L.P., 2018 WL 4030639 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 23, 2018) (consumer who admits she knows origin of debt does not have standing to bring claim about collector's failure to identify current creditor); Sebestyen v. Leikin, Ingber & Winters, P.C., 2018 WL 3036342 (E.D. Mich. June 19, 2018) (finding no standing where plaintiff did not allege that minor deviation from language required by § 1692g confused her, caused her anxiety, or created any other concrete or imminent injury); Jackson v. Abendroth & Russell, P.C., 2017 F. Supp. 3d 945 (S.D. Iowa 2016) (finding no standing for including language that overshadowed the § 1692g notice and failing to disclose the means of requesting verification of original creditor's identity, where plaintiff conceded that the creditor identified in the notice was correct and he was not planning to dispute the debt); Abercrombie v. Rogers, Carter, & Payne, 2016 WL 8201965 (W.D. La. Nov. 22, 2016) (misstatement about whether writing is required to dispute debt, and about extent to which debt will be presumed valid if debtor does not dispute it, is procedural right, designed to buttress substantive right to be free from debt collection abuse, so plaintiff must allege additional facts showing that errors materially threatened his ability to contest erroneous debt; no standing where he did not contest debt or intend to dispute it), adopted, 2017 WL 489426 (W.D. La. Feb. 6, 2017); Perry v. Columbia Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6094821 (W.D. Wash. Oct. 19, 2016) (misstatement of deadline in § 1692g notice did not cause concrete harm where plaintiff did not allege that he was confused, that debt was incorrect, or that he intended to dispute it; denial of information is not concrete harm in itself). See also Beane v. RPW Legal Services, P.L.L.C., 378 F. Supp. 3d 948 (W.D. Wash. 2019) (consumer did not have standing for claim that validation notice was sent 27 days rather than five days after the initial contact or for overshadowing claim, where these violations did not appear to have prejudiced the consumer or impeded purpose of validation notice to avoid collection attempts against wrong person or for sums not owed); Yeager v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 237 F. Supp. 3d 1211 (M.D. Ala. 2017) (holding that failure to include § 1692g disclosures in initial letter does not entail degree of risk sufficient to establish concreteness where collector provided information thirteen days later, but noting in footnote that longer delay would present different question). See also Garrett v. Fin. Bus. & Consumer Solutions, Inc., 2021 WL 3726199, at *2–3 (D. Colo. Aug. 23, 2021) (mag.; post-Ramirez decision; denying standing over § 1692 claim on ground that rights it confers are procedural and particular plaintiff alleged no cognizable harm).

1736 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1737 See § 11.15.2.2.6, supra.

1738 See § 11.15.2.2.7, supra.

1739 See § 11.15.2.2.7, 11.15.5.1, supra.

1740 See Neal v. Adams, 2021 WL 4466392 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 29, 2021) (concluding that, after Ramirez, Congress's creation of a private cause of action for failure to send validation notice is insufficient to establish standing). See generally § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1741 926 F.3d 329 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.).

1742 See, e.g., Cheatham v. Adams, 2021 WL 4313961 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 22, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; citing Casillas's emphasis on debtor's failure to allege that he would have used the § 1641g information if it had been provided); Kale v. Procollect, Inc., 2021 WL 2784556 (W.D. Tenn. July 2, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; risk of harm due to failure to state amount of debt, in violation of § 1692g, is not concrete injury; decision does not address any other grounds for standing); Garrett v. Fin. Bus. & Consumer Solutions, Inc., 2021 WL 3726199, at *2–3 (D. Colo. Aug. 23, 2021) (mag.; post-Ramirez decision; denying standing

§ 11.15.2.2.7, supra, while some of Ramirez 's statements are broad, the Court was only addressing a violation that the Court has characterized as procedural, and Casillas decision carefully distinguishes cases involving an obligation to provide substantive information.

It may be possible to show "downstream" harm in some FDCPA § 1692g disclosure cases. For example, if the required notice was omitted altogether, a consumer who would have read the notice and would have exercised the right to dispute the debt may have standing, because loss of the thirty-day pause in collection activity that would have resulted is clearly a substantive right.[1743] A Seventh Circuit decision cited favorably by the Supreme Court in Ramirez holds that the lost opportunity to obtain a benefit because of the defendant's failure to provide information is a concrete injury,[1744] and the pause is certainly a benefit.

A post-Ramirez decision holds that a consumer suffered concrete harm when she paid for a postage stamp to mail a dispute letter because of the collector's misleading statement about whether disputes could be oral.[1745] Standing might also be found if the collector provided the notice, but it was so defective that it actually misled the consumer, as there is some support for the view that confusion or misunderstanding is a concrete harm.[1746] However, an argument that Article III is satisfied because a disclosure confused the consumer should be reserved only for cases where the disclosure is about a topic that would strike an ordinary person as important, it is objectively confusing, and the consumer can convincingly describe the confusion it caused. The case for standing will be stronger if the consumer acted or failed to act because of the confusion the notice caused. Format violations, unless extreme, are unlikely to be sufficient.

Section 11.15.3.4, supra, lists many other kinds of harm that may be caused by false information or nondisclosure, with citations to decisions holding that these harms are concrete.

11.15.5.3 Whether a Collector's Failure to Perform its Duties upon Receipt of a Dispute is Concrete Harm

FDCPA § 1692g requires collectors not only to make various disclosures to consumers, but also to perform affirmative duties upon receipt of a dispute. After the consumer submits a written dispute or request for the name and address of the original creditor, the collector must comply with the request, and must cease collection until it does so.[1747] Prior to Ramirez, a number of decisions held that a consumer suffered concrete harm if the collector failed to perform these duties.[1748]

Ramirez does not appear to undercut these decisions. Continued collection activities may result in monetary harm due to wage garnishment, seizure of other assets, or payment by the consumer.[1749] Collection activities are almost certain to amount to invasion of privacy, and are very likely to cause anxiety and emotional distress. As discussed elsewhere in this section,[1750] these harms are also likely to be considered concrete after Ramirez.

In the first Circuit-level decision on this question since Ramirez, Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc.,[1751] the Tenth Circuit held that, because of the close relationship to the common law tort of intrusion upon seclusion, a consumer had Article III standing to litigate a claim that a collector violated FDCPA § 1692g by leaving a voicemail message for a consumer after she had disputed the debt and asked that collection contacts cease. The over § 1692 claim on ground that rights it confers are procedural and particular plaintiff alleged no cognizable harm).

1743 Thome v. Sayer Law Group, 2021 WL 4690829 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 7, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; harms made actionable by misrepresentation torts stem from inequity of knowledge; finding standing where plaintiff would have disputed debt but for § 1692g notice's statement that she had only 14 days to pay the balance); Lane v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 2016 WL 3671467, at *4 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 2016) (pointing out that denial of § 1692g rights deprives debtor not only of information, but also of the ability to force a thirty-day cessation of collection activity: "[U]nder the FDCPA, the right to information is not merely an end unto itself, but it actually permits the debtor to trigger (by disputing the debt in writing) a moratorium on collection efforts until the verification information is mailed to the debtor. This further demonstrates the concreteness of the injury arising from a § 1692g violation. . . . The concrete harm, then, is the loss of the right to verification, which is enough to satisfy the concreteness requirement of Article III standing."). See also Ghanta v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 1423597, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 8, 2017) (collector harmed consumer by reinitiating collection activity before mailing him a proper response to his dispute). But cf. Cheatham v. Adams, 2021 WL 4313961 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 22, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; loss of opportunity to dispute debt and obtain pause in collection activity not concrete injury where complaint did not allege that debtor would have exercised these rights); Neal v. Adams, 2021 WL 4466392 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 29, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; failure to send validation notice caused no concrete harm where plaintiff already knew the information it would have disclosed). See generally TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2213 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (citing fact that plaintiffs did not show that they "would have tried to correct their credit files . . . had they been sent the information in the proper format" in support of conclusion that they lacked standing).

1744 Casillas v. Madison Ave. Assoc., Inc., 926 F.3d 329, 334 (7th Cir. 2019) (Barrett, J.).

1745 Foley v. Mary Washington Healthcare Services, Inc., 2021 WL 3193177 (E.D. Va. July 28, 2021).

1746 See §§ 11.15.3.4, 11.15.5.4, supra.

1747 15 U.S.C. § 1692g(b).

1748 Budewitz v. Daubert Law Firm, S.C., 2020 WL 5775428 (W.D. Wis. Sept. 28, 2020) (finding standing where collector garnished consumer's wages within less than 30 days after she disputed debt and before sending verification to her); Livingstone v. Haddon Point Manager, L.L.C., 2020 WL 902218 (D.N.J. Feb. 25, 2020) (failure to suspend collection activity until verification of debt is sent); Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017); Ghanta v. Immediate Credit Recovery, Inc., 2017 WL 1423597, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 8, 2017) (collector's failure to deliver verification of debt by mail, and its re-initiation of collection activities without doing so, is concrete harm); Bartl v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 2017 WL 1740152 (D. Minn. May 3, 2017).

1749 See TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (monetary harm is concrete injury).

1750 See § 11.15.3.4, supra (emotional distress), §§ 11.15.7, 11.15.8, infra (privacy).

1751 ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3627103 (10th Cir. Aug. 17, 2021) (finding standing for claims under §§ 1692g and 1692c(c)).

court stressed that, whether or not this contact intruded to the degree required by common law, it was the same kind of harm recognized at common law—intrusion into a plaintiff's peace and quiet. As additional support for its conclusion that the plaintiff's claim satisfied Article III, the court cited Congress's judgment that unwanted debt collection contacts were abusive and enacted the FDCPA to protect against them.

If the violation is failure to provide the requested verification of the debt, it may also be worth exploring whether this violation has a close relationship to a suit for an accounting, an action long recognized in English and United States courts.

11.15.6 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Unwanted, Inconvenient, or Repeated Calls or Other Contacts with Debtor

The FDCPA places four restrictions on contacts with consumers at inconvenient times or places.[1752] Section 1692c(a)(1) prohibits debt collector calls at times and places that are inconvenient for the consumer. Section 1692c(a)(3) prohibits debt collector calls to consumers at their workplaces if such calls are prohibited. Section 1692c(c) allows the consumer to stop most future debt collector phone calls and letters altogether. And section 1692d(5) prohibits repeated calls with the intent to annoy or abuse any person. These four FDCPA provisions combine to protect the consumer's individual privacy and personal relationships. Consumers often complain to the CFPB about violations of these provisions.[1753]

A consumer who suffers a violation of one of these four provisions might experience specific harms, such as mental distress, sleeplessness, or anxiety, that would constitute injury in fact.[1754] Annoyance, waste of time, and embarrassment may also be concrete injuries that may result from these violations.[1755] Some of these violations also create a risk of tangible injuries such as loss of a job.

Where the injury is intangible, one of the approaches Spokeo approves to establish that the injury is concrete is to show that it "has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts."[1756] This standard is readily met by these four restrictions on contact with the debtor.[1757] The harm they address is closely analogous to that made actionable by the branch of the common law tort of invasion of privacy that protects against intrusion upon seclusion.[1758] The "core" of the privacy right to seclusion "is the offensive prying into the private domain of another . . . [such as] persistent and unwanted telephone calls."[1759] A violation of FDCPA §§ 1692c(a)(1), 1692c(a)(3), 1692c(c), or 1692d(5) is an intrusion into the consumer's right to seclusion at night, at work, or at home.

The Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez should remove all doubt that intrusion upon seclusion is a concrete harm that satisfies Article III. The Court stated: "Various intangible harms can also be concrete. Chief among them are injuries with a close relationship to harms traditionally recognized as providing a basis for lawsuits in American courts. Those include, for example, reputational harms, disclosure of private information, and intrusion upon seclusion."[1760] To illustrate its point that intrusion on seclusion is a concrete injury, the Court cited Gadelhak v. AT&T Services, Inc.,[1761] a TCPA decision written by Justice Barrett when she was on the Seventh Circuit that holds that five unwanted text messages amounted to a concrete injury. A wealth of other decisions under the Telephone Consumer Protection Act similarly hold that receipt of unwanted calls is closely related to the harm made actionable by the common law claim of intrusion upon seclusion, so amounts to concrete harm.[1762]

The Court's explicit approval of Gadelhak should also suffice to rebut any defense argument that the court lacks standing because the elements of the plaintiff's FDCPA claim do not exactly match the elements of the common law claim.[1763] Gadelhak holds:

> A few unwanted automated text messages may be too minor an annoyance to be actionable at common law. But such

---

1752 See §§ 5.4, 6.7, supra.

1753 See Consumer Fin. Protection Bur., Annual Report on the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act 18–20 (Mar. 2016).

754 See §§ 2.6, 11.15.3.4, supra.

755 See, e.g., Swike v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 2017 WL 4099307 (S.D. Ind. Sept. 15, 2017) (recognizing waste of time and annoyance as concrete injury; debtor invoked her rights under § 1692c(c), yet collector persisted in calls and letters). See generally § 11.15.3.4, supra (types of harm that FDCPA violations may cause).

'56 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

'57 See, e.g., Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc., 8 F.4th 1184 (10th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; citing both Congress's judgment and analogy to intrusion upon seclusion; finding standing where collector called plaintiff and left voicemail message after she disputed debt and asked that contacts cease); Schultz v. Southwest Credit Sys., L.P., 2017 WL 11457912, at *6 (N.D. Iowa Oct. 13, 2017) (receipt of letter after instructing collection to cease communication is injury; citing both Congress's judgment and analogy to common law invasion of privacy claim).

1758 See § 11.15.8 (tort of invasion of privacy as analog to other FDCPA claims), § 15.3.2 (nature of this tort), infra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.2.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (harm caused by unwanted calls and texts is analogous to that made actionable by tort of invasion of privacy, so consumer has standing to bring Telephone Consumer Protection Act claim).

1759 Lovgren v. Citizens First Nat'l Bank of Princeton, 534 N.E.2d 987, 989 (Ill. 1989) (citing Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652B, comments a, b, at 378–379 (1977); W. Prosser & W. Keeton, Torts § 117, at 854–856 (5th ed. 1984)).

1760 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1761 950 F.3d 458 (7th Cir. 2020).

1762 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.2.2.3 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1763 See National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (more detailed discussion of this issue); Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652 (setting forth elements), §§ 652F, 652G (privileges) (1977) (elements of common law claim for intrusion upon seclusion); § 15.3.2, infra (discussing common law claim for intrusion upon seclusion).

> texts nevertheless pose the same kind of harm that common law courts recognize—a concrete harm that Congress has chosen to make legally cognizable.[1764]

Ramirez confirms that while the federal claim must include the "fundamental requirements" of the analogous common law tort, Article III "does not require an exact duplicate in American history and tradition."[1765]

The fact that the right to privacy is protected under the Constitution[1766] can buttress the claim that consumers have Article III standing to litigate claims involving unwanted debt collection contacts. The Supreme Court's decision in Ramirez points out that "harms specified by the Constitution" are one of the types of intangible harms that can be concrete.[1767]

Spokeo also summarized a second way that an intangible injury may meet the requirement of concreteness: Congress may "elevat[e] to the status of legally cognizable injuries concrete, de facto injuries that were previously inadequate in law."[1768] Congress "has the power to define injuries and articulate chains of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy where none existed before."[1769] While the Court's 2021 decision in Ramirez[1770] throws the role of Congress into some uncertainty, it is still worthwhile to stress Congress's judgment that a violation of these provisions is an actionable harm. Congress enacted FDCPA §§ 1692c(a)(1), 1692c(a)(3), 1692c(c), and 1692d(5) for the purpose of protecting consumers' privacy and relationships. Congress expressly stated in FDCPA § 1692 its findings and declaration of purpose that "(a) . . . Abusive debt collection practices contribute . . . to the loss of jobs, and to the invasions of individual privacy . . . [and] . . . (b) Existing laws and procedures for redressing these injuries are inadequate."[1771] While Spokeo added that an allegation of deprivation of a mere procedural right created by Congress would not necessarily meet the concreteness requirement without an allegation of additional harm, these four provisions create substantive prohibitions—they affirmatively prohibit collectors from taking actions that would harm consumers.[1772]

In Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc.,[1773] the first Circuit-level decision on this question since Ramirez, the Tenth Circuit held that the close relationship to the common law tort of intrusion upon seclusion provided a satisfactory basis for Article III jurisdiction over a claim that a collector left a voicemail message for a consumer after she had disputed the debt and asked that collection contacts cease. It stressed that, whether or not this contact intruded to the degree required by common law, it was the same kind of harm recognized at common law—intrusion into a plaintiff's peace and quiet. As additional support for its conclusion that the plaintiff's claim satisfied Article III, the court cited Congress's judgment that unwanted debt collection contacts were abusive and enacted the FDCPA to protect against them.

A number of courts have also held that the emotional distress that unwanted contacts cause is a concrete injury.[1774] Section 11.15.3.4, supra, lists many other kinds of harm that may be caused by contacts at inconvenient times or places, with citations to decisions holding that these harms are concrete.

11.15.7 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Third-Party Contacts or Public Disclosure of Information About a Debt

Many provisions of the FDCPA protect the consumer's privacy and relationships from harm by prohibiting third-party contacts or disclosure of information about the debt in a public way. FDCPA § 1692c(b) generally prohibits debt collector calls to friends, parents, children, other relatives, neighbors, 1764 Gadelhak v. AT&T Services, Inc., 950 F.3d 458, 463 (7th Cir. 2020) (Barrett, J.). See generally § 11.15.2.2.3, supra.

1765 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). Accord Lupia v. Medicredit, Inc., 8 F.4th 1184 (10th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; citing Gadelhak; a single unwanted voicemail message from collector is concrete injury because of close relationship to common law tort of intrusion upon seclusion; question is whether this is same kind of harm, not whether call intruded to degree required at common law).

1766 See, e.g., Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 123 S. Ct. 2472, 156 L. Ed. 2d 508 (2003); Frisby v. Schultz, 487 U.S. 474, 484–485, 108 S. Ct. 2495, 101 L. Ed. 2d 420 (1988) ("The State's interest in protecting the well-being, tranquility, and privacy of the home is certainly of the highest order in a free and civilized society"; "individuals are not required to welcome unwanted speech into their own homes and that the government may protect this freedom"); Winston v. Lee, 470 U.S. 753, 758, 105 S. Ct. 1611, 84 L. Ed. 2d 662 (1985) (characterizing Fourth Amendment as protecting expectations of privacy, "the most comprehensive of rights and the right most valued by civilized men"); Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438, 92 S. Ct. 1029, 31 L. Ed. 2d 349 (1972); Barrett v. Vivint, Inc., 2020 WL 2558231, at *3 (D. Utah May 20, 2020); Mey v. Venture Data, L.L.C., 245 F. Supp. 3d 771, 777 (N.D. W. Va. 2017).

1767 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1768 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 578, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992)).

1769 Id. at 1549 (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 580, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992) (J. Kennedy, concurring)). See, e.g., Wise v. Credit Control Services, 2018 WL 5112983, at *3 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 19, 2018) (holding Congress's judgment to be sufficient basis for standing to bring claim for sending collection letter after cease-contact notice).

1770 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1771 See also S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 4 (1977), reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra ("this legislation strongly protects the consumer's right to privacy by prohibiting a debt collector from communicating the consumer's personal affairs to third persons"; the report continues by describing the narrow circumstances in which third party contacts are permitted by the Act).

1772 See, e.g., Gibson v. US Collections W. Inc., 2017 WL 1833597, at *3 n.4 (D. Ariz. May 8, 2017) (contacting consumer in violation of cease-contact letter is not procedural violation; plaintiff has standing).

1773 ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3627103 (10th Cir. Aug. 17, 2021) (finding standing for claims under §§ 1692g and 1692c(c)).

1774 Decker v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1112256 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 11, 2019) (finding standing where collector made frequent calls despite consumer's request that the calls stop, and consumer alleged emotional distress).

and employers. FDCPA § 1692d(3) prohibits the publication of shame lists of consumers alleged to be refusing to pay their debts, and section 1692d(4) prohibits advertising debts for sale in order to coerce their payment. FDCPA § 1692f(8) prohibits debt collectors from placing debt collection information on postcards and envelopes. FDCPA § 1692b provides a narrow exception to the prohibition on third-party contact by allowing limited contacts that are for the sole purpose of obtaining the consumer's location information. These restrictions combine to provide significant protection of consumers' privacy, reputation, friendships, and familial and work relationships.[1775]

One of the ways that Spokeo identifies to establish that an intangible injury is concrete is to evaluate whether it "has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts."[1776] There is little question that a violation of these protections is a concrete harm under this standard, as all of them involve publication of derogatory and embarrassing material to third parties. In Transunion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, the Supreme Court held that consumers had Article III standing to sue a credit reporting agency under the FCRA for disseminating deceptive information in its files to third parties. The Court held that these consumers did not need to show any other harm, because the harm they suffered—injury to reputation—is closely related to that made actionable by common law defamation torts.[1777] The Court reached this conclusion even though the misinformation in the consumer's credit file was arguably only deceptive, rather than false, as required for a common law defamation claim. On the other hand, the Court held that consumers did not have standing if the deceptive information had not been disseminated to third parties unless they showed that they had suffered a concrete harm in some other way. It held that, without publication to third parties, the FCRA claim lacked one of the "fundamental requirements" of the common law claim.[1778] The FDCPA provisions that prohibit debt collectors from advertising debts for sale or otherwise revealing information about the debt to third parties have the same close relationship to defamation torts.

The common law invasion of privacy torts provide a second close common law analog to these FDCPA protections.[1779] Invasion of privacy is an intangible harm that is recognized by the common law in almost all states.[1780] Violations of FDCPA §§ 1692d(3), 1692d(4), and 1692f(8), which involve publication of information about the debt, are analogous to the branch of the common law invasion of privacy tort that protects against public disclosure of private facts.[1781] In Ramirez, the Supreme Court singled out "disclosure of private information" as a type of injury that is concrete.[1782] If the information that is disclosed is inaccurate, the claim may also have a close relationship to the branch of invasion of privacy tort that allows suit for holding a person up to a false light.[1783] Many courts, including the Second, Third, Fourth, Eighth, Ninth, and Eleventh Circuits,[1784] have held since Spokeo that the invasion of privacy in other contexts is a concrete injury.

1775 In addition, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(1), which prohibits calls at inconvenient times and places, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(3), which restricts calls to consumers at their workplaces, FDCPA § 1692c(c), which allows the consumer to stop debt collector contacts, and FDCPA § 1692d(5), which restricts repeat calls, protect the consumer's right to seclusion, an interest that is tightly tied to protecting the consumer's privacy and relationships. These provisions are discussed in § 5.4, supra, and Article III standing to assert them is discussed in § 11.15.7, supra.

1776 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1777 See § 15.5, infra (discussion of defamation torts).

1778 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2209–2210 n.6, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2, supra.

1779 See, e.g., Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding standing for claim based on collector's disclosure of information about debt to mailing vendor because of close relationship to common law tort of public disclosure of private facts; also noting that Congress's findings express address this very harm); DiNaples v. MRS BPO, Inc., 934 F.3d 275 (3d Cir. 2019) (disclosure of consumer's account number through easily scannable barcode is concrete injury because of its close relationship to common law invasion of privacy); St. Pierre v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 898 F.3d 351 (3d Cir. 2018) (disclosure of debtor's account number implicates a core concern animating the FDCPA—invasion of privacy—so is closely related to harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing the basis for a lawsuit in English and American courts); Thomas v. Unifin, Inc., 2021 WL 3709184 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; collector's disclosure of information about debt to third-party mailing vendor is concrete injury because of close relationship to common law tort of public disclosure of private facts); Keller v. Northstar Location Services, 2021 WL 3709183 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding Art. III standing over claim that collector wrongfully disclosed information about debt to third party mailing vendor, because of close relationship to common law tort of public disclosure of private facts); Brown v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6011934 (W.D. Mich. Nov. 15, 2018); Stever v. Harrison, 2017 WL 2869505 (D.N.J. July 5, 2017) (noting that privacy is protected at common law, and that the disclosure of personal information is the very harm that Congress intended to prevent). See generally § 11.15.7, supra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.2 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (close relationship of harm caused by unwanted robocalls to tort of invasion of privacy).

1780 Eli A. Meltz, No Harm, No Foul? Attempted Invasion of Privacy and the Tort of Intrusion Upon Seclusion, 83 Fordham L. Rev. 3431, 3440 (May 2015) (state-by-state survey; "Currently, the vast majority of states recognize the intrusion strand of invasion of privacy either under common law or by statute"); Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 652B (1977). See generally § 2.6.2.2.5, supra (cases awarding damages for violation of consumer's privacy and interference with personal relationships), § 15.3, infra (tort claims related to invasion of privacy in debt collection cases).

1781 See § 15.3.4, infra.

1782 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See also Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016, 1023 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; disclosure of private information to mail vendor is concrete injury).

1783 See § 15.3.3, infra.

1784 See, e.g., Glasser v. Hilton Grand Vacations Co., 948 F.3d 1301, 1305–1306 (11th Cir. 2020) (receipt of more than one telemarketing call); Cordoba v. DirecTV, L.L.C., 942 F.3d 1259 (11th Cir. 2019) (receipt of more than one unwanted telemarketing call in violation of TCPA is concrete injury); Melito v. Experian Mktg. Solutions, Inc., 923 F.3d 85, 93–94 (2d Cir. 2019) (receipt of unwanted text

An additional reason that federal courts should have Article III standing to hear claims alleging these FDCPA violations is that Congress's judgment that these violations produce injuries that are actionable in federal court. The FDCPA's strong limitations on debt collectors' third-party contacts were "extremely important" to congressional lawmakers and consumers.[1785] Congress listed "disclosing a consumer's personal affairs to friends, neighbors, or an employer" as one of the collection abuses the FDCPA was intended to address, and stated that the Act "strongly protects the consumer's right to privacy, by prohibiting a debt collector from communicating the consumer's personal affairs to third persons."[1786] Congress expressly stated in FDCPA § 1692 its findings and declaration of purpose that "(a) . . . Abusive debt collection practices contribute . . . to the loss of jobs, and to the invasions of individual privacy . . . [and] . . . (b) Existing laws and procedures for redressing these injuries are inadequate."[1787]

As the Spokeo majority said, "because Congress is well positioned to identify intangible harms that meet minimum Article III requirements, its judgment is also instructive and important. Thus, we said in Lujan that Congress may 'elevat[e] to the status of legally cognizable injuries concrete, de facto injuries that were previously inadequate in law.'"[1788]

While the Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez[1789] throws the weight to be given to Congress's judgment into some confusion, stressing the clarity and specificity of Congress's judgment will, at a minimum, buttress the other grounds for asserting standing.

One of the FDCPA's privacy protections is its prohibition against the use of any language or symbol on an envelope that reveals that the sender is in the debt collection business.[1790] Since Spokeo, several courts, including the Third and Sixth Circuits, have held that a consumer suffers concrete injury when a collector violates this prohibition, for example by sending a dunning letter in a window envelope that allows an account number (or a scannable barcode that will reveal an account number) to be seen.[1791] A post-Ramirez district court decision agrees that disclosure of the collector's name on an envelope is concrete harm, citing the close relationship to the common law tort of public disclosure of private information.[1792] Violation of the prohibition against communicating by post card[1793] is a concrete injury for the same reasons.[1794] These messages is concrete harm and no additional harm need be shown); Krakauer v. Dish Network, L.L.C., 925 F.3d 643 (4th Cir. 2019); Golan v. FreeEasts.com, 930 F.3d 950 (8th Cir. 2019) (plaintiffs who received two answering machine messages from telemarketer have standing); Heglund v. Aitkin County, 871 F.3d 572 (8th Cir. 2017); Robins v. Spokeo, Inc., 867 F.3d 1108 (9th Cir. 2017) (on remand from Supreme Court); Susinno v. Work Out World, Inc., 862 F.3d 346 (3d Cir. 2017); Eichenberger v. ESPN, Inc., 876 F.3d 979, 983 (9th Cir. 2017); Perry v. Cable News Network, Inc., 854 F.3d 1336 (11th Cir. 2017); Van Patten v. Vertical Fitness Grp., 847 F.3d. 1037, 1042–1043 (9th Cir. 2017); In re Horizon Healthcare Services Inc. Data Breach Litig., 846 F.3d 625 (3d Cir. 2017) (invasion of privacy caused by failure to protect consumers' personal information in violation of FCRA is a concrete harm; it is closely related to harm recognized at common law, and Congress's passage of the FCRA and creation of cause of action establishes that unauthorized dissemination of personal information causes an injury in and of itself); In re Nickelodeon Consumer Privacy Litig., 827 F.3d 262 (3d Cir. 2016). But cf. Salcedo v. Hanna, 936 F.3d 1162 (11th Cir. 2019) (concluding that consumer who received just single text message lacked standing). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.2.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

---

1785 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra. ("[T]his legislation adopts an extremely important protection . . . it prohibits disclosing the consumer's personal affairs to third persons. Other than to obtain location information, a debt collector may not contact third persons such as a consumer's friends, neighbors, relatives or employer. Such contacts are not legitimate collection practices and result in serious invasions of privacy, as well as loss of jobs."). See also id. at 2 ("collection abuse takes many forms, including . . . disclosing a consumer's personal affairs to friends, neighbors, or an employer").

1786 Id. at 2.

1787 See also S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 4 (1977), reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, 1696, and reproduced at Appx. A.3, infra ("this legislation strongly protects the consumer's right to privacy by prohibiting a debt collector from communicating the consumer's personal affairs to third persons"; the report continues by describing the narrow circumstances in which third party contacts are permitted by the Act).

1788 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1789 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1790 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(8).

1791 Donovan v. FirstCredit, Inc., 983 F.3d 246, 250–252 (6th Cir. 2020) (visible indications on letter that it was from debt collector causes harm closely related to that which forms basis of common law invasion of privacy claim; consumer has standing); DiNaples v. MRS BPO, Inc., 934 F.3d 275 (3d Cir. 2019) (scannable barcode); St. Pierre v. Retrieval-Masters Creditors Bur., Inc., 898 F.3d 351 (3d Cir. 2018) (finding standing; disclosure of debtor's account number implicates core concern animating FDCPA—invasion of privacy—so is closely related to harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing basis for lawsuit in English and American courts); McRobie v. Credit Protection Ass'n, 2020 WL 1181974 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 11, 2020) (finding standing to assert claim that printing on front of mailer revealed its debt collection purpose); Brown v. Asset Acceptance, L.L.C., 2018 WL 6011934 (W.D. Mich. Nov. 15, 2018); Stever v. Harrison, 2017 WL 2869505 (D.N.J. July 5, 2017) (noting that privacy is protected at common law, and that the disclosure of personal information is the very harm that Congress intended to prevent); Michael v. HOVG, L.L.C., 232 F. Supp. 3d 1229 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 10, 2017); Hartman v. Medicredit, Inc., 2016 WL 7669858, at *3 (W.D. Pa. Dec. 2016), adopted, 2017 WL 90383 (W.D. Pa. Jan. 10, 2017); Daubert v. NRA Group, L.L.C., 2016 WL 4245560 (M.D. Pa. Aug. 11, 2016) ("unlawful disclosure of legally protected information" is an injury-in-fact sufficient to satisfy Article III standing). But cf. Estate of Caruso v. Fin. Recoveries, 2017 WL 2704088 (D.N.J. June 22, 2017) (where the barcode that was visible through the window envelope did not have any personal information, scannable or otherwise, its display did not implicate any privacy concerns so there was no particularized injury).

1792 Foley v. Mary Washington Healthcare Services, Inc., 2021 WL 3193177, at *3 n.5 (E.D. Va. July 28, 2021). But cf. Lueck v. Bureaus, Inc., 2021 WL 4264368 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 20, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; marking envelope "Personal and Confidential" is not a disclosure of private information, so no standing even if the statement violated section 1692f(8)).

1793 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(7).

1794 See McRobie v. Credit Protection Ass'n, 2020 WL 1181974 (E.D. Pa. Mar. 11, 2020) (finding standing to assert claim that mailer was courts typically cite both the historical recognition of invasion of privacy as a cognizable harm and Congress's unequivocal intent to create a right against disclosure of personal information and make it actionable. The consumer has standing, even without showing that someone has actually viewed the private information, because it has been made accessible to the public.[1795]

In a post-Ramirez decision, now vacated and scheduled for rehearing en banc, the Eleventh Circuit upheld Article III standing over a claim that was based on a collector's disclosure of information about the debt to a mailing vendor.[1796] The court cited the close relationship to the common law tort of public disclosure of private facts, and Congress's findings that expressly addressed this very harm. Since Ramirez, several district courts have agreed,[1797] but other decisions disagree.[1798]

Other courts have held that a consumer has standing to pursue an FDCPA claim based on the embarrassment suffered due to a collector's publication of a non-judicial foreclosure notice that included personal information that was not required by law.[1799] Similarly, a court held that serving postjudgment execution papers on a co-worker of the debtor caused concrete injury to the debtor.[1800] A post-Ramirez decision holds that attorney fees and costs that consumer incurred to get confidential medical information that had been filed in state court debt collection suit reclassified as private is concrete injury.[1801]

Even though there are compelling arguments that violations of the FDCPA's protections against third-party contacts and public disclosure of information meet Article III's requirements without the need to allege additional harm, advocates should always explore and allege all the harm that the violations caused the consumer. Those allegations will demonstrate the seriousness of the case to the court, and may obviate the need to litigate the intricacies of Article III standing.

11.15.8 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Collector's Contacts with Represented Debtor

With limited exceptions, FDCPA § 1692c(a)(2) prohibits a collector from communicating with a consumer who is represented by an attorney. It recognizes the consumer's right to retain and be represented by counsel, protects consumers' relationship with their attorneys, and protects the attorney's authority to effectively represent the consumer.[1802]

The right of the represented consumer to be free of debt collector contacts is not procedural. It does not merely require collectors to follow certain procedures that might result in a benefit to a consumer, but affirmatively prohibits collectors from contacting represented consumers. This is a right that is invoked by the consumer's unilateral action of notifying the debt collector of the retention, name, and address of their attorney. But even if this right were merely procedural, its breach causes concrete harm to consumers. A contact in violation of this provision not only breaches the represented consumer's right to be free of debt collector contacts, but also harms the consumer by interfering with the attorney-client relationship and undermining the consumer attorney's authority as the consumer's representative.[1803] These harms have a close relationship to those made actionable by the common law tort of interference with contract.[1804] Claims based on a collector's contacts with a represented debtor may also have a close relationship to common law wrongful litigation torts, particularly if they occur in the context of ongoing or threatened litigation.[1805] Before the Supreme Court's 2021 decision in Ramirez, decisions were nearly uniform in confirming that a collector's contact with a represented debtor causes concrete harm sufficient for Article III standing.[1806] Since Ramirez, one postcard).

1795 DiNaples v. MRS BPO, Inc., 934 F.3d 275, 280 (3d Cir. 2019); Stever v. Harrison, 2017 WL 2869505 (D.N.J. July 5, 2017).

1796 Hunstein v. Preferred Collection & Mgmt. Services, Inc., 17 F.4th 1016 (11th Cir. 2021), vacated, rehearing en banc granted, 17 F.4th 1103 (11th Cir. 2021).

1797 Liu v. Radius Global Solutions, L.L.C., 2021 WL 4167585 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 14, 2021) (denying plaintiff's motion to remand case to state court); Thomas v. Unifin, Inc., 2021 WL 3709184 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 2021) (collector's disclosure of information about debt to a third-party mailing vendor is concrete injury because of close relationship to common law tort of public disclosure of private facts); Keller v. Northstar Location Services, 2021 WL 3709183 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 20, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; finding Art. III standing over claim that collector wrongfully disclosed information about debt to third party mailing vendor, because of close relationship to common law tort of public disclosure of private facts).

1798 Shields v. Professional Bur. of Collections of Md., Inc., 2021 WL 4806383 (D. Kan. Oct. 14, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; rejecting analogy to tort of public disclosure of private facts where plaintiff did not allege that anyone had read the information, and owing a student loan would not be highly offense to a reasonable person); In re FDCPA Mailing Vendor Cases, ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2021 WL 3160794, at *5–6 (E.D.N.Y. July 23, 2021) (treating this as intra-company disclosure; relying on observation in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2210 n.6 that courts have not "necessarily recognized disclosures to printing vendors as actionable publications"; rejecting analogy to intentional infliction of emotional distress because conduct here was less than "extreme and outrageous").

1799 Thompke v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 261 F. Supp. 3d 798, 805 (E.D. Mich. 2017); Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017).

1800 Langley v. Gamache & Myers, P.C., 2018 WL 2059545 (E.D. Ark. May 3, 2018).

1801 Fullmer v. A-1 Collection Agency, L.L.C., 2021 WL 4155068, at *2 (D. Utah Sept. 13, 2021).

1802 See generally § 5.5, supra.

1803 Erickson v. Elliot Bay Adjustment Co., 2017 WL 1179435, at *4 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 29, 2017).

1804 See, e.g., Polis v. Am. Liberty Fin., Inc., 237 F. Supp. 2d 681 (S.D. W. Va. 2002) (refusing to dismiss claim for tortious interference with contract against creditor that contacted consumers while knowing they were represented by counsel; not necessary to show that these contacts caused attorney-client relationship to be terminated). See generally § 15.4, infra.

1805 See § 11.15.5.4, supra.

1806 Williams v. Rushmore Loan Mgmt. Services, L.L.C., 2018 WL 1582515, at *6 (D. Conn. Mar. 31, 2018); Castellanos v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., ___ F. Supp. 3d ___, 2017 WL 5514368, at *3–5 (Nov. 3, 2017); Foster v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2017 WL 5508371 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 15, 2017); Erickson v. Elliot Bay Adjustment district court decision has found standing based on the consumer's allegations that the collector's continued contacts with him caused him emotional distress.[1807] Another decision finds no standing, but the case arose in special circumstances, as the collector was complying with a foreclosure court's order to send a notice of sale to the debtor, and the debtor did not allege that the collector's actions caused her any harm.[1808]

11.15.9 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Conduct Serving to Harass, Oppress, or Abuse

FDCPA § 1692d prohibits conduct that serves to harass, oppress, or abuse any person in connection with the collection of a debt. It includes both a general prohibition and prohibitions of six specific practices. This section discusses standing to assert claims regarding the general prohibition and the specific prohibitions of threats of violence or other criminal means (§ 1692d(1)); obscene, profane, or abusive language (§ 1692d(2)); and calls without meaningful disclosure of the caller's identity (§ 1692d(6)). Standing to assert claims regarding repeated calls to the debtor in violation of FDCPA § 1692d(5)) is not discussed here, but rather in § 11.15.8, supra. Standing to assert claims regarding publication of lists of consumers who refuse to pay debts in violation of FDCPA § 1692d(3)) and advertisement of debts for sale in violation of FDCPA § 1692d(4)) is discussed in § 11.15.9, supra.

In some cases involving FDCPA § 1692d violations, the injury-in-fact element of standing will be easily established by demonstrating tangible harm as a result of the harassment, oppression, or abuse.[1809] Courts have awarded actual damages under FDCPA § 1692k(a)(1) for a wide variety of injuries as a result of abusive collection practices, including stress-related injuries,[1810] out-of-pocket losses,[1811] and injuries to personal relations.[1812] Consumer attorneys should take care to plead any actual damages[1813] suffered by the consumer, as such damages will show that the plaintiff's injury is "real and not abstract."[1814]

In the absence of evidence of tangible harms, the Spokeo court held that consumers can demonstrate the injury-in-fact element of standing through intangible injuries.[1815] First, an intangible harm may be concrete if it "has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts."[1816] All of the acts prohibited by FDCPA § 1692d are of a type that is likely to cause consumers emotional distress, a harm that is recognized as an element of damages for a wide variety of common law torts.[1817]

In addition, the harms caused by violations of FDCPA § 1692d(1) (use or threats of violence) are closely related to those made actionable by the common law tort of assault.[1818] FDCPA § 1692d(2) (obscene, profane, or abusive language) and section 1692d(6) (anonymous telephone calls) protect consumers against the same harm as the common law torts of intentional infliction of emotional distress[1819] and invasion of privacy.[1820] Obtaining personal information from the debtor without meaningful disclosure of the collector's identity, in violation of FDCPA § 1692d(6), is closely related to the common law tort of intrusion upon seclusion, and common law recognizes that the consumer is harmed even if there is no publication of that information.[1821] As examples of this tort, the Restatement cites actions such as eavesdropping and Co., 2017 WL 1179435, at *4 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 29, 2017); Scibetta v. TD Banknorth, 2017 WL 3448544, at *4 (D.N.J. Aug. 11, 2017) (plaintiff has standing to assert claims under §§ 1692b(6) and 1692c(a)(2); there are similar requirements in other contexts such as professional responsibility, so this harm "is found in traditions of common law"); Capel v. Specialized Loan Servicing, Inc., 2017 WL 1739919, at *3 (N.D. Ill. May 4, 2017) (noting that sending collection letter to represented debtor can confuse the debtor and can require debtor to spend time and effort deciphering it, deciding how to respond, and contacting his attorney); Munoz v. Cal. Bus. Bureau, Inc., 2016 WL 6517655 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 1, 2016); Mogg v. Jacobs, 2016 WL 4395899 (S.D. Ill. Aug. 18, 2016) (finding standing where one of the claims was that collector contacted represented debtor); McCamis v. Servis One, Inc., 2016 WL 4063403 (M.D. Fla. July 29, 2016) Bradbury v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 2020 WL 1815897, at *8 (D.R.I. Apr. 10, 2020) (finding cursory allegations of calls to represented debtor, which did not include any allegations of a concrete injury-in-fact, insufficient), adoption noted, 2021 WL 673481 (D.R.I. Feb. 22, 2021) (noting earlier adoption of magistrate's recommendation; amending dismissal on Art. III grounds to be without prejudice).

1807 Westerman v. Contar Fin. Services, L.L.C., 2021 WL 4554334 (D. Md. Oct. 5, 2021).

1808 Benjamin v. Rosenberg & Assoc., 2021 WL 3784320 (D.D.C. Aug. 26, 2021).

1809 See § 11.15.3.4, supra (listing types of harm that consumers may suffer).

1810 See § 2.6.2.2.2 (list of stress-related injuries and case citations), § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1811 See § 2.6.2.2.4, supra (list of out-of-pocket injuries and case citations).

1812 See § 2.6.2.2.5, supra (list of injuries to personal relations and case citations).

1813 See § 11.8.6, infra (discussion of actual damages).

1814 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1548, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) ("When we have used the adjective 'concrete,' we have meant to convey the usual meaning of the term—'real,' and not 'abstract.'").

1815 Id. at 1549.

1816 Id. See generally §§ 11.15.2.1, 11.15.2.2.2, 11.15.2.2.3, supra.

1817 See, e.g., Pastian v. Internal Credit Sys., Inc., 2020 WL 6445836 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 3, 2020) (mag.; consumer who suffers emotional distress because of collector's offensive and threatening language has standing); Smith v. Moss Law Firm, P.C., 2020 WL 584617, at *4–5 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 6, 2020) (plaintiff's anxiety and legal costs when he was wrongfully sued and case was not immediately dismissed are concrete harms; finding standing for § 1692d and other claims); Decker v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2019 WL 1112256 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 11, 2019) (finding standing for § 1692d and other claims where debtor alleged that collector's frequent calls caused her emotional distress). See generally § 11.15.3.4, supra, § 15.2.6, infra.

1818 See § 15.7.1, infra.

1819 See § 15.2, infra.

1820 See § 11.15.7, supra, § 15.3, infra; National Consumer Law Center, Federal Deception Law § 6.10.3.2.1 (3d ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (harm caused by unwanted calls and texts is analogous to that made actionable by tort of invasion of privacy, so consumer has standing to bring Telephone Consumer Protection Act claim).

1821 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652B, Illustrations 2, 3, 4 (1977). See generally § 15.3.2, infra.

surreptitiously or deceptively obtaining access to personal information, acts that are highly analogous to the harm against which FDCPA § 1692d(6) is intended to protect.[1822] However, a post-Ramirez Sixth Circuit decision holds that the mere placement of a call with a somewhat incomplete disclosure of the collector's identity is not a concrete harm in and of itself.[1823]

The Spokeo Court identified a second way that an intangible injury may be concrete: "Congress has the power to define injuries and articulate chains of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy where none existed before."[1824] While the Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez[1825] throws the question of the weight to be given to Congress's judgment into some confusion, it is always worthwhile to buttress the case for Article III standing by pointing out that Congress determined that a violation was a privately actionable injury. Congress clearly did so when it enacted FDCPA § 1692d. Indeed, prohibiting these abuses by debt collectors was a central motivation for Congress when it enacted the FDCPA.[1826] Senate Report No. 95-382 noted that:

> The committee has found that debt collection abuse by third party debt collectors is a widespread and serious national problem. Collection abuse takes many forms, including obscene or profane language, threats of violence, telephone calls at unreasonable hours, misrepresentation of a consumer's legal rights, disclosing a consumer's personal affairs to friends, neighbors, or an employer, obtaining information about a consumer through false pretense, impersonating public officials and attorneys, and simulating legal process.

Congressional findings and the declaration of purpose in the statute itself also highlight Congress's concerns about eliminating abusive collection behaviors:

> (a) There is abundant evidence of the use of abusive, deceptive, and unfair debt collection practices by many debt collectors. Abusive debt collection practices contribute to the number of personal bankruptcies, to marital instability, to the loss of jobs, and to invasions of individual privacy.
>
> . . .
>
> (e) It is the purpose of this subchapter to eliminate abusive debt collection practices by debt collectors. . . .[1827]

An Eighth Circuit decision holds that a consumer had standing to bring an FDCPA claim against a collector for filing a debt collection lawsuit with no ability to prove the claim, but with the unfair, harassing, and abusive purpose of obtaining either a default or consent judgment.[1828] Section 11.15.3.4, supra, lists many other kinds of harm that may be caused by harassment and abuse, with citations to decisions holding that these harms are concrete.

11.15.10 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Unfair or Unconscionable Collection Methods

FDCPA § 1692f prohibits unfair or unconscionable collection methods, including several specifically enumerated acts, such as misuse of postdated checks (section 1692f(2), (3), (4)), causing charges for communications to be made to a person while concealing their true purpose (section 1692f(5)), and wrongful repossession or threats of repossession (section 1692f(6)). This section discusses Article III standing to assert claims regarding violation of these provisions. Article III standing to assert violations of FDCPA § 1692f(1) (collection of unauthorized amounts) is discussed in § 11.15.5.1, supra, and standing to assert violations of FDCPA § 1692f(7) and 1692f(8) (sending mail to the debtor in a way that reveals the existence of the debt) is discussed in § 11.15.9, supra.

In some cases involving unfair practices in violation of FDCPA § 1692f, the injury-in-fact element of standing will be easily established by demonstrating tangible harm as a result of unfair or unconscionable collection practices.[1829] The Supreme Court has stated, "If a defendant has caused physical or monetary injury to the plaintiff, the plaintiff has suffered a concrete injury in fact under Article III."[1830] Causing charges for communications to be assessed against the plaintiff is monetary harm by definition.[1831] Similarly, consumers with FDCPA § 1692f(2) to (4) claims may have incurred fees related to a postdated check such as overdraft fees or late fees. Even if it does not result in overdraft fees or late fees, by depositing a postdated check early a collector deprives the consumer of the use of that money, which a court may find to be a monetary injury. If the account is interest-bearing, the consumer will also lose the interest that would have accrued on the amount of 1822 Restatement (Second) of Torts § 652B, Illustrations 2, 3, 4 (1977).

1823 Ward v. Nat'l Patient Account Services Solutions, Inc., ___ F.4th ___, 2021 WL 3616067 (6th Cir. Aug. 16, 2021) (caller identified itself as NPAS rather than NPAS, Inc.; court does not mention any information that caller obtained from consumer).

1824 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 578, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992)).

1825 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1826 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, and reproduced in Appx. A.3, infra.

1827 15 U.S.C. § 1692.

1828 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017) (finding standing to assert similar claims under §§ 1692e and 1692f). See also Morgan v. Vogler Law Firm, P.C., 2017 WL 4387351 (E.D. Mo. Oct. 3, 2017) (being subjected to baseless collection suit creates basis for both FDCPA claim and unjustified-litigation torts).

1829 See § 11.15.3.4, supra (types of harm that FDCPA violations may cause).

1830 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1831 Horowitz v. GC Services L.P., 2016 WL 7188238 (S.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2016) (non-debtor who received telephone call had standing to assert a claim under § 1692f(5) where it used cell phone minute for which plaintiff had paid, but debtor (his former roommate), who was not responsible for paying bill for phone service, did not have standing to assert this claim).

the check. Wrongful repossession deprives the consumer of a specific item of tangible personal property, clearly a tangible loss and one that is the equivalent of a monetary harm.

Harms for which courts have awarded actual damages on FDCPA claims are also likely to be considered concrete. This is particularly true since courts often look to common law to determine whether actual damages are available for certain types of harm in FDCPA cases.[1832] Courts have awarded actual damages for a wide variety of injuries resulting from abusive collection practices, including stress-related injuries,[1833] out-of-pocket losses,[1834] and injuries to personal relations.[1835] Consumer attorneys should take care to allege any actual damages[1836] suffered by the consumer in pleadings, as such damages will illustrate that the plaintiff's injury is "real and not abstract."[1837]

In the absence of evidence of tangible harms, the Spokeo court held,[1838] and Ramirez confirms,[1839] that consumers can demonstrate the injury-in-fact element of standing through intangible injuries. First, an intangible harm may be concrete if it "has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts."[1840] The acts prohibited by FDCPA § 1692f cause harms that closely resemble those recognized as a basis for common law torts. Violations of FDCPA § 1692f(6) (prohibiting wrongful repossession or threats of repossession) cause harms that are closely related to common law conversion and trespass to chattels.[1841] FDCPA § 1692f(3) (solicitation of postdated checks for the purpose of threatening or instituting criminal prosecution) and section 1692f(4) (depositing or threatening to deposit postdated checks prior to the date on the check) protect consumers against the same harms as the common law claims of intentional infliction of emotional distress[1842] and extortion.[1843]

The Spokeo court identified a second way that an intangible injury may be concrete: "Congress has the power to define injuries and articulate chains of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy where none existed before."[1844] As discussed in § 11.15.2.2.4, supra, the Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez[1845] throws the weight to be given to Congress's judgment into some doubt. Nonetheless, in any case involving unfair or unconscionable acts that violate the FDCPA it is always worthwhile to buttress the argument for standing by pointing out how clearly Congress expressed its concern about these practices and its intent to provide a private cause of action for violations. Senate Report No. 95-382 noted that:

> This legislation expressly prohibits a host of . . . unfair debt collection practices. These include: . . . collecting more than is legally owing; and misusing postdated checks. In addition to these specific prohibitions, this bill prohibits in general terms any . . . unfair . . . collection practice. This will enable the courts, where appropriate, to proscribe other improper conduct which is not specifically addressed.[1846]

Congressional findings and the declaration of purpose in the statute itself also highlight Congress's concerns about eliminating unfair collection practices:

> (a) There is abundant evidence of the use of abusive, deceptive, and unfair debt collection practices by many debt collectors. Abusive debt collection practices contribute to the number of personal bankruptcies, to marital instability, to the loss of jobs, and to invasions of individual privacy.[1847]

In an Eighth Circuit decision, a collection firm was alleged to have filed a collection action seeking interest to which it was not entitled, and then to have scheduled the case for trial without having any evidence to present, on the assumption that the consumer would not appear and that it would be able to obtain a default judgment. When the consumer appeared, it asked for a continuance. The consumer alleged that these actions amounted to use of an unfair means to attempt to collect a debt, in violation of FDCPA § 1692f(1). The court held that the consumer's allegations that he had to retain an attorney and serve discovery requests and that he spent time to defend against the meritless claim amounted to concrete injuries.[1848] These holdings appear to be consistent with the Supreme Court's 2021 decision in TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez.[1849] The Eighth Circuit also held that the lower court had Article III jurisdiction over a claim regarding the collector's false threat to proceed to trial, because of the close relationship to common law torts such as malicious prosecution and abuse of process.[1850]

1832 See § 11.8.1 (standards for actual damages), § 11.15.2.2.3 (role of analogies to common law in determining Art. III standing), supra.

1833 See § 2.6.2.2.3, supra (list of stress-related injuries and case citations).

1834 See § 2.6.2.2.4, supra (list of out-of-pocket injuries and case citations).

1835 See § 2.6.2.2.5, supra (list of injuries to personal relations and case citations).

1836 See § 11.8, supra (discussion of actual damages).

1837 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1548, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) ("When we have used the adjective 'concrete,' we have meant to convey the usual meaning of the term—'real,' and not 'abstract.'").

1838 Id. at 1549.

1839 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1840 Id.

1841 See § 15.7.3, infra. See also National Consumer Law Center, Repossessions § 13.6 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library (discussion of tort claims for wrongful repossession).

1842 See § 15.2, infra.

1843 See § 15.7.5, infra.

1844 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 578, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992)).

1845 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1846 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, and reproduced in Appx. A.3, infra.

1847 15 U.S.C. § 1692.

1848 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685 (8th Cir. 2017).

1849 ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See § 11.15.2.2, supra.

1850 Demarais v. Gurstel Chargo, P.A., 869 F.3d 685, 694 (8th Cir. 2017).

A 2018 decision provides an example of "downstream consequences"[1851] that are likely to be considered concrete. The decision finds standing where the collector served requests for admission on the consumer, without an explanation that they would be deemed admitted if the consumer did not deny them within the thirty-day response period, in violation of FDCPA § 1692f's general prohibition of unfair or unconscionable debt collection practices. The court noted that the consumer had filed an answer to the collection action but did not respond to the request for admissions, and he filed an affidavit in the FDCPA case stating that he was in fact misled by this omission.[1852] A number of other decisions find standing for a FDCPA § 1692f claim without additional analysis, after finding standing for parallel claims under other FDCPA provisions.[1853]

Other decisions find standing for claims regarding unfair or unconscionable collection tactics on theories that may no longer be viable after Ramirez, but where the facts, if analyzed, may have presented adequate grounds for standing. For example, a district court in New York held that a nondebtor had standing to assert claims under FDCPA § 1692f and 1692f(1) against a collector for serving postjudgment subpoenas on him, seeking information to enable it to collect against a different person with a similar name.[1854] The court based its conclusion on Second Circuit decisions that a violation of the FDCPA is a concrete injury in and of itself, a theory that Ramirez undercuts.[1855] However, the facts recited in the opinion—the plaintiff's repeated attempts to get the collection contacts to stop, the fact that he felt harassed by the defendant's actions—suggest that the defendant's acts may have caused other harms that would be considered concrete. Another decision held that a debtor had standing to pursue a claim under FDCPA § 1692f for using high-pressure tactics arising from repeated calls and letters seeking wildly inconsistent amounts.[1856] While the court characterized this as an informational injury, a theory that the Supreme Court did not accept in Ramirez in the context of a formatting violation,[1857] the debtor's testimony that the collector's action made him upset, confused, and stressed might independently support Article III standing.[1858]

The only negative pre-Ramirez decision of any substance holds that a debtor had no standing to assert a claim that a collector threatened repossession when it did not intend to repossess.[1859] The court stressed that none of the collector's statements about the debtor's rights were false, and stated that it did not see how a false threat to repossess goods causes harm. The court erred in failing to recognize the way a threat creates a false sense of urgency, and can cause a debtor to prioritize this debt over others.[1860] However, after Ramirez it will probably be necessary to allege and prove not only that this risk exists, but also that the risk materialized or caused the consumer to take or fail to take some action or to incur some other harm.[1861] Standing for claims involving false threats is also discussed in § 11.15.5.2 and § 11.15.5.4, supra.

11.15.11 Article III Standing for Claims Involving Lawsuits in Distant Forums

FDCPA § 1692*i* prohibits venue abuse—the collection tactic whereby the collector sues the consumer in an inconvenient forum where it will be easy to obtain a default judgment.[1862] In some cases involving FDCPA § 1692*i* violations, the concreteness requirement will be easily established by demonstrating tangible harm as a result of a collection lawsuit filed in the wrong venue. For example, consumers might demonstrate that they incurred additional travel expenses, childcare expenses, or lost work hours due to the need to travel to a distant forum. The Ramirez Court makes it clear that "monetary harms" are concrete.[1863] The consumer may have to spend time researching and filing a motion to transfer venue. Once venue is transferred, the consumer may have to repeat some of the early steps in the case, wasting more time and incurring new travel expenses. If the consumer has retained an attorney, the 1851 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2214 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) (quoting Trichell v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 964 F. 3d 990, 1004 (11th Cir. 2020)).

1852 Patterson v. Howe, 307 F. Supp. 3d 927 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 30, 2018). See generally § 11.15.5, supra (standing to assert claims regarding deception).

1853 See, e.g., Busby v. Vacation Resorts Int'l, 2019 WL 669641 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 19, 2019) (finding standing for claim under §§ 1692e, 1692f, and 1692*i* that collection letter purported to be from attorney but creditor itself was actually handling the collection, where debtor alleges he was misled); Biber v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 229 F. Supp. 3d 457 (E.D. Va. 2017) (consumer has standing to assert claims under §§ 1692e and 1692f against collector that misrepresented that administrative wage garnishment proceedings had already commenced or were imminent); Pritchett v. Paul Mason & Assocs., Inc., 2017 WL 11151610 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 2, 2017) (finding standing for § 1692e deception claim and parallel § 1692f claim where collector filed proof of claim for debt that had been discharged in earlier bankruptcy); Everett v. Fin. Recovery Services, Inc., 2016 WL 6948052 (S.D. Ind. Nov. 28, 2016) (finding standing to bring claims, including one under § 1692f, regarding letter's misrepresentation of tax consequences of settling claim; citing costs consumer incurred to consult her attorney as one harm). See also Velez v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1476144 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 24, 2017) (analyzing standing for claim under § 1692f together with other claims; finding standing for collector's failure to disclose its registered name on theory that informational injury is concrete, theory undercut by Ramirez).

1854 Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 2019 WL 1083025 (W.D.N.Y. Mar. 7, 2019), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 973 F.3d 154 (2d Cir. 2020) (addressing merits of plaintiff's claim).

1855 See §§ 11.15.2.2.1, 11.15.2.2.4, supra.

1856 Hernandez v. BC Services, Inc., 2020 WL 2308233 (S.D. Ill. May 8, 2020). See also Velez v. Healthcare Revenue Recovery Group, L.L.C., 2017 WL 1476144 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 24, 2017) (relying on theory that informational injury is concrete; finding standing for claim that creditor violated, inter alia, § 1692f).

1857 See § 11.15.2.2.7, supra.

1858 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1859 Scibetta v. TD Banknorth, 2017 WL 3448544 (D.N.J. Aug. 11, 2017).

1860 See § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1861 See § 11.15.2.2.6, supra (discussion of risk of harm).

1862 See § 10.3, supra.

1863 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

venue issue is likely to complicate the case, requiring more of the attorney's time.[1864] In any event, the fact that the case was filed in a distant court is likely to increase the consumer's anxiety. In some cases it will also have contributed to the creditor's success in obtaining a default judgment. The entry of a judgment against the consumer because of a violation of the FDCPA is itself a concrete harm.[1865]

Intangible harms caused by violations of FDCPA § 1692*i* may also be sufficiently concrete to establish standing.[1866] First, an intangible harm may be concrete if it "has a close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts."[1867] Forum abuse is analogous to the abuse of process cause of action at common law.[1868] While state formulations of the elements of an abuse of process claim vary, the Supreme Court's 2021 decision TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez holds that that Article III "does not require an exact duplicate in American history and tradition,"[1869] but only that the "fundamental requirement[s]" of the two claims be analogous.[1870]

The Supreme Court's Ramirez decision also stresses that intangible harms specified by the Constitution may be concrete.[1871] The right to a day in court is so fundamental to the Constitution's guarantee of due process of law that using venue abuse to obstruct this right may be a concrete harm in and of itself.[1872]

In addition, the Spokeo Court held that "Congress has the power to define injuries and articulate chains of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy where none existed before."[1873] While Ramirez leaves the role of Congress in some confusion, pointing to clear action by Congress to define a harm and make it privately actionable will, at a minimum, strengthen the argument for standing. Congress clearly did so when it enacted FDCPA § 1692*i*. When it enacted the FDCPA, Congress included section 1692*i* because it was concerned with abusive practices by debt collectors filing collection lawsuits in distant forums. Senate Report No. 95-382 explained that:

> This legislation also addresses the problem of "forum abuse," an unfair practice in which debt collectors file suit against consumers in courts which are so distant or inconvenient that consumers are unable to appear. As a result, the debt collector obtains a default judgment and the consumer is denied his day in court.[1874]

Section 1692*i* unequivocally prohibits this practice, and the FDCPA makes it actionable.

In Spokeo, the Supreme Court stated that deprivation of a "bare procedural right," without some other concrete harm, would not establish standing.[1875] According to the Court, an example of a procedural right is the right to challenge an agency's action, and a litigant has standing if there is some possibility that the requested relief will prompt the agency to reconsider the decision that harmed the litigant.[1876] The FDCPA's protection against venue abuse is not a mere procedural right by this standard. It imposes a substantive prohibition that directly protects the consumer from harm, rather than a procedural requirement that the consumer might invoke in order to persuade some third party to adopt a favorable position.

The concerns that prompted Congress to define forum abuse as an injury redressable by consumers are underscored by a 2014 decision in the Seventh Circuit. The court emphasized that forum abuses continue to be a problem in debt collection lawsuits because:

> [a]s this case illustrates, one common tactic for debt collectors is to sue in a court that is not convenient to the debtor, as this makes default more likely; or in a court perceived to be friendly to such claims; or, ideally, in a court having both of these characteristics. In short, debt collectors shop for the most advantageous forum. By imposing an inconvenient forum on a debtor who may be impecunious, unfamiliar with law and legal processes, and in no position to retain a lawyer (and even if he can afford one, the lawyer's fee is bound to exceed the debt itself), the debt collector may be able to obtain through default a remedy for a debt that the defendant doesn't actually owe.[1877]

1864 See Neal v. Adams, 2021 WL 4466392 (E.D. Ark. Sept. 29, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; attorney fees are concrete harm to extent they were incurred to assert defense of improper venue); Lako v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2021 WL 3403632 (W.D. Wis. Aug. 4, 2021) (post-Ramirez decision; cost of hiring attorney to defend collection action is concrete harm).

1865 See generally § 11.15.3.4, supra.

1866 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (or if Congress has defined the injury and articulated a chain of causation that will give rise to a case or controversy).

1867 Id.

1868 See, e.g., Barquis v. Merchants Collection Ass'n, 496 P.2d 817 (Cal. 1972) (claim stated by allegations that defendant knowingly filed legally insufficient complaints against consumers in improper venues to procure default judgments for the ulterior purpose of impairing the consumers' defenses); Dishaw v. Wadleigh, 44 N.Y.S. 207 (N.Y. App. Div. 1897) (claim for abuse of process stated where attorney filed collection suits in distant counties, took default judgments, and collected them by issuing subpoenas to debtors, who paid debts rather than journeying to cities where subpoenas were issued). See generally § 15.6.3, infra.

1869 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1870 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2210 n.6 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021). See generally § 11.15.2.2.3, supra.

1871 TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021).

1872 See § 11.15.2.2.2, supra.

1873 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016) (quoting Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 578, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992)).

1874 S. Rep. No. 382, 95th Cong., 1st Sess. 4, at 4, reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695, and reproduced in Appx. A.3, infra.

1875 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1549, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016).

1876 Massachusetts v. EPA, 549 U.S. 497, 517–518, 127 S. Ct. 1438, 167 L. Ed. 2d 248 (2007).

1877 Suesz v. Med-1 Solutions, L.L.C., 757 F.3d 636, 639 (7th Cir. 2014).

The first post-Spokeo decision to address the question, Linehan v. Allianceone Receivables Management, Inc.,[1878] had no trouble determining that venue abuse caused the consumer a concrete injury. However, the court based its decision on its conclusion that violation of the substantive rights granted by the FDCPA is a concrete injury in and of itself, a conclusion thrown into doubt by Ramirez.[1879] As a result, it did not find it necessary to consider whether the plaintiff had suffered tangible or intangible harms. Nor did it analyze whether there was a close relationship to a harm made actionable by common law, or to analyze the role of Congress beyond the simple enactment of the FDCPA. After Ramirez, decisions about standing are likely to turn on these factors.

11.15.12 Burden of Proof

The party invoking federal jurisdiction bears the burden of establishing standing.[1880] For a case filed in federal court, the burden of establishing standing thus falls on the plaintiff.[1881] However, when a defendant removes a case from state court to federal court, it is the defendant who is invoking federal jurisdiction, so the defendant bears the burden of showing the plaintiff's standing.[1882]

Whichever party bears the burden must support it with the manner and degree of evidence required at the successive stages of the litigation.[1883] At the pleading stage, general factual allegations may suffice.[1884] For purposes of ruling on a motion to dismiss for want of standing, both the trial and reviewing courts must accept as true all material allegations of the complaint, and must construe the complaint in favor of the complaining party.[1885] However, it is within the trial court's power to allow or require the party invoking federal jurisdiction to supply, by amendment to the complaint or by affidavits, further particularized allegations of fact deemed supportive of plaintiff's standing.[1886] If, after this opportunity, the plaintiff's standing does not adequately appear from all materials of record, the complaint must be dismissed.[1887]

At the summary judgment stage, the party invoking federal jurisdiction can no longer rest on allegations, but must present evidence of the specific facts supporting standing.[1888] At trial, those facts, if controverted, must be supported adequately by the evidence.[1889] Standing is determined as of the time the case is filed.[1890]

11.15.13 Removal; Benefits of Initially Filing in State Court

When a defendant removes a case from state court to federal court, it is the defendant who is invoking federal jurisdiction, so the defendant bears the burden of showing the plaintiff's standing.[1891] If the court concludes that standing is lacking, the proper remedy is not to dismiss the case, but to remand it to state court.[1892] Where the defendant invokes federal jurisdiction by removing a case, and then argues for dismissal based on the plaintiff's lack of standing, courts may be willing to award the plaintiff the attorney fees incurred as a result of the removal.[1893]

If there are concerns about whether a federal court will find that it has Article III standing over a particular case, the best strategy may be to file the case initially in state court. Then, if the defendant removes it to federal court, the defendant will

---

1878 2016 WL 4765839 (W.D. Wash. Sept. 13, 2016).

1879 See § 11.15.2.2, supra.

1880 Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 2136 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992) ("The party invoking federal jurisdiction bears the burden of establishing these elements"). Accord TransUnion L.L.C. v. Ramirez, ___ U.S. ___, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2206 ___ L. Ed. 2d ___ (2021) ("As the party invoking federal jurisdiction, the plaintiffs bear the burden of demonstrating that they have standing.").

1881 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, ___U.S. ___, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016); Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282 (7th Cir. 2020) (as party invoking federal jurisdiction, plaintiff bears burden of establishing standing).

1882 Thornley v. Clearview AI, Inc., ___F.3d ___, 2021 WL 128170 (7th Cir. Jan. 14, 2021); Bryant v. Compass Group USA, Inc., 958 F.3d 617 (7th Cir. 2020).

1883 Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 2136, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992).

1884 Id. at 2137; Bennett v. Spear, 520 U.S. 154, 117 S. Ct. 1154, 1163-1164, 137 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1997).

1885 Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 501, 95 S. Ct. 2197, 2206 45 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1975).

1886 Id., 95 S. Ct. at 2206–2207. See, e.g., Bazile v. Finance Sys. of Green Bay, Inc., 983 F.3d 274 (7th Cir. 2020) (remanding case to trial court to resolve factual issues that bear on question whether motion to dismiss for lack of Art. III standing should be granted); Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282, 285 (7th Cir. 2020) (if plaintiff's standing is questioned as factual matter on motion to dismiss, plaintiff must supply proof, by preponderance of evidence, that standing exists).

1887 Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490, 501, 95 S. Ct. 2197, 45 L. Ed. 2d 343 (1975).

1888 Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 2137, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992). See, e.g., Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282 (7th Cir. 2020) (holding that plaintiff failed to show standing at summary judgment stage); Frank v. Autovest, L.L.C., 961 F.3d 1185, 1187 (D.C. Cir. 2020) (vacating district court judgment and ordering dismissal of action where facts did not show standing at summary judgment stage).

1889 Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 2137, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992).

1890 Thomas v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, 2018 WL 3608398 (W.D. Wash. July 26, 2018) (standing for claim under § 1692f(6) can be based on collector's commencement of unjustified non-judicial foreclosure and filing of notice of trustee's sale, even though collector stipulated to preliminary injunction against the foreclosure shortly after consumer filed FDCPA claim).

1891 Thornley v. Clearview AI, Inc., 984 F.3d 1241 (7th Cir. 2021); Bryant v. Compass Grp. USA, Inc., 958 F.3d 617 (7th Cir. 2020). See generally Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 112 S. Ct. 2130, 2136, 119 L. Ed. 2d 351 (1992) ("The party invoking federal jurisdiction bears the burden of establishing these elements").

1892 Thornley v. Clearview AI, Inc., 984 F.3d 1241 (7th Cir. 2021); Collier v. SP Plus Corp., 889 F.3d 894 (7th Cir. 2018); St. Louis Heart Ctr., Inc. v. Nomax, Inc., 899 F.3d 500 (8th Cir. 2018). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Fair Credit Reporting § 11.2.1.3.1 (9th ed. 2017), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

1893 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c). See, e.g., Barnes v. ARYZTA, L.L.C., 288 F. Supp. 3d 834 (N.D. Ill. 2017); Mocek v. Allsaints USA Ltd., 220 F. Supp. 3d 910 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (awarding fees).

have to argue that the case meets Article III's requirements. If the court disagrees, the case will not be dismissed, but will be remanded to state court. A number of states have broader standing doctrines than the federal system,[1894] so it may be possible to litigate the case successfully there. In states that have broader standing doctrines than the federal system, plaintiffs who wish to stay in state court have occasionally even pleaded that the claim does not involve any injury or involves a bare procedural violation.[1895] The strategy of filing suit in state court should, however, be reserved for strong cases that present serious violations involving at least a clear risk of harm.

If an FDCPA case in federal court is settled, a helpful settlement term is an agreement that if the federal court holds that it does not have Article III jurisdiction over the case and cannot enter the settlement, the defendant agrees that the case will be refiled in a state court that has jurisdiction for approval of the settlement.

11.16 Relation of the FDCPA to State Laws and Other Federal Statutes

11.16.1 FDCPA Preemption of and Relation to State Law

Section 1692n states:

> This title does not annul, alter, or affect, or exempt any person subject to the provisions of this subchapter from complying with the laws of any State with respect to debt collection practices, except to the extent that those laws are inconsistent with any provision of this subchapter, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. For purposes of this section, a State law is not inconsistent with this subchapter if the protection such law affords any consumer is greater than the protection provided by this subchapter.[1896]

Effective on November 31, 2021, Regulation F § 1006.104 updated section 1692n by replacing "title" and "subchapter" with "the Act or the corresponding provisions of this part."

An Official Interpretation of Regulation F § 1006.104 provides clarification that "[a] disclosure required by applicable State law that describes additional protections under State law does not contradict the requirements of the Act or the corresponding provisions of this part."[1897] Section 1692(e) of the Act also provides: "It is the purpose of this subchapter . . . to promote consistent State action to protect consumers against debt collection abuses."[1898]

Together, sections 1692(e), 1692n, and Reg. F § 1006.104 of the FDCPA express a clear intent only to preempt state laws that are inconsistent with the FDCPA—those that conflict with, impede, or detract from the FDCPA and only to the extent of the inconsistency. Courts have generally rejected claims that the FDCPA preempts state laws that protect consumers,[1899] but have found that the FDCPA preempts state statutes or common law doctrines that provide less protection to consumers.[1900]

1894 Thomas B. Bennett, The Paradox of Exclusive State-Court Jurisdiction over Federal Claims, 105 Minn. L. Rev. 1211, 1233 (2021) (map showing whether state has adopted the Article III standing formulation of Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife); Wyatt Sassman, A Survey of Constitutional Standing in State Courts, 8 Ky. J. Equine, Agric. & Nat. Res. L. 349 (2015) (state-by-state survey).

1895 See, e.g., Thornley v. Clearview AI, Inc., 984 F.3d 1241 (7th Cir. 2021); Morgan v. Bank of Am., 2020 WL 3979660 (E.D. Wash. July 14, 2020).

1896 15 U.S.C. § 1692n.

Every bill leading to the FDCPA contained language nearly identical to that in the first sentence of this section. The first House bill and every major Senate bill contained language virtually identical to that in the second sentence of this section; subsequent House bills and the Senate minority bill did not.

1897 Reg. F Official Interpretations § 104-1.

1898 15 U.S.C. § 1692(e).

1899 See Gonzales v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 660 F.3d 1055 (9th Cir. 2011) (FDCPA explicitly does not preempt state laws that provide similar protection); Davidson v. Seterus, Inc., 21 Cal. App. 5th 283, 304 n.15 (2018) (the possibility that a state might adopt a more expansive definition of "debt collector" than is provided by the FDCPA is contemplated by section 1692n); Montemayor v. GC Serv. L.P., 302 F.R.D. 581 (S.D. Cal. 2014) (claims alleging that agency, by recording its collection calls without consent or disclosure, violated state telephone privacy statute and penal code were allowed to go forward); Desmond v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 724 F. Supp. 2d 562 (W.D. Pa. 2010) (FDCPA does not preempt negligence or invasion of privacy claims); DeNicolo v. Hertz Corp., 2020 WL 5816365 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (section 1692n "specifically allows for a state law to provide for greater consumer protections than the FDCPA"); Burthlong v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 2010 WL 420554 (E.D. La. Jan. 29, 2010) (FDCPA does not preempt state negligence claims); Marcotte v. Gen. Elec. Capital Serv., Inc., 2009 WL 10671521 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2009) (FDCPA does not preempt California debt collection statute because it defines "debt collector" more broadly to include federal savings associations collecting debts on their own behalf); Pirouzian v. SLM Corp., 396 F. Supp. 2d 1124 (S.D. Cal. 2005); Joseph v. J.J. MacIntyre Cos., L.L.C., 238 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (FDCPA does not preempt invasion of privacy tort claim); Klingensmith, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Aug. 9, 1978). See also Missionary Sisters v. Dowling, 703 N.Y.S.2d 362 (Civ. Ct. 1999) (FDCPA does not preempt state eviction law requiring three-day notice); Mendus v. Morgan & Assoc., 994 P.2d 83 (Okla. Civ. App. 1999) (FDCPA does not preempt Oklahoma's twenty-day answer period); FTC Official Staff Commentary § 816, reproduced at Appx. C.2, infra, discussed at § 3.4.4.4, supra.

1900 See Cappetta v. GC Serv., L.P., 654 F. Supp. 2d 453 (E.D. Va. 2009) (voluntary payment doctrine not applicable to FDCPA claim); Gonzalez v. Codilis & Assoc., P.C., 2004 WL 719264 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2004) (voluntary-payment doctrine preempted); Garmus v. Borah, Goldstein, Altschuler & Schwartz, P.C., 1999 WL 46682 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 1, 1999) (FDCPA's thirty-day verification provision preempts state law allowing three-day rent demand notice); Clayton v. Bryan, 753 So. 2d 632 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2000) (offer of judgment statute providing for fee award against consumer was preempted by FDCPA provisions allowing fees only if consumer acted in bad faith and for purpose of harassment). Cf. Irwin v. Mascott, 94 F. Supp. 2d 1052 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (preempting debt collector's third-party malpractice claim against his own attorney, because there was no express or implied right of contribution or indemnity under FDCPA). But see Ziobron v. Crawford, 667 N.E.2d 202 (Ind. Ct. App. 1996) (refusing to preempt malicious prosecution claim based on dismissed FDCPA claim without considering conflict between state and federal law).

Thus, the FDCPA establishes federal minimum standards for debt collectors that state law may supplement or increase.[1901] State laws are preempted if they make it impossible to comply with both state and federal law,[1902] or frustrate the purpose of the FDCPA to protect consumers from abusive debt collection practices.[1903]

On the other hand, compliance with state law does not necessarily immunize the debt collector's conduct from being considered a violation of the FDCPA.[1904] State law cannot permit conduct that the FDCPA prohibits. For example, direct communication with a debtor represented by an attorney is a violation even though state law permits service of a garnishment summons directly on the consumer.[1905]

The "inconsistency" and "greater protection" standards provide some guidance to courts deciding whether a state law is preempted by the FDCPA, but these standards are intentionally vague in order to leave some discretion in borderline cases. In a formal FDCPA advisory opinion, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) determined that the FDCPA did not preempt any state laws that would keep the FDCPA verification notice out of the summons because the FDCPA allows the verification notice to be separately sent from the summons.[1906] An FDCPA amendment as to the verification notice requirements overruled the substance of this FTC formal advisory letter, but its analysis of FDCPA preemption is still instructive:

> The quoted provision makes express that Congress did not intend to preempt the field, but allowed only for conflict preemption. However, there is no conflict preemption here.
>
> First, there is no conflict preemption based on impossibility of compliance because it is possible for attorney debt collectors to comply with both the federal provision and the state provisions. . . .
>
> Second, there is no conflict preemption based on state law standing as an obstacle to the full accomplishment and execution of congressional purposes and objectives. As Congress declared in Section 802(e) of the FDCPA, 15 U.S.C. § 1692(e), the purpose of the panoply of protections under the federal debt collection statute is:
>
> > to eliminate debt collection practices by debt collectors, to insure that those debt collectors who refrain from using abusive debt collection practices are not competitively disadvantaged, and to promote consistent State action to protect consumers against debt collection abuses.
>
> The state provisions about which you inquire do not prevent consumers from receiving the full panoply of protections from abusive debt collection practices afforded by the FDCPA.[1907]

An FTC informal staff letter has found no conflict between a state provision requiring that a debt collector's communications with a consumer's employer be in writing and the FDCPA requirement that a debt collector's inquiries seeking location information, including those made to an employer, not divulge their debt collection purpose.[1908] FTC informal staff letters have also advised that state laws may provide greater consumer protection than the FDCPA; for instance, states may completely prohibit the use of aliases[1909] or may prohibit debt collectors from practicing law.[1910]

1901 S. Rep. No. 95-382, at 6, 9 (1977), reprinted in 1977 U.S.C.C.A.N. 1695 and at Appx. A.3, infra. See Pirouzian v. SLM Corp., 396 F. Supp. 2d 1124 (S.D. Cal. 2005) (section 1692n does not preempt California's fair debt collection statute with broader scope than FDCPA); Albanese v. Portnoff Law Assoc., Ltd., 301 F. Supp. 2d 389 (E.D. Pa. 2004); Albright v. Allied Int'l Credit Corp., 2003 WL 22350928 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 25, 2003); United States v. Sullivan, 1998 WL 223709 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 28, 1998) (FDCPA does not preempt state debt collection statute that was more protective of rights of consumers); Sibley v. Firstcollect, Inc., 913 F. Supp. 469 (M.D. La. 1995) (state collection license requirement offered consumers greater protection and was thus not preempted). See also Codar v. Arizona, 1996 WL 471335 (9th Cir. Aug. 19, 1996) (FDCPA preempted Arizona's debt collector licensing scheme only to extent Arizona law prohibited unlicensed out-of-state debt collector from sending FDCPA-required debt verification notice); Irwin v. Mascott, 96 F. Supp. 2d 968 (N.D. Cal. 1999) (the FDCPA did not preempt state laws that provided consumers with greater protection in form of injunctive relief); Premier Capital, Inc. v. Grossman, 2000 WL 1838695 (Conn. Super. Ct. Nov. 22, 2000) (notice required by state law making demand for payment was effective even if notice failed to inform debtors of their rights under FDCPA), rev'd in part, aff'd in part, 789 A.2d 565 (Conn. App. Ct. 2002).

1902 See Sanchez v. Client Serv., Inc., 520 F. Supp. 2d 1149 (N.D. Cal. 2007). See also Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017) (compliance with Michigan's foreclosure statutes did not immunize collection law firm from FDCPA liability where foreclosure notice contained private information about homeowners not required by state law and that violated FDCPA).

1903 Crosby v. Nat'l Foreign Trade Council, 530 U.S. 363, 373, 120 S. Ct. 2288, 147 L. Ed. 2d 352 (2000). See Hines v. Davidowitz, 312 U.S. 52, 67, 61 S. Ct. 399, 85 L. Ed. 581 (1941). See also Lensch v. Armada Corp., 795 F. Supp. 2d 1180 (W.D. Wash. 2011) (state law preempted where it authorized collectors of dishonored checks to notify drawers that they may be subject to criminal prosecution, directly conflicting with plain language of FDCPA provision prohibiting collector from representing or implying that nonpayment of debt would result in debtor's arrest or imprisonment).

1904 See, e.g., Patterson v. Howe, 307 F. Supp. 3d 927, 934 (S.D. Ind. 2018) (holding that debt collector's service of Requests for Admissions in conjunction with the Complaint and summons was authorized by state law and yet was found to violate the Act); Walker v. Fabrizio & Brook, P.C., 2017 WL 5068340 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 2, 2017) (compliance with Michigan's foreclosure statutes did not immunize collection law firm from FDCPA liability where foreclosure notice contained private information about homeowners not required by state law and that violated FDCPA).

1905 Ojogwu v. Rodenburg Law Firm, 2019 WL 6130450 (D. Minn. Nov. 19, 2019).

1906 Mezines, FTC Advisory Opinion (Mar. 31, 2000), reproduced at Appx. C.1.5, infra.

1907 Id. See § 9.3.4, supra.

1908 Eskanos, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 19, 1978).

1909 Foote, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 11, 1978). See § 6.8, supra.

1910 McGrody, FTC Informal Staff Letter (Sept. 4, 1979). See also Kolker v. Duke City Collection Agency, 750 F. Supp. 468 (D.N.M. 1990); § 8.3.6, supra (unauthorized practice of law by a debt collector may violate 15 U.S.C. § 1692f); § 16.5, infra.

The FDCPA does not preempt tort actions for debt collection abuse. The only judge to have held to the contrary[1911] later overruled himself[1912] and found there was no preemption, after his earlier decision was criticized and not followed.[1913] Tort actions for debt collection harassment are frequently pursued because they allow punitive damages in egregious cases.[1914] The FDCPA was intended "to promote consistent State action to protect consumers against debt collection abuses."[1915]

Occasionally, collectors argue that the FDCPA is displaced by or limited by state law—that a state's regulation of a transaction should take precedence and that it would be excessive or inconsistent for a collector to comply with both federal and state requirements. Courts reject such specious defenses.[1916] For example, an FTC staff interpretation states that even if consumer has violated a state criminal bad check law, the FDCPA still prohibits a collector from reporting a possible bad check to a law enforcement official.[1917] Similarly, although state law may permit an unlicensed debt collector to escape full payment of penalties owed and be considered retroactively licensed upon payment of a fee, filing a lawsuit against a consumer before the collector had acquired a collection agency license may nevertheless violate the FDCPA.[1918] On the other hand, if state law provides greater protection for the consumer and is not inconsistent with the requirements of the FDCPA, compliance with state law will not violate the FDCPA.[1919]

11.16.2 Relationship to Other Federal Statutes

Where the FDCPA regulates practices also regulated by other federal statutes, questions arise as to whether both statutes are applicable. In general, two federal statutes are to be construed so as to uphold both and any conflict between the federal statutes should be construed to give the maximum effect to both.[1920] Thus, while the Fair Credit Reporting Act preempts many state law claims, it does not preempt an FDCPA claim.[1921] A lower court found no conflict between an FDCPA claim and the Higher Education Act.[1922] More complicated questions arise as to the interrelationship of the Bankruptcy Code and the FDCPA, discussed elsewhere in this treatise.[1923]

1911 Thrasher v. Cardholder Serv., 74 F. Supp. 2d 691 (S.D. Miss. 1999).

1912 Virgil v. Reorganized M.W. Co., 156 F. Supp. 2d 624 (S.D. Miss. 2001).

1913 Binion v. Franklin Collection Serv., Inc., 147 F. Supp. 2d 519 (S.D. Miss. 2001). See also Albright v. Allied Int'l Credit Corp., 2003 WL 22350928 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 25, 2003); Hage v. Gen. Serv. Bur., 2002 WL 1796575 (D. Neb. Aug. 5, 2002).

1914 See Ch. 15, infra.

1915 15 U.S.C. § 1692(e).

1916 Romea v. Heiberger & Assoc., 163 F.3d 111 (2d Cir. 1998) (rejecting argument that FDCPA should not apply to state eviction proceedings because combined effect of applying both the New York and federal protections was more than Congress intended); Taylor v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 2009 WL 1708762 (S.D. Ill. June 17, 2009) (rejecting defendant's efforts to put its answer and counterclaim under seal lest it violate state privacy laws; state-law privileges and protections do not control in federal question cases).

1917 Atteberry, FTC Informal Staff Letter (July 18, 1978).

1918 Alexander v. Absolute Resolutions Corp., 2019 WL 1938811 (W.D. Ark. May 1, 2019).

1919 Rocha v. Zwicker & Assoc., 474 F. Supp. 3d 388 (D. Mass. 2020) (collection letter complied with and was mandated by Massachusetts debt collection regulation which affords greater protection to consumers and is, therefore, not preempted by FDCPA).

1920 See Randolph v. IMBS, Inc., 368 F.3d 726 (7th Cir. 2004). See also Maxwell v. St. Francis Health Ctr., 2017 WL 4037732 (D. Kan. Sept. 13, 2017) (recognizing cause of action under FDCPA, filing false affidavit regarding consumer's active duty in armed services, that may also be cause of action under Servicemembers Civil Relief Act); Carocci v. Greenpoint Mortg. Funding, Inc., 2008 WL 4415855, at *7 (Conn. Super. Ct. Sept. 9, 2008) (motion to dismiss FDCPA claim on the basis of Fair Credit Reporting Act preemption denied because "[15 U.S.C.] § 1681t(b)(1)(F) only preempts state law claims . . . [and] the FDCPA is a federal statute" that therefore is not impacted); § 13.3, infra (relationship between the Bankruptcy Code and FDCPA and state claims).

1921 See Ramirez v. Mandarich Law Group, L.L.P., 2019 WL 1426015 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2019) (noting that FCRA's primary goal, which is to improve accuracy and fairness of credit reporting, is not precisely the same as primary purpose of FDCPA, which is to deter abusive, deceptive, and unfair debt collection practices; holding that just because obtaining credit report is permissible under FCRA, does not mean that same conduct is immune from liability under FDCPA); Carocci v. Greenpoint Mortg. Funding, Inc., 2008 WL 4415855 (Conn. Super. Ct. Sept. 9, 2008).

1922 See Wheeler v. Premiere Credit of N. Am., L.L.C., 80 F. Supp. 3d 1108 (S.D. Cal. 2015).

1923 See § 13.3, infra. See also Midland Funding, L.L.C. v. Johnson, ___ U.S. ___, 137 S. Ct. 1407, 197 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2017).

Chapter 12 Debt Collectors' Defenses and Counterclaims

12.1 Introduction

The FDCPA sets forth three specific defenses to debt collector liability: bona fide error,[1] the statute of limitations,[2] and good faith compliance with a Consumer Financial Protection Bureau advisory opinion.[3] Regulation F[4] (effective November 30, 2021) also sets out nine safe harbors for debt collectors, where conduct or disclosures are not required, but where complying conduct or disclosures is sufficient to avoid violation of specified Regulation F provisions.[5]

FDCPA defendants raise, with varying success, a number of other defenses when there has been a prior collection action against the consumer, particularly where the consumer's FDCPA claim relates to conduct in that prior litigation:

- Res judicata, collateral estoppel, and that the FDCPA claim should have been raised as a compulsory counterclaim;[6]
- That a federal court should abstain from an FDCPA action while a state collection action is pending;[7] and
- The Rooker-Feldman doctrine that federal courts do not have jurisdiction to review a state court proceeding.[8]

Other potential defenses are based on the FDCPA defendant's immunity, such as litigation or witness immunity for its conduct in a prior collection litigation,[9] and sovereign immunity.[10] Consumers raising FDCPA claims must also be prepared for defendants to raise all kinds of other defenses, whatever their merit: that a violation is merely technical or de minimis, that the defendant acted in good faith, that the consumer was at fault, that the consumer waived FDCPA claims, or that there were alleged preconditions to the consumer being able to bring suit.[11]

The FDCPA defendant may also attempt to raise counterclaims on the underlying debt.[12] Inventive FDCPA defendants have even sought to use a prior judgment against the consumer to garnish the consumer's recovery on the FDCPA claim, or even garnish ownership of the claim itself.[13] An unsuccessful consumer FDCPA plaintiff must also be prepared to explain why the FDCPA defendant is not entitled to attorney fees or sanctions against the consumer or the consumer's attorney.[14]

Other defenses and defense strategies are addressed elsewhere in this treatise:

- Alleging "injury in fact" for the constitutional standing requirement raised in Spokeo is discussed at § 11.15, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.1.4.1, infra.
- Other standing issues implicated when an FDCPA claim is brought by persons other than the consumer affected, such as by relatives or neighbors, are discussed at § 4.4, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.1.4.2, infra.
- Offers of judgment or settlement creating a mootness issue are a routine debt collector strategy in response to a consumer's FDCPA suit and are discussed at § 11.6, supra, with cases summarized at Appx. E.3.6.3, infra.
- Jurisdictional and venue issues for FDCPA suits are discussed at § 11.2, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.3.7, infra.
- Bankruptcy issues, including conflict between the consumers' FDCPA claim and the Bankruptcy Code, are discussed at Ch. 13, infra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.3.7.5, infra.
- The FDCPA's constitutionality is discussed at § 3.3, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.1.7.1, infra.
- The specificity requirements for the FDCPA complaints are discussed at § 11.6.1, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.3.8, infra.
- The materiality requirement for FDCPA deception violations is discussed at § 7.2.7, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.2.4.1.2, infra. Materiality for FDCPA unfairness claims is discussed at § 8.1.5, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.2.5.1, infra.
- An FDCPA defendant's answer adopting a kitchen sink strategy with a laundry list of defenses or with scandalous accusations is discussed at § 2.5.7.9, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.3.6.2, infra.
- Mandatory arbitration of consumer's claims is discussed at § 11.3, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.3.6.5, infra.
- An FDCPA claim filed in state court prompting removal to federal court is discussed at § 11.2.1, supra, and cases summarized at Appx. E.3.7.1, infra.

12.2 Bona Fide Error Defense

12.2.1 Overview

The FDCPA provides:

> (c) A debt collector may not be held liable in any action brought under this subchapter if the debt collector shows by a preponderance of evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error

1 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c). See Appx. E.3.6.1, infra.
2 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(d). See Appx. E.3.5, infra.
3 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(e). See § 12.4, infra.
4 12 C.F.R. Part 1006.
5 See § 12.5, infra.
6 See § 12.6.2, infra.
7 See § 12.6.3, infra.
8 See § 12.6.4, infra.
9 See § 12.6.6, infra.
10 See § 12.6.5, infra.
11 See §§ 12.7.2 to 12.7.6, infra.
12 See § 12.8, infra.
13 See § 12.9, infra.
14 See § 12.10, infra.

notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error.[15]

The bona fide error defense is a narrow exception[16] to the rule that the FDCPA is a strict liability statute, generally not requiring proof of intent.[17] The language of the FDCPA bona fide error defense was borrowed from nearly identical language, at that time, in the Truth in Lending Act (TILA), which also is narrowly construed.[18] Decisions interpreting the TILA provision should provide guidance in construing the FDCPA provision.[19]

The bona fide error defense is an affirmative defense, so the collector bears the burden of timely[20] pleading[21] and proving[22] the defense by a preponderance of the evidence. Thus, the affirmative defense of bona fide error should not be addressed by a motion to dismiss the complaint.[23]

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b) requires allegations of mistake to be pleaded with particularity,[24] and a majority of lower courts hold that this requirement applies to the pleading of the bona fide error defense.[25] The Twombly-Iqbal

15 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c). See also §§ 12.2.5, 12.2.8, 12.2.9, infra (discussing elements of bona fide error defense).

16 See Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 581 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010) ("We decline to adopt the expansive reading of § 1692k(c) that [defendant] Carlisle proposes."). See also Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc. 460 F.3d 1162, 1177 (9th Cir. 2006); Eide v. Colltech, Inc., 987 F. Supp. 2d 951 (D. Minn. 2013).

17 See, e.g., McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 948 (9th Cir. 2011); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991 (7th Cir. 2003); § 3.2.4, supra. See also Engelen v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 544 Fed. Appx. 707 (9th Cir. 2013).

18 See Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 589–590, 130 S. Ct. 1605,176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010). Cf. 15 U.S.C. § 1640(c) (1976) (after passage of FDCPA, this provision of TILA was amended to include "calculation, computer malfunction and programming, and printing errors"). See generally National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

19 See, e.g., Baker v. G.C. Serv. Corp., 677 F.2d 775, 779 (9th Cir. 1982); Rutyna v. Collection Accounts Terminal, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 980, 982 (N.D. Ill. 1979).

20 See Chung v. U.S. Bank, 250 F. Supp. 3d 658, 682 (D. Haw. 2017) (refusing to consider bona fide error defense that was not raised until loan servicer filed its opposition to consumer's motion for summary judgment, as consumer was prejudiced by this late assertion); Newton v. Credit Specialty Serv., Inc., 2016 WL 6693073 (D. Nev. Nov. 14, 2016) (allowing collection agency to first assert bona fide error defense three years after case was filed would unfairly prejudice consumer); Philhower v. Express Recovery Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 692908 (D. Utah Feb. 21, 2014) (where plaintiff would be prejudiced by defendant's failure to plead affirmative defense of bona fide error, defense was waived); Dorris v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc. 2013 WL 1209629 (D. Md. Mar. 22, 2013) (too late to raise defense at summary judgment stage). But cf. Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025 (6th Cir. 1992) (debt collector allowed to raise defense for first time in opposition to motion for partial summary judgment because consumer failed to demonstrate prejudice).

21 See Nguyen v. HOVG, L.L.C., 2014 WL 5361935 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 20, 2014) (because bona fide error defense rests upon mistake and circumstances surrounding mistake were not stated with particularity, affirmative defense was stricken with leave to amend); Jacobson v. Persolve, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4090809 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 19, 2014) (applied heightened pleading standard); Dunn v. Premier Capital, Inc., 2013 WL 3466826 (D.N.J. July 9, 2013). See also Buzzell v. Citizens Auto. Fin., Inc., 802 F. Supp. 2d 1014 (D. Minn. 2011); Cordes v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 789 F. Supp. 2d 1173 (D. Minn. 2011); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002). But see Shula v. Lawent, 2002 WL 31870157 (N.D. Ill. Dec. 23, 2002) (although collector failed to plead bona fide error defense, use of former lawyer's letterhead was not violation of FDCPA where consumer failed to demonstrate any prejudice or harm suffered as result of erroneous substitution), aff'd on other grounds, 359 F.3d 489 (7th Cir. 2004). But cf. § 3.2.4, supra.

22 See Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529, 537 (6th Cir. 2014); McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991 (7th Cir. 2003); Ewers v. Rainmaker Recovery 3, Inc., 393 F. Supp. 3d 614, 618 (E.D. Mich. 2019) (recognizing that, on summary judgment, defendant bears burden of proving elements of defense, but nevertheless denying summary judgment, even though debt collector did not show how error "occurred, or to what extent [its] procedures were reasonably designed to prevent errors"); Thompson v. Gen. Revenue Corp., 2017 WL 3276018 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 2, 2017); Webster v. ACB Receivables Mgmt., Inc. 15 F. Supp. 3d 619 (D. Md. 2014); Wyman v. Northland Grp., Inc., 2014 WL 12586057 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 3, 2014); Lee v. Kucker & Bruh, L.L.P., 958 F. Supp. 2d 524 (S.D.N.Y. 2013) (no procedures to identify errors); McDonald v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 296 F.R.D. 513 (E.D. Mich. 2013) (no evidence in support of defense); Rogers v. Medicredit, Inc., 2013 WL 2403661 (E.D. Mo. May 31, 2013) (no facts offered); Ploch v. Client Serv., Inc., 2013 WL 1319347 (E.D. Mo. Apr. 1, 2013) (no evidence error was unintentional); Santos v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2012 WL 3985527 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 11, 2012); Cordes v. Frederick J. Hanna & Assoc., 789 F. Supp. 2d 1173 (D. Minn. 2011); Slanina v. United Recovery Sys., L.P., 2011 WL 5008367 (M.D. Pa. Oct. 20, 2011); Paul v. Metro Area Collections, Inc., 2011 WL 2270515 (D. Or. May 4, 2011), adopted, 2011 WL 2261301 (D. Or. June 8, 2011); Regan v. Law Offices of Edwin A. Abrahamsen & Assoc., 2009 WL 4396299 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 1, 2009); Gathuru v. Credit Control Serv., Inc., 623 F. Supp. 2d 113 (D. Mass. 2009); Cacace v. Lucas, 775 F. Supp. 502 (D. Conn. 1990); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002); Clark's Jewelers v. Humble, 823 P.2d 818 (Kan. Ct. App. 1991); Appx. E.3.6.1, infra.

23 See Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, 485 F.3d 226, 235 (4th Cir. 2007); Wong v. Alternative Claims Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 5635533 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 22, 2017); White v. First Step Grp. L.L.C., 2017 WL 4181121 (E.D. Cal. Sept. 20, 2017); Glazewski v. CKB Firm, P.C., 2015 WL 661278 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 15, 2015); Moore v. Fein, Such, Kahn & Shepard, P.C., 2012 WL 3945539 (D.N.J. June 13, 2012); Beeler v. C.S.D., L.L.C., 2012 WL 2045863 (D. Md. June 5, 2012); Koller v. West Bay Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1189481 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 9, 2012). But see Amaya v. Crowson & Crowson, L.L.P., 2013 WL 12126784 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 19, 2013).

24 Rule 9(b) states: "In alleging . . . mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting . . . mistake . . . intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally."

25 Compare CFPB v. Fair Collections & Outsourcing, Inc., 2021 WL 2685251, at *3 (D. Md. June 30, 2021) ("a bona fide error defense is subject to the heightened pleading standard of Rule 9(b)"); Tolliver v. National Credit Sys., Inc., 2021 WL 704175 (W.D. Wis. Feb. 23, 2021) (collector did not satisfy Rule 9(b)); Newton v. Roosen Varchetti & Oliver, 2020 WL 201179, at *2 (S.D. Ga. Jan. 10, 2020) ("Because Defendants' affirmative [BFE] defenses do not include anything beyond a recitation of the language found in Section 1692k(c), they fail to meet Rule 9(b)'s 'who, what, when, where, and how' requirement that the circumstances of the mistake be pleaded with particularity."). Martin v. Trott Law, P.C., 265 F. Supp. 3d 731, 740 (E.D. Mich. 2017). Rahman v. San Diego Accounts Serv., 2017 WL 1387206 (S.D. Cal.

pleading requirements may also apply, so that the party pleading an affirmative defense must allege enough supporting facts to nudge a legal claim across the line separating plausibility from mere possibility.[26]

The collector must establish each element of the defense—unintentional, bona fide error, maintenance of procedures to avoid such error—which are separate requirements, although they blur together and overlap in some circumstances.[27]

Where there is conflicting evidence regarding whether the elements of the bona fide error defense have been established, the trier of fact must resolve the remaining questions of fact.[28] Sometimes, however, one or more of the components of the defense can be so clearly inadequately supported by evidence as to be determined as a matter of law.[29]

Even where a collection agency has a bona fide error defense, it can be vicariously liable for the violations of its collection attorney if the attorney cannot prove bona fide error.[30]

Similarly, even when a debt collector is entitled to the FDCPA bona fide error defense, the collector may be liable under state law. For example, where a clerical error leads the debt collector to collect too much on a debt, state claims—such as UDAP, breach of contract, conversion, or unjust enrichment—may provide a recovery for the consumer.

12.2.2 Mistaken Interpretation of FDCPA Not a Bona Fide Error

The Supreme Court held in Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., that a debt collector's mistaken interpretation of the FDCPA does not entitle the collector to the FDCPA bona fide error defense.[31] The Court distinguished Apr. 18, 2017), Balon v. Enhanced Recovery Co., 316 F.R.D. 96 (M.D. Pa. 2016), Nyberg v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., L.L.C., 2016 WL 3176585, at *4 (D. Or. June 2, 2016), Vanhuss v. Kohn Law Firm S.C., 127 F. Supp. 3d 980, 984 (W.D. Wis. 2015) (Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) requires debt collector to plead the "who, what, when, where, and how" of the alleged bona fide error; debt collectors did exactly that), Walters v. Performant Recovery, Inc., 124 F. Supp. 3d 75, 81–83 (D. Conn. 2015) (same), Wiebe v. Sachem & Lavrar, P.A., 2012 WL 5382181 (M.D. Fla. Nov. 1, 2012), Lowe v. Diversified Consultants, Inc., 2012 WL 3776715 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 30, 2012), and Bradshaw v. Hilco Receivables, L.L.C., 725 F. Supp. 2d 532 (D. Md. 2010), with Polk v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, 291 F.R.D. 485, 492 (S.D. Cal. 2013) (no need to address Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b) as debt collector's pleadings did not meet even Fed. R. Civ. P. 8's "fair notice" standard). Contra Ruff v. Credit Adjustment, Inc., 2018 WL 4019464, at *4 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 23, 2018); Talamor v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2016 WL 8674348, at *2 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 30, 2016); Prindle v. Carrington Mortg. Serv., L.L.C., 2016 WL 9504253 (M.D. Fla. May 27, 2016); Saeedi v. M.R.S. Assoc., Inc., 2007 WL 1875975, at *1 (N.D. Cal. June 28, 2007). But cf. Burns v. Dodeka, 2010 WL 1903987, at *1 n.2 (N.D. Tex. May 11, 2010).

26 See, e.g., Izett v. Crown Asset Mgt., L.L.C., 2018 WL 6592442 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 14, 2018); Polk v. Legal Recovery Law Offices, 291 F.R.D. 485 (S.D. Cal. 2013); Godson v. Eltman, Eltman & Cooper, P.C., 285 F.R.D. 255 (W.D.N.Y. 2012). But see Michaud v. Greenberg & Sada, P.C., 2011 WL 2885952, at *2 (D. Colo. July 18, 2011) (declining to apply plausibility standard and holding that "an affirmative defense is sufficient if stated 'in short and plain terms' pursuant to Rule 8(b)(1)(A) and if the movant fails to demonstrate that the defense cannot succeed under any circumstance").

27 See Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790 (7th Cir. 2009); Johnson v. Riddle, 443 F.3d 723 (10th Cir. 2006).

28 See Engelen v. Erin Capital Mgmt., L.L.C., 544 Fed. Appx. 707, 709 (9th Cir. 2013) (split decision; reversing summary judgment for debt collector, holding that it failed to meet its burden of proof on bona fide error defense where bookkeeper's failure to enter ten consumers' garnishment payments on one day was not picked up by spot-checking, because no evidence presented that debt collector's procedures were "designed to catch human recording errors"); Hess v. Cohen & Slamowitz L.L.P., 637 F.3d 117 (2d Cir. 2011); Danow v. Borack, 346 Fed. Appx. 409 (11th Cir. 2009) (jury could properly reject bona fide error defense where defendant did not record calls or produce procedures concerning how it processes letters from consumers, how it determined to place a "cease and desist" on an account, or if anyone reviewed employees' actions or call logs); Johnson v. Riddle, 443 F.3d 723 (10th Cir. 2006); Woodall v. Williams, Rush & Assoc., 2020 WL 2839286 (N.D. Tex. June 1, 2020); Masters v. Harrison & Johnston P.L.C., 2018 WL 988097 (W.D. Va. Feb. 20, 2018); Guerrero v. Credit Mgmt., L.P., 2017 WL 7052292 (W.D. Tex. Oct. 24, 2017), adopted, 2017 WL 7052319 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 19, 2017); Jenkins v. Lazega & Johanson, L.L.C., 2017 WL 6519028 (M.D. Ga. Dec. 20, 2017) (adequacy of collection law firm's policies to avoid § 1692i violations was question for jury); Pfeffer v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2017 WL 3600437 (S.D. Ohio Aug. 18, 2017) (reasonable jury could find that collection agency's procedures were not reasonably adapted to avoid pursuit of debts discharged in bankruptcy when, despite its procedures, agency failed to identify and correct error on at least four occasions); Jones v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2017 WL 7052288 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 16, 2017) (whether or not debt buyer's procedures were sufficient to avoid § 1692e(8) violation—namely, failing to recognize consumer's letter as a dispute—was question for jury); Eide v. Colltech, Inc., 987 F. Supp. 2d 951, 967 (D. Minn. 2013) ("[A] reasonable jury could, but would not be required to, conclude that Colltech's reliance on the Hospital to determine whether debts had been previously discharged in bankruptcy was unreasonable."); In re Uplinger, 2012 WL 7150435 (E.D. Va. Feb. 8, 2012), aff'd, 475 Fed. Appx. 28 (4th Cir. 2012); Agostino v. Quest Diagnostics, Inc., 2011 WL 5410667 (D.N.J. Nov. 3, 2011); Walter v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 2011 WL 1666869 (E.D. Pa. May 2, 2011); Basile v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore L.L.C., 632 F. Supp. 2d 842 (N.D. Ill. 2009). See also Campbell v. Hall, 624 F. Supp. 2d 991 (N.D. Ind. 2009); Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C. v. Wright, 715 S.E.2d 725, 727 (Ga. Ct. App. 2011) (affirming lower court's rejection of collector's proposed jury charge as to bona fide error doctrine, specifying that if debt collector offered evidence that it was unaware of violation, "the burden shifts" to alleged debtor to show that collector "was indeed acting intentionally," and that to discharge this burden, alleged debtor would be "'required to present evidence creating a reasonable inference, [and] not a mere possibility[,] of intent'").

29 See McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939, 948 (9th Cir. 2011); Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007) (no reasonable jury could find that the violation was in good faith or that the defendant maintained reasonable preventive procedures where a notice added language foreign to the Graham-Leach-Bliley form notice).

30 Santacruz v. Standley & Assoc., 2011 WL 1043338 (D. Colo. Mar. 17, 2011).

31 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010). See also DiNaples v. MRS BPO, L.L.C., 934 F.3d 275, 283 (3d Cir. 2019) (defendant's error in following industry standard by using QR code on face of envelope containing collection letter arose from its misunderstanding of its obligations under FDCPA, and was not mistake of fact to which bona fide error defense applies); Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 889 F.3d 337, 350 (7th Cir. 2018) ("Here, PRA incorrectly believed the statement 'the amount reported is not accurate' did not constitute a 'dispute' under § 1692e(8). In other words, it 'incorrect[ly] interpret[ed] . . . the requirements of [the FDCPA]. This is a mistake factual errors for which the bona fide defense was available. The Court expressly did not address whether an error of state law or other federal law could form the basis of the bona fide error defense.[32] This subject is discussed in § 12.2.3, infra.

The Court started its decision with the deeply rooted principle in American jurisprudence that ignorance of the law is not an excuse. Moreover, the language of the FDCPA bona fide error defense is silent about excusing errors of law. The Court noted that when Congress intended to provide a mistake of law defense, it usually did so explicitly.

Thus, the bona fide error defense does not apply even where the debt collector in good faith relied on existing circuit precedent that was later reversed en banc, and also immediately stopped as soon as it learned its practice was a violation.[33] Such good faith reliance, though, can be a factor in reducing the size of statutory damages.

12.2.3 Errors of State Law or Other Federal Law

In Jerman, the Supreme Court expressly did not decide whether an error of state law or other federal law could form the basis of a bona fide error defense.[34] However, the reasoning in Jerman supports the view that mistakes of this type of other law also cannot form the basis for a bona fide error defense.

Even before Jerman, the Second, Sixth, Eighth, and Ninth Circuits rejected errors of law as a basis for the bona fide error defense under the FDCPA.[35] Several other circuits held that the essentially identical bona fide error provision in TILA covers only clerical mistakes, thus effectively excluding mistakes of law of any kind.[36] On the other hand, prior to Jerman, the Tenth[37] and Sixth[38] Circuits had held that the FDCPA forgave mistakes of law, and the Seventh Circuit had indicated it might follow that view in the future.[39]

After Jerman, the Ninth Circuit ruled that a mistake about the time-barred status of a debt under state law may qualify as a bona fide error because "a mistake about the time-barred status of a debt is a mistake regarding a collateral legal element of an offense, which we treat as a mistake of fact."[40]

Most district courts hold that "error" does not include mistakes of state or other federal law, following the approach and expanding upon the holding in Jerman.[41] Both before and after of law." (citation omitted)); Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp., 806 F.3d 895 (7th Cir. 2015) (following Jerman; finding collection employee's mistaken interpretation of FDCPA was not unintentional error, since it was based on employee's mistaken interpretation of § 1692g, and company policy prohibited that violation but did not provide specific policy or procedure to avoid violation); Palmer v. Dynamic Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 2016 WL 2348704 (M.D. Fla. May 4, 2016); New v. Gemini Capital Grp., 859 F. Supp. 2d 990 (S.D. Iowa 2012) (belief that collection action was timely, based on unpublished, non-binding state court opinion constituted mistake of law); Moxley v. Pfundstein, 2012 WL 4848973 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 11, 2012) (mistaken belief that recovery of prohibited attorney fees was lawful not defense); Holton v. Huff, 2012 WL 1354024 (M.D. Pa. Apr. 16, 2012) (rejecting defendants' bona fide error defense for filing their collection suit in venue prohibited by § 1692*i*, since mistakes of law are not bona fide errors under FDCPA); Puglisi v. Debt Recovery Solutions, L.L.C., 822 F. Supp. 2d 218 (E.D.N.Y. 2011); Smith v. Greystone Alliance L.L.C., 2011 WL 1303377 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 29, 2011) (because debt collector's actual policy explicitly directed collectors to withhold information required by § 1692e(11), its error could not be unintentional, nor could its policies be designed to prevent such errors; therefore, bona fide error defense was not available); Kempa v. Cadlerock Joint Ventures, L.P., 2011 WL 761500 (E.D. Mich. Feb. 25, 2011) (collector did not admit to making any clerical mistakes and instead acted intentionally in calling third parties based on mistake of law that it had right to make the calls).

32 559 U.S. at 580 n.4.

33 Oliva v. Blatt, Hasenmiller, Leibsker & Moore, L.L.C., 864 F.3d 492 (7th Cir. 2017). See also Daubert v. NRA Grp., L.L.C., 861 F.3d 382 (3d Cir. 2017).

34 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 580 n.4, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010). See also Hall v. LVNV Funding, L.L.C., 2013 WL 5550838 (W.D. Ky. Oct. 8, 2013).

35 Picht v. Jon R. Hawks, Ltd., 236 F.3d 446 (8th Cir. 2001); Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025, 1034 (6th Cir. 1992); Pipiles v. Credit Bur., Inc., 886 F.2d 22 (2d Cir. 1989); Baker v. G.C. Serv. Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982). See also Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961, 978 (D. Minn. 2019) (citing Picht for proposition that "within the Eighth Circuit . . . a debt collector's mistake of law—whether as to the FDCPA or as to some other state or federal law implicated by its debt-collection activities—does not provide it safe harbor under § 1692k(c)"). But see Watkins v. Peterson Enters., Inc., 57 F. Supp. 2d 1102 (E.D. Wash. 1999) (Ninth Circuit, in Baker, stated twice that legal error "by itself" is not bona fide error, implying that such errors might be permitted in some instances; here, state courts instituted challenged practice, which resulted from official interpretation of state law later overturned).

36 See, e.g., McGowan v. King, Inc., 569 F.2d 845 (5th Cir. 1979); Ives v. W.T. Grant Co., 522 F.2d 749 (2d Cir. 1975); Palmer v. Wilson, 502 F.2d 860 (4th Cir. 1974); Haynes v. Logan Furniture Mart, Inc., 503 F.2d 749 (7th Cir. 1974).

37 Johnson v. Riddle, 443 F.3d 723 (10th Cir. 2006) (mistake of state law).

38 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 538 F.3d 469 (6th Cir. 2008) (mistake of FDCPA law), rev'd, 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010).

39 Nielsen v. Dickerson, 307 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2002). See Ruth v. Triumph P'ships, 577 F.3d 790, 804 (7th Cir. 2009) (if claimed error is legal, it is only available to debt collectors "who can establish that they reasonably relied on either: (1) the legal opinion of an attorney who has conducted the appropriate legal research, or (2) the opinion of another person or organization with expertise in the relevant area of law—for example, the appropriate government agency." (dictum)); Campbell v. Hall, 624 F. Supp. 2d 991 (N.D. Ind. 2009) (holding that bona fide error defense applies to mistakes of law). See also Seeger v. AFNI, Inc., 548 F.3d 1107, 1114 (7th Cir. 2008) (declining to reach issue because defendant failed to follow reasonable procedures to avoid error of law).

40 Kaiser v. Cascade Capital, L.L.C., 989 F.3d 1127, 1139 (9th Cir. 2021) ("a mistake about the time-barred status of a debt is a mistake regarding a collateral legal element of an offense, which we treat as a mistake of fact").

41 See, e.g., Thompson v. Midland Funding, L.L.C., 375 F. Supp. 3d 774, 785 (E.D. Ky. 2019) (reasoning of Jerman applies to mistakes of state law, such as controlling limitations period for filing suit); Ceraldi v. Strumpf, 2020 WL 2611119 (D. Conn. May 19, 2020) (error based on state law not covered by bona fide error defense); Infante v. Samara Portfolio Mgmt., L.L.C., 2017 WL 1102757 (E.D. Tex. Jan. 20, 2017) (defendant's reliance on state venue rules did not amount to bona fide error, since such rules are preempted by federal law and defendant, an attorney, is charged with knowledge of such laws), adopted, 2017 WL 1113322 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 23, 2017); Harden v. Autovest, L.L.C., 2016 WL 6997905, at *1 (W.D. Mich. Nov. 30, 2016) (defense does not the Jerman decision, some lower courts have allowed collectors to assert the defense when they relied on the advice of counsel, especially when the law was unsettled,[42] or when the collector relied on an official interpretation.[43] However, even those courts required that reliance on the advice of counsel be reasonable.[44] Note, too, that assertion of reliance on the advice of counsel may constitute a waiver of the attorney-client privilege.[45]

It is not a misinterpretation of state law where a debt collector believes it should comply with state law that conflicts with the FDCPA. This is a misinterpretation as to the preemptive effect of the FDCPA, and thus, under Jerman, cannot form the basis of a bona fide error defense.[46]

12.2.4 Clerical and Factual Errors and Clerical Mistakes

As noted above, the FDCPA's bona fide error defense is patterned after that found in the Truth in Lending Act (TILA). Thus, of relevance is the TILA provision's examples of bona fide errors: "Examples of a bona fide error include, but are not limited to, clerical, calculation, computer malfunction and programing, and printing errors, except that an error of legal judgment with respect to a person's obligations under this subchapter is not a bona fide error."[47]

As with TILA, courts are likely to find unintentional bona fide clerical errors form the basis of such a defense. For example, a clerk's faulty input of information into an otherwise effective computer program to prevent improper communications may be a valid clerical error.[48]

Older FDCPA cases limited the bona fide error defense to the type of clerical errors listed in the TILA provision.[49] But include mistakes of state law, noting that "[t]he Sixth Circuit has also suggested, but has not expressly held, that the reasoning in Jerman II extends to mistakes of state law."). See also Wise v. Zwicker & Assoc., 780 F.3d 710, 713 (6th Cir. 2015) ("The Supreme Court declined to address whether the defense is available for mistakes of law other than the FDCPA itself, but the discussion of the affirmative defense makes clear that mistakes of state law can give rise to liability."); Collins v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 2013 WL 9805805, at *9 n.10 (E.D. Tenn. June 7, 2013) (mistake of state law regarding whether civil warrant is not formal pleading under state law, thus exempt from § 1692g notice requirements, would not qualify as bona fide error); McDermott v. Marcus, Errico, Emmer & Brooks, P.C., 911 F. Supp. 2d 1, 82 (D. Mass. 2012) ("Three principles used to support the holding in Jerman lead to the conclusion that section 1692k(2) does not encompass mistakes based on state law"), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 775 F.3d 109 (1st Cir. 2014); New v. Gemini Capital Corp., 859 F. Supp. 2d 990, 998 (S.D. Iowa 2012) (reasoning of Jerman applies to mistakes of state law); Moxley v. Pfundstein, 2012 WL 4848973 (N.D. Ohio Oct. 11, 2012) (mistaken belief that recovery of prohibited attorney fees was lawful under state law is not a defense); Ballou v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 713 F. Supp. 2d 79 (D. Conn. 2010) (same); New v. Gemini Capital Grp., 859 F. Supp. 2d 990, 998 (S.D. Iowa 2012) (mistake of state law regarding limitations period not bona fide errors protected by FDCPA). But see Puffinberger v. Commercion, L.L.C., 2014 WL 120596 (D. Md. Jan. 10, 2014) (denying plaintiff summary judgment where debt collector's filing suit beyond applicable limitations period may have been unintentional mistake of state law). See also Stratton v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 171 F. Supp. 3d 585, 603 (E.D. Ky. 2016) (without analysis, stating in dicta that "[t]his affirmative defense applies to both mistakes of state law and clerical errors") (citing Sixth Circuit decision in Wise even though it indicates to the contrary), aff'd on other grounds, 706 Fed. Appx. 840 (6th Cir. 2017); Ryan v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 2011 WL 1060287 (D. Conn. Mar. 23, 2011) (post-Jerman; denying consumer's motion to strike affirmative defense, noting as open question whether mistake of state law may be considered bona fide error under FDCPA).

42 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010); Hare v. Hosto & Buchan, P.L.L.C., 774 F. Supp. 2d 849, 855–856 (S.D. Tex. 2011) (attorneys who brought unsuccessful, time-barred arbitration award confirmation proceeding could assert bona fide error defense where there was split in circuits as to whether limitations provisions of Federal Arbitration Act were mandatory or permissive; notably, stating that plaintiff had "not pointed out facts that show, nor argued, that the requirements of § 1692k(c) of the Act have not been satisfied by the Defendants"); Pescatrice v. Orovitz, 539 F. Supp. 2d 1375 (S.D. Fla. 2008) (finding applicable statute of limitations rule unsettled; excusing resulting FDCPA violation as bona fide error of law); Taylor v. Luper, Sheriff, & Niedenthal, 74 F. Supp. 2d 761 (S.D. Ohio 1999) (state law divided; attorney's duty to zealously represent client would present ethical dilemma if attorney held personally liable for asserting a good faith claim in litigation). See also Castro v. Collecto, Inc., 634 F.3d 779 (5th Cir. 2011) (bona fide error defense shielded error applying Texas statute of limitations rather than the correct federal FCC two-year period; reasonable lawyers readily disagree on which limitation period to apply).

43 See Frye v. Bowman, Heintz, Boscia & Vician, P.C., 193 F. Supp. 2d 1070 (S.D. Ind. 2002) (pre-Jerman; granting summary judgment to defendants where summons forms matched ones approved by court clerks); Murphy v. Bonded Adjustment Co., No. CS-99-0100-WFN (E.D. Wash. Jan. 6, 2000) (allowing defense for both payment order and attorney fee practices later found unlawful); Watkins v. Peterson Enters., Inc., 57 F. Supp. 2d 1102 (E.D. Wash. 1999) (upholding defense for use of payment orders required by state courts, later held unlawful, but not for seeking fees on unsuccessful writs, error based on debt collector's own interpretation of law).

44 Bernstein v. Howe, 2003 WL 1702254, at *6 (S.D. Ind. Mar. 31, 2003) (mistake of law not forgiven if unreasonable). See also Heisler v. Convergent Healthcare Recoveries, Inc., 2020 WL 1249481, at *12 (E.D. Wis. Mar. 16, 2020) (even if counsel made error in legal judgment in approving particular template used, collector's active collaboration with counsel to ensure that its letters fulfilled FDCPA requirements "was a reasonable step in a process reasonably adapted to ensure that letters clearly identified the creditor as the FDCPA required").

45 See Anchondo v. Anderson, Crenshaw & Assoc., 256 F.R.D. 661, 671 (D.N.M. 2009).

46 See Washington v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 211 F. Supp. 3d 1041 (N.D. Ill. 2016).

47 15 U.S.C. § 1640(c). See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending § 12.4.4.4 (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

48 See Erez v. Steur, 2014 WL 6069847 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 13, 2014). See also Arnold v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 659 Fed. Appx. 568 (11th Cir. 2016) (employee mistakenly changed status field); Rodriguez v. Reg'l Recovery Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 8231645 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 24, 2019) (occasional failure to tag entry as disputed is exactly kind of clerical or factual mistake covered by § 1692k(c)); Puncochar v. Revenue Mgmt. of Illinois Corp., 2017 WL 1208426 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 31, 2017) (where consumer had not listed the debt in her bankruptcy schedules); Libby v. Alessi & Koenig, L.L.C., 2014 WL 5506794 (D. Nev. Oct. 31, 2014) (omission of § 1692e(11) notice in one letter was unintentional single occurrence resulting from isolated mistake).

49 See, e.g., Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc. 953 F.2d 1025 (6th Cir. 1992); Baker v. G.C. Serv. Corp., 677 F.2d 775 (9th Cir. 1982); Hubbard v. Nat'l Bond & Collection Assoc., 126 B.R. 422, 427 (D. Del. 1991), language in the Supreme Court's Jerman decision raises the question whether factual errors beyond just clerical ones can also form the basis of a bona fide error defense. The Court stated in a footnote:

> While factual mistakes might, in some circumstances, constitute bona fide errors and give rise to violations that are "not intentional" within the meaning of [FDCPA] § 1692k(c), we need not and do not decide today the precise distinction between clerical and factual errors, or what kinds of factual mistakes qualify under the FDCPA's bona fide error defense.[50]

It is clear that debt collectors cannot use legal errors as a defense, even when they try to label those errors as factual. For example, sending a collection letter after receiving a proper dispute under FDCPA § 1692g was a legal error, not a factual one.[51] Likewise, a collector's policy of sending two verification notices on different dates with different deadlines to consumers who moved, which can confuse the consumer who receives both, is not excused as a factual mistake.[52] On the other hand, a transcription error that double-counted attorney fees can be viewed as a factual error to which the bona fide error defense might apply,[53] as can a credit reporting error made because a debt collector was unaware that it had received a dispute letter where that letter was sent to a fax number that was no longer being used by the agency.[54]

12.2.5 The Error Must Be Bona Fide

An error is bona fide if it is made in a good faith attempt at compliance and is a genuine as opposed to a contrived mistake.[55] An early, but still authoritative, Seventh Circuit decision on a TILA claim held that an error is not made in good faith if it was due to reliance on untrained employees.[56] However, even reliance on a trained employee may also not suffice. A district court has held that "more is required than reliance on a single person, no matter how well-trained and knowledgeable."[57]

The error must be made without fraud or deceit and with faithfulness to the collector's duty or obligation.[58] Where a violation was repeated[59] or routinely committed it cannot be said to be either an error or bona fide.[60] Further, a violation that begins as a bona fide error may lose that protection when it goes uncorrected after it becomes apparent.[61]

The test is an objective one—is the error objectively reasonable regardless of the collector's subjective intent.[62] For example, where one debt collector referred to another collector aff'd, 947 F.2d 935 (3d Cir. 1991); Garrick v. Hosp. Collection Serv., 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20961 (D. Conn. Jan. 31, 1990); Minick v. First Fed. Credit Control, Inc., 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18622 (N.D. Ohio June 9, 1981); In re Maxwell, 281 B.R. 101 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2002).

---

50 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 591 n.12, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010). See Appx. E.3.6.1, infra. See also Reese v. CAC Serv., Inc., 2011 WL 830084 (D. Or. Mar. 3, 2011) (defendant's assertion that it was entitled to defense, because it made mistake of fact when it operated on belief that plaintiff's letter was not letter of dispute, survived plaintiff's motion for summary judgment).

51 Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp., 806 F.3d 895 (7th Cir. 2015).

52 See Christopher v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 2015 WL 437541 (D. Ariz. Feb. 3, 2015).

53 Powell v. Palisades Acquisition XVI, L.L.C., 782 F.3d 119 (4th Cir. 2014).

54 Webster v. Receivables Performance Mgmt., L.L.C., 2020 WL 4192896, at *9 (S.D. Ind. July. 21, 2020).

55 Kort v. Diversified Collection Serv., 394 F.3d 530, 538 (7th Cir. 2005) (quoting Black's Law Dictionary) (7th ed. 1999) (defining "bona fide" as "1. Made in good faith; without fraud" and "2. Sincere; genuine" and finding test met); Totten v. Evergreen Prof'l Recoveries, Inc., 2014 WL 4145517 (E.D. Wash. Aug. 19, 2014) (sending copy of judgment directly to represented consumer was bona fide error where undisputed evidence showed that debt collector trained its employees not send mail to represented consumers and only copy of judgment, not collection letter, was mailed; including collection letter would have indicated that collector's alleged error was contrived in order to circumvent plaintiff's counsel); Davis v. Nat'l Credit Sys., Inc., 2014 WL 12539688 (D. Neb. Apr. 29, 2014) (collection employee's failure to identify herself in voicemail was "inadvertent mistake" where it was against company policy and was part of collector's training and testing). But see Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007) (violation was not in good faith where collector's notice added language foreign to Graham-Leach-Bliley form notice); Borcherding-Dittloff v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 58 F. Supp. 2d 1006 (W.D. Wis. 1999) (waiting in hope that Seventh Circuit would reverse decision on misleading collection letters was business decision, not bona fide error).

56 Mirabal v. Gen. Motors Acceptance Corp., 537 F.2d 871, 878 (7th Cir. 1976).

57 Gathuru v. Credit Control Serv., Inc., 623 F. Supp. 2d 113, 122–123 (D. Mass. 2009) (citing Mirabal v. General Motors Acceptance Corp., 537 F.2d 871, 878 (7th Cir. 1976) as "interpreting identical defense in Truth in Lending Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1601 et seq.: ('Congress left the exact nature of the preventative mechanism undefined. It is clear, however, that Congress required more than just a showing that a well-trained and careful clerk made a mistake.')").

58 See Bynum v. Cavalry Portfolio Serv., L.L.C., 2006 WL 850935 (N.D. Okla. Mar. 30, 2006).

59 Castillo v. Nationstar Mortg. L.L.C., 2016 WL 6873526 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 22, 2016).

60 See Beasley v. Blatt, 1994 WL 362185 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 1994) (debt collector regularly mailed identical form collection letters to consumer and commercial debtors alike); Sutton v. Law Offices of Alexander L. Lawrence, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22761 (D. Del. June 17, 1992) (no bona fide error defense where no evidence that FDCPA-required disclosures were normally sent). But see Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Serv., Inc., 2001 WL 1266299, at *5 (D. Conn. Sept. 28, 2001) (error in failing for four years to report to credit bureaus that the debt was disputed was "bona fide error" that was "bound to occur").

61 Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529 (6th Cir. 2014). See also Wagner v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 973 F.3d 154 (2d Cir. 2020) (reasonable jury could find that collector's error was not bona fide since consumer was served in postjudgment collection efforts after he twice informed collector that he was not judgment debtor); Stephenson v. Green Tree Servicing, L.L.C., 2014 WL 4410132 (E.D. Mich. Sept. 8, 2014) (faulty scanning of cease letter not defense where collector kept calling even after consumer notified collector that cease letter had been sent).

62 Edwards v. Niagara Credit Solutions, Inc., 584 F.3d 1350 (11th Cir. 2009); Johnson v. Riddle, 443 F.3d 723 (10th Cir. 2006) (although also noting that "the intent prong of the bona fide error defense is a subjective test" turning on defendant's subjective intent to violate FDCPA); Kort v. Diversified Collection Serv., Inc. 394 F.3d 530, 538 (7th Cir.

as the creditor, when the identity of the real creditor was known, was found not to be an "objectively reasonable mistake."[63] A debt collector's failure to include the consumer's payments to the creditor in a programmable field of its form debt collection letter, which therefore showed an inaccurate current balance, is not objectively reasonable.[64] Nor is the debt collector's continuing to garnish wages, despite two calls from the debtor's employer informing the collector that the employer had received paperwork from a court indicating that the debtor was no longer to be garnished.[65]

The defense is most naturally available for clerical mistakes, such as a recently broken keyboard key, an error in transposing numerals,[66] a computer glitch,[67] or an innocent error of fact regarding the consumer (as opposed to commercial) nature of a debt being collected.[68]

12.2.6 Violation Must "Result From" Bona Fide Error

Even if a violation is unintentional, it must have "resulted from" the "bona fide" error. There is little case law on what "resulted from" means. In a thoughtful analysis of the term, one district court rejected a debt collector's bona fide error defense for failure to prove this element of the defense. The court found that the "error merely played a nonessential contributing role in the violations' occurrence."[69]

12.2.7 Is Collector's Reasonable Reliance on the Creditor's Information a Defense?

Debt collectors may claim that they are acting in good faith when they violate the FDCPA, relying on the information they receive from the creditor—that is, the creditor is at fault, and not them. Is the collector's conduct an unintentional bona fide error?

Many courts soundly reject reliance on the creditor's information as the basis of a bona fide error defense,[70] while other courts accept this as grounds for the defense.[71] Collectors

2005); Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961, 978 (D. Minn. 2019).

63 Hepsen v. Resurgent Capital Serv., L.P., 383 Fed. Appx. 877, 883 (11th Cir. 2010).

64 Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff, P.C., 401 F. Supp. 3d 241, 254 (D. Conn. 2019).

65 Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961, 978–979 (D. Minn. 2019).

66 See, e.g., Washington v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 2017 WL 1093152 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 23, 2017) (when agency's employee processed dispute letter from consumer's attorneys, but manually updated account with incorrect code, it was textbook example of clerical mistake and procedures in place satisfied criteria of bona fide error defense).

67 Purnell v. Arrow Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2007 WL 1840057 (E.D. Mich. June 26, 2007) (conversion process from Metro 1 to Metro 2 caused the error, which was unintentional); Hernandez v. Affiliated Grp., Inc., 2006 WL 83474 (E.D.N.Y. Jan. 12, 2006) (coding glitch in mail merge letter resulting in misplacement, not elimination, of required information). See also Cook v. Credit Sys. Int'l, Inc., 2020 WL 5797715 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 10, 2020), adopted, 2020 WL 5764363 (E.D. Tex. Sept. 28, 2020) (genuine issue of material fact remained as to whether agency had reasonable policies to avoid software glitch).

68 See Wilhelm v. Credico, Inc., 426 F. Supp. 2d 1030 (D.N.D. 2006) (collector defendant established bona fide error defense by showing amount of principal and assigned interest was mistakenly entered); Goodman v. S. Credit Recovery, Inc., 1999 WL 14004 (E.D. La. Jan. 8, 1999) (placement of collection letter in envelope with incorrect address was bona fide error); Parks v. Chlan, 1996 WL 243473 (D. Md. May 3, 1996) (due to a clerical error, lawyer sent out dunning letter for paid hospital bill, indicating amount due of $0.00); Hubbard v. Nat'l Bond & Collection Assoc., 126 B.R. 422, 427 (D. Del. 1991), aff'd, 947 F.2d 935 (3d Cir. 1991); Garrick v. Hosp. Collection Serv., Inc., 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20961 (D. Conn. Jan. 31, 1990). See also Kujawa v. Palisades Collection, L.L.C., 614 F. Supp. 2d 788 (E.D. Mich. 2008) (debt collectors did not violate FDCPA by recording judgment lien on property of plaintiff who had same last name as debtor or by mailing garnishment release to plaintiff; even if this were violation of FDCPA, bona fide error defense would apply).

69 Micks v. Gurstel Law Firm, P.C., 365 F. Supp. 3d 961, 977 (D. Minn. 2019) (granting summary judgment for debtor, utilizing but-for causality as explained in Burrage v. United States, 571 U.S. 204, 212, 134 S. Ct. 881, 187 L. Ed. 2d 715 (2014), and finding debt collector's internal mishandling of debtor's application to vacate judgment merely played nonessential role in violation).

70 See, e.g., McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011); Owen v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 629 F.3d 1263, 1277 (11th Cir. 2011) (debt collector required to have procedure to check creditor's computations for errors apparent on face of contract, noting that "[d]ebt collectors who presently maintain internal procedures to avoid FDCPA errors would be incentivized to scrap these measures altogether, since full immunity could be guaranteed by placing the onus of accuracy on creditors. This would precipitate a race to the bottom among debt collectors, rendering the FDCPA a dead letter."); Garcia v. Miramed Revenue Grp., L.L.C., 2018 WL 701283 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 30, 2018) (rejecting as matter of law collection agency's bona fide error defense that it merely presented debt based upon account information provided by creditor; although agency may not have intentionally and willfully violated FDCPA, it intentionally chose to present creditor's very conflicting information concerning amount of debt owed); Barnes v. Northwest Repossession, L.L.C., 210 F. Supp. 3d 954 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (company's reliance on secured creditor's order to repossess was not adequate preventive procedure); Ellis v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., 2016 WL 3566981, at *6 (N.D. Cal. June 30, 2016) ("A debt collector is not entitled under the FDCPA to sit back and wait until a creditor makes a mistake and then institute procedures to prevent a recurrence"). See also Esch v. Legacy Salmon Creek Hosp., 738 Fed. Appx. 430, 431 (9th Cir. 2018) (mem.; "One could reasonably determine that Asset violated . . . § 1692e when it attempted to collect more than what was owed, continued to do so after Plaintiffs and their attorney told Asset about the error, and despite having been told of the billing error, improperly threatened a lawsuit without adequate inquiry."); § 12.2.9.2, infra.

71 See Abdollahzadeh v. Mandarich Law Grp., L.L.P., 922 F.3d 810 (7th Cir. 2019) (bona fide error defense protected collector charged with attempting to collect time-barred debt that relied on data provided by its client which did not identify that debtor's last attempt at payment was reversed and final payment to clear was prior year); McLean v. Ray, 488 Fed. Appx. 677, 683 (4th Cir. 2012) (FDCPA does not create heightened duty of investigation for attorney debt collectors engaging in ordinary debt collection activity; finding that attorney was entitled to bona fide error defense where there was clearly "colorable basis" for creditor's claim, its attorney could reasonably rely on creditor's representations, and where attorney "made a true effort to verify the accuracy" of claim and took action to address problem once it came to light); Lewis v. ACB Bus. Serv., 135 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998) (where creditor returned debt to collection agency marked "new" rather than returned, bona fide error defense existed for collector's contact of debtor who will also argue that the requirement as to procedures to avoid errors is met not by their own procedures, but by those the creditor uses.

Even if a court were to accept a bona fide error defense based on reasonable reliance on the creditor, the reliance must be reasonable.[72] Some courts find reasonable reliance where the creditor has a contractual duty to provide an accurate statement of the debt amount[73] or the creditor has proven trustworthy in the past.[74] In the absence of warning signs of creditor errors,[75] some courts hold the Act does not require collectors to undertake an independent investigation of a debt referred for collection.[76] had sent cease communication letter); Roe v. Roosen, Varchetti & Olivier, P.L.L.C., 2020 WL 1873329 (E.D. Mich. Apr. 15, 2020) (where plaintiff had same name as judgment debtor, debt collector's reliance on creditor to verify judgment debtor's employment information was reasonable, given that creditor typically verified employment when it extended credit and had ongoing communications with debtor during business relationship; collector's policy of not reinvestigating employment information verified by its clients was not unreasonable); Pettitt v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 419 F. Supp. 3d 627, 636 (W.D.N.Y. 2019) (genuine issue of material fact as to whether debt collector's reliance on judgment creditor's statement, confirming she had in her possession debtor's written acknowledgement of debt, was objectively reasonable precluded summary judgment with respect to this element of bona fide error defense); Sayyed v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 733 F. Supp. 2d 635 (D. Md. 2010) (bona fide error where amount requested in summary judgment motion was verified under oath by client in accompanying affidavit, and was supported by documentation provided by client; Charbonneau v. Mary Jane Elliott, P.C., 611 F. Supp. 2d 736 (E.D. Mich. 2009) (defendant's reliance on information provided by selling creditor to determine statute of limitations sufficient to establish bona fide error defense); Krawczyk v. Centurion Capital Corp., 2009 WL 395458 (N.D. Ill. Feb. 18, 2009) (debt buyers entitled to rely on creditor's statement that payment was made within limitations period); Whitaker v. Hudson & Keyse, L.L.C., 2007 WL 2265057 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 6, 2007) (error was bona fide because collector relied on creditor's referral, but jury question remained as to whether procedures sufficient to prevent miscalculation of interest); Shapiro v. Haenn, 222 F. Supp. 2d 29 (D. Me. 2002) (collector relied on loan documents indicating loan was commercial debt); Stonehart v. Rosenthal, 2001 WL 910771 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 13, 2001); Jenkins v. Union Corp., 999 F. Supp. 1120 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (collector reasonably relied on creditor referral information that erroneously stated that check was dishonored when in fact consumer had stopped payment due to dispute with merchant); Faust v. Texaco Ref. and Mktg., Inc., 270 B.R. 310 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1998). See also Sanchez v. United Collection Bur., Inc., 649 F. Supp. 2d 1374 (N.D. Ga. 2009) (collector entitled to bona fide error defense for misrepresenting amount of debt where collector relied on amount as represented by its client). Cf. Bradley v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 2003 WL 21011801 (N.D. Ill. May 5, 2003) (state law permitted attorney to verify complaint on information and belief).

72 See, e.g., McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011) (reliance on creditor here unreasonable); Owen v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 629 F.3d 1263 (11th Cir. 2011) (not reasonable to place responsibility for checking for unauthorized and illegal charges on the creditor); Hyman v. Tate, 362 F.3d 965 (7th Cir. 2004) (collector could rely on historically trustworthy creditor regarding whether had been debt discharged in bankruptcy where immediately stopped collection when put on notice of bankruptcy discharge); Palacios v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2014 WL 12601019 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 11, 2014) (for debt collector's reliance on creditor to be reasonable, must show that collector had adequate procedures in place to avoid mistakes); Koller v. West Bay Acquisitions, L.L.C., 2012 WL 1189481 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 9, 2012); Buzzell v. Citizens Auto. Fin., Inc., 802 F. Supp. 2d 1014 (D. Minn. 2011) (FDCPA does not allow a repossession company to escape liability under § 1692f(6) simply because it received a repossession order from a creditor that it blindly followed without any assurance of creditor's present right to possess); Healey v. Trans Union L.L.C., 2011 WL 1900149, at *9 (W.D. Wash. May 18, 2011) (denying defendant's motion for summary judgment on its bona fide error defense for mistakenly dunning wrong person since defendant "has pointed the court to no evidence that its reliance on [the creditor's] representations regarding [the plaintiff's] account was reasonable or that it maintained procedures to avoid errors"); Borcherding-Dittloff v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 58 F. Supp. 2d 1006 (W.D. Wis. 1999) (defendant could not rely on state administrators who did not administer FDCPA). Cf. Johnson v. Riddle, 443 F.3d 723, 730 (10th Cir. 2006) ("only Riddle, as the attorney in charge, rather than his staff or employees, may make a core legal decision as to whether a particular practice is permitted by law"); Edwards v. McCormick, 136 F. Supp. 2d 795, 804 (S.D. Ohio 2001) (debt collector may rely upon information from client if not "willfully blind" to inaccurate information); In re Hodges, 342 B.R. 616 (Bankr. E.D. Wash. 2006) (collector had duty to seek independent, objective legal advice).

73 See Klemp v. Columbia Collection Serv., Inc., 2014 WL 5324318 (D. Or. Oct. 17, 2014). See also Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., Inc., 330 F.3d 991, 996 (7th Cir. 2003) (suggesting that creditors' contractual duty to accurately state the amount might justify reliance). But see Urbina v. Nat'l Bus. Factors Inc., 979 F.3d 758, 760 (9th Cir. 2020) ("the FDCPA's bona fide error defense does not allow debt collectors to avoid liability by contractually obligating creditor-clients to provide accurate information, nor by requesting that creditor-clients provide notice of any errors in the accounts assigned for collection without waiting to receive a response before instituting collection efforts").

74 Hyman v. Tate, 362 F.3d 965 (7th Cir. 2004). See also Canham v. Fair Collections & Outsourcing, Inc., 2014 WL 3952902 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 13, 2014) (citing Hyman, finding requirement of bona fide error defense met where, after consumer disputed his debt, collector followed its verification procedures by double-checking with creditor that amount sought accurately reflected figure that it believed was due). But cf. Guevara v. Constar Fin. Serv., L.L.C., 2020 WL 3001390, at *11 (M.D. Pa. June 4, 2020) (while in some cases it may be reasonable for debt collector to rely on creditor who previously provided accurate information in the past, such reliance was not reasonable here).

75 See Gallegos v. LVNV Funding L.L.C., 169 F. Supp. 3d 1235, 1242 (D. Utah Mar. 10, 2016) (rejecting application of bona fide error defense because "a debt collector cannot continue to claim that it is reasonably relying on information from the creditor once the debt collector has received clear notice that some of the information may be incorrect").

76 Hyman v. Tate, 362 F.3d 965 (7th Cir. 2004) (collector could rely on historically trustworthy creditor regarding whether had been debt discharged in bankruptcy where immediately stopped collection when put on notice of bankruptcy discharge); Dikeman v. Nat'l Educators, Inc., 81 F.3d 949 (10th Cir. 1996) (jury found debt unverified when the verification given was inadequate due to overstatement of the collector's claim, but excused violation as a bona fide error); Amond v. Brincefield, Hartnett & Assoc., 1999 WL 152555 (4th Cir. Mar. 22, 1999) (lawyer had no reason to question the large increase in the amount of the deficiency debt he was collecting); Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025, 1032 (6th Cir. 1992); Buffington v. Schuman & Schuman, P.C., 2001 WL 34082273, at *6 (N.D.N.Y. Feb. 21, 2001) ("the debt collector itself is not obligated to investigate the background of the debt prior to communicating with the debtor"); Bleich v. Revenue Maximization Grp., Inc., 233 F. Supp. 2d 496, 500–501 (E.D.N.Y. 2002); Fitzgerald v. Pekay & Blitstein, 2001 WL 987695 (N.D. Ill. Aug. 9, 2001) (collector did not intentionally waive its right to collect the proper amount due); Beattie v. D.M. Collections, Inc., 754 F. Supp. 383, 392 (D. Del. 1991) ("[g]enerally, a debt collector may reasonably rely upon information provided by a creditor who has provided accurate information

But the same may not be the case where there is evidence that information from the creditor is not accurate.[77] Where a law firm was working for a debt buyer, the Ninth Circuit found reliance on the debt buyer not reasonable where the debt buyer refused to warrant the accuracy of its information and the collection law firm had previous legal difficulties with that particular debt portfolio of the debt buyer.[78]

Similarly, the Eleventh Circuit found the reliance not reasonable where errors were apparent on the face of the documents.[79] Other courts may find that a debt collector has an independent duty to determine if a debtor has filed bankruptcy, and cannot rely on the creditor or the consumer to provide that information.[80] The fact that the debt collector used or failed to use a bankruptcy screening service may be probative.[81]

In a recent decision, a lower court found that a collection agency's misrepresentation to the plaintiff that she owed a debt belonging to a person with the same name was unintentional. The collector was held to have reasonably relied upon information from the original creditor, as updated by two vendors that specialized in tracking down individuals' location information.[82]

Collectors may also assert bona fide error when they rely in good faith on information from other third parties, including the use of allegedly defective forms provided by government agencies.[83]

For a discussion of when reliance on a creditor is a reasonable procedure under the bona fide error defense, see § 12.2.9.2, infra.

12.2.8 The Error Must be Unintentional

The majority of courts hold that the debt collector can establish that its error was unintentional by showing that it did not intend to violate the Act, and that it does not need to demonstrate that it did not intend to commit the act or omission. This view is supported by the language in the statutory definition of a bona fide error that requires the debt collector to show that "the violation was not intentional."[84] in the past"); Hubbard v. Nat'l Bond & Collection Assoc., Inc., 126 B.R. 422 (D. Del. 1991), aff'd, 947 F.2d 935 (3d Cir. 1991) (collector had no obligation to investigate a debtor's financial background to discover whether a debt had been discharged in bankruptcy; unintentional attempt to collect a discharged debt did not violate 15 U.S.C. § 1692e, 1692e(2)(A), or 1692e(5)). See also Majeski v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2010 WL 145861, at *6 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 8, 2010) ("With regard to pre-dispute procedures, debt collector is entitled to rely on its client's obligation to deliver accurate account information on reported debts."). Cf. Yu v. Kevin B. Wilson Law Offices, 919 F. Supp. 2d 661 (D. Md. 2013) (collector ceased collection of the debt immediately after learning of the plaintiff's bankruptcy; defense established).

---

77 Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1177 (9th Cir. 2006) (denying debt collector's motion for summary judgment). See also Solomon v. Baer & Timberlake, P.C., 504 Fed. Appx. 702, 705 (10th Cir. 2012); Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025, 1032 (6th Cir. 1992); Eide v. Colltech, Inc., 987 F. Supp. 2d 951 (D. Minn. 2013).

78 McCollough v. Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, L.L.C., 637 F.3d 939 (9th Cir. 2011). See also Palacios v. Collection Consultants of Cal., 2014 WL 12601019 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 11, 2014) (for debt collector's reliance on creditor to be reasonable, must show that debt collector had adequate procedures in place to avoid mistakes). Compare De La Torre v. Legal Recovery Law Office, 2015 WL 574629 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 11, 2015) (defense accepted where creditor warranted information was accurate).

79 Owen v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 629 F.3d 1263 (11th Cir. 2011).

80 Turner v. J.V.D.B. & Assoc., 318 F. Supp. 2d 681 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (passive reliance on creditor for information regarding bankruptcy not enough; contract with creditor did not spell out creditor's duties), on appeal from later decision, 202 Fed. Appx. 123, 124 (7th Cir. 2006) (noting that lower court's decision denying bona fide error defense "properly addressed the second part of our [earlier] mandate" on bona fide error, though the issue was not raised on appeal). See also Eide v. Colltech, Inc., 987 F. Supp. 2d 951 (D. Minn. 2013).

81 See, e.g., Miller v. Allied Interstate, Inc., 2005 WL 1520802 (N.D. Ill. June 27, 2005) (affidavit from debt collector that it utilized procedure to search database on Lexis-Nexis to uncover debtors in bankruptcy created a genuine issue of material fact precluding determination of consumer's motion for summary judgment). See also Ross v. RJM Acquisitions Funding, L.L.C., 2006 WL 752953 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 16, 2006) (debt collector conducted public records bankruptcy search before commencing collection).

82 Christopher v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 2015 WL 437541 (D. Ariz. Feb. 3, 2015) (upholding bona fide error defense because reliance upon vendors was reasonable as they had reported that location information belonged to specific debtor, not just to someone with same name, and using locating specialist rather than "shot gun" approach was reasonable procedure; failing, however, to consider how vendors' errors occurred when debtor and alleged debtor obviously had different identities (e.g., Social Security numbers). See also Hedayati v. The Perry Law Firm, 2017 WL 4864491 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 27, 2017) (there were no procedures that would have prevented error of confusing FDCPA plaintiff with debtor brother, because even public records did not differentiate between plaintiff and his brother, who had similar names).

83 Kort v. Diversified Collection Serv., Inc., 394 F.3d 530 (7th Cir. 2005) (pre-garnishment notice form required by Department of Education); Henderson v. Biel, 2007 WL 2286129, at *8 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 7, 2007) ("language in a form provided by the clerks of Indiana state courts, even when inconsistent with one federal district judge's decision, removes any possibility that they intentionally violated the FDCPA"). But see Hernandez v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 2007 WL 2874059 (N.D. Ill. Sept. 25, 2007) (no bona fide error when defendant added language to statutory language taken from Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act).

84 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c) (emphasis added). See, e.g., Arnold v. Bayview Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 659 Fed. Appx. 568, 570 (11th Cir. 2016) (must show FDCPA violation, not underlying conduct, was unintentional); Johnson v. Riddle, 443 F.3d 723, 728 (10th Cir. 2006) (same; test is subjective one); Lewis v. ACB Bus. Serv., Inc., 135 F.3d 389, 402 (6th Cir. 1998) (same); Pettitt v. Chiari & Ilecki, L.L.P., 419 F. Supp. 3d 627, 632–633 (W.D.N.Y. 2019); Garcia v. Law Offices Howard Lee Schiff P.C., 401 F. Supp. 3d 241, 252 (D. Conn. 2019); Moore v. Express Recovery Serv., Inc., 2019 WL 77325, at *4 (D. Utah Jan. 2, 2019); Christopher v. RJM Acquisitions L.L.C., 2015 WL 437541 (D. Ariz. Feb. 3, 2015); Puffinberger v. Commercion, L.L.C., 2014 WL 120596 (D. Md. Jan. 10, 2014) (denying plaintiff summary judgment where debt collector's filing suit beyond the applicable limitations period may have been unintentional); McDonald v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 296 F.R.D. 513, 526 (E.D. Mich. 2013), quoting Charbonneau v. Asset Acceptance L.L.C., 611 F. Supp. 2d 736, 743 (E.D. Mich. 2009). See also Durthaler v. Accounts Receivable Mgmt., Inc., 854 F. Supp. 2d 485, 493–495 (S.D. Ohio 2012) (relying on Sixth Circuit's decision in Jerman which was reversed on other grounds by U.S. Supreme Court, without acknowledging this and without additional analysis); White v. Sherman Fin. Grp., L.L.C., 984 F. Supp. 2d 841 (E.D. Tenn. 2013);

On the other hand, a minority of courts hold that this prong of the defense is not satisfied unless the act was unintentional.[85] Some of these courts note that the Supreme Court, in Jerman, made it clear that decisions under the identical provision in TILA are persuasive authority for the FDCPA too,[86] and for decades it has been well established that the required intent there is to do the act, not to violate TILA.[87] Others rely on the observation in Jerman that: "Our law is therefore no stranger to the possibility that an act may be 'intentional' for purposes of civil liability, even if the actor lacked actual knowledge that her conduct violated the law."[88]

This split of authority shows up even within some circuits. In Leeb v. Nationwide Credit Corp.,[89] the Seventh Circuit followed Jerman, finding that the mailing of the letter to the consumer violating FDCPA § 1692g(b) was not an error, as it was mailed intentionally, not by mistake.[90] Four years later, however, a different panel in the Seventh Circuit ignored the Leeb court's recognition that the letter could not be a bona fide error because it had been sent intentionally, and held that, to "establish that its error was unintentional, '[a] debt collector need only show that its FDCPA violation was unintentional, not that its actions were unintentional.'"[91]

The Eleventh Circuit, in Edwards v. Niagara Credit Solutions, Inc.,[92] recognized that a debt collector's decision to violate FDCPA § 1692e(11) was not an unintentional error just because the debt collector risked violating FDCPA § 1692c(b), prohibiting disclosure of the debt to third parties, if it complied with section 1692e(11) and disclosed it was a debt collector in a voice message left for the consumer but where others could hear it.[93]

The Ninth Circuit held that a mistake about the time-barred status of a debt under state law may qualify as a bona fide error within the meaning of the FDCPA, noting that the bona fide error defense "relieves liability for certain 'unintentional' violations, thereby functioning similarly to a mens rea requirement."[94]

Courts have found that an error was unintentional under a variety of scenarios, such as:

- When the collector's California headquarters sent the consumer a letter before learning that the Ohio office had received a cease and desist letter the day before;[95]
- When a collector did not realize he was making a pre-8:00 a.m. phone call when he failed to account for different time zones;[96]
- When a student loan collector used a Department of Education form that allegedly violated the FDCPA;[97] and
- When the collector was unaware that a claim included unauthorized force-placed insurance charges, though the collector was aware that the bank force-placed insurance generally.[98]

Courts sometimes hold that a debt collector is not charged with the creditor's knowledge[99] and this leads to a finding

McLean v. Ray, 2011 WL 1897436, at *6 (E.D. Va. May 18, 2011), aff'd, 488 Fed. Appx. 677 (4th Cir. 2012).

85 Baker v. G.C. Serv. Corp., 677 F.2d 775, 779 (9th Cir. 1982) (rejecting defense because defendant only presented evidence that, at best, might show it had been mistaken about law, and mistake of law does not make defendant's action any less intentional); Webster v. ACB Receivables Mgmt., Inc., 15 F. Supp. 3d 619, 628 (D. Md. 2014) (recognizing "that Jerman requires ACB to show that the underlying acts that caused the FDCPA violations were not intentional," but finding the acts unintentional); Allen v. Checkredi of Kentucky, L.L.C., 2010 WL 4791947, at *10 (E.D. Ky. Nov. 17, 2010) (citing Jerman and holding that debt collector's assertion of bona fide error defense failed where it intentionally revealed debt to relatives when the relatives pressed for information; holding that "[f]ollowing Jerman, the intentional prong of the bona fide error defense can no longer be whether a defendant specifically intended its actions to violate the FDCPA"); Thompson v. Crown Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 2009 WL 3059123 (D. Ariz. Sept. 23, 2009) (granting summary judgment for defendant who unintentionally contacted plaintiff as result of clerical error); Dunaway v. JBC & Assoc., Inc., 2005 WL 1529574 (E.D. Mich. June 20, 2005) (collector's ignorance of FDCPA's prohibitions does not render collector's violation of those prohibitions unintentional).

86 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 574, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010) ("Moreover, in enacting the FDCPA in 1977, Congress copied the pertinent portions of the bona fide error defense from the Truth in Lending Act (TILA), § 1640(c). At that time, the three Federal Courts of Appeals to have considered the question interpreted the TILA provision as referring to clerical errors, and there is no reason to suppose Congress disagreed with those interpretations when it incorporated TILA's language.").

87 See National Consumer Law Center, Truth in Lending (10th ed. 2019), updated at www.nclc.org/library.

88 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 582, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010).

89 806 F.3d 895, 899 (7th Cir. 2015).

90 See also Buckley v. Afni, Inc., 133 F. Supp. 3d 1140 (S.D. Ind. 2016) (agency had actual knowledge of consumer's representation by counsel and did not provide any evidence that its error was unintentional).

91 Abdollahzadeh v. Mandarich Law Grp., L.L.P., 922 F.3d 810, 815 (7th Cir. 2019), citing Kort v. Diversified Collection Serv., 394 F.3d 530 (7th Cir. 2005) (emphases added).

92 584 F.3d 1350 (11th Cir. 2009).

93 Id. See also Gryzbowski v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 691 F. Supp. 2d 618 (M.D. Pa. 2010) (no bona fide error defense, as defendant admitted that violation was intentional in order to guard against potential violation of § 1692c(b)). Cf. Reg. F § 1006.2(j) (creating limited content voicemail messages), discussed at §§ 4.9, 5.7.7, supra.

94 Kaiser v. Cascade Capital, L.L.C., 989 F.3d 1127, 1139 (9th Cir. 2021).

95 Smith v. Transworld Sys., Inc., 953 F.2d 1025 (6th Cir. 1992).

96 Juras v. Aman Collection Serv., Inc., 829 F.2d 739 (9th Cir. 1987). See also Washington v. Portfolio Recovery Assoc., 211 F. Supp. 3d 1041 (N.D. Ill. 2016) (established bona fide error defense where collector did not receive notice of order vacating its default judgment against consumer until after it had mailed wage deduction notice). But see Reg. F Official Interpretations § 6(b)(1)(i)-2 ("If a debt collector has conflicting or ambiguous information regarding a consumer's location, then, in the absence of knowledge of circumstances to the contrary, the debt collector complies with § 1006.6(b)(1)(i) if the debt collector communicates or attempts to communicate with the consumer at a time that would be convenient in all of the locations at which the debt collector's information indicates the consumer might be located."); § 5.4.3, supra.

97 Kort v. Diversified Collection Serv., 394 F.3d 530 (7th Cir. 2005).

98 Jenkins v. Heintz, 124 F.3d 824 (7th Cir. 1997).

99 See Randolph v. IMBS, Inc., 368 F.3d 726, 729 (7th Cir. 2004) ("[v]erification would be unnecessary if debt collectors were charged that a violation is unintentional if the collector is unaware of the relevant information, even if that information is in the possession of the creditor. However, the extent of information in the creditor's possession and the collector's failure to obtain that information may be relevant to whether reliance on the creditor was reasonable (and thus whether the error is bona fide) and whether the collector had adopted reasonable procedures to avoid the error.[100] On the other hand, many courts hold that a debt collector is strictly liable for conveying false information that they obtained from the creditor, such as an erroneous amount of the debt, with the bona fide error defense providing debt collectors some limited shelter from creditors' errors.[101]

A willful action by a collector's employee, such as a harassing phone call, cannot be said to be unintentional, even if it violates the collector's policies.[102] Stated differently, even if the debt collection company did not intend to commit the error, the defense will not be sustained if the violation was the result of intentional conduct by the employee.[103] Similarly, even if the collector has procedures in place to prevent the error, it must still introduce evidence to show that the action was unintentional.[104]

Where a violation was routinely committed, it could not be said to be either an error or bona fide.[105]

An error that was initially unintentional may become intentional if the collector fails to take corrective action after becoming aware of the error.[106]

Like the other elements of the defense, the collector must introduce evidence to meet the burden of proving that a violation was unintentional.[107]

12.2.9 The Collector Must Have Maintained Reasonable Procedures to Avoid the Error

12.2.9.1 Generally

To establish the bona fide error defense, the debt collector must also establish that the error occurred "notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error."[108] In Jerman,[109] the Supreme Court examined this language:

> The dictionary defines "procedure" as "a series of steps followed in a regular orderly definite way." Webster's Third New International Dictionary 1807 (1976). In that light, the statutory phrase is more naturally read to apply to processes that have mechanical or other such "regular orderly" steps to avoid mistakes—for instance, the kind of internal controls a debt collector might adopt to ensure its employees do not communicate with consumers at the wrong time of day, [FDCPA] section 1692c(a)(1), or make false representations as to the amount of a debt, [FDCPA] section 1692e(2).[110]

Whether a procedure is sufficient depends on the nature of the violation, and the procedures must be designed to avoid with the creditors' knowledge"); Massa v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 2007 WL 2316470 (S.D. Ind. Aug. 10, 2007) (additional client charge, which was imposed by the creditor, was not intentional); Moya v. Hocking, 10 F. Supp. 2d 847 (W.D. Mich. 1998) (violations of suing on and reporting time-barred debt found unintentional because information provided by creditors was inaccurate); § 12.2.7, supra; § 12.2.9.2, infra

100 See § 12.2.7, supra; § 12.2.9, infra.

101 See Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006); § 3.2.4, supra.

102 Worch v. Wolpoff & Abramson, L.L.P., 477 F. Supp. 2d 1015 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 28, 2007) (threatening and abusive telephone calls on two separate occasions); Sparks v. Phillips & Cohen Assoc., Ltd., 641 F. Supp. 2d 1234, 1251 (S.D. Ala. 2008) (reasonable factfinder could readily determine that browbeating deceased consumer's daughter's attorney and berating attorney's daughter was not objectively reasonable, even if violations of FDCPA were unintentional). See also Acik v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 640 F. Supp. 2d 1019 (N.D. Ill. 2009) (collector was aware that un-itemized "Additional Client Charges" contained $60 in collection fees and $18.50 in interest).

103 See Bingham v. Collection Bur., Inc., 505 F. Supp. 864 (D.N.D. 1981) (corporate defendant was liable even though it did not intend error).

104 See, e.g., Booth v. Collection Experts, Inc., 969 F. Supp. 1161 (E.D. Wis. 1997).

105 See Beasley v. Blatt, 1994 WL 362185 (N.D. Ill. July 11, 1994) (debt collector regularly mailed identical form collection letters to consumer and commercial debtors alike, and so possible violation did not result from claimed error); Sutton v. Law Offices of Alexander L. Lawrence, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22761 (D. Del. June 17, 1992) (failed to provide any evidence that the FDCPA required disclosures were normally sent). But see Herbert v. Monterey Fin. Serv., Inc., 2001 WL 1266299, at *5 (D. Conn. Sept. 28, 2001) (defendant's error in reporting that plaintiff owed debt, without reporting that debt was disputed, was type of error that was "bound to occur" despite reasonable safeguards).

106 Currier v. First Resolution Inv. Corp., 762 F.3d 529 (6th Cir. 2014). See also Clark v. Capital Credit & Collection Serv., Inc., 460 F.3d 1162 (9th Cir. 2006); Elder v. David J. Gold, P.C., 2009 WL 2580320 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 18, 2009) (questioning bona fide error defense where defendant continued prosecuting lawsuit in wrong venue after notice that it was wrong), adopted, 2009 WL 3459880 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 19, 2009); Thompson v. D.A.N. Joint Venture III, L.P., 2007 WL 1625926 (M.D. Ala. June 5, 2007) (defendant failed to set aside the default judgment on time-barred debt once fully apprised of its misconduct); Canady v. Wisenbaker Law Offices, P.C., 372 F. Supp. 2d 1379 (N.D. Ga. 2005) (rejecting defense since collection firm after learning that suit was filed in improper venue, continued to pursue collection litigation); State ex rel. Hatch v. JBC Legal Grp., P.C., 2006 WL 1388453 (Minn. Dist. Ct. Apr. 13, 2006) (defendants' misstatement of service charge continued for year after it was brought to their attention).

107 See, e.g., Hartman v. Great Seneca Fin. Corp., 569 F.3d 606 (6th Cir. 2009) (reversing summary judgment for defendants on bona fide error defense where evidence supported conclusion that violation was intentional); Booth v. Collection Experts, Inc., 969 F. Supp. 1161 (E.D. Wis. 1997). See also Mangum v. Bonneville Billing & Collections, Inc., 2010 WL 672744 (D. Idaho Feb. 20, 2010) (issues of fact prevented summary judgment); Holmes v. Mann Bracken, L.L.C., 2009 WL 518448 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 22, 2009) (denying defendant's motion for summary judgment; could not determine if error was "unintentional"); § 12.2.9, infra.

108 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c).

109 Jerman v. Carlisle, McNellie, Rini, Kramer & Ulrich L.P.A., 559 U.S. 573, 587, 130 S. Ct. 1605, 176 L. Ed. 2d 519 (2010).

110 Id.

the type of error that actually occurred.[111] In Evans v. Portfolio Recovery Associates, L.L.C.,[112] for example, plaintiffs alleged that the debt collector failed to inform a credit reporting agency that the debtor disputed their debt. The Seventh Circuit found the collector's procedures inadequate:

> [E]ven if we assume that [debt collector] PRA made an unintentional error of fact, it still is not entitled to the bona fide error defense because it did not maintain procedures reasonably adapted to avoid the error. . . . While the evidence demonstrates that PRA provided training sessions and a manual to employees about recognizing and processing [consumer] disputes, "[t]here is no evidence that PRA has measures in place to prevent careless misreading of [consumer's] letters, such as having employees periodically check one another's work, for example."[113]

